2598. ---- Transfer of prisoners, library or legal publications, prisoners' access to courts

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Inmate's claim that his transfer from state correctional facility in Pennsylvania to federal facility in Indiana violated his right of access to the courts because federal facility lacked Pennsylvania legal material was sufficient to state a cause of action under § 1983. Story v. Morgan, W.D.Pa.1992, 786 F.Supp. 523. Prisons 13.5(2)

Decision of prison officials to transfer inmate back to state prison from a treatment center after he complained of inadequacy of law library available to him at treatment center and suggested retransfer as a possible solution did not violate inmate's right of access to the courts, even though his transfer back to the state prison eventually became permanent. Fort v. Reed, E.D.Wash.1985, 623 F.Supp. 1106. Prisons 4(10.1)

2599. ---- Women's law library, library or legal publications, prisoners' access to courts

Women's prison law library meeting requirements of Bounds v. Smith was constitutionally adequate, even though prisoners at state's prisons for males had larger libraries because they chose to expend a greater portion of funds generated by prison commissary. Glover v. Johnson, E.D.Mich.1979, 478 F.Supp. 1075. Prisons 4(13)

2600. Copying machines, prisoners' access to courts

To make out a claim under this section based on denial of copying privileges, prison inmate had to show that denial prevented him from exercising his constitutional right of access to the courts, since constitutional concept of liberty does not include the right to xerox; reasonableness of prison's photocopy policy would become relevant only after prisoner showed that policy was impeding that access, for if it was unreasonable but not impeding he would not have made out prima facie case of violation of his constitutional rights. Jones v. Franzen, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1983, 697 F.2d 801. Civil Rights 1404; Civil Rights 1420

Constitutional concept of an inmate's right of access to courts does not require that prison officials provide inmates free or unlimited access to photocopying machinery. Johnson v. Parke, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1981, 642 F.2d 377. Prisons 4(13)

Prisoner's right of access to court does not include the right of free unlimited access to photocopying machine, particularly where prison policy gave inmates the option to use carbon paper and typewriters available in law library, or to forward papers to family and friends to be copied, or to have the institution reproduce the documents at a cost of ten cents per copy. Harrell v. Keohane, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1980, 621 F.2d 1059. Prisons 4(10.1)

Prisoner sufficiently alleged an access to the courts claim against prison defendants under §§ 1983 based on prison policy which frustrated his photocopying efforts; prisoner pleaded that defendants' application of policy improperly hindered his efforts to pursue a legal claim and that defendants' actions caused him an actual injury because he was forced to withdraw his order to show cause (OTSC) and his Article 78 petition was dismissed for failure to effect service. Collins v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2006, 438 F.Supp.2d 399. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate stated § 1983 claim for denial of constitutional right of access to courts by virtue of refusal of officials, of county and of State Department of Corrections, and county to let inmate make any photocopies, including discovery exhibits that had to be provided to court in duplicate and could not be replicated longhand, despite defendants' contention that there was no clearly established law requiring them to provide photocopies; right of access to courts required prison officials to provide inmates with supplies and services indispensable for filing court documents. Canell v. Bradshaw, D.Or.1993, 840 F.Supp. 1382, affirmed 97 F.3d 1458. Civil Rights 1094; Constitutional Law 328

2601. Typewriters, prisoners' access to courts--Generally

Prisoner's access to court does not include federally protected right to use typewriter or have one's pleadings typed since pro se prisoners' causes are not prejudiced by filing handwritten briefs. Twyman v. Crisp, C.A.10 (Okla.)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

1978, 584 F.2d 352. Prisons 4(10.1)

Prohibiting prisoner from typing petitions to court around midnight due to noise did not deprive prisoner of access to courts. Matthews v. Reynolds, W.D.Va.1975, 405 F.Supp. 50. Prisons 4(10.1)

That state hospital officials did not allow prisoners in ward occupied by petitioner, confined as criminal sexual psychopath, to possess typewriters did not unduly restrict access to judicial process. Leeper v. Birzgalis, W.D.Mich.1969, 314 F.Supp. 808. Mental Health 465(3)

2602. ---- Pretrial detainees, typewriters, prisoners' access to courts

Pretrial detainee had no constitutional right to typewriter as incident to right of access of courts. Lock v. Jenkins, D.C.Ind.1978, 464 F.Supp. 541, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 641 F.2d 488. Prisons 4(10.1)

2603. Writing materials, prisoners' access to courts

State convict was not entitled to have prison officials enjoined from refusing to furnish sufficient writing paper to enable prisoners to write writs and other legal documents in view of showing by prison officials that ten sheets of paper per day were available to convict. Conklin v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1970, 424 F.2d 516, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 376, 400 U.S. 965, 27 L.Ed.2d 385. Prisons 4(13)

Inmate failed to show that prison's ink tube policy, under which inmates confined to punitive segregation unit were permitted to use only plastic inner ink insert from ballpoint pen for all legal and personal writing, violated inmate's constitutional right of meaningful access to courts; although inmate claimed that he could not grip tube well and that writing with tube resulted in pains, aches, and cramps in his writing hand due to previous hand injuries, he failed to provide any specific evidence of injuries that he claimed impaired his writing ability, and he provided no evidence of court dates missed, inability to make timely filings, denial of legal assistance or of loss of case that could have been won. Kirsch v. Smith, E.D.Wis.1995, 894 F.Supp. 1222, affirmed 92 F.3d 1187. Prisons 13(5)

Prison's failure to make available writing materials and implements to indigent prisoners violated the equal protection clause of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14 as well as right of access to courts. Wade v. Kane, E.D.Pa.1978, 448 F.Supp. 678, affirmed 591 F.2d 1338. Constitutional Law 250.3(2); Constitutional Law 328

2604. Envelopes, prisoners' access to courts

Inmate's claim that policy of requiring indigent inmates to use for their legal correspondence only envelopes purchased from the prison canteen was unconstitutional both facially, because it impeded access to the courts, and as applied, because it was enforced against him in retaliation, was actionable under § 1983. Smith v. Erickson, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1989, 884 F.2d 1108. Civil Rights 1094

2605. Storage, prisoners' access to courts

Record failed to sustain prisoner's claim that his civil rights were violated by prison officials who, in accordance with regulations, required storage of legal papers in writ room and refused to permit prisoner to retain with him documents he had received. Brown v. Dugger, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1972, 456 F.2d 1260. Civil Rights 1420

Limiting property in inmate's personal areas and in segregation, including amount of legal materials which inmate could retain, did not violate inmate's right of access to the courts could not be basis for injunctive relief in § 1983 civil rights suit; prison had legitimate interest in fire safety and accessibility to inmate. Garrett v. Gilmore,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

W.D.Va.1996, 926 F.Supp. 554, affirmed 103 F.3d 117. Civil Rights 1454; Constitutional Law 328; Prisons 4(13)

2606. Telephone use, prisoners' access to courts

Although prisoners have constitutional right to meaningful access to courts, prisoners do not have right to any particular means of access, including unlimited telephone use. Aswegan v. Henry, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1992, 981 F.2d 313. Prisons 4(12)

2607. Confiscation, loss or destruction of legal materials, prisoners' access to courts

Inmate's allegation that his outgoing legal mail was opened and material removed, thus preventing "writ of mandamus" from arriving in district court, stated cognizable claim for violation of his rights of free speech and access to courts; there was no suggestion that legitimate penological interest justified alleged removal of legal material. Brewer v. Wilkinson, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1993, 3 F.3d 816, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1081, 510 U.S. 1123, 127 L.Ed.2d 397. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.3); Constitutional Law 328; Prisons 4(12)

Inmate's allegation that prison officials destroyed his legal material in retaliation for suits and grievances he had filed and that he was denied access to prison law library, if true, would form the basis of a cognizable claim for violation of his right of access to the courts. Green v. Johnson, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1992, 977 F.2d 1383. Prisons 4(10.1); Prisons 4(13)

State prisoner had viable civil rights claim based on allegations that legal papers and documents were accepted and thereafter intentionally lost by institutional staff, and that, without documents, including sales receipts for merchandise he was alleged to have stolen, he was severely limited in pursuing postconviction relief. Gregory v. Nunn, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1990, 895 F.2d 413. Civil Rights 1094

Prisoner's allegations, that he made three requests to pick up legal materials which were needed for pending case and which were held by prison authorities and that legal materials were never given, stated § 1983 cause of action for intentional deprivation of right of access to courts protected by due process clause, privileges and immunities clause, and First Amendment. Simmons v. Dickhaut, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1986, 804 F.2d 182. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Taking of prisoner's legal papers states claim for violation of deprivation provision of this section or for conspiracy to deprive civil rights of others if taking results in interference with or infringement of prisoner's constitutional right of access to courts. Tyler v. "Ron" Deputy Sheriff or Jailor/Custodian of Prisoners, Division 15, St. Louis County Circuit Court, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1978, 574 F.2d 427. Civil Rights 1395(7); Conspiracy 18

Seizure of inmate's office supply catalogue did not deprive inmate of state training center of adequate opportunity for access to courts such as would warrant relief under this section. Nickens v. White, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1976, 536 F.2d 802. Civil Rights 1094

Inmate who sued state prison officials, stemming from alleged incident at sallyport and related civil rights violations, failed to establish that prison supervisor's purported failure to return his stolen legal materials hindered his access to courts, as required to maintain claim under §§ 1983; there was no reliable evidence that any actual injury stemmed from alleged violation. Ziemba v. Thomas, D.Conn.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 136. Civil Rights 1094

Prison regulation limiting number of boxes of personal effects inmates could keep in their cells was reasonably related to legitimate penological objectives, precluding recovery in inmate's §§ 1983 action alleging that his right of access to courts was infringed when above-limit box was confiscated from him despite his informing corrections

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

officials that it contained legal materials for his appeal and that he was facing deadline; regulation promoted fire safety and limited access to contraband as well as amount of clutter, inmate had continual access to prison's law library and could have obtained approval for extra box, and permitting extra box on basis of claimed legal deadline could have effect of causing other inmates to seek to keep extra boxes. Howard v. Snyder, D.Del.2005, 389 F.Supp.2d 589. Prisons 4(7)

Inmate failed to demonstrate that he was prejudiced in pursuit of his legal action or that his access to court was otherwise impaired by prison correspondence clerks' alleged improper handling or confiscation of tape of inmate's disciplinary hearing, as required to establish inmate's Fourteenth Amendment right to access to court claim. Jermosen v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 877 F.Supp. 864. Civil Rights 1420

Inmate's claim that confiscation of his law books and legal materials was intentional unauthorized deprivation of property without due process of law was not actionable under the Fourteenth Amendment as Wisconsin law provided him with numerous postdeprivation remedies; claim thus could not serve as basis for in forma pauperis § 1983 action. Chavers v. Abrahamson, E.D.Wis.1992, 803 F.Supp. 1512. Civil Rights 1311; Constitutional Law 272(2)

Jail inmate had no cause of action under civil rights statute based on his allegation of a single incident of destruction of his legal materials. Gill v. Neaves, W.D.Tex.1987, 657 F.Supp. 1394. Civil Rights 1094

If prison officials confiscated inmate's legal material and refused to return it even after being advised to do so by state Attorney General, officials would have violated inmate's civil rights. Slie v. Bordenkircher, N.D.W.Va.1981, 526 F.Supp. 1264. Civil Rights 1094

If prison official did destroy inmates's legal materials in retaliation for his exercise of his First Amendment rights and if that destruction did impede his access to the courts, that conduct was conscience-shocking and constituted egregious abuse of governmental power in violation of substantive due process. Riley v. Coutu, E.D.Mich.1997, 172 F.R.D. 228. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 4(10.1)

Inmate did not sufficiently demonstrate actual injury to establish his claim against corrections officers for alleged deprivation of access to the courts, in violation of his First Amendment rights; although inmate claimed officers confiscated his legal materials for his Post Conviction Relief Act (PCRA) hearing, the second PCRA Court held that none of inmate's claims were cognizable under the PCRA, and he did not argue that he desired to present different or additional claims at his first PCRA hearing. Gordon v. Morton, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 131 Fed.Appx. 797, 2005 WL 1099761, Unreported. Constitutional Law 91; Prisons 4(13)

State prisoner failed to show that prison officials' confiscation of legal materials that allegedly violated regulation limiting amount of material prisoner could keep in his cell interfered with his ability to file any claim in any court, as required to support claim under § 1983 for denial of access to courts. Pruitt v. Sparkman, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2004, 98 Fed.Appx. 281, 2004 WL 729207, Unreported, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 659, 543 U.S. 1023, 160 L.Ed.2d 500, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1094

2608. Transcripts, prisoners' access to courts

Failure to provide inmate with transcripts of his trial did not result in actual injury and, thus, was not actionable under § 1983 as deprivation of access to courts or due process. Williams v. Dark, E.D.Pa.1993, 844 F.Supp. 210, affirmed 19 F.3d 645. Civil Rights 1088(5)

2609. Recognition of organizations, prisoners' access to courts

Prison regulation requiring associations to seek and receive official recognition before sponsoring group meetings

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

or undertaking joint activities was reasonable attempt by prison administrators to protect security of institution, and thus refusal by prison officials to permit group, which had not complied with such procedures and which had not been formally recognized, to engage in joint activities did not violate the group members' right of access to courts, even though group was formed for purpose of bringing lawsuits to challenge conditions at the prison. Preast v. Cox, C.A.4 (Va.) 1980, 628 F.2d 292. Prisons 4(10.1)

2610. Retaliation by prison officials, prisoners' access to courts

Prisoner suing prison officials under § 1983 for retaliation must allege that he was retaliated against for exercising his constitutional rights and that retaliatory action did not advance legitimate penological goals, such as preserving institutional order and discipline. Barnett v. Centoni, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1994, 31 F.3d 813, on remand 1996 WL 263643 . Civil Rights 1090; Civil Rights 1395(7)

Alleged manifestations of prison officials' retaliation against inmates for their litigation activities did not themselves have to amount to violation of inmates' constitutional rights in order to permit inmates to maintain § 1983 action for prison officials' alleged intent to impede access to courts. Madewell v. Roberts, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1990, 909 F.2d 1203. Civil Rights 1094

Inmate's claim that officials retaliated against him for prevailing in class action to change prisoners' conditions of confinement stated viable civil rights claim, even if inmate could not assert "right" of other inmates to legal representation. Smith v. Maschner, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1990, 899 F.2d 940, on remand 915 F.Supp. 263. Civil Rights 1090

Prosecution of jail inmate for practicing law without license did not violate other inmates' constitutional right of access to courts; regular system of legal assistance was available to inmates and inmates were aware of system. Kunzelman v. Thompson, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1986, 799 F.2d 1172. Prisons 4(10.1)

Prisoner access to courts is not to be curtailed, or restricted by threats, intimidation, coercion or punishment. Campbell v. Beto, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1972, 460 F.2d 765. See, also, Evans v. Moseley, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1972, 455 F.2d 1084, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 160, 409 U.S. 889, 34 L.Ed.2d 146; Burns v. Swenson, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1970, 430 F.2d 771, certiorari denied 92 S.Ct. 743, 404 U.S. 1062, 30 L.Ed.2d 751, rehearing denied 92 S.Ct. 1178, 405 U.S. 969, 31 L.Ed.2d 245. Convicts 6

Prisoners no less than other persons have constitutional right of access to courts, and prison authorities may neither place burdens on such right, nor punish its exercise. Corby v. Conboy, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 457 F.2d 251. Prisons 4(10.1)

Assertions that prisoner was deprived of his commissary privileges by his jailers in retaliation for writing to United States judge required hearing on merits of complaint brought under this section. Andrade v. Hauck, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1971, 452 F.2d 1071. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison guards did not unconstitutionally retaliate against prisoner for filing prior civil rights suits by allegedly filing false disciplinary charges against him, absent any evidence that alleged actions adversely impacted on his access to courts and chilled his rights. Oliver v. Powell, E.D.Va.2002, 250 F.Supp.2d 593. Civil Rights 1092

Prison official's statement to inmate that his efforts to file grievance after he was denied entry to law library because of his tardiness might be in vain was not harassment that infringed inmate's constitutional right of access to courts. Muhammad v. Hilbert, E.D.Pa.1995, 906 F.Supp. 267. Constitutional Law 328; Prisons 4(10.1)

Prison official's retaliation against inmate for exercising right of access to courts establishes basis for claim in § 1983 action; in order to prove retaliation claim, prisoner must demonstrate that his litigation activities constituted actual motivating factor, or "but for" cause of conduct, and failure to establish that retaliation adversely impacted prisoner's exercise of his constitutional rights is fatal to prisoner's case. Dillon v. Murray, W.D.Va.1994, 853 F.Supp. 199. Civil Rights 1094

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmate's allegations of retaliation for prior lawsuits would state claim for deprivation of access to courts. Smith v. Smith, E.D.Pa.1984, 578 F.Supp. 1373. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Threat by prison authorities to punish or actual punishment of inmate for taking legal action infringes upon inmate's constitutional rights. De Jesus v. Ward, S.D.N.Y.1977, 441 F.Supp. 215. Prisons 13(4)

State inmate's allegation that warden placed his name on transfer list after he filed grievance complaining about prison official's allegedly false disciplinary report and after he filed state court action to enjoin plan to transfer him was sufficient to state claim under § 1983 for violation of his First Amendment right to petition for redress of grievances and to access to courts. Russell v. Washington, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2002, 52 Fed.Appx. 862, 2002 WL 31805206, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2611. Conspiracy, prisoners' access to courts

In absence of any valid conspiracy claim among federal or state officials, there was no basis for claim under § 1983 that prisoner's discharged private attorney conspired with judges of Court of Appeals, of which his wife was Chief Justice, to deny prisoner his constitutional right of access to courts. Green v. Seymour, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1995, 59 F.3d 1073. Conspiracy 7.5(3)

2612. Cover-ups, prisoners' access to courts

Correctional officers' alleged cover-up of incident did not impede inmate's access to district court on his §§ 1983 claim that officer violated his Eighth Amendment right against cruel and unusual punishment by striking him and breaking his jaw, and thus officers were not liable to inmate under §§ 1983 for depriving him of access to court in violation of First Amendment; any cover-up did not succeed in depriving inmate of evidence relevant to his Eighth Amendment claim, since inmate was first-hand participant in incident. Orwat v. Maloney, D.Mass.2005, 360 F.Supp.2d 146. Constitutional Law 91; Prisons 4(10.1)

Where jury has found that defendant intentionally engaged in cover-up in hope of keeping civil suit from being filed and continues cover-up once case has been commenced, plaintiff may recover under federal civil rights statute for having been denied adequate access to courts if, because of cover-up, plaintiff was not awarded damages on meritorious claim that constitutional rights were violated. Gonsalves v. City of New Bedford, D.Mass.1996, 939 F.Supp. 921. Civil Rights 1056

2613. Threats, prisoners' access to courts

Allegation that prison guards communicated threats of physical harm to inmates who met with plaintiffs' counsel in instant class civil rights suit did not state a claim under § 1983, as mere threats do not deprive the inmates of any constitutional right unless an inmate can allege a specific instance in which he was actually denied access to the courts. White v. Fauver, D.N.J.1998, 19 F.Supp.2d 305. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Threat of physical harm to prisoner if he or she persists in his or her pursuit of judicial relief is as impermissible as more direct means of restricting right of access to courts; it is not necessary that prisoner succumb entirely or even partially to threat and it is enough that threat was intended to impose limitation upon prisoner's right of access to court and was reasonably calculated to have that effect. Brown v. Coughlin, W.D.N.Y.1997, 965 F.Supp. 401. Prisons 4(10.1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2614. Miscellaneous deprivations, prisoners' access to courts

State prisoner's allegations that it took an average of eighteen days to receive requested legal materials from New Mexico after being transferred to Virginia prison, that he was expected to know exactly what he needed without any knowledge of what materials might be available to him, and that he was prevented from filing a state habeas petition due to these problems, supported his §§ 1983 action against New Mexico corrections officials in their personal capacities alleging denial of his constitutional right of access to the courts under the Fourteenth Amendment. Trujillo v. Williams, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2006, 465 F.3d 1210. Prisons 4(13)

Inmate's allegations that he was denied an attorney and a court appearance while held in jail for 73 days on an alleged parole violation were sufficient to state civil rights claim under § 1983; success on such claim would not have demonstrated the invalidity of any outstanding criminal judgment against the inmate and would not have been inconsistent with a proper parole revocation. French v. Adams County Detention Center, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2004, 379 F.3d 1158. Civil Rights 1097

Allegations in inmate's pro se civil rights complaint, that prison official on two occasions opened his legal mail outside of his presence, were insufficient to state a claim for denial of access to courts, where inmate did not allege that such interference with his mail either constituted an ongoing practice of unjustified censorship or caused him to miss court deadlines or in any way prejudiced his legal actions. Davis v. Goord, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 320 F.3d 346. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate who presented evidence that jail officials interfered with his ability to correspond with courts and that he was handcuffed to bed for six days during hospitalization stated colorable claims for violation of civil rights. O'Donnell v. Thomas, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1987, 814 F.2d 524, opinion after remand 826 F.2d 788. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Civil rights of state prisoner who petitioned for federal habeas corpus relief and filed poverty affidavit were not violated on theory that he had been denied access to courts by being advised by clerk to resubmit his documents or that he had been libeled by clerk's understandable misinterpretation of inmate account balance sheet. Bradenburg v. Beaman, C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1980, 632 F.2d 120, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1522, 450 U.S. 984, 67 L.Ed.2d 820. Civil Rights 1094

Attachments to inmate's state-court petition, including correspondence from court clerk's office acknowledging receipt of inmate's papers, suggested that proceeding was forwarded to judge for consideration, precluding state officials' liability on § 1983 claim alleging that delayed mailing of petition interfered with pursuit of inmate's appeal, in violation of his right of access to the courts. McCoy v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2003, 255 F.Supp.2d 233. Civil Rights 1420

Claim that prison guard violently pulled clear plastic from prisoner's cell door did not rise to level of constitutional violation that could support § 1983 claim. Oliver v. Powell, E.D.Va.2002, 250 F.Supp.2d 593. Prisons 17(1)

Allegations that prison guards fabricated disciplinary or misconduct charges against numerous inmates, in order to create the appearance of a justification for certain incidents of the physical mistreatment inflicted upon the inmates, failed to state a claim under § 1983, as the filing of false disciplinary charges does not itself deprive an inmate of a constitutional right, but to the extent that the inmates were induced into falsely pleading guilty or intimidated during the disciplinary hearings, this conduct deprived them of their due process rights and, therefore, was a cognizable claim under § 1983. White v. Fauver, D.N.J.1998, 19 F.Supp.2d 305. Civil Rights 1092; Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(7.1)

Prisoner failed to establish that alleged delay of 14 days by prison employee in serving prisoner with court papers relating to pending action in which prisoner was involved prejudiced prisoner's ability to seek redress from judicial system, as required to state constitutional claim based on violation of his right of access to the courts. Warburton v. Underwood, W.D.N.Y.1998, 2 F.Supp.2d 306. Constitutional Law 328; Prisons 4(10.1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmate did not have standing to raise Bounds claim concerning denial of constitutional right of access to courts arising from lack of adequate prison law library or adequate legal assistance, despite claim that inadequate legal facilities precluded inmate from discovering a waiver argument in his previous civil rights case, which was dismissed, where inmate did not identify waiver problem when he had access to adequate legal facilities at correctional center. Kain v. Bradley, M.D.Tenn.1997, 959 F.Supp. 463. Civil Rights 1331(4)

It did not inexorably follow from prisoners' claimed difficulties in preparing his cases due to inadequate furnishings and supplies that he was thereby denied access to the courts, so as to make such inadequacies a constitutional violation; in order to carry burden of demonstrating a likelihood of success on the merits for purposes of entitlement to injunctive relief, prisoner would have to show an actual denial of access to courts resulting from those conditions. Davidson v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1996, 914 F.Supp. 1011. Injunction 138.60; Prisons 4(13)

Requiring that inmate, in civil rights action concerning conditions of confinement, before being allowed to proceed in forma pauperis, file amended complaint specifically alleging who violated his constitutional rights, approximate dates, times and places, and specifically identifying the rights allegedly violated, and that he make no allegations unless he could produce some evidence to support such allegations, did not constitute unreasonable restriction on inmate's access to the courts, particularly in light of fact that inmate had filed numerous other complaints which had been dismissed as frivolous. Rudd v. Jones, S.D.Miss.1995, 879 F.Supp. 621. Federal Civil Procedure 2734; Prisons 4(10.1)

Inmate's allegation that prison grievance coordinator failed to return one of his grievances until after time for appeal had expired did not establish actual injury, and thus, inmate could not maintain § 1983 claim for denial of First Amendment right to access the courts; there was no indication the grievance had any potential merit or that the grievance stated a civil rights claim, and the alleged conduct occurred after inmate had filed his court-access action, in which no supplemental pleading alleging the coordinator's conduct was filed. Rodgers v. Hawley, C.A.6 (Mich.) 2001, 14 Fed.Appx. 403, 2001 WL 798618, Unreported, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 125, 537 U.S. 828, 154 L.Ed.2d 42. Constitutional Law 91; Prisons 4(10.1)

Alleged failure of prothonotary to use reasonable care in the processing of inmate's miscaptioned and misdirected notice of appeal was at most negligent deprivation of access to courts, and thus was not actionable constitutional claim under civil rights statute. Turner v. Donnelly, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 156 Fed.Appx. 481, 2005 WL 3229537, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2332. Civil Rights 1056

Criminal defendant's §§ 1983 complaint, alleging actions of district court clerk and deputy clerk in handling motion violated his right of access to the courts, due process, and equal protection, was legally frivolous under statute governing proceedings in forma pauperis, where district court in criminal case ruled on defendant's motions. Bullock v. Doe, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 153 Fed.Appx. 869, 2005 WL 2994433, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2734

Court clerk's alleged conduct of failing to file documents sent to him by inmate, failing to respond to inmate's repeated inquiries and requests for court documents related to his criminal case, and destroying inmate's court documents did not deny inmate access to the courts, as required for inmate's §§ 1983 claim; inmate had exhausted his direct appeal rights six months prior to clerk's alleged actions and therefore could not demonstrate any injury related to clerk's alleged actions. Whitehead v. Schmid, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 148 Fed.Appx. 120, 2005 WL 2203153, Unreported. Civil Rights 1094

Failure of prisoner in Pennsylvania prison to timely file petition for post-conviction relief was not as a result of his 30-day confinement in restrictive housing unit, as required to state a claim for denial of access to courts; prisoner had one year within which to file petition, petition did not have to contain argument or citation to authority, amendments of petitions were generally liberally allowed, and petition would be deemed filed on date delivered to prison authorities or placed in mailbox. Garland v. Horton, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 129 Fed.Appx. 733, 2005 WL 1050786, Unreported. Prisons 4(10.1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmate did not establish a violation of his constitutional right to court access when correctional center superintendent refused to mail inmate's sealed bankruptcy petition to United States Bankruptcy Court, since superintendent did not refuse outright to mail petition, but only refused to send the petition sealed. Moore v. Rowley, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2005, 126 Fed.Appx. 759, 2005 WL 677800, Unreported. Prisons 4(12)

State inmate's appeal of district court's dismissal of his §§ 1983 action was not taken in good faith, and thus inmate could not proceed in forma pauperis (IFP) on appeal, despite inmate's contention that he was denied his right of access to courts because destruction of his legal materials prevented him from meeting deadline to file petition for writ of certiorari with United States Supreme Court, absent showing of actual injury. Phillips v. Walker, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2005, 122 Fed.Appx. 120, 2005 WL 323725, Unreported. Federal Courts 663

2615. Withholding evidence, prisoners' access to courts

Allegation that state denied prisoner meaningful access to courts by withholding post-conviction access to potentially favorable evidence, i.e., DNA testing of biological evidence used eight years before in his felony murder trial, stated claim for violation of prisoner's due process rights. Wade v. Brady, D.Mass.2006, 460 F.Supp.2d 226. Criminal Law 1590

XIX. PRISONERS' ACCESS TO MAILS

<Subdivision Index>

Accounts, money 2681
Arbitrariness of restrictions 2648
Books, magazines or other periodicals 2677
Catalogues 2678
Certified mail 2695
Compelling state interest standard 2643
Conditions of prison, subject matter of censored mail 2671
Consent of prisoner to open mail 2663

Counsel, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2654
Courts or judges, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2655
Damage 2662
Deliberate indifference 2647
Detriment or prejudice 2662
Discretion of prison officials 2646
Discriminatory restrictions 2649
Failure to respond to prisoner's letters 2696
Family or friends, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2656
Foreign language mail 2694
Forwarding of mail 2689
Harm 2662
Hospitalized inmates 2676
Identification of attorney 2685

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inclusion of statements in prisoner's mail 2667
Inflammatory material, subject matter of censored mail 2672
Injury 2662
Jurors, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2657
Leaflets 2679
Legal mail, presence of prisoner during opening of mail 2665
Legitimate penological interest 2642

Less restrictive regulations sufficient 2645
Log of incoming mail 2691
Loss of mail 2690
Money 2680, 2681
Money - Generally 2680
Money - Accounts 2681
Notice to prisoner of censorship 2675
Number of letters allowed in possession 2692
Number of pieces of mail opened 2668
Opening, inspection or censorship of mail generally 2652
Other prisoners, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2658
Packages 2682
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2653-2661
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Generally 2653
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Counsel 2654
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Courts or judges 2655
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Family or friends 2656
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Jurors 2657
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Other prisoners 2658
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Press 2659
Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Prison officials 2660

Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with - Public officials 2661
Photographs 2683
Post deprivation procedures 2651
Postage 2688
Prejudice 2662
Presence of prisoner during opening of mail 2664, 2665
Presence of prisoner during opening of mail - Generally 2664
Presence of prisoner during opening of mail - Legal mail 2665
Press, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2659
Prison officials, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2660
Prisoners' access to mails generally 2641
Public officials, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with 2661
Reading of mail 2666
Reasonableness of restrictions 2650
Security interests 2644
Sending of mail to wrong party 2669
Sexually oriented material, subject matter of censored mail 2673
Signatures or names on mail 2686
Stationery 2687
Subject matter of censored mail 2670-2674
Subject matter of censored mail - Generally 2670

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Subject matter of censored mail - Conditions of prison 2671
Subject matter of censored mail - Inflammatory material 2672
Subject matter of censored mail - Sexually oriented material 2673
Subject matter of censored mail - Threatening letters 2674
Threatening letters, subject matter of censored mail 2674
Time of mailing or distribution 2697
Time of retention of inmate mail 2693
Transcripts 2684

2641. Prisoners' access to mails generally

Claim by state prisoner under § 1983 that prison officials violated his First Amendment rights by interfering with the receipt of his mail did not implicate statute precluding prisoner suit for mental or emotional injury suffered while in custody without a prior showing of physical injury; a prisoner is entitled to judicial relief for a violation of his First Amendment rights aside from any physical, mental, or emotional injury he may have sustained. Rowe v. Shake, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1999, 196 F.3d 778, rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1098

Except with respect to correspondence with designated public officials, the courts, and the prisoner's attorney, for certain purposes, regulation of incoming and outgoing prison mail is essentially an administrative matter in which the courts will not intervene. Wilkerson v. Warden of U. S. Reformatory, El Reno, Okl., C.A.10 (Okla.) 1972, 465 F.2d 956. Prisons 4(9)

Regulation of flow of mail from penal institution is essentially administrative matter for prison officials, and their action in regard thereto is not subject to judicial review except under most unusual circumstances. Evans v. Moseley, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1972, 455 F.2d 1084, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 160, 409 U.S. 889, 34 L.Ed.2d 146. Prisons 4(9)

Stopping of an inmate's mail may constitute an action for violation of rights under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1. Lamb v. Hutto, E.D.Va.1979, 467 F.Supp. 562. Constitutional Law 82(13)

Prison officials have no unfettered discretion to withhold privileges of incoming mail, use of writing materials, visitation rights, and right to shower; unfettered withholding of those privileges may give rise to constitutional claim depending upon whether the deprivation is reasonable. Mathis v. DiGiacinto, E.D.Pa.1977, 430 F.Supp. 457. Prisons 4(5)

Control of mail to and from prison inmates is necessary to the proper administration of state penal institutions and, within limitations, is proper. Knell v. Bensinger, N.D.Ill.1974, 380 F.Supp. 494, affirmed 522 F.2d 720. Prisons 4(9)

Although prisoners retain constitutionally protected right to reasonable correspondence with the outside world, a single instance of damaged or withheld mail does not constitute First Amendment violation. Alexander v. Gennarini, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 144 Fed.Appx. 924, 2005 WL 1805621, Unreported. Prisons 4(9)

2642. Legitimate penological interest, prisoners' access to mails

In order for corrections officials to be entitled to judgment as matter of law in suit by inmate alleging constitutional violations concerning confiscation of his mail and files, defendants were required to demonstrate that challenged prison regulations were reasonably related to legitimate penological interests. Akbar v. Borgen, E.D.Wis.1992, 803 F.Supp. 1479. Federal Civil Procedure 2121.1

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2643. Compelling state interest standard, prisoners' access to mails

Heightened scrutiny is required of prison officials' tampering with prisoners' legal mail due to the added constitutional concern of maintaining prisoners' access to the courts; restrictions on prisoners' legal mail are justified only if they further one or more of the substantial governmental interests of security, order, and rehabilitation, and must be no greater than is necessary for the protection of the particular governmental interest involved. Evans v. Vare, D.Nev.2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 1188. Prisons 4(12)

Freedom to use the mails is a "fundamental" interest and in order to uphold a prison regulation which allegedly infringes upon such fundamental interest, the state must show that "compelling state interest" justifies a differential in treatment of inmates as compared with those not convicted of a crime. Preston v. Thieszen, W.D.Wis.1972, 341 F.Supp. 785. Prisons 4(9)

2644. Security interests, prisoners' access to mails

State has a compelling interest in assuring the security of its prisons; whenever that need conflicts with the right of prisoners, the latter must yield. Crowe v. Leeke, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1977, 550 F.2d 184. Prisons 4(1)

Maintaining security was substantial government interest that could have justified interference with legal mail, for purpose of heightened scrutiny analysis of civil rights claim of state prisoner and his attorney-friend who alleged violation of their First Amendment rights. Evans v. Vare, D.Nev.2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 1188. Prisons 4(12)

2645. Less restrictive regulations sufficient, prisoners' access to mails

Complete ban on all correspondence between state prisoner and his attorney-friend, that appeared to law librarian to address cases other than prisoner's case and applied even to cases where names of parties had been blacked out, was more restrictive of plaintiffs' constitutional rights than was necessary to maintain prison security, for purpose of request for preliminary injunction. Evans v. Vare, D.Nev.2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 1188. Civil Rights 1457(5)

Inmate mail restrictions must further an important governmental interest unrelated to suppression of speech and the restrictions should be no greater than are necessary or essential to the protection of the particular governmental interest involved. Battle v. Anderson, E.D.Okla.1978, 457 F.Supp. 719, remanded on other grounds 594 F.2d 786. Prisons 4(9)

In assessing validity of a prison regulation that restricts prisoner correspondence, careful consideration should be given to possibility that a less restrictive regulation might suffice to promote the particular governmental interest that underlies the regulation. U. S. ex rel. Ratchford v. Jeffes, E.D.Pa.1978, 451 F.Supp. 675. Prisons 4(9)

2646. Discretion of prison officials, prisoners' access to mails

Prison administrators' regulation of inmate mail was valid if mail restrictions were justifiable and implementation of restrictions necessitated a minimum degree of discretion. Frazier v. Donelon, E.D.La.1974, 381 F.Supp. 911, affirmed 520 F.2d 941, certiorari denied 96 S.Ct. 1134, 424 U.S. 923, 47 L.Ed.2d 332. Prisons 4(9)

2647. Deliberate indifference, prisoners' access to mails

Even if prison officials had tampered with inmate's privileged mail, officials were no more than negligent and did not act with deliberate or callous indifference to inmate's constitutional rights, as required to support inmate's § 1983 claim alleging violation of due process. Jermosen v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 877 F.Supp. 864. Civil Rights 1094

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2648. Arbitrariness of restrictions, prisoners' access to mails

Claim of state prisoner relating to alleged imposition of arbitrary standards on his attempts to communicate would not support a claim for deprivation of constitutional rights under this section where there was no allegation that the alleged interference with prisoner's mail denied him access to the courts. Bussue v. Lankler, S.D.N.Y.1972, 337 F.Supp. 146. Civil Rights 1098

2649. Discriminatory restrictions, prisoners' access to mails

Restrictions upon prison inmate correspondence may not be imposed in discrimination against prisoner's race. Martin v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1976, 525 F.2d 983. Prisons 4(9)

State prisoners failed to establish that restrictions on their correspondence affected some absolute right which law secures to an individual even while imprisoned, such as right of access to courts, or right to be free from discrimination against religious beliefs or race, and failed to establish claim for relief. Lovern v. Cox, W.D.Va.1974, 374 F.Supp. 32. Civil Rights 1420

2650. Reasonableness of restrictions, prisoners' access to mails

Except in extreme cases, courts may not interfere with reasonable regulations by prison authorities to control incoming and outgoing correspondence. Johnson v. Lark, E.D.Mo.1973, 365 F.Supp. 289. Prisons 4(9)

Right of prisoner to correspond generally with people in outside world is subject to reasonable regulation and restriction. Holt v. Hutto, E.D.Ark.1973, 363 F.Supp. 194, reversed on other grounds 505 F.2d 194, on remand 410 F.Supp. 251. Prisons 4(9)

2651. Post deprivation procedures, prisoners' access to mails

Adequacy of postdeprivation procedures for redressing erroneous, random, and unauthorized determination that mail sent to inmate was contraband precluded inmate from bringing civil rights claim on procedural due process grounds against prison officials; moreover, in light of availability of such procedures, no predeprivation hearing or grace period was required. Diaz v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 909 F.Supp. 146. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 4(7)

2652. Opening, inspection or censorship of mail generally, prisoners' access to mails

Prison mail clerk did not violate inmate's constitutional rights to receive mail or to access courts when, while not in inmate's presence, she inadvertently opened inmate's incoming legal mail, particularly where opening was followed by corrective action consisting of stapling envelope shut without reading its contents, attaching confidential mail receipt form to envelope, and delivering it to inmate. Gardner v. Howard, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1997, 109 F.3d 427. Constitutional Law 82(13); Constitutional Law 328; Prisons 4(9)

Prison officials have a legitimate interest in opening incoming mail for the purpose of checking for weapons, drugs, or other items which might endanger the safety and security of the prison. Bach v. People of State of Ill., C.A.7 (Ill.) 1974, 504 F.2d 1100, certiorari denied 94 S.Ct. 3202, 418 U.S. 910, 41 L.Ed.2d 1156. Prisons 4(9)

Examination of prisoners' correspondence, not addressed to attorneys or to courts, is a reasonable exercise of the discretion of prison management with which the federal courts will not interfere. Woods v. Yeager, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1972, 463 F.2d 223. See, also, Cook v. Brockway, D.C.Tex.1977, 424 F.Supp. 1046, affirmed 559 F.2d 1214. Prisons 4(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Supervisor at state prison's mail processing center did not personally participate in any alleged misconduct when she informed inmate that she had no documentation of any improper opening of his legal mail, and thus could not be held liable under § 1983. Giba v. Cook, D.Or.2002, 232 F.Supp.2d 1171. Civil Rights 1358

Although prison officials improperly opened privileged mail outside of inmate's presence, in violation of Department of Correctional Services Directive 4422, such deviation from the Department's rules was an insufficient basis for a federal claim of deprivation of civil rights. DiRose v. McClennan, W.D.N.Y.1998, 26 F.Supp.2d 550. Civil Rights 1094

Inmate's allegations that prison officials opened his incoming legal mail, monitored phone calls to his attorney, and filed false charges against him were redressable under § 1983. Bullock v. Barham, N.D.Ill.1997, 957 F.Supp. 154. Civil Rights 1094

Inmate failed to demonstrate that any prison official, with possible exception of one correspondence clerk, came in contact with inmate's mail which was allegedly tampered with, nor did inmate demonstrate that any of the supervisory officials had any knowledge of or personal involvement in any of the alleged incidents, as required to support § 1983 claim. Jermosen v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 877 F.Supp. 864. Civil Rights 1098; Civil Rights 1358

Inmate who asserted only that he would provide affidavits from family members that his mail had been interfered with did not raise genuine issue of material fact precluding summary judgment on civil rights claim for prison officials, whose affidavits established that privileged mail was opened only inadvertently and returned to sender only while prisoner was incarcerated in another state. Gee v. Ruettgers, D.Wyo.1994, 872 F.Supp. 915. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Inmate of Oklahoma state reformatory was not deprived of any right guaranteed by United States Constitution notwithstanding that certain letters which were sealed, stamped, and given to jail official for mailing may have been opened, presumably read, resealed and mailed where there was no contention that the mail was censored, that any contents were removed and not replaced or that mailing or delivery was delayed and the mail was not "legal" mail addressed to attorneys or the court. Wray v. Kirkland, W.D.Okla.1981, 527 F.Supp. 52. Civil Rights 1098

Inspection of prisoners' mail under appropriate circumstances is constitutional. Stinson v. Sheriff's Dept. of Sullivan County, S.D.N.Y.1980, 499 F.Supp. 259. Prisons 4(6)

Prison regulations pertaining to screening, including reading, of incoming and outgoing nonlegal mail are constitutional and censorship of such mail is permissible to extent that censorship furthers penal interest of maintenance of institutional security, preservation of internal order and discipline, or rehabilitation of prisoner, and these penal interests outweigh rights under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1. Padgett v. Stein, M.D.Pa.1975, 406 F.Supp. 287. Prisons 4(6)

State prisoner's allegations that prison officials violated his constitutional rights by tampering with his outgoing mail or sending forged documents to him were insufficient to state a claim under §§ 1983; exhibits clearly demonstrated that prisoner's mail was, in fact, sent out of the prison by prison officials and, in many instances, he received responses from the courts, and there was no evidence that any ongoing litigation being pursued by prisoner in state or federal court was affected by prison officials' alleged actions. Smith v. Bruce, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2004, 103 Fed.Appx. 342, 2004 WL 1448019, Unreported, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 418, 543 U.S. 965, 160 L.Ed.2d 334. Civil Rights 1094

Corrections officer did not proximately cause alleged violation of prisoner's constitutional right to send mail, although corrections officer intercepted prisoner's mail; officer forwarded prisoner's mail to supervisor, who made it available to prison disciplinary committee, who decided to destroy it as contraband after finding prisoner guilty of violating prison mail rules. Al-Hizbullahi v. Kun, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 22889412, Unreported, affirmed 122 Fed.Appx. 349, 2005 WL 319403. Prisons 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2653. Persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails--Generally

In compiling list of persons with whom prison inmate may engage in general correspondence prison officials may properly send questionnaire to prospective correspondent and make certain limited inquiries of local law enforcement officers as to proposed correspondent's criminal record in connection with drugs. Holt v. Hutto, E.D.Ark.1973, 363 F.Supp. 194, reversed on other grounds 505 F.2d 194, on remand 410 F.Supp. 251. Prisons 4(9)

Any limitations on communications by inmate with courts, counsel, family, potential witnesses, public officials and the press should be kept at bare and necessary minimum. Collins v. Schoonfield, D.C.Md.1972, 344 F.Supp. 257, supplemented 363 F.Supp. 1152. Prisons 4(6)

2654. ---- Counsel, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

Preventing prisoner from mailing letter which concerned prisoner's trouble with past due payments on a freezer and might as easily have been written to store's credit department as to attorney was not a denial of constitutional right of access to the courts. Collins v. Cundy, C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1979, 603 F.2d 825. Constitutional Law 328

In order to assure that prison inmate does not abuse his right to confidential correspondence with attorneys, prison may require that inmate wishing to correspond with identifiable attorney present name and business address of attorney to prison officials 48 hours before correspondence is to be placed in mails. Taylor v. Sterrett, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 532 F.2d 462. Prisons 4(12)

Unreasonable interference with prisoner's outgoing legal correspondence, particularly when it limits his access to courts, creates cause of action cognizable under this section. Martin v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1976, 526 F.2d 938. Civil Rights 1094

Where prisoner did not allege that sheriff and deputy censored his letters while he was in custody or that they were responsible for failure of letters to be delivered, and attorney to whom letters were addressed was not associated with prisoner's defense, prisoner's civil rights were not violated by failure of letters to reach attorney. Page v. Sharpe, C.A.1 (Me.) 1973, 487 F.2d 567. Civil Rights 1094

Jail officials are not permitted to refuse to mail a communication between an inmate and an attorney. Christman v. Skinner, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 468 F.2d 723. Prisons 4(12)

As to mail of inmates to and from counsel, prison officials who would interfere with U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1 rights bear a heavy burden of showing abuse in terms of transmittal of contraband or the laying of plans for some unlawful scheme. Wilkinson v. Skinner, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 462 F.2d 670. Prisons 4(12)

On state prisoners' complaints, prison officials would not be prohibited from censoring or interfering in any way with any correspondence between inmate and his attorney, and could open and read correspondence between inmate and his attorney but would be prohibited from otherwise impeding or interfering with same, absent clear abuse of access, defined in terms of transmittal of contraband or laying of plans for some unlawful scheme. Wright v. McMann, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 460 F.2d 126, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 115, 409 U.S. 885, 34 L.Ed.2d 141. Civil Rights 1448; Prisons 4(12)

Inmate in state prison should not be given carte blanche mailing privilege, and decree that prison officials should permit inmate to correspond with civil liberties organization would be modified by engrafting limitation that correspondence be subjected to reasonable regulation consistent with legitimate policies of internal prison administration and security, so long as such regulation did not become subterfuge to deny inmate's access to the organization, and through it, to the courts. Burns v. Swenson, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1970, 430 F.2d 771, certiorari denied 92 S.Ct. 743, 404 U.S. 1062, 30 L.Ed.2d 751, rehearing denied 92 S.Ct. 1178, 405 U.S. 969, 31 L.Ed.2d 245. Prisons 4(12)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

That prison inmates do not have all constitutional rights of citizens in society--and may hold some constitutional rights in diluted form--does not permit prison officials to frustrate vindication of those rights which are enjoyed by inmates, or to be sole judge--by refusal to mail letters to counsel--to determine which letters assert constitutional rights. Nolan v. Scafati, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1970, 430 F.2d 548. Prisons 4(12)

Undelayed uncensored, unlimited use of the mails is necessary to secure a prisoner's right of access to the courts and his concomitant right to seek and obtain assistance of competent counsel; further, the right to counsel carries with it the right to use the mails to obtain and communicate with counsel. McDonough v. Director of Patuxent, C.A.4 (Md.) 1970, 429 F.2d 1189. Prisons 4(12)

Correspondence to state prisoner from attorney-friend, that was genuinely related to prisoner's own criminal and civil rights claims, could be identified as "legal mail," and was subject to heightened level of scrutiny, for purpose of plaintiffs' request for preliminary injunction; even if correspondence consisted of legal orders pertaining to persons other than prisoner, those orders were not necessarily irrelevant to prisoner's claims and prison officials were not empowered to decide their relevance, since thorough analysis of legal orders and opinions on relevant issues was cornerstone of effective litigation. Evans v. Vare, D.Nev.2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 1188. Civil Rights 1457(5)

Without explicit proof of damages, an occasional violation of attorney-client mail regulations in a prison does not state a claim cognizable under this section. Cofone v. Manson, D.C.Conn.1976, 409 F.Supp. 1033. Civil Rights 1094

Although prisoner might have a colorable claim under this section with respect to action of prison officials in opening her legal correspondence, where there was no contention that the correspondence, which prison officials claimed was opened by mistake, was censored or that any substantial delay resulted in prisoner receiving letter claim was not one of constitutional magnitude such as to require intervention by federal court. Ray v. Parrish, E.D.Va.1975, 399 F.Supp. 775. Civil Rights 1094

2655. ---- Courts or judges, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

A regulation prohibiting prison law clinic members from writing judges, in name of clinic, requesting furlough for fellow inmates, can be upheld as reasonable only if court determines that inmates who seek assistance in writing of such letters have available to them adequate alternative sources of assistance, and regardless of whether mail regulation prohibiting inmates from writing judges, in name of law clinic, requesting furlough for fellow inmates, is reasonable, prison officials may not refuse to mail such letters. Bryan v. Werner, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1975, 516 F.2d 233. Prisons 4(12)

Right of access to courts embraces filing of necessary legal documents to secure a judicial determination, but does not comprehend a right to correspond with judges. Coleman v. Crisp, W.D.Okla.1977, 444 F.Supp. 31. Prisons 4(10.1); Prisons 4(12)

Any conduct by prison employees contrary to prison regulations prohibiting reading, censoring or reproduction of any outgoing inmate mail and allowing inmates to seal outgoing mail to the courts, public officials and lawyers would not give rise to cause of action under this section, notwithstanding that such conduct was wrongful. U. S. ex rel. Dean v. Johnson, E.D.Pa.1974, 381 F.Supp. 495. Civil Rights 1094

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

The warden's alleged interference with prisoner's mailing rights does not fall within purview of this section; reasonable control of the mails is a legitimate result of penal security, but correspondence between an inmate and courts or public officials relating to alleged abuses may not be infringed. Ornitz v. Robuck, E.D.Ky.1973, 366 F.Supp. 183. Civil Rights 1094

Prison inmate has a practically unrestricted right to correspond privately with courts and with his attorney. Holt v. Hutto, E.D.Ark.1973, 363 F.Supp. 194, reversed on other grounds 505 F.2d 194, on remand 410 F.Supp. 251. Prisons 4(12)

Even if superintendent violated Missouri Department of Corrections mail procedures when he refused to mail inmate's sealed bankruptcy petition to United States Bankruptcy Court, the violation of prison policy alone did not give rise to §§1983 liability, absent a violation of a constitutional right. Moore v. Rowley, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2005, 126 Fed.Appx. 759, 2005 WL 677800, Unreported. Civil Rights 1094; Civil Rights 1351(4)

2656. ---- Family or friends, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

Unlike correspondence with courts or counsel, prisoner's right to mail letters to his family or friends is not absolute, and in certain instances refusal to mail inmate's letter may be clearly justified, such as where communication of its contents to persons beyond prison walls would pose threat to prison discipline or security, or would hinder efforts to rehabilitate inmate. Corby v. Conboy, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 457 F.2d 251. Prisons 4(9)

Prisoner had constitutional right, protected by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1, to communicate with friends, relatives and attorneys by means of visits and correspondence. Ali v. Gibson, D.C.Virgin Islands 1979, 483 F.Supp. 1102, reversed on other grounds 631 F.2d 1126, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 951, 449 U.S. 1129, 67 L.Ed.2d 117. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.3)

Inmates, even while confined to isolation, shall not be denied a reasonable and proper correspondence with members of immediate family. Sykes v. Kreiger, N.D.Ohio 1975, 451 F.Supp. 421. Prisons 4(9)

Claim that prison authorities refused to mail prisoner's letters to his father and sister concerning "illegal prison treatment and punishment" failed to state claim under this section in absence of allegation of any special facts. Wells v. McGinnis, S.D.N.Y.1972, 344 F.Supp. 594. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2657. ---- Jurors, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

State prison officials' refusal to permit prisoner to mail letters to former jurors at his trial held some 13 years previously did not amount to misuse or abuse of power derived from state and did not violate this section where prisoner showed no reason whatsoever for contacting jurors. In re Leamer, W.D.Pa.1971, 322 F.Supp. 578. Prisons 4(12)

2658. ---- Other prisoners, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

Since Alabama prison regulations governing passage of material to and from inmates in segregation units limited right of segregation inmate to send literature about politics and religion to other prisoners and to receive such matter from them, the state was required to show how applying such regulation to prisoners like plaintiff furthered its legitimate penological objective; bare assertion that regulation was an appropriate means of maintaining security in segregation units was not enough since the state was required to adduce specific evidence to support such assertion and explain why the regulation was preferable to other possible measures which restricted rights under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1 less severely. Rudolph v. Locke, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1979, 594 F.2d 1076. Prisons 4(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prison's requirement that inmate seek addition of his alleged Georgia prisoner correspondent to his approved list of correspondents was reasonable, and no constitutional issue was raised by the procedure for purposes of inmate's civil rights suit. Fowler v. Graham, D.C.S.C.1979, 478 F.Supp. 90. Prisons 4(9)

Requirement of permission before prison inmates might correspond with other prisoners furthered state's substantial interest in maintaining order in and preventing escape from prisons and was practice no broader than necessary to protection of substantial governmental interests. Williams v. Ward, S.D.N.Y.1975, 404 F.Supp. 170. Prisons 4(9)

Seizure of letter mailed from inmate at one Virginia penal institution to inmate in other institution did not violate due process; in any event, letter was properly withheld from delivery because of its objectionable content, i.e., description of a serious fraud which the writer had perpetrated on prison superintendent and its offer to procure illegal drugs for recipient. Lawrence v. Davis, W.D.Va.1975, 401 F.Supp. 1203. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 4(9)

2659. ---- Press, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

The right of an inmate to send letters to the press survives incarceration. Burnham v. Oswald, W.D.N.Y.1972, 342 F.Supp. 880.

2660. ---- Prison officials, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

Censorship of mail, whether addressed to head of state department of corrections or to others, is not deprivation of any constitutional guaranty available to state prisoner in solitary confinement. Belk v. Mitchell, W.D.N.C.1968, 294 F.Supp. 800. Prisons 4(9)

2661. ---- Public officials, persons prisoners entitled to correspond with, prisoners' access to mails

A prisoner has absolute right to address his grievances to public officials by letters written from the prison, so long as it can be shown that the letters have not been circulated to other inmates in the prison, with the view in mind of inciting a riot or lesser forms of violence or resentment against the prison officials. Preston v. Cowan, W.D.Ky.1973, 369 F.Supp. 14, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds and remanded 506 F.2d 288. Prisons 4(12)

2662. Detriment or prejudice, prisoners' access to mails

Prisoner suffered an actual injury, and thus had standing to bring §§ 1983 action alleging deprivation of access to the courts, when prison mail room supervisor held his mail, including legal mail, rather than forwarding it while prisoner was temporarily being housed in another facility, causing him to lose a lawsuit; prisoner had an arguable and nonfrivolous claim which he was unable to pursue. Simkins v. Bruce, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 406 F.3d 1239. Civil Rights 1333(4)

Pretrial detainee who asserted that his legal mail was opened and read outside of his presence and without his consent failed to state cognizable constitutional claim for denial of his right to access to the courts; detainee failed to allege that his position as litigant was prejudiced by mail tampering. Walker v. Navarro County Jail, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1993, 4 F.3d 410, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prisoner's allegations that prison officials negligently destroyed or mishandled his legal mail did not support an actionable claim under §§ 1983. Strong v. Woodford, C.D.Cal.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 1082. Civil Rights 1094

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

To the extent that prisoner's complaint could be construed as alleging that the retaliatory action, delay of his outgoing legal mail, was taken in response to his filing cases in court or in an effort to thwart his ability to access the courts, he failed to establish §§ 1983 retaliation claim since he failed to show actual injury or specific harm which he has suffered as a result of the allegedly alleged delay or mishandling of his mail. Pearson v. Simms, D.Md.2003, 345 F.Supp.2d 515, affirmed 88 Fed.Appx. 639, 2004 WL 362386. Civil Rights 1094

Correctional facility inmate's claim that officials twice interfered with his mail and were responsible for the destruction of paperwork he left behind did not state cognizable claim under § 1983 for interference with his mail; interruption of mail was not a facility problem, inmate failed to show that pending or anticipated legal action was prejudiced by officials' alleged interference with mail, and inmate admitted leaving his documents behind in cell and failed to name specific person whom he believed destroyed his property. Govan v. Campbell, N.D.N.Y.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 289. Civil Rights 1094; Civil Rights 1098

County sheriff's occasional opening of mail of prisoner while he was incarcerated at county jail, without any showing of harm, was reasonable exercise of discretion of prison management and did not render sheriff liable in civil rights action brought by prisoner. Cook v. Brockway, N.D.Tex.1977, 424 F.Supp. 1046, affirmed 559 F.2d 1214. Civil Rights 1090

2663. Consent of prisoner to open mail, prisoners' access to mails

There was no violation of prisoner's constitutional rights when prisoner submitted unsealed envelope for mailing and, upon prison officials' suspicion being aroused by envelope's weight and bulk, prisoner agreed voluntarily to remove contents for inspection and six smaller envelopes were discovered within the first, and were opened and inspected in the presence of the prisoner. Golden v. Coombe, S.D.N.Y.1981, 508 F.Supp. 156. Prisons 4(9)

2664. Presence of prisoner during opening of mail, prisoners' access to mails--Generally

Bureau of Prisons mail regulation allowed opening of general mail outside presence of inmate and opening of special mail only in presence of inmate if sender is adequately identified on envelope and phrase "Special Mail - Open only in the presence of the inmate" appeared on front of envelope was reasonably related to legitimate government interest of prison security and a more discretionary system of handling mail would increase volume of legal mail and costs. Henthorn v. Swinson, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1992, 955 F.2d 351, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 2974, 504 U.S. 988, 119 L.Ed.2d 593. Prisons 9

2665. ---- Legal mail, presence of prisoner during opening of mail, prisoners' access to mails

Requirement that mail from attorneys to prisoners be opened in the presence of the inmates, without being read by prison officials, does not infringe prisoners' First, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment rights. Wolff v. McDonnell, U.S.Neb.1974, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 418 U.S. 539, 41 L.Ed.2d 935, 71 O.O.2d 336. Constitutional Law 82(13); Constitutional Law 272(2); Criminal Law 641.3(4)

Inmates claiming that their incoming legal mail was opened and inspected for contraband outside their presence, in violation of prison rules, stated no cognizable claim for violation of their constitutional right of access to courts and free speech; inmates did not assert that their ability to prepare or transmit necessary legal document had been affected or that mail had been censored, and they conceded that opening and inspection was for legitimate penological objective of prison security. Brewer v. Wilkinson, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1993, 3 F.3d 816, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1081, 510 U.S. 1123, 127 L.Ed.2d 397. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.3); Constitutional Law 328; Prisons 4(12)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Privileged prisoner mail, mailed to or from inmate's attorney and identified as such, could not be opened for inspections for contraband except in presence of prisoner. Jensen v. Klecker, C.A.8 (N.D.) 1981, 648 F.2d 1179. Prisons 4(11)

Opening of inmate's legal mail outside his presence was inadvertent act which did not rise to constitutional dimension, for purposes of inmate's claim under federal civil rights statute; it was uncertain whether items in question were identified as requiring special handling, there was no showing of pattern of improper opening of inmate's legal mail, and institution immediately responded to inmate's complaint. Bledsoe v. Biery, D.Kan.1993, 814 F.Supp. 58, affirmed 992 F.2d 1222. Civil Rights 1094; Prisons 4(6)

Prison practice of opening legal mail outside presence of inmate where envelope contained markings which made it readily identifiable as legal mail, but which were not in precise form specified by institutional rules, violated inmates' constitutionally protected rights of access to court and to assistance of counsel. Burt v. Carlson, C.D.Cal.1990, 752 F.Supp. 346. Prisons 4(9); Prisons 4(12)

Conduct of prison mailroom clerk in opening inmate's privileged legal mail out of inmate's presence and depositing check from the Tennessee Claims Commission directly into inmate's prison account amounted to no more than mere negligence and was not actionable under § 1983; inmate failed to allege any facts which would suggest that clerk was motivated by personal prejudice, that clerk intended to interfere with inmate's access to the courts, or otherwise acted in capricious manner. Jackson v. Norris, M.D.Tenn.1990, 748 F.Supp. 570, affirmed 928 F.2d 1132. Civil Rights 1094

Mail from the court was not legal mail requiring inmate's presence prior to opening, and thus inmate's allegations that his rights were violated when an envelope from the court stamped "legal mail, must be opened in the presence of inmate" was opened by jail officials outside his presence, were insufficient to support § 1983 claim against jail officials. Dung v. Alameda County Sheriff Dept., N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 21982659, Unreported. Civil Rights 1094; Prisons 4(12)

2666. Reading of mail, prisoners' access to mails

Prison officials have discretion to open and inspect letters from governmental agencies to inmates in presence of inmates when they feel that external screening is insufficient to detect contraband, but they may not read contents of such letters. Taylor v. Sterrett, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 532 F.2d 462. Prisons 4(9)

Even assuming prison official violated certain provisions of New York State Department of Correctional Services directive in reading and confiscating prisoner's personal mail, prisoner's due process claim premised solely upon such violation was not sufficient basis for § 1983 claim. Webster v. Mann, W.D.N.Y.1996, 917 F.Supp. 185. Civil Rights 1098

2667. Inclusion of statements in prisoner's mail, prisoners' access to mails

Placement of notice containing brief, factually accurate description of inmate's record and circumstances, which included sexual offenses involving children, with inmate's outgoing correspondence did not violate his First Amendment rights; copies were inserted in inmate's nonprivileged correspondence for unspecified period of time after prison officials discovered he had written to female students pictured in elementary and junior high school directories found in his cell. Turner v. Ralls, D.Kan.1991, 770 F.Supp. 605. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.3); Prisons 4(9)

2668. Number of pieces of mail opened, prisoners' access to mails

Isolated incident in which prison officials accidently opened one piece of inmate's constitutionally protected legal

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

mail did not give rise to constitutional violation, absent evidence of improper motive or resulting interference with inmate's right to counsel or access to court. Smith v. Maschner, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1990, 899 F.2d 940, on remand 915 F.Supp. 263. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prison guard's opening of single letter of inmate to federal district court did not constitute civil rights violation. Wiggins v. Anderson, E.D.Okla.1974, 386 F.Supp. 369. Civil Rights 1094

2669. Sending of mail to wrong party, prisoners' access to mails

Prison officials' negligent error in mailing prisoner's trial transcript to person other than prisoner's attorney was not cognizable under this section. Jenkins v. Meyers, N.D.Ill.1972, 338 F.Supp. 383, affirmed 481 F.2d 1406. Civil Rights 1094

2670. Subject matter of censored mail, prisoners' access to mails--Generally

Although Maryland Correctional Institute inmate had no right to demand that his letter concerning the suicide of a fellow inmate be printed in the prison news letter or that prison authorities make arrangements for the publication of the letter in local outside newspapers, inmate had right to send his letter to the outside world unimpeded. Cavey v. Levine, D.C.Md.1977, 435 F.Supp. 475, affirmed 580 F.2d 1047. Prisons 4(9)

Benefits made available by Veterans Administration were not within "other federal rights" for which federal court may exercise its equity powers to interfere with administration of state prison and order prison to permit a prisoner to mail a letter to obtain a constitutional or other federal right. Goodchild v. Schmidt, E.D.Wis.1968, 279 F.Supp. 149. Courts 495; Prisons 4(3)

State inmate sufficiently stated § 1983 retaliation claim against prison officials based on his allegation that prison officials improperly censored his outgoing mail to remove unflattering statements, even though he had no constitutional right to complaint, where it could reasonably be inferred from chronology of events that inmate was directly disciplined for writing letter and was subjected to retaliation through disciplinary proceedings. Crockett v. Wackenhut Correctional Corp., C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 79 Fed.Appx. 732, 2003 WL 22513691, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2671. ---- Conditions of prison, subject matter of censored mail, prisoners' access to mails

Prison authorities have power to censor prisoner mail; thus, prison officials could not be found liable under this section for allegedly interfering with Tennessee inmate's constitutional right of free expression by allegedly confiscating letters mailed to his parents complaining of conditions at prison. Crafton v. Rose, E.D.Tenn.1972, 369 F.Supp. 131. Civil Rights 1098; Prisons 4(9)

2672. ---- Inflammatory material, subject matter of censored mail, prisoners' access to mails

If prison officials refused to mail inmate-written article to prisoners' writing contest merely because they concluded that it was inflammatory, such refusal constituted denial of inmate's civil rights. Chiarello v. Bohlinger, S.D.N.Y.1975, 391 F.Supp. 1153, affirmed 573 F.2d 1288. Civil Rights 1098

2673. ---- Sexually oriented material, subject matter of censored mail, prisoners' access to mails

Decision of prison censorship board to bar prisoners' receipt of mail containing sexually explicit material, including, "The Complete Adult Mail Order Catalogue," and a "Buddhist sex manual," on ground that it would have detrimental effect on rehabilitation was within discretion of censorship board and required no further review by district court, and district court was warranted in dismissing prisoners' civil rights complaint without requiring further response by board or conducting further hearings. Carpenter v. State of S. D., C.A.8 (S.D.) 1976, 536 F.2d 759, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 2636, 431 U.S. 931, 53 L.Ed.2d 246. Prisons 4(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2674. ---- Threatening letters, subject matter of censored mail, prisoners' access to mails

Counselor supervising prison law clinic may refuse to mail threatening letters or any letters discussing escape plans or future criminal activity which an inmate might seek to mail via the clinic. Bryan v. Werner, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1975, 516 F.2d 233. Prisons 4(12)

Rules and regulations of county jail, pertaining to censorship of incoming and outgoing mail of jail inmates that provide for censorship of all mail except that from or to attorneys, courts and proper agencies and which call for the omission of communications that relate to threats, witness intimidation or means of escape, were reasonable. Nelson v. Bishop, E.D.Tenn.1974, 390 F.Supp. 1191. Prisons 4(9)

2675. Notice to prisoner of censorship, prisoners' access to mails

Withholding of former prisoner's mail by detention center officials after they determined it was obscene, and failure to notify former prisoner of the mail, even during time that he was later again incarcerated at the detention center, did not rise to level of deprivation of procedural due process. Harris v. Bolin, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1991, 950 F.2d 547. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 4(9)

Once prison authorities decide to censor major portions of a letter to or from an inmate or to reject in toto the letter, minimal procedural safeguards should attach and authorities should notify sender of decision with accompanying explanation for action and sender should have available some avenue of review if he believes that his or her product is outside the pale of the restrictions. Frazier v. Donelon, E.D.La.1974, 381 F.Supp. 911, affirmed 520 F.2d 941, certiorari denied 96 S.Ct. 1134, 424 U.S. 923, 47 L.Ed.2d 332. Prisons 4(9)

2676. Hospitalized inmates, prisoners' access to mails

Decision to screen, for contraband, nonlegal mail addressed to involuntarily confined mental health patients was within realm of administrative judgments to which court was required to defer, where correspondence was not read, though screening took place at central location before being brought into wards. Eckerhart v. Hensley, W.D.Mo.1979, 475 F.Supp. 908. Mental Health 51.1

Censorship of prisoner's mail by state hospital officials was within scope of proper disciplinary and security measures. Leeper v. Birzgalis, W.D.Mich.1969, 314 F.Supp. 808. Health 582

2677. Books, magazines or other periodicals, prisoners' access to mails

A prison's withholding books sent to prisoner by his mother on basis of a Virginia Department of Corrections guideline requiring that books and other publications be mailed to prisoners directly from publisher or from legitimate book store could not have prejudiced claim of denial of access to courts made by prisoner, who had brought suit seeking to dispute a prison doctor's medical judgment that prisoner was not a victim of low blood sugar. Zaczek v. Hutto, C.A.4 (Va.) 1981, 642 F.2d 74. Prisons 4(10.1)

State prison inmate failed to prove that prison officials' enforcement of state regulation barring inmates' receipt of free or gift publications deprived him of due process or violated his free speech rights, so that inmate could not establish conspiracy to violate those constitutional rights. Zimmerman v. Simmons, D.Kan.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 1077, reversed 392 F.3d 420, on remand 401 F.Supp.2d 1181. Conspiracy 7.5(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prison officials did not violate inmate's First Amendment rights, for purposes of Bivens and § 1983 claims, by refusing to deliver single copy of magazine to inmate on basis of security concerns; warden determined that issue of magazine contained inflammatory article about activities of federal prison system and named officials at prison, that article also contained inflammatory information about incarcerated illegal aliens at prison, and that delivery of issue could have led to disorder or violence toward named officials and illegal aliens. Olson v. Loy, S.D.Ga.1996, 951 F.Supp. 225. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.3); Prisons 4(8)

Disapproval of news letter sent state prisoner because its content was inflammatory was improper but such impropriety did not require granting of relief to prisoner who brought action under this section, where complained of conduct involved a single, isolated instance of mail censorship without broader plan or course of conduct to censor prisoner's mail indiscriminately, where withholding of news letter was only honest error on part of prison official and where news letter was subsequently approved and distributed in prison. Lingo v. Boone, N.D.Cal.1975, 402 F.Supp. 768. Civil Rights 1098; Prisons 4(8)

State prison could not ban in general newspaper received by inmate because some of the issues of newspaper violated valid censorship rules of prison but had to examine each issue and disapprove or approve newspaper on issue to issue basis, where issue by issue determination would not place undue burden on prison officials in that newspaper was not voluminous and was published weekly, where many issues would be approved for receipt by inmate under the prison rules and where other prisons allowed its inmates to receive such newspaper and screened newspaper upon issue by issue basis. McCleary v. Kelly, M.D.Pa.1974, 376 F.Supp. 1186. Prisons 4(8)

County jailer's decision to refuse to permit inmates to receive newspapers and magazines was reasonable where newspaper had continually been used to stop up plumbing and on two occasions had been used to burn mattresses. Lovern v. Cox, W.D.Va.1974, 374 F.Supp. 32. Prisons 4(8)

Where prison officials made no showing of compelling state interest to justify infringement of prisoner's fundamental interest in freedom to use the mails, prisoner's civil rights complaint that defendants had refused to permit prisoner to receive law books from any source other than books' publisher stated claim upon which relief could be granted, notwithstanding defendants' allegation which lacked required supporting material, that it would be a simple matter to submit an entire escape plan in binding of a used book. Van Erman v. Schmidt, W.D.Wis.1972, 343 F.Supp. 377, supplemented 374 F.Supp. 1070. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2678. Catalogues, prisoners' access to mails

In state prison inmates' and publisher's §§1983 First Amendment and due process challenge to state regulation barring inmates' receipt of gift publications, and to prison's internal policies preventing some inmates from obtaining any publications and putting dollar limit on remaining inmates' publication purchases, questions of fact existed as to factors of alternative means of exercising constitutional right, effect of accommodation, and absence of ready alternatives to regulation, precluding summary judgment; dollar limit was likely to foreclose access, and more evidence was required concerning link between gift ban and "strong-arming" security concern. Jacklovich v. Simmons, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2004, 392 F.3d 420, on remand 401 F.Supp.2d 1181. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Inmate's complaint that prison did not deliver catalogues and did not return receipts for certified mail did not raise issue of constitutional magnitude necessary to state cause of action for deprivation of civil rights. Smith v. Maschner, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1990, 899 F.2d 940, on remand 915 F.Supp. 263. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2679. Leaflets, prisoners' access to mails

Prisoner's complaint that in denying a request that money from inmate welfare fund be used to distribute a leaflet prepared by prisoners to voters of state, defendant state officials had impermissibly abridged prisoners' First and Fourteenth Amendment right of free expression stated a claim under civil rights statute. O'Connell v. Southworth,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

D.C.R.I.1976, 422 F.Supp. 182. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2680. Money, prisoners' access to mails--Generally

Federal prisoner had no constitutional right to send money through mails to former inmate nor to draw interest on his commissary account. Bijeol v. Benson, S.D.Ind.1975, 404 F.Supp. 595. Prisons 4(4)

2681. ---- Accounts, money, prisoners' access to mails

State prison inmate's right to use of mails did not require that he be furnished statements on his "intra-institutional" money account more frequently than monthly. X (Smith) v. Robinson, E.D.Pa.1978, 456 F.Supp. 449. Constitutional Law 82(6.1)

Inmate alleging that prison officials interfered with his right to access courts and counsel was required to identify all correspondence or other mail he claimed was not mailed in violation of his rights as alleged in his § 1983 complaint, absent showing that interrogatory request was burdensome or overbroad. Davidson v. Goord, W.D.N.Y.2003, 215 F.R.D. 73, appeal denied 259 F.Supp.2d 238. Federal Civil Procedure 1502

2682. Packages, prisoners' access to mails

Prison could impose restrictions on receipt of packages from outside the institution and therefore inmate's complaint that food package sent by his brother was not given to him but was returned did not give rise to civil rights violation. Jensen v. Klecker, C.A.8 (N.D.) 1981, 648 F.2d 1179. Prisons 4(5)

There was no denial of constitutional rights of county jail inmates with respect to inspection of mail, where the only inspection made was that of packages to determine whether contraband was contained therein. Tate v. Kassulke, W.D.Ky.1975, 409 F.Supp. 651. Prisons 4(9)

2683. Photographs, prisoners' access to mails

Prison officials and their subordinates were acting consistent with policies and procedures set forth in various Department of Corrections directives relating to incoming mail and possession of photographs by inmates when they opened inmate's mail and confiscated photographs; thus, prison officials did not deliberately violate inmate's constitutional rights by confiscating, misplacing or destroying photographs so as to state claim under § 1983. Herrera v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1993, 815 F.Supp. 713. Prisons 4(6); Prisons 4(7)

No apparent rationale existed for policy of prison, which did permit prisoners to receive certain well-known magazines for men, of excluding all nude photographs of wives and girl friends of inmates even though those photographs were considerably less revealing in many instances than the photographs contained in the magazines. Taylor v. Perini, N.D.Ohio 1976, 413 F.Supp. 189. Prisons 4(8)

2684. Transcripts, prisoners' access to mails

Even though at time transcript of interview with inmate concerning racial organization was removed from prisoner's mail prison had policy of prohibiting inmates from receiving any literature concerning that organization, where there was no indication whether policy was enforced, transcript was not automatically confiscated as soon as someone noticed that it contained reference to organization, and mail room supervisor laid it aside, intended to read it later in order to determine whether it fell within prohibition of materials that promoted violence or disorder, and transcript disappeared either as result of inadvertent loss or theft by another precluding further examination, unconstitutional policy was not proximate cause of loss of transcript, and therefore, prisoner was not entitled to damages. Sims v. Wyrick, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1984, 743 F.2d 607. Civil Rights 1098

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2685. Identification of attorney, prisoners' access to mails

State may require that communications of attorney to prisoner be specially marked as originating from attorney, with his name and address given, if they are to receive special treatment, and may require that a lawyer desiring to correspond with a prisoner first identify himself and his client to the prison officials to assure the letters marked "privileged" are actually from members of the bar. Wolff v. McDonnell, U.S.Neb.1974, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 418 U.S. 539, 41 L.Ed.2d 935, 71 O.O.2d 336. Prisons 4(12)

2686. Signatures or names on mail, prisoners' access to mails

Party names other than state prisoner, or persons directly involved in prisoner's litigation, except in the case of published opinions or reference thereto, could be redacted in legal mail to state prisoner from attorney-friend, to properly balance security interests of prison with potential for chilling prisoner's right of access to courts and representation by counsel, for purpose of plaintiffs' request for preliminary injunction against prison policy of complete ban on all correspondence between state prisoner and his attorney-friend. Evans v. Vare, D.Nev.2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 1188. Civil Rights 1457(5)

Memorandum from Department of Rehabilitation and Correction to prison officials directing that residents working in the legal services office of the prison sign their correspondence in such a manner as to designate them as "inmate legal advisors" so as to make clear to courts and prosecuting attorneys that the inmates were not attorneys-at-law did not provide basis for imposing sanction, upon finding of a "mail violation," on inmate who had used the designation "legal advisor" on certain correspondence even though he was not entitled to such title and was not assigned to the law library. Taylor v. Perini, N.D.Ohio 1976, 413 F.Supp. 189. Prisons 4(9)

State penitentiary inmate complaining of alleged refusal of warden to allow inmate to use the title "Reverend" on his outgoing mail would be directed to seek relief with the Inmate Grievance Commission. Hyde v. Fitzberger, D.C.Md.1973, 365 F.Supp. 1021. Prisons 4(14)

2687. Stationery, prisoners' access to mails

No constitutional right is infringed where material used for communication by prison inmates is that supplied by the institution rather than that chosen by the prisoner; however, if limitation as to type of stationery would result in a curtailment of the prisoner's right to communicate with the courts, public officials, attorneys, as well as friends and family it could not be justified by considerations underlying the penal system. U. S. ex rel. Dean v. Johnson, E.D.Pa.1974, 381 F.Supp. 495. Civil Rights 1094

2688. Postage, prisoners' access to mails

There is no constitutional violation in checking prison resident law clinic mail in order to assure that clinic is not used for improper purposes, and counselor supervising prison law clinic may check outgoing mail to insure that it in fact is court related and seeks legal relief and may examine outgoing petitions for purposes of determining whether they are entitled to free postage, for keeping abreast of legal proceedings in which inmates are involved or even for making constructive suggestions. Bryan v. Werner, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1975, 516 F.2d 233.

Postage regulation of Illinois Department of Corrections which, among other things, allowed free and unlimited postage for confidential correspondence with federal and state courts, Department of Corrections and Attorney General as well as the right to send three one-ounce confidential letters a week to any proper correspondent and to send unlimited correspondence to attorneys at prisoner's own expense constituted reasonable regulation as an attempt to balance rights of prisoners with prison budgetary considerations. Bach v. Coughlin, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1974, 508 F.2d 303. Prisons 4(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Claim of state prisoner requesting that three-judge court be convened to enjoin prison mail censors from removing postage stamps from his outgoing mail did not rise to level of federal claim and if considered as theft of property problem no basis was presented for civil rights action. Brown v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1969, 419 F.2d 1308. Federal Courts 994

County jail inmates were not denied access to the courts by being required to pay postage for envelopes bearing bulky complaints. Tate v. Kassulke, W.D.Ky.1975, 409 F.Supp. 651. Prisons 4(9)

2689. Forwarding of mail, prisoners' access to mails

Prison officials have responsibility to promptly forward mail to inmates, even where mail is addressed to inmate in care of prison law clinic and inmate no longer works at clinic. Bryan v. Werner, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1975, 516 F.2d 233. Prisons 4(9)

State prisoner had right under U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1 and 14 to have prison officials forward correspondence which was addressed to Governor, state's Attorney General and state's Pardon Attorney and in which prisoner complained about conditions at prison and sought investigation thereof. LeVier v. Woodson, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1971, 443 F.2d 360. Constitutional Law 91; Constitutional Law 274.1(2.1)

2690. Loss of mail, prisoners' access to mails

Prisoner failed to prove loss of any legal material, absent any proof beyond bald assertion of loss, as necessary to be entitled to injunctive relief, even though attorney and courts did not receive material allegedly mailed to them, absent proof that material were actually mailed. Oldham v. Chandler-Halford, N.D.Iowa 1995, 877 F.Supp. 1340. Civil Rights 1454

Prisoner's allegation that supervisor of prison mail room lost or refused to deliver certain items of inmates' legal mail stated a colorable claim for relief under this section. Woods v. Aldworth, N.D.Ill.1983, 561 F.Supp. 891. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Corrections officer did not proximately cause alleged violation of prisoner's constitutional right to receive mail, although note directed to corrections officer from mail room staff person advised that prisoner would not be allowed to use any name other than "Tyson" with respect to his mail; note did not reflect any conduct by officer that caused mail room to adopt subject policy, and there was no allegation that officer was aware that policy would or did affect prisoner's ability to receive mail, much less any allegation that officer could have done anything to change mail room's practice with respect to prisoner's name. Al-Hizbullahi v. Kun, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 22889412, Unreported, affirmed 122 Fed.Appx. 349, 2005 WL 319403. Prisons 10

2691. Log of incoming mail, prisoners' access to mails

Constitution did not require that prison officials keep log of incoming legal mail to inmates. Russell v. Oliver, W.D.Va.1975, 392 F.Supp. 470, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds 552 F.2d 115. See, also, Russell v. Loving, D.C.Va.1975, 392 F.Supp. 475. Prisons 4(12)

2692. Number of letters allowed in possession, prisoners' access to mails

State penitentiary rule limiting each inmate to possession of fifteen personal letters had valid purpose of preventing fire hazards and was not exceptional circumstance requiring federal intervention, whether letters were personal or legal. U. S. ex rel. Lee v. People of State of Ill., C.A.7 (Ill.) 1965, 343 F.2d 120. Prisons 4(7)

2693. Time of retention of inmate mail, prisoners' access to mails

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Restrictions on length of time mail could be retained by inmates was arbitrary and an impermissible restraint on right of correspondence where such regulations were based on purported desire to prevent accumulations of flammable materials but inmates were allowed two manila envelopes of legal papers. Battle v. Anderson, E.D.Okla.1978, 457 F.Supp. 719, remanded on other grounds 594 F.2d 786. Prisons 4(9)

2694. Foreign language mail, prisoners' access to mails

Allegedly defamatory comments of town mayor and town attorney at public hearing regarding resident against whose property a tax foreclosure sale was conducted did not chill resident's First Amendment rights so as to support §§ 1983 claim, since resident did in fact address the hearing; resident had constitutional right only to speak, not to be believed or to exclude others from expressing contrary views. Balaber-Strauss v. Town/Village of Harrison, S.D.N.Y.2005, 405 F.Supp.2d 427. Municipal Corporations 980(3)

Denial to federal prisoner of privileges accorded to other English speaking prisoners to receive mail, on accident of language, refusing to permit him to receive mail from only relative, a sister who was in Hungary and could not read or write English, where convict's caseworker could act as interpreter for prison authorities, constituted unconstitutional discrimination for which relief was available under this section. U. S. ex rel. Gabor v. Myers, E.D.Pa.1965, 237 F.Supp. 852. Civil Rights 1098

2695. Certified mail, prisoners' access to mails

Inmate's complaint that prison did not deliver catalogues and did not return receipts for certified mail did not raise issue of constitutional magnitude necessary to state cause of action for deprivation of civil rights. Smith v. Maschner, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1990, 899 F.2d 940, on remand 915 F.Supp. 263. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison officials did not act in intentional and deliberate manner to deprive inmate of his constitutional rights by preventing his legal mail from arriving at court in timely manner due to their refusal to process certified mail due to insufficient funds in inmate's account; prison officials' behavior was consistent with Department of Correction's policies and procedures regarding processing of inmate mail and prison official offered to write to court on inmate's behalf explaining any untimeliness in arrival of inmate's reply affirmation. Herrera v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1993, 815 F.Supp. 713. Prisons 4(12)

In view of inmates' widespread distrust of internal mail system at prison, which was at least partially justified by evidence of inefficiency of the system, requirement that certified mail be provided to prisoners, at least on credit, was a reasonable one. Taylor v. Perini, N.D.Ohio 1976, 413 F.Supp. 189. Prisons 4(9)

2696. Failure to respond to prisoner's letters, prisoners' access to mails

Allegations charging prison officials with failure to respond to inmate's letters are not per se cognizable under this section. West v. Rowe, N.D.Ill.1978, 448 F.Supp. 58. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2697. Time of mailing or distribution, prisoners' access to mails

Prison mail room supervisor's conduct of holding the mail, including mail clearly marked as containing legal documents, of a prisoner who had been temporarily transferred out of state, rather than forwarding it to him, constituted intentional conduct violating the prisoner's right of access to the courts; although prison regulation required that such mail be forwarded, the supervisor stated that she had been trained to hold such mail. Simkins v. Bruce, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 406 F.3d 1239. Prisons 4(12)

Warden and classification officer named as defendants in prisoner's civil rights suit did not, through their actions with regard to delivery of inmate mail, cause prisoner to lose right to appeal in state coram nobis proceeding;

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

classification officer's testimony established that notice of denial of coram nobis petition did not pass through warden's hands, there was no evidence that warden instituted any regulation or engaged in any practice that would delay prisoners' receipt of mail, and any delay by classification officer in delivery of mail was not prejudicial in light of unrebutted evidence that officer did not receive notice in question until after time for filing appeal had passed. Gramegna v. Johnson, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1988, 846 F.2d 675. Civil Rights 1420

Delay in the handling and distribution of an inmate's mail to and from courts which is attributable to forgetfulness or sloth on part of fellow inmates does not state cause of action against state officials. Bryan v. Werner, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1975, 516 F.2d 233. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Where prison's delay in handling inmate's outgoing legal mail was merely inadvertent, and not intentional, and represented only isolated incident, delay did not rise to level of violation of the free exercise clause of U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 1 or the due process clause of U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14 which would entitle inmate to relief in action under this section against corrections officials. Guffey v. Trago, N.D.Ind.1983, 572 F.Supp. 782.

That mail was not delivered or sent out on weekends at city jail related to an area of administrative detail in which federal district court had no authority to act. Green v. Ballou, W.D.Va.1975, 391 F.Supp. 806, affirmed 551 F.2d 306. Prisons 4(9)

State prison inmate's delivery of response papers to prison officials four days before date specified in order to show cause why his §§ 1983 action should not be dismissed for failure to prosecute was timely under prison mailbox rule, even if papers were not received by clerk of court until after that date and were not seen by district court until after order of dismissal had been issued. Woldeguiorguis v. Conner, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 101 Fed.Appx. 844, 2004 WL 1292611, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 1758.1

XX. MEDICAL CARE OF PRISONERS

<Subdivision Index>

Abortion 2791
AIDS 2792
Amputations 2793
Arrestees 2736
Arrestees, serious medical need 2738
Arrestees, suicide 2788
Asthma 2794
Availability of state remedy, suicide 2787
Broken bones, serious medical need 2739
Burns 2795
Cancer 2796
Causation 2750
Choice of treatment 2761
Choking, serious medical need 2740

Classification 2760
Colds, serious medical need 2741
Concussions 2797
Corrective devices 2775
Court order 2757
Cruel and unusual nature of punishment 2734
Damage or injury 2751

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Delay in treatment 2762
Deliberate indifference 2729
Dental problems 2798
Depression, serious medical need 2742
Diabetes 2799
Diabetes, serious medical need 2743
Diagnosis 2763
Diet 2765
Differences of opinion 2733
Digestive problems 2800
Discretion of officials 2722
Doctors order ignored 2722a
Drug treatment 2769
Drugs or medicine 2766-2768

Drugs or medicine - Generally 2766
Drugs or medicine - Interruption of dispensing drugs or medicine 2768
Drugs or medicine - Time of dispensing 2767
Equipment needs, medical care of prisoners 2759a
Essential medical care 2749
Exercise 2776
Experiments 2770
Eyesight 2801
Facilities 2759
Harm 2751
Heart disease 2802
Increase in risk of disease or injury 2752
Injury 2751
Intent or knowledge 2732
Interruption of dispensing drugs or medicine 2768
Knee injuries 2803
Knowledge 2732
Lice, serious medical need 2744
Lock downs or lock ups 2771
Malicious treatment 2735
Medical care of prisoners generally 2721

Medical history 2772
Medical records access 2764
Mental illness 2742a
Miscellaneous medical problems 2811
Miscellaneous serious medical needs 2748
Negligence or malpractice generally 2731
Number of cellmates 2773
Organ donation and transplantation 2774
Outside medical care 2777
Paralysis 2804
Pattern or policy of indifference 2730
Periodic examinations 2778
Persons liable 2723
Persons required to give medical care 2724-2726

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Persons required to give medical care - Generally 2724
Persons required to give medical care - Private organizations 2725
Persons required to give medical care - Supervisory personnel 2726
Physical therapy 2779
Poisons 2780
Post deprivation procedures, suicide 2787
Preexisting injuries 2753

Pregnancy, serious medical need 2748a
Private organizations, persons required to give medical care 2725
Prostheses 2781
Psychological problems 2805
Refusal of treatment 2754
Removal from hospital or infirmary 2782
Request for treatment 2755
Seizures 2806
Serious medical need 2737-2748
Serious medical need - Generally 2737
Serious medical need - Arrestees 2738
Serious medical need - Broken bones 2739
Serious medical need - Choking 2740
Serious medical need - Colds 2741
Serious medical need - Depression 2742
Serious medical need - Diabetes 2743
Serious medical need - Lice 2744
Serious medical need - Mental illness 2742a
Serious medical need - Miscellaneous serious medical needs 2748
Serious medical need - Pregnancy 2748a
Serious medical need - Transsexuality 2745

Serious medical need - Tuberculosis 2746
Serious medical need - Ulcers 2747
Shocks the conscience test 2727
Shots or inoculations 2783
Sick-call procedures 2784
Size of staff 2785
Specialized treatment 2756
Success of medical treatment 2758
Suicide 2786-2788
Suicide - Generally 2786
Suicide - Arrestees 2788
Suicide - Availability of state remedy 2787
Supervisory personnel, persons required to give medical care 2726
Surgery 2807
Time of dispensing, drugs or medicine 2767
Transsexuality, serious medical need 2745
Trench mouth 2808
Tuberculosis 2809
Tuberculosis, serious medical need 2746
Ulcers 2810
Ulcers, serious medical need 2747

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Unnecessary suffering standard 2728
Withdrawing treatment 2768a
Work assignments 2789
X-rays 2790

2721. Medical care of prisoners generally

Two-part analysis is to be used in claims under this section alleging Eighth Amendment violations as to medical care; first, whether there was a serious medical need, and second, if so, did the official's response to that need amount to deliberate indifference. Williams v. Burton, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1991, 943 F.2d 1572, rehearing denied 953 F.2d 652, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 3002, 505 U.S. 1208, 120 L.Ed.2d 877.

For purpose of civil rights action brought by a prisoner against prison authorities for denial of medical treatment, federal courts are generally reluctant to second-guess medical judgments and constitutionalize claims which sound in state tort law, but medical attention rendered for a prisoner may be so woefully inadequate as to amount to no treatment at all so as to give rise to federal civil rights action against prison officials. Westlake v. Lucas, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1976, 537 F.2d 857. Civil Rights 1091

Court in civil rights actions by prisoners must exercise highest degree of care to make certain that prisoner is not deprived of his federally secured constitutional right to medical care. Gamble v. Estelle, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1975, 516 F.2d 937, rehearing denied 521 F.2d 815, certiorari granted 96 S.Ct. 1101, 424 U.S. 907, 47 L.Ed.2d 311, reversed on other grounds 97 S.Ct. 285, 429 U.S. 97, 50 L.Ed.2d 251, rehearing denied 97 S.Ct. 798, 429 U.S. 1066, 50 L.Ed.2d 785, on remand 554 F.2d 653. Civil Rights 1091

Federal courts cannot close their judicial eyes to prison conditions which present a grave and immediate threat to health of physical well being. Campbell v. Beto, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1972, 460 F.2d 765. Prisons 17(1)

Material issues of fact, as to whether state prison inmate was subjected to sufficiently serious conditions when he was placed in most extreme isolation portion of maximum security prison, and whether officials making placement decision were indifferent to problems caused by placement, precluded summary judgment that Eighth Amendment rights of inmate were not violated. Scarver v. Litscher, W.D.Wis.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 986, affirmed 434 F.3d 972 . Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Once state has deprived person of his or her liberty and, concomitantly, ability to seek out medical treatment, state may not ignore any serious medical needs that that individual may evidence and could have corrected but for the detention; where such wilful ignorance or reckless disregard of medical needs takes place, it is tantamount to punishment in contravention of the due process clause. Kocienski v. City of Bayonne, D.N.J.1991, 757 F.Supp. 457. Constitutional Law 262

Prisoner who in action brought under this section alleges violation of right under U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8 to be free from cruel and unusual punishment must not only show deprivation of federally guaranteed right and that deprivation occurred at hands of those acting under color of state law but also that named defendants were deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs such as to constitute unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Williams v. Duckworth, N.D.Ind.1983, 598 F.Supp. 9, affirmed 749 F.2d 34. Civil Rights 1404

In order for claim that prisoner has not received adequate medical or dental treatment to state violation of prohibition of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8 against cruel and unusual punishment, and thus a claim under this section, facts must indicate such acts or omissions as are sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious needs, including intentional interference with professionally prescribed care or treatment, and negligent diagnosis, incorrect treatment or other circumstances that do not amount to more than professional malpractice will not suffice. Lewandowski v. Fauver, D.C.N.J.1981, 531 F.Supp. 53. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Punishment 1546

Where prisoner has received some medical attention and dispute is over adequacy of treatment, federal courts are generally reluctant to second-guess medical judgments; however, in some cases, medical attention rendered may be so woefully inadequate as to amount to no treatment at all, thereby rising to level of claim under this section. Sturts v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1982, 529 F.Supp. 434. Civil Rights 1091

Plaintiff was entitled to maintain under this section relating to civil action for deprivation of rights an action against defendant police officials for their alleged failure to provide him with medical attention while he was incarcerated. Green v. Cauthen, D.C.S.C.1974, 379 F.Supp. 361. Civil Rights 1091

Denial of medical care is a denial of federal right actionable under this section if there is acute physical condition, the urgent need for medical care, the failure or refusal to provide it, and tangible residual injury. Schmidt v. Wingo, W.D.Ky.1973, 368 F.Supp. 727, affirmed 499 F.2d 70. See, also, Preston v. Cowan, D.C.Ky.1973, 369 F.Supp. 14, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds, remanded 506 F.2d 288. Civil Rights 1039

2722. Discretion of officials, medical care of prisoners

Prison medical officers have wide discretion in treating prisoners. Tolbert v. Eyman, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1970, 434 F.2d 625. See, also, Stiltner v. Rhay, C.A.9(Wash.) 1967, 371 F.2d 420, certiorari denied 87 S.Ct. 1318, 386 U.S. 997, 18 L.Ed.2d 346, certiorari denied 87 S.Ct. 1384, 386 U.S. 1025, 18 L.Ed.2d 466, certiorari denied 87 S.Ct. 2038, 387 U.S. 922, 18 L.Ed.2d 977, rehearing denied 88 S.Ct. 21, 389 U.S. 893, 19 L.Ed.2d 212, certiorari denied 87 S.Ct. 2086, 387 U.S. 948, 18 L.Ed.2d 1338; Mayfield v. Craven, D.C.Cal.1969, 299 F.Supp. 1111, affirmed 433 F.2d 873.

In order for prisoner to recover in civil rights action brought against prison officials for denial of medical care, there must have been a knowing failure or refusal to provide urgently needed medical care, the consummate effect of which caused residual injury which could have been prevented with timely attention and court must consider the wide discretion allowed prison officials in their treatment of prisoners under authorized medical procedures and the absolute bar to basing any civil rights action on negligence. Scharfenberger v. Holmes, W.D.Ky.1974, 384 F.Supp. 1269, reversed on other grounds 542 F.2d 328. Civil Rights 1091

Even when there is statutory authorization for a federal court to oversee aspects of the administration of a federal medical facility the question before the court is not whether the hospital has made the best decision but whether it has made a permissible and reasonable decision in view of the relevant information and within a very broad range of discretion; the range of discretion is greatest where the judgment is medical, not administrative. Negron v. Preiser, S.D.N.Y.1974, 382 F.Supp. 535. Mental Health 436.1

In the case of medical treatment, state prison officials are given a wide discretion under this section and causes of action are recognized only in cases of abuse of this broad discretion. Robinson v. Jordan, N.D.Tex.1973, 355 F.Supp. 1228, vacated on other grounds 494 F.2d 793. Civil Rights 1091

2722A. Doctors orders ignored, medical care of prisoners

State prison inmate stated claim that nurse practitioner violated his Eighth Amendment rights by countermanding earlier order of physician, which provided that only soft restraints could be used, due to neurological damage inflicted by prior use of metal handcuffs; there was possibility that nurse sought to deliberately inflict pain, rather than implement differing medical assessment of inmate's condition. Reimann v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 1059. Sentencing And Punishment 1549

State prison's food service provider could not be held responsible for damages to inmate pursuant to § 1983 for the acts of its employees under a theory of respondeat superior or vicarious liability which allegedly resulted from the employees' failure to comply with orders of inmate's doctor that he be placed on restricted diet and consume meals at prescribed intervals. Woulard v. Food Service, D.Del.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 596. Civil Rights 1339

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prisoner adequately pled a claim of deliberate indifference to a serious medical condition against members of prison's security personnel where he alleged that they deliberately denied and/or delayed the express instructions and orders of various outside orthopedic specialists and prison doctors. Williams v. Fisher, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22170610, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2723. Persons liable, medical care of prisoners

Persons engaged in routine performance of routine medical responsibilities cannot be considered deliberately indifferent to the medical needs of a prisoner, in a lawsuit under § 1983 under the Eighth Amendment. Richardson v. Goord, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 347 F.3d 431. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Supervising physician in prison could not be liable under § 1983 for alleged deliberate indifference by treating prison physicians to serious medical needs of prisoner with severe hand injury, based upon delays in medical treatment and surgery, where supervising physician never examined or diagnosed prisoner's hand, supervising physician was not directly responsible for scheduling treatments or procedures, or following up on continuing treatment, and there was no evidence that supervising physician was aware of or instituted any unconstitutional policy, practice or act, or that he was grossly negligent in supervising his subordinates. Hernandez v. Keane, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 341 F.3d 137, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 971, 543 U.S. 1093, 160 L.Ed.2d 905. Civil Rights 1358

Mere fact that corrections department sergeant was supervising special housing unit at time when prisoner intentionally cut himself was not enough to demonstrate her personal involvement, as required to prove that sergeant was liable under §§ 1983 for Eighth Amendment violation in form of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Bell v. Arnone, W.D.N.Y.2006, 455 F.Supp.2d 232. Civil Rights 1358

Inmate did not have objectively serious medical need when seen by prison nurses in medical clinic following alleged abuse by guards during extraction of inmate from his cell, and thus, nurses were not liable under §§ 1983 for violating inmate's Eighth Amendment rights through deliberate indifference to a serious medical need, where nurse's physical examination of inmate revealed that inmate suffered minor injuries consistent with those seen by medical personnel in prisons following cell extractions. Valdes v. Crosby, M.D.Fla.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 1084, affirmed 2006 WL 1474726. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Police officer who transported arrestee to county jail after arrest could not be held liable under § 1983 for deliberate indifference to the medical condition of arrestee, based on arrestee's conclusory assertion that "the Plaintiff had suffered a head injury so severe that he could not, under any circumstances, make a determination for himself as to whether or not he needed medical treatment." Dimmitt v. Ockenfels, D.Me.2004, 220 F.R.D. 116, affirmed 407 F.3d 21. Civil Rights 1420

Receipt by non-medical supervisory prison official of letters written by state prisoner with hepatitis C requesting follow up medical care was insufficient to impute personal involvement to official, for purpose of prisoner's §§ 1983 action for failure to provide adequate medical treatment. McKenna v. Wright, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 102752, Unreported, appeal dismissed 386 F.3d 432. Civil Rights 1358

Since prisoner could not bring claim for deliberate indifference to medical needs against any individual defendant as a result of his failure to grieve, he could not maintain Monell claim against city based on deliberate indifference to medical needs. Rizzuto v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1212758, Unreported. Civil Rights

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

1348

2724. Persons required to give medical care, medical care of prisoners-- Generally

Member of prison grievance committee, which denied request for a referral for an outside dermatologist consultation for prisoner suffering from keloid formation on his face at site of a knife wound, was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's medical needs, barring prisoner's § 1983 claim against superintendent for deliberate indifference in violation of the Eighth Amendment; although committee member signed the written decision of the committee, there was no evidence presented that the member had the ability to withhold his signature or otherwise overrule committee's decision, or that member had medical training or was otherwise aware that decision to deny referral was unresponsive to prisoner's medical needs. Brock v. Wright, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 315 F.3d 158. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Allegations by prisoner against prison doctor and physician's assistant that prisoner had serious back condition, that he was subjected to the possible risks of a permanent disability or fatal injury due to lack of proper care by doctor and physician's assistant, that they acted maliciously and sadistically toward prisoner with intent to inflict pain, that doctor and physician's assistant refused to examine prisoner on numerous occasions, and that doctor twisted his leg during an examination, even though prison told him it was causing him pain, stated §§ 1983 claim against doctor and physician's assistant for Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Spruill v. Gillis, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2004, 372 F.3d 218. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Evidence failed to support deliberate indifference claim against prison guards arising out of failure to address medical needs of inmate, where there was no evidence that the guards were in position to act meaningfully in regard to medical needs of inmate. Smith v. Barry, C.A.4 (Md.) 1993, 985 F.2d 180, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 207, 510 U.S. 874, 126 L.Ed.2d 164. Civil Rights 1420

Detainee, who was subdued by another city's officers, was in "custody" of police officers who came to assistance of other city's officers so as to give rise to obligation under Fourteenth Amendment to provide detainee with medical care where detainee was placed in their vehicle, to which they enjoyed sole access and control. Estate of Owensby v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2004, 385 F.Supp.2d 626, affirmed and remanded 414 F.3d 596, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2023. Municipal Corporations 747(3)

Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause was violated by inadequate medical care and inadequate medical records at county jail, warranting injunctive relief against county and sheriff in inmates' § 1983 class action; many physician progress notes and other medical records were missing, there was no written definition of medical emergency requiring immediate care, delays in responding to inmate requests for medical care were numerous, sheriff had provided no training in suicide prevention and had no written policy on same, and potentially suicidal inmates were often isolated physically and provided little or no counseling. Ginest v. Board of County Com'rs. of Carbon County, D.Wyo.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 1190. Civil Rights 1454; Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Sentencing And Punishment 1547

Allegations that city administrative employees were aware of, but failed to remedy, ongoing violations of city prisoner's constitutional right to receive adequate medical care for debilitating condition, when read charitably and in the most favorable light, supported prisoner's §§ 1983 claims against employees, which were based on employees' failure to respond to prisoner's complaints of inadequate medical care for injuries he allegedly sustained in bus accident. Carrasquillo v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2004, 324 F.Supp.2d 428. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prisoner's allegation against prison superintendent, that superintendent failed to address or rectify the denial of prisoner's medical treatment for hepatitis C when he denied prisoner's appeal of the denial of his grievance related to inadequate medical treatment, was sufficient to establish superintendent's personal involvement, for purpose of prisoner's §§ 1983 claim related to failure to provide medical treatment for prisoner's hepatitis C virus.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

McKenna v. Wright, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 102752, Unreported, appeal dismissed 386 F.3d 432. Civil Rights 1358

2725. ---- Private organizations, persons required to give medical care, medical care of prisoners

Although prison warden and state correctional officials could not relieve themselves of duty to provide adequate medical treatment to those in custody by contracting provision of inmate health care to private organization, there was no evidence of any Board of Corrections policy of deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs; thus, effective directed verdict on civil rights claims in favor of those defendants was proper. Toombs v. Bell, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1990, 915 F.2d 345. Civil Rights 1091

Private entity that contracted with county to provide jail inmates with medical services was functionally equivalent to municipality for purposes of inmate's § 1983 suit alleging inadequate medical care; thus, claim required showing that entity was responsible for unconstitutional municipal custom or policy that was moving force behind inadequate care. Wall v. Dion, D.Me.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 316. Civil Rights 1326(5); Civil Rights 1351(4)

Even if state action were involved in private ambulance attendants' care of detainee transferred from sheriff's deputies, care that was afforded to detainee did not sink to level of deliberate indifference to serious medical need, and thus, detainee could not recover from attendants under § 1983; although detainee alleged that attendants failed to detect bullet wound or to stabilize her spine in event there was such wound, detainee was not refused treatment, nor was access to treatment denied or delayed. Williams v. Richmond County, Ga., S.D.Ga.1992, 804 F.Supp. 1561. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Prison inmate who brought suit claiming that prison officials had been deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs when they refused to provide him with continuous positive air pressure (CPAP) machine, which was required in order for him to sleep safely due to obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) from which he suffered, failed to allege that medical corporation which provided care to inmates had implemented a particular policy or custom which violated his Eighth Amendment rights, or failed to train or supervise, as required to state § 1983 claim against corporation. Meloy v. Schuetzle, C.A.8 (N.D.) 2000, 230 F.3d 1363, Unreported. Civil Rights 1339

2726. ---- Supervisory personnel, persons required to give medical care, medical care of prisoners

By alleging that corrections officials were aware of his beating by corrections officers, his repeated requests for medical attention, and his subsequent brain surgery, yet took inadequate or insufficient measures to attend to his medical needs, inmate stated claim against prison officials under §§ 1983 for supervisory liability for deliberate indifference to his medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment. Davis v. Carroll, D.Del.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 415. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prison supervisory officials who allegedly ignored prisoner's complaints about medical staff and other correctional officers were not personally involved in alleged deprivations of prisoner's Eighth Amendment rights, and therefore, were not liable under § 1983; there was no evidence that supervisors received prisoner's complaints, or that they were deliberately indifferent to the alleged violations or grossly negligent in supervising medical staff and officers. Rivera v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2000, 119 F.Supp.2d 327. Civil Rights 1358

Prisoner, who stated valid claim against corrections officials for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need, sufficiently asserted a § 1983 claim for supervisory liability; prisoner alleged that Administrator of Correctional Services of Puerto Rico formulated policies and failed to execute other policies which resulted in the inadequate provision of medical attention to him and that Administrator was aware of deficiencies in the prison system which increased the risk of inmates to receiving substandard medical treatment, and prisoner averred that Secretary of

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Puerto Rico's Department of Health knew or should have known that physician, the employee under her supervision who attended prisoner at the infirmary, was improperly trained. Muniz Souffront v. Alvarado, D.Puerto Rico 2000, 115 F.Supp.2d 237. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Detainee did not establish sheriff's supervisory liability for alleged failure to provide detainee, who was pregnant while detained, with adequate medical treatment; detainee did not offer evidence to counter sheriff's statements that he had not personal involvement in alleged deprivation of detainee's medical treatment, that county jail's policy was to provide access to appropriate treatment for all inmates, and that he never received request from detainee regarding any medical condition and did not know of any inmate ever being denied medical treatment. Ludlam v. Coffee County, M.D.Ala.1998, 993 F.Supp. 1421. Civil Rights 1358

Inmate stated a §§ 1983 claim against superintendent and physician for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, despite their claims of a lack of personal involvement; assuming that the superintendent himself did not institute challenged practices and policies, he could nonetheless be found liable for failing to remedy the wrong after being informed of a violation, and the physician could similarly be found liable for failing to act after being informed that constitutional violations were being committed. Williams v. Koenigsmann, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 315279, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

State prisoner's allegation against deputy superintendent of prison, that he personally denied prisoner's requests for medical treatment related to his hepatitis C virus through the denial of grievance for lack of medical care, was sufficient to establish deputy superintendent's personal involvement in the alleged failure to provide prisoner with adequate medical treatment for his hepatitis C, as required for §§ 1983 claim against deputy superintendent. McKenna v. Wright, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 102752, Unreported, appeal dismissed 386 F.3d 432. Civil Rights 1358

2727. Shocks the conscience test, medical care of prisoners

Although the Supreme Court's "deliberate indifference" standard should be applied in determining whether prisoner's illness or injury gives rise to a claim under this section, the barbarous/shocks the conscience test is a permissible one. Bass v. Sullivan, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1977, 550 F.2d 229, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 195, 434 U.S. 864, 54 L.Ed.2d 138. Civil Rights 1091

The standard of liability in a civil rights case alleging cruel and unusual punishment relating to a claimed omission of medical care to prisoner is whether the plaintiff proves exceptional circumstances and conduct so grossly incompetent, inadequate or excessive as to shock the conscience or to be intolerable to basic fairness. Dewell v. Lawson, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1974, 489 F.2d 877. Civil Rights 1091

Mere negligence, in absence of conduct which shocks conscience, in giving or failing to supply medical treatment to prisoners does not give rise to a cause of action under this section. Page v. Sharpe, C.A.1 (Me.) 1973, 487 F.2d 567.

Physician who treats state prisoner may be liable under this section pertaining to deprivation of rights under color of state law for his deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs, but the conduct alleged must be repugnant to conscience of mankind. Tomarkin v. Ward, S.D.N.Y.1982, 534 F.Supp. 1224. Civil Rights 1326(8)

2728. Unnecessary suffering standard, medical care of prisoners

Denial of medical care that results in unnecessary suffering in prison is inconsistent with contemporary standards of decency and gives rise to cause of action under § 1983. Phillips v. Michigan Dept. of Corrections, W.D.Mich.1990, 731 F.Supp. 792, affirmed 932 F.2d 969. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Denial of medical care that results in unnecessary suffering in prison gives rise to cause of action under § 1983 for violation of Eighth Amendment. Jones v. Ehlert, E.D.Wis.1989, 704 F.Supp. 885, affirmed 899 F.2d 17. Civil Rights 1091

Whether infliction of unnecessary suffering is caused by prison doctor's response or lack thereof to inmate needs, or by prison guard's denial of access to medical care, or interference with prescribed treatment, deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious illness or injury states cause of action under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983; critical factor in any such instance, however, is that indifference be not merely inadvertent or negligent, but deliberate, for it is only such deliberate indifference that can offend evolving standards of decency in violation of Eighth Amendment [U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8]. Ferola v. Moran, D.C.R.I.1985, 622 F.Supp. 814. Civil Rights 1091

2729. Deliberate indifference, medical care of prisoners

Deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners constitutes unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain proscribed by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8 whether the indifference is manifested by prison doctors in response to prison needs or by prison guards in intentionally denying or delaying access to medical care or intentionally interfering with treatment once prescribed; regardless of how evidenced deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious illness or injuries states cause of action under this section. Estelle v. Gamble, U.S.Tex.1976, 97 S.Ct. 285, 429 U.S. 97, 50 L.Ed.2d 251, rehearing denied 97 S.Ct. 798, 429 U.S. 1066, 50 L.Ed.2d 785, on remand 554 F.2d 653. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison doctor was not aware that his conduct of postponing course of treatment for inmate's Hepatitis C for five months, because of possibility inmate would be paroled, would cause serious harm, and, thus, doctor did not act with deliberate indifference and was not liable for Eighth Amendment violation, where doctor expressed belief that inmate was in no immediate danger because Hepatitis C would lead to cirrhosis only over 20 to 30 years. Salahuddin v. Goord, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2006, 467 F.3d 263. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate, whose leg was crushed while he was on work release when the garbage collection truck on which he worked as a "hopper" collided with another vehicle, failed to demonstrate that state-prison physician disregarded the substantial health risk about which he knew, as required to establish deliberate indifference to serious medical need, and so physician enjoyed qualified immunity from inmate's civil rights action; according to medical records, inmate was given extensive medical treatment for the injury throughout his imprisonment term, a trier of fact might have found, at most, negligence in the one-week lapse in antibiotic treatment, and even if, as inmate asserted, there was a fact question regarding the precise time at which physician appreciated the infection in inmate's leg, no disputed fact question, when resolved in inmate's favor, rose to the level of egregious intentional conduct required to satisfy the exacting deliberate indifference standard. Gobert v. Caldwell, C.A.5 (La.) 2006, 463 F.3d 339. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Where the prisoner's §§ 1983 complaint alleging inadequate medical treatment that rises to the level of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, as would constitute cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment, involves treatment of prisoner's sophisticated medical condition, expert testimony is required to prove causation. Alberson v. Norris, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 458 F.3d 762. Civil Rights 1420

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether county jail officials were deliberately indifferent by failing to ensure that inmate received timely methadone treatment precluded summary judgment in §§ 1983 action alleging that inmate's death in county jail was due to sudden withdrawal from his prescribed methadone medication. Davis v. Carter, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2006, 452 F.3d 686. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

To prevail on deliberate indifference to prisoner's medical needs claim under §§ 1983, inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care is not enough, nor does a complaint that a physician has been negligent in diagnosing or treating a medical condition state a valid claim of medical mistreatment under the Eighth

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Amendment; rather, a prisoner must allege acts or omissions sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Self v. Crum, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2006, 439 F.3d 1227, petition for certiorari filed 2006 WL 1591905. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner's allegations that prison officials knew of his serious medical condition, but failed to inform him of medical appointments or to arrange transportation, were sufficient to state claim for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need. Martinez v. Garden, C.A.10 (Utah) 2005, 430 F.3d 1302. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Failure of corrections complaint appeals examiner to take further action once he had reviewed prisoner's complaints, verified that prisoner was receiving treatment, and referred those complaints to medical providers, did not constitute deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical need, for purpose of prisoner's civil rights lawsuit under Eighth Amendment, since medical providers could have been expected to address prisoner's concerns. Greeno v. Daley, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2005, 414 F.3d 645. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Pro se inmate's allegations that dentist who performed tooth extraction was not qualified as oral surgeon and that dentist failed to recognize that he punctured an artery during extraction did not rise to level of deliberate indifference as required to support inmate's §§ 1983 action against dentist alleging violation of Eighth Amendment based on complications related to tooth extraction, where complaint also stated that dentist indicated that procedure had been difficult and that dentist placed inmate in chair for observation and then took inmate to prison's emergency room and then hospital. Finnegan v. Maire, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2005, 405 F.3d 694, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Correctional administrators who had no knowledge of any continuing pattern by guards of failing to report inmates' medical needs could not be held liable on §§1983 claim by mother of inmate who suffered head injury in prison riot and later died of brain inflammation associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS), alleging that administrators' deliberate indifference to threat that guards were neglecting inmates' medical needs violated Eighth Amendment right against cruel and unusual punishment. Alsina-Ortiz v. Laboy, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2005, 400 F.3d 77. Civil Rights 1358

Prison officials' alleged failure to provide prisoner with medical treatment for his hepatitis C virus would amount to deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical need, as would support claim for denial of adequate medical care in violation of the Eighth Amendment. McKenna v. Wright, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 386 F.3d 432. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether county juvenile detention center was deliberately indifferent to juvenile detainee's mental health needs and safety, and whether such indifference was cause of injuries suffered by detainee in assaults by other residents, precluded summary judgment for center on claim for violation of substantive due process brought under §§ 1983. A.M. ex rel. J.M.K. v. Luzerne County Juvenile Detention Center, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2004, 372 F.3d 572. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Employee's lack of training and carelessness were relevant to establishing deliberate indifference of employer, a private contractor hired by county to provide medical and mental health services at jail, in inmate's § 1983 Eighth Amendment action against employer-contractor, even though employee herself was found not liable, since employee's coworker was found individually liable. Woodward v. Correctional Medical Services of Illinois, Inc., C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 368 F.3d 917. Civil Rights 1339

Persons engaged in routine performance of routine medical responsibilities cannot be considered deliberately indifferent to the medical needs of a prisoner, in a lawsuit under § 1983 under the Eighth Amendment. Richardson v. Goord, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 347 F.3d 431. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Nurse was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs related to hand injury by failing to obtain adequate physical therapy for prisoner after his hand surgery, precluding prisoner's § 1983 Eighth Amendment claim against nurse, where it was undisputed that nurse repeatedly tried to schedule visits with physical therapists from local hospitals and clinics, but those institutions would no longer send their therapists to the prison and rejected nurse's requests. Hernandez v. Keane, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 341 F.3d 137, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 971, 543 U.S. 1093, 160 L.Ed.2d 905. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Administrator of estate of state prisoner, who committed suicide by hanging while incarcerated, failed to show that prison officials were deliberately indifferent to prisoner's risk of suicide, barring administrator's § 1983 claim against officials for violation of the Eighth Amendment; although medical form existed indicating that prisoner had once attempted suicide, that form was not included in prisoner's medical records, officials asserted that they never knew about that form, prisoner never told any official that he felt suicidal or depressed beyond his control during his incarceration, despite having been asked that question numerous times during intake interviews, psychological evaluations, crisis counseling, and physical exams, and officials who examined prisoner never determined that he exhibited suicidal or delusional tendencies. Matos ex rel. Matos v. O'Sullivan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 335 F.3d 553. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1547

Absent evidence that nurse herself subjectively was aware of a serious risk of harm to prisoner, prisoner's allegations that nurse displayed deliberate indifference towards his serious medical need, by ordering her staff not to provide dental care to him, failed to state claim for violation of his Eighth Amendment rights. Farrow v. West, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 320 F.3d 1235. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious illness or injury constitutes unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain proscribed by Eighth Amendment and, therefore, states cause of action under § 1983, but "deliberate indifference" does not include negligence in diagnosing medical condition. Sanderfer v. Nichols, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 62 F.3d 151, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners constitutes unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain and states civil rights cause of action under § 1983. Walker v. Butler, C.A.5 (La.) 1992, 967 F.2d 176. Civil Rights 1091

"Deliberate indifference" standard rather than "wanton infliction of pain" standard applied to civil rights claims based on alleged deficiencies in planning for medical needs of prisoners following prison authorities' retaking of prison. Al-Jundi v. Mancusi, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1991, 926 F.2d 235, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 182, 502 U.S. 861, 116 L.Ed.2d 143. Civil Rights 1091

Deliberate indifference to a prisoner's serious medical needs constitutes an Eighth Amendment violation and states a cause of action under § 1983. Jackson v. Cain, C.A.5 (La.) 1989, 864 F.2d 1235. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prison officials were not deliberately indifferent to injuries inmate sustained in altercation with correctional officers, and thus did not violate inmate's Eighth Amendment rights, where inmate was taken to treatment center immediately after incident for medical evaluation and treatment, nurse evaluated inmate directly after incident and stated that his injuries were minor and his prognosis was good, and inmate received check ups for his complaints of headaches until his symptoms subsided. Wilkins v. Ramirez, S.D.Cal.2006, 455 F.Supp.2d 1080. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Corrections department sergeant was not deliberately indifferent to serious medical needs of prisoner in violation of Eighth Amendment, where medical records indicated that he received medical treatment after intentionally cutting himself, medical records also revealed that on one occasion he refused to accept treatment, and sergeant was not personally involved in events in question. Bell v. Arnone, W.D.N.Y.2006, 455 F.Supp.2d 232.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether jail physician acted with deliberate indifference to medical needs of county jail pretrial detainee precluded summary judgment for physician, in §§ 1983 action brought by detainee's survivors, alleging a due process violation relating to detainee's death on the day she was scheduled to be released from jail, with the death allegedly caused by Staphylococcus aureus sepsis due to Staphylococcus aureus pneumonia. Rasmussen v. Skagit County, W.D.Wash.2006, 448 F.Supp.2d 1203. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Health care providers who provided medical services at correctional facility did not act with deliberate indifference to medical needs of inmate who had liver problems and suffered from migraine headaches; inmate was provided multiple medicines for his headaches and was seen on several occasions by a neurologist, a gastroenterologist and a pain management specialist, all of whom performed tests and ongoing evaluations, the only time the inmate's request for certain medication for Hepatitis C was refused was after he failed a drug test, and that decision was in accord with community standards. Niemic v. Maloney, D.Mass.2006, 448 F.Supp.2d 270. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Pre-trial detainee received appropriate medical care after his fight with another inmate while incarcerated in county jail, and thus, jail and jail personnel were not liable under §§ 1983 to detainee for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of his right to due process; after fight, jail personnel drove detainee to hospital, where he received three stitches in his head, splint for his wrist, and x-rays, which were negative for fractures, upon return from hospital, detainee was placed in jail's medical dormitory, where he saw nurses on regular basis and was given medication, and detainee subsequently saw medical or nursing personnel on six occasions without complaining of any serious medical condition or medical crisis. Cirilla v. Kankakee County Jail, C.D.Ill.2006, 438 F.Supp.2d 937. Prisons 17(2)

Changes made in inmate's diagnosis course of treatment by employees of the New York State Office of Mental Health did not amount to deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, in violation of the Eighth Amendment; there was no evidence that the changes were incorrect or medically inappropriate, or that the employees had the requisite culpable state of mind to act with deliberate indifference. Goodson v. Evans, W.D.N.Y.2006, 438 F.Supp.2d 199. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Failure by state prison officials and contract medical staff to treat inmate's hepatitis C or to perform liver biopsy did not establish deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical condition, in violation of Eighth Amendment, despite expert testimony that liver biopsy was needed to determine amount of damage that had been done to his liver and whether treatment of his condition was necessary, where inmate's condition was monitored through laboratory tests, he was regularly seen by doctor, and inmate's liver enzyme levels were not sufficiently high under guidelines developed by Federal Bureau of Prisons and National Institutes of Health (NIH) to justify biopsy or treatment. Jordan v. Delaware, D.Del.2006, 433 F.Supp.2d 433. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Course of treatment provided for prisoner's serious medical needs, even if inadequate, was not so inadequate as to shock the conscience, and thereby constitute deliberate indifference in violation of Eighth Amendment; although defendants denied medication for prisoner's Hepatitis C, denial of the medication was due to the reason that prisoner's treatment would have been adversely affected by prisoner's prior drug use. MacLeod v. Kern, D.Mass.2006, 424 F.Supp.2d 260. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison nurse's failure to administer prisoner's hypertension medication on one day did not cause prisoner to suffer a serious medical condition, and thus nurse and correction officer who escorted nurse were not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment, where prisoner was taking relatively low dose of medication for mild hypertension, prisoner took his medication on every other day that month, prisoner's blood pressure was normal when checked three weeks later, and there was no indication that the missed dose of medication interfered with prisoner's activities or caused him medical complications. Torres v. Trombly, D.Conn.2006, 421 F.Supp.2d 527. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Representative of prisoner's estate stated cause of action in §§ 1983 complaint against prison doctors for deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical condition, by alleging that doctors were the persons ultimately responsible for prisoner's treatment, that they had legal authority and duty to supervise their nursing and physician's assistant staff, that, despite their duty, doctors entirely failed to supervise staff's treatment of prisoner, and thus were deliberately indifferent to his care, and that such deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical condition for approximately two months caused prisoner's death. Billops v. Sandoval, S.D.Tex.2005, 401 F.Supp.2d 766. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate failed to establish that prison officials disregarded excessive risk to inmate's health, as required to maintain deliberate indifference claim under Eighth Amendment; rather than deliberately ignoring inmate's complaints regarding pain in head and leg, official immediately acted by forwarding relevant information to health care services administrator for appropriate action. Brown v. Williams, D.Del.2005, 399 F.Supp.2d 558. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Jailer who made jail cell checks periodically throughout night was not deliberately indifferent in violation of Fourteenth Amendment to serious needs of pretrial detainee who had been arrested for driving while intoxicated (DWI) after motorcycle accident, notwithstanding that pretrial detainee died in his cell sometime in early morning hours from complications of blunt force chest injuries, absent any indication she heard detainee's alleged call for help during her overnight shift or knew that arrestee, who had refused further medical treatment after paramedic evaluation at scene of accident, had serious injuries. Patrick v. Lewis, D.Minn.2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 1134. Prisons 17(2)

By alleging that deputy warden wanted to just stitch him up when he was hit in the head by correction officers, that it was only at insistence of a nurse that an ambulance was called, that after receiving treatment for head injuries, he was moved from infirmary despite needing more medical treatment, that no one came to check on him for several days after he underwent brain surgery, and that correction officers ignored his repeated requests for medical attention, inmate stated a claim against prison personnel under §§ 1983 for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment. Davis v. Carroll, D.Del.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 415. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Even if no medical care could have prevented pretrial detainee's death, police officers nevertheless unconstitutionally deprived detainee of his Fourteenth Amendment right to medical care where they were subjectively aware of the risk to pretrial detainee's well-being that his medical condition posed but did nothing to summon any medical care. Estate of Owensby v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2004, 385 F.Supp.2d 626, affirmed and remanded 414 F.3d 596, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2023. Municipal Corporations 747(3)

State inmate's allegations that he was on anticholinergic medication and particularly vulnerable to overheating and heat stroke, and that prison officials knew about this vulnerability, but acted with deliberate indifference towards it by keeping him in room with no windows, ventilation, or access to running water when temperature inside facility was 120° Fahrenheit, were sufficient to state claim under Eighth Amendment for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, where inmate suffered severely debilitating heat stroke. Moody v. Kearney, D.Del.2005, 380 F.Supp.2d 393. Sentencing And Punishment 1538

State inmate's complaint against state prison system's health care provider, stating that "official" took "excessive risk" to inmate's health by transporting him to another prison for medical procedure, and that when nurse could not start intravenous treatment she called warden, who instructed her to make transfer, failed to state cause of action under §§ 1983 for deliberate indifference to medical needs, where there was no allegation that provider had actual knowledge of or acquiesced to actions taken, and complaint did not mention provider's policies, much less allege they were inadequate. McCray v. First State Medical System, D.Del.2005, 379 F.Supp.2d 635. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State prison officials did not display deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of mentally ill and suicidal inmate, in violation of Eighth Amendment, when he was examined, and prescribed various antipsychotic medications, and only alleged deficiency was failure to provide therapeutic art supplies when requested. Scarver v. Litscher, W.D.Wis.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 986, affirmed 434 F.3d 972. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

The one and one-half day delay between prisoner's first complaints of flu-like symptoms, including aches, chills, and fever, and his subsequent treatment and diagnosis of pneumonia by physician did not constitute deliberate indifference by prison officials to prisoner's health and safety, for purpose of prisoner's §§ 1983 Eight Amendment claim; the delay did not deny prisoner the minimal civilized measures of life's necessities and it caused no substantial harm. Wynn v. Mundo, M.D.N.C.2005, 367 F.Supp.2d 832, affirmed 142 Fed.Appx. 193, 2005 WL 2108129. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner's allegations, which described nothing more than a disagreement as to the manner of treatment that he received, failed to state a deliberate indifference claim against prison doctor; additionally, prisoner's failure to allege that doctor acted with anything more than negligence resulted in the failure to state a constitutional claim. Shell v. Brzezniak, W.D.N.Y.2005, 365 F.Supp.2d 362. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Warden and prison medical staff did not act with deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, in violation of inmate's Eighth Amendment rights, when medical personnel at correctional facility attempted to introduce fluids intravenously to regulate inmate's blood sugar levels and then, when nurse was unable to perform procedure successfully, transferred inmate to different correctional facility to ensure that procedure was performed correctly, notwithstanding inmate's contention that he should have been taken to local hospital, rather than different correctional facility. McCray v. Williams, D.Del.2005, 357 F.Supp.2d 774. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

County jail officials' knowledge that inmate was intoxicated did not create genuine issue of material fact sufficient to preclude summary judgment in favor of officials in §§ 1983 suit alleging that inmate's suicide was result of their deliberate indifference, even though policies and procedures of county jail and state required constant monitoring of intoxicated individuals, where plaintiff admitted officials had no subjective knowledge that inmate was suicidal or at risk for any reason. Stewart ex rel. Estate of Stewart v. Waldo County, D.Me.2004, 350 F.Supp.2d 215. Civil Rights 1352(4)

Correctional officer was not "indifferent" to prisoner's claim that his safety would be jeopardized by being placed in a top bunk, in light of certain medical conditions, as would support prisoner's claim under the Eighth Amendment against officer, for deliberate indifference to his safety, where she informed prisoner of steps he needed to take to change his bunk assignment, there was little immediate indication that prisoner was at risk, and officer properly assumed there was no special permission given by medical personnel for a bottom bunk and that lack of permission indicated prisoner was not being placed at risk. Pennington v. Taylor, E.D.Va.2004, 343 F.Supp.2d 508, affirmed 98 Fed.Appx. 957, 2004 WL 1238583. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether prison supervisor adequately trained guards with respect to use of four-point restraints, failed to respond to reports and complaints of use of force against inmate, and adopted policy regarding use of restraints that demonstrated indifference to inmate's mental illness precluded summary judgment in inmate's §§ 1983 action alleging excessive force and deliberate indifference to his health. Ziemba v. Armstrong, D.Conn.2004, 343 F.Supp.2d 173, affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded 430 F.3d 623. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Private health service physicians who treated prison inmate did not act with deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs, as would violate Eighth Amendment, where physicians were responsive and timely when addressing inmate's medical concerns, and prison officials kept inmate apprised of status of his medical treatments and informed him that courses of treatment would be made by attending physicians. Jones v. Consuegra's Estate, M.D.Fla.2004, 338 F.Supp.2d 1282. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Pro se complaint, liberally construed, supported §§ 1983 claim that prison medical employee was deliberately indifferent to city prisoner's serious medical needs when prisoner alleged that he sustained injuries in bus accident which caused him "extreme pain and suffering" and that his body was deteriorating and he could "hardly support himself," and when complaint suggested that severity of prisoner's condition should have been apparent to medical employee, who nevertheless refused to provide adequate treatment. Carrasquillo v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2004, 324 F.Supp.2d 428. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Pro se inmate's allegation that hospital was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in treating him failed to state a claim under § 1983 for violation of the Eighth Amendment, where all inmate alleged was that following emergency surgery for removal of part of intestines and colon, inmate developed pneumonia that required intensive medical care, including being placed on respirator and monitored in hospital's intensive care unit, even if hospital were person acting under color of law for § 1983 purposes. Hudson v. Clark, W.D.N.Y.2004, 319 F.Supp.2d 347. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner's allegation of a long series of events concerning his treatment by defendant doctors did not alone necessarily establish a continuing violation, in determining whether § 1983 action for allegedly deliberate indifference by doctors to prisoner's serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment was time-barred as to some of the complained-of conduct. Griswold v. Morgan, W.D.N.Y.2004, 317 F.Supp.2d 226. Limitation Of Actions 58(1)

State prison guard had no personal involvement in deciding to place prisoner in cell with habitual smoker for cellmate, and thus, guard could not be liable in prisoner's action under § 1983 alleging that guard acted with deliberate indifference to his risk of medical harm by refusing to assign him to nonsmoking cell; guard passed on prisoner's complaint to his superiors, but had no power to move prisoner. Johnson v. Pearson, E.D.Va.2004, 316 F.Supp.2d 307. Civil Rights 1358

State prison's records manager had no personal involvement in deciding to place prisoner in cell with smoker, and thus, records manager could not be liable in prisoner's action under § 1983 alleging that record manager acted with deliberate indifference to his risk of medical harm by refusing to assign him to nonsmoking cell; records manager was merely manager of department that oversaw cell transfers, but had no power to move prisoner. Johnson v. Pearson, E.D.Va.2004, 316 F.Supp.2d 307. Civil Rights 1358

State prison officials acted with deliberate indifference to prisoner's exposure to levels of environmental tobacco smoke that allegedly posed unreasonable risk of serious damage to his future health, as would support prisoner's civil rights action under § 1983, alleging that officials violated his Eighth Amendment rights by refusing to transfer him to nonsmoking cell, where officials never considered consequences of future health problems, but were only concerned with administrative convenience. Johnson v. Pearson, E.D.Va.2004, 316 F.Supp.2d 307. Prisons 17(1); Sentencing And Punishment 1536

State prisoner's allegations that prison employees acted with deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs by denying him adequate medical treatment for ongoing pain, swollen testicle, and digestive tract problems, were sufficient to state claim for violation of Eighth Amendment. Moore v. Bachmeier, D.N.D.2004, 315 F.Supp.2d 1029. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison officials' refusal to inform inmate of his bilateral inguinal hernia did not constitute deliberate indifference to serious medical condition, in violation of Eighth Amendment, even if there was possibility that inmate could have contracted gangrene, where inmate did not suffer any serious injury from hernia. Lawrence v. Virginia Dept. of Corrections, E.D.Va.2004, 308 F.Supp.2d 709. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prison doctor's failure to treat inmate's bacterial meningitis and severe dehydration did not amount to deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical conditions, thus did not violate Eighth Amendment, where doctor tested inmate for meningitis and concluded that he did not have that condition, and there was no evidence that doctor had subjective knowledge of serious risk of severe dehydration that he diagnosed in inmate. Brown v. Mitchell, E.D.Va.2004, 308 F.Supp.2d 682. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Detainee who brought action against sheriff's department supervisors, stemming from alleged failure to receive adequate medical care, failed to establish that supervisors were deliberately indifferent to his medical needs, as required to maintain substantive due process claims under Fourteenth Amendment; county jail had policy of having nurse on-call and transporting prisoners to local hospitals, detainee did not establish that deficiencies in staffing or training caused him to be denied necessary medical care, detainee failed to show that need for more or different training was so obvious that it was likely to result in violation of constitutional rights, and there was no evidence of widespread abuse or problems with medical care administered by jail. Bunyon v. Burke County, S.D.Ga.2004, 306 F.Supp.2d 1240, affirmed 116 Fed.Appx. 249, 2004 WL 1936471. Constitutional Law 262; Prisons 17(2)

Incarcerated prisoner's allegations that orthopedic surgeon's refusal to schedule shoulder surgery in timely manner constituted deliberate indifference to serious medical condition stated a claim; prisoner alleged that surgeon knew extended delay in repairing tendons would lessen prisoner's chance for recovery and might lead to permanent disability. Benjamin v. Schwartz, S.D.N.Y.2004, 299 F.Supp.2d 196. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether lieutenant at state prison, who allegedly stated that he would do nothing with regard to inmate's special dietary needs and did not care if inmate lived or died, demonstrated deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment precluded summary judgment in inmate's § 1983 claim seeking damages for each day that prison officials allegedly did not comply with orders of inmate's physician. Woulard v. Food Service, D.Del.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 596. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Parent of deceased inmate who brought § 1983 action against correctional administrators, stemming from fatal prison riot, failed to establish that administrators acted with deliberate indifference toward constitutional rights of inmate, as required to maintain Eighth Amendment claim; administrators' knowledge of instance in other facility in which inmate allegedly failed to receive proper medical attention did not automatically establish their knowledge of conditions at issue, and parent failed to allege that administrators had any participation in supervising inmate's medical care following riot. Alsina Ortiz v. Laboy, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 286 F.Supp.2d 133, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 400 F.3d 77. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner's allegations, that he suffered a great deal as result of tooth extraction which did not go well and led to cutting of his jawbone, damage to other teeth, nerve damage, and a loss of feeling on the right side of his face, were insufficient to support finding of deliberate indifference to his medical needs, as required for claim of Eighth Amendment violation in § 1983 action against various prison officials; at most, allegations implied negligence, incompetence, or malpractice. Majors v. Ridley-Turner, N.D.Ind.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 916. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1533; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Jail inmate failed to establish municipal policy condoning deliberate indifference to his medical care, required for municipal liability in § 1983 action claiming injuries arising from handling of his glaucoma condition, when he cited only to one paragraph article in local newspaper reporting some government findings regarding jail.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Richardson v. Nassau County, E.D.N.Y.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 196. Civil Rights 1420

In lawsuit under § 1983 alleging that supervisor violated prisoner's Eighth Amendment rights, estate and survivors of deceased prisoner failed to show that supervisor was deliberately indifferent, or even aware of, substantial risk that prisoner would attempt to commit suicide, even though supervisor did not visit the modules very often; mere fact that supervisor was not integrally involved in day to day activities of his subordinates did not mean that he was deliberately indifferent to need to provide adequate medical care to suicidal inmates. Estate of Sisk v. Manzanares, D.Kan.2002, 262 F.Supp.2d 1162. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1547

County sheriff could not be held liable under § 1983 for jail guard's alleged deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, which resulted in inmate's death, absent evidence that sheriff was aware of inmate's needs or that sheriff was deliberately indifferent to widespread practice of offending conduct by guards. Estate of Hampton v. Androscoggin County, D.Me.2003, 245 F.Supp.2d 150. Civil Rights 1358

Report by corporation that conducts surveys every three years to determine whether prison inmates are getting minimum level of care did not establish custom of deliberate indifference by private corporation providing medical services for inmates, for purposes of inmate's § 1983 action alleging Eighth Amendment violations based upon prison physician's alleged failure to provide surgery for inmate's avascular necrosis of femoral head, where report contained no references to delay in obtaining surgery for inmates. Palermo v. Correctional Medical Services, Inc., S.D.Fla.2001, 148 F.Supp.2d 1340. Civil Rights 1339

Allegations of deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs states cause of action under federal civil rights statute. Carrigan v. State of Del., D.Del.1997, 957 F.Supp. 1376. Civil Rights 1091

In order for prisoner to state actionable § 1983 claim of indifference to serious medical needs, legal conclusion of deliberate indifference must rest on facts clearly showing "wanton" actions, which means actions which are reckless and without regard to rights of others, on part of prison officials. Gangloff v. Poccia, M.D.Fla.1995, 888 F.Supp. 1549. Civil Rights 1091

Prisoners have constitutional right to appropriate medical attention, and deliberate or reckless disregard of such right constitutes violation of § 1983. Doe v. Morgenthau, S.D.N.Y.1994, 871 F.Supp. 605, on reconsideration in part. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Failure to act can amount to deliberate indifference, for purposes of prisoner's § 1983 claim of inadequate medical care. Sappington v. Ulrich, E.D.Tex.1994, 868 F.Supp. 194. Civil Rights 1091

A claim that alleges deliberate indifference to a prisoner's serious injury constitutes unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain proscribed by the Eighth Amendment and states a cause of action under statute prohibiting the deprivation of civil rights by state action; "deliberate indifference" can take form of denial of necessary medical treatment itself, denial of access to necessary medical treatment, or intentional and unreasonable delay in access to such treatment, and that a medical need is "serious" can be established either by showing that a physician has diagnosed it as mandating treatment or by demonstrating that the condition was so obvious that even a lay person would recognize necessity of a doctor's attention. Partee v. Lane, N.D.Ill.1981, 528 F.Supp. 1254. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Employees at a jail did not act with deliberate indifference to pretrial detainee's serious medical needs, thus defeating his §§ 1983 claim of a Fourteenth Amendment due process violation by the sheriff based on an inadequate supervision and training theory; it was undisputed that the employees followed a private physician's instructions regarding the detainee's insulin medication and the need to check his blood glucose level a minimum of two times each day. Randall v. Board of County Com'rs., C.A.10 (Okla.) 2006, 184 Fed.Appx. 723, 2006 WL 1620066, Unreported. Prisons 17(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prisoner's allegations in §§ 1983 action, which included failure to diagnose blood clots resulting from his vascular condition, denial of his preferred pain medication, delays in providing prescribed medications and treatments, and refusal to send him to an outside specialist, could not establish a constitutional violation; neither disagreements with the treatment provided by prison medical staff nor inadvertent or negligent failure to provide medical care rose to the level of deliberate indifference necessary to violate the Eighth Amendment. Hood v. Kansas Prisoner Health Services, Inc., C.A.10 (Kan.) 2006, 2006 WL 1230688, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Correctional officer's failure to add inmate to prison sick call list and telling other officers that inmate was faking his injury did not amount to deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs, and thus, inmate failed to state claim against correctional officer for relief under §§ 1983 on claim of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment. Williams v. Pennsylvania, Dept. of Corrections, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 146 Fed.Appx. 554, 2005 WL 1950801, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Failure of jail physician and nurse to diagnose contemnor's torn rotator cuff after accident did not demonstrate degree of indifference to contemnor's health or safety necessary to implicate Due Process Clause, where officials properly treated cut sustained in accident, and contemnor failed to inform physician of his continuing shoulder pain during subsequent examination. Wronke v. Champaign County Sheriff's Office, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 132 Fed.Appx. 58, 2005 WL 1220487, Unreported. Constitutional Law 273; Prisons 17(2)

Inmate failed to state §§ 1983 claim for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs based on allegations that conditions at state correctional center were unsanitary and fostered transmission of viruses and bacteria when inmate did not allege that he or any other inmate at center actually transmitted any such virus. Taggart v. MacDonald, C.A.9 (Mont.) 2005, 131 Fed.Appx. 544, 2005 WL 1127089, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1536

State inmate's allegations did not support §§ 1983 claim against prison doctor under Eighth Amendment for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, given that inmate received care for his medical conditions, including evaluations by various medical personnel, prescriptions for several different medications, and electrocardiograph examination (EKG); allegations that prison doctor should have referred inmate to specialist or local hospital were insufficient, in and of themselves, to support Eighth Amendment claim. Jetter v. Beard, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 130 Fed.Appx. 523, 2005 WL 1051180, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 566, 163 L.Ed.2d 475. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner did not establish §§ 1983 claim of deliberate indifference to his medical needs, in violation of Eighth Amendment, with respect to medical care during 17-day period following his complaints about his back and breathing; medical personnel made rounds every day during 17-day period and observed nothing abnormal until, on 17th day, prisoner was taken to medical unit, at medical unit the prisoner's vital signs, breathing, and pulmonary health appeared normal but doctor diagnosed muscle spasm and prescribed two medications, and second doctor found nothing wrong with prisoner. Sanders v. Spillers, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2005, 129 Fed.Appx. 117, 2005 WL 977835, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

At most, inmate alleged that detention center official and doctor were negligent in providing him with medical care when inmate complained of delay and ineffective treatment for abscessed tooth, swollen testicle, possible hernia, urinary problems, and problematic hemorrhoids and his submissions established that he had received ongoing treatment for those concerns, including oral surgery and outside testing, and therefore allegations did not support §§ 1983 claim for deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs in violation of his Eighth Amendment rights. Herl v. Gamble, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 124 Fed.Appx. 630, 2005 WL 648234, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate failed to prove, in support of a §§ 1983 claim, that physicians were deliberately indifferent to his hemorrhoid condition, despite his claim that they caused him to "suffer lingering pain" and discomfort; his physicians responded to his complaints, pursued several different courses of treatment for his hemorrhoids, promptly and repeatedly referred him to outside specialists, authorized four surgeries, and provided significant aftercare. Jones v. Sood, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 123 Fed.Appx. 729, 2005 WL 406381, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmate who complained of back, leg, and head pains that he believed were the result of a car accident failed to state a claim against prison officials and medical staff, who he claimed were deliberatively indifferent to his serious medical needs, in violation the Eighth Amendment, despite the prison's apparent mistake regarding the scheduling of his doctor's appointment; he visited with a nurse practitioner at the time he first requested treatment and received pain medication, the doctor he ultimately saw reviewed his medical records and directed no change in treatment, and in any event, he failed to allege that he suffered substantial harm. Colbert v. Prison Health Services, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 122 Fed.Appx. 424, 2005 WL 319397, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison employees' alleged conduct of negligently treating prisoner's medical conditions failed to support prisoner's Eighth Amendment claim for inadequate medical treatment, absent allegations supporting an inference of deliberate disregard for prisoner's pain. Burgess v. Dufrain, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 121 Fed.Appx. 421, 2005 WL 272236, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issues of material fact as to the extent and obviousness of arrestee's knee injury, and whether she was compelled to walk after her injury, precluded summary judgment against the arrestee on her §§ 1983 claim of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Elliott v. County of Monroe, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 115 Fed.Appx. 497, 2004 WL 2617007, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Prisoner's allegations regarding treatment of his shoulder injury and regarding his dissatisfaction with specific course of treatment provided pled no more than mere negligence; thus, absent sufficient allegation of facts to support an inference of deliberate disregard for his pain, prisoner did not state an Eighth Amendment violation of his right to adequate medical care while in prison. Jacobs v. Stornelli, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 115 Fed.Appx. 480, 2004 WL 2428748, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate failed to state a § 1983 claim for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs against a nurse practitioner who was the inmate's primary medical care provider at a correctional facility, given the numerous efforts the nurse made in an attempt to alleviate the inmate's pain; by the inmate's own admission, the nurse tried to accommodate his medical needs by prescribing various pain medications, arranging for a CAT scan, and scheduling visits with an outside pain clinic. Williams v. Koenigsmann, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 315279, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison nurses' treatment of prisoner's hernia condition was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs; first nurse arranged for supervisor to discuss prisoner's surgery concerns with him, second nurse informed prisoner that she would investigate delay in surgery and prisoner underwent surgery two weeks later, after prisoner complained of post-operative problems second nurse arranged for him to see different doctor, and third nurse explained that prison medical staff reserved right to pursue different course of treatment then those recommended by outside doctors. Guiddy v. Terhune, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2004, 90 Fed.Appx. 592, 2004 WL 229228, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

There was no evidence that treatment former inmate received while incarcerated from provider of medical services was medically unacceptable under circumstances or that treatment was provided with conscious disregard of an excessive risk to inmate's health, as required to support inmate's § 1983 claim against provider and its employees alleging deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs. Wade v. CMS Medical Services, Inc., C.A.9 (Idaho) 2004, 86 Fed.Appx. 291, 2004 WL 68719, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State inmate stated a § 1983 claim for deliberate indifference to his serious medical condition, despite claim that he failed to exhaust his administrative remedies; the inmate alleged that he attempted to appeal a superintendent's decision to a central office review committee (CORC), and he was not required to allege that CORC responded to his grievance. Brown v. Koenigsmann, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22232884, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prisoner adequately pled a claim of deliberate indifference to a serious medical condition against corrections officer who allegedly disregarded prisoner's medical elevator pass as well as the instructions of prisoner's physical therapist. Williams v. Fisher, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22170610, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State corrections agency's chief medical officer who implemented guidelines for diagnosis and treatment of Hepatitis C never personally treated prisoner, and thus, he could not be liable for money damages under § 1983 for deliberate indifference to prisoner's medical needs. Graham v. Wright, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22126764, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

Prison inmate's Eighth Amendment claim of deliberate indifference to his medical condition, brought under § 1983, was time barred; one year statute of limitations, expanded to three years by application of imprisonment disability to suit, had expired when inmate sued three years and 11 weeks after cause of action accrued, and inmate was unable to establish eleven consecutive weeks of insanity as additional disability bridging gap. Funtanilla v. Rubles, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 21309491, Unreported. Limitation Of Actions 78

Inmate failed to prove that county medical center and physicians were deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment, despite his disagreement with their diagnoses and treatment recommendations as to his neurological issues. Pabon v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1787268, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether parole officer and medical program assistant were aware of, but disregarded, parolee's medical needs, and whether they had opportunity and ability to take steps to obtain his transfer or release from drug treatment facility precluded summary judgment in § 1983 suit alleging that parolee's death one day after his release from facility was result of deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs. Rodriguez v. Downstate Correctional Facility, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1698204, Unreported, affirmed 94 Fed.Appx. 864, 2004 WL 859856. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether medical director of drug treatment facility knew that treatment rendered to parolee was inadequate and ineffective, and whether he had ability to take steps to obtain parolee's transfer or release from facility precluded summary judgment in § 1983 suit alleging that parolee's death one day after his release from facility was result of deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs. Rodriguez v. Downstate Correctional Facility, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1698204, Unreported, affirmed 94 Fed.Appx. 864, 2004 WL 859856. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Adjustment review committee member and corrections officers who knew only that inmate was wrongfully placed in segregation, not that he was being denied personal hygiene items, were not deliberately indifferent to inmate's health and safety and, thus, could not be held liable under § 1983 action for withholding of personal hygiene items in violation of inmate's right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment. James v. O'Sullivan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 62 Fed.Appx. 636, 2003 WL 1466486, Unreported. Prisons 17(1); Sentencing And Punishment 1539

Estate of prison inmate who was shot and killed by correctional officer during altercation between inmates at state prison failed to show that prison official responsible for articulating, copying, and distributing use of force policy acted with deliberate indifference and exposed inmate to a substantial risk of serious damage to his future health, and thus, official was not liable under § 1983 for alleged violation of inmate's constitutional rights resulting from alleged deprivation of adequate emergency medical care, where official did not promulgate or authorize policies and practices related to medical care. Estate of Torres v. Terhune, E.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 32107989, Unreported.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Civil Rights 1358

Allegations by prison inmate that he did not receive his blood pressure medication, and that his blood pressure rose as a result, when unit security nurse failed to run a scheduled pill call, that nurse thereafter periodically refused to give him medication and attempted to give him the wrong medication in retaliation for his rejection of her sexual advances, and that supervisory personnel failed to rectify situation despite inmate's repeated grievances, were sufficient to state claim under § 1983 based on deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs. Haltiwanger v. Mobley, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 230 F.3d 1363, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Allegations by prison inmate that prison medical director and clinical director had refused to provide him with continuous positive air pressure (CPAP) machine, which was required in order for him to sleep safely due to obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) from which he suffered, were sufficient to state claim under § 1983 based on deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs. Meloy v. Schuetzle, C.A.8 (N.D.) 2000, 230 F.3d 1363, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison inmate could not recover in § 1983 action against prison officials based on deliberate indifference to his medical needs, absent showing that prison medical personnel had disregarded serious medical needs, or that non-medical personnel had delayed or denied him access to medical care. Olson v. Hansen, C.A.8 (Neb.) 2000, 221 F.3d 1343, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

2730. Pattern or policy of indifference, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner stated claim for relief by alleging that District of Columbia had continuing duty to ensure that his Eighth Amendment rights were not violated while serving District of Columbia sentence in Virginia, that his rights were violated by inadequate care received in Virginia prison, and that violation of those rights occurred because of District's inadequate policies and customs which routinely sent prisoners to Virginia without ascertaining that they were receiving constitutionally inadequate medical care. Baker v. District of Columbia, C.A.D.C.2003, 326 F.3d 1302, 356 U.S.App.D.C. 47. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Clinical health specialist did not act with "deliberate indifference" in failing to review pretrial detainee's medical records and discover history of high blood pressure, in course of treating detainee, and thus was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action arising from detainee's death; specialist showed no pattern of indifference and was not aware of facts from which she could and did draw inference that her conduct posed substantial risk of serious harm to detainee. Sanderfer v. Nichols, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 62 F.3d 151, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Jail staff had no reason to suspect that detainee, who was intoxicated or under the influence of drugs, posed a risk of suicide, as required to support claim that county and sheriff were deliberately indifferent to detainee's serious medical needs. Estate of Hocker by Hocker v. Walsh, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1994, 22 F.3d 995. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Finding that prison official was deliberately indifferent to inmate's medical needs was supported by evidence that inmate's complaint about not getting medicine went unanswered and by evidence of a pervasive pattern of indifference to inmates' medical needs generally. Hill v. Marshall, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1992, 962 F.2d 1209, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 2992, 509 U.S. 903, 125 L.Ed.2d 687. Civil Rights 1420

Deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of inmate may be shown by proving policy of deficiencies in staffing or procedures such that inmate is effectively denied access to adequate medical care. Anderson v. City of Atlanta, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1985, 778 F.2d 678. Civil Rights 1420

For purposes of determining whether inmate's civil rights have been violated by failure to provide proper medical treatment, one episode of gross misconduct is not necessarily excused by an overall pattern reflecting general attentiveness; issue is whether questioned conduct is cruel and unusual because it involves deliberate indifference, or something more than medical judgment call, accident, or inadvertent failure. Murrell v. Bennett, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1980, 615 F.2d 306. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issues of material fact as to patterns and policies of prison health-care administrator precluded summary judgment in inmate's §§ 1983 action alleging deliberate indifference to serious medical need for optometrist; the inmate claimed that administrator was deliberately indifferent to inmate's eye condition because its policies caused employees to (1) improperly screen eye condition, (2) fail to schedule inmate for an eye appointment for four months, or (3) refuse to schedule appointment sooner than a date six weeks out if he appeared to need immediate care. Wood v. Idaho Dept. of Corrections, D.Idaho 2005, 391 F.Supp.2d 852. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

City defendants' failure to train the individual police officers on the proper meaning and application of policies regarding medical care of pretrial detainees and arrestees rose to the level of "deliberate indifference" and such failure was closely related to the ultimate injury detainee suffered from the resulting denial of medical care; "use of force" policy specifically instructed officers that they need not provide constitutionally-required medical assistance to arrestees or detainees until a particular scene was "stabilized," but offered no clarification of the term "stabilized." Estate of Owensby v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2004, 385 F.Supp.2d 626, affirmed and remanded 414 F.3d 596, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2023. Civil Rights 1358

County and county sheriff's department were not liable under § 1983 for inmate's death, even if death was attributable to jail guard's refusal to summon emergency medical personnel upon inmate's request, and there was evidence of one other incident in which guards denied another inmate his medication, absent evidence that either incident involved so many jail staff as to reflect widespread practice. Estate of Hampton v. Androscoggin County, D.Me.2003, 245 F.Supp.2d 150. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Reports of court appointed monitor regarding pervasive failure of private medical services company to provide medical care to inmates of county jail, and company's own internal memoranda characterizing attitude of nurses at jail as one of deliberate indifference, were sufficient to establish custom of violating inmates' constitutional right to medical treatment, and, thus, to establish county's potential liability in § 1983 action arising out of failure to provide treatment for inmate with history of cardiac illness. Nelson v. Prison Health Services, Inc., M.D.Fla.1997, 991 F.Supp. 1452. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Deputy warden could not be held liable in inmate's § 1983 action to recover for lack of medical attention following attack from other inmates, where inmate made no factual allegations concerning deputy warden and did not allege that an official policy or custom had led to negligent handling of incident. Lovanyak v. Cogdell, E.D.N.Y.1996, 955 F.Supp. 172. Civil Rights 1358

County prison inmate could not prevail on her § 1983 claim against county alleging lack of medical care in violation of Eighth Amendment; there was no evidence of any policy, de facto or otherwise, which operated to deny inmate medical care in violation of Eighth Amendment. Little v. Lycoming County, M.D.Pa.1996, 912 F.Supp. 809, affirmed 101 F.3d 691. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Inmate's medical treatment for months before being denied treatment on single day did not evince deliberate indifference required to support inmate's claim under Eighth Amendment. Brown v. Thompson, S.D.Ga.1994, 868 F.Supp. 326. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate's statement that prison officials had practice of denying medical care after inmate beatings to hide their wrongdoing was insufficient to create defeat officials' summary judgment motion in inmate's § 1983 action, where assertion was raised only in inmate's unverified complaint amendment. Lott v. Ferrell, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2004, 109 Fed.Appx. 827, 2004 WL 2165350, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2731. Negligence or malpractice generally, medical care of prisoners

Inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care to prisoner cannot be said to constitute a wanton infliction of unnecessary pain on prisoner or to be repugnant to conscience of mankind for purpose of providing cause of action under this section. Estelle v. Gamble, U.S.Tex.1976, 97 S.Ct. 285, 429 U.S. 97, 50 L.Ed.2d 251, rehearing denied 97 S.Ct. 798, 429 U.S. 1066, 50 L.Ed.2d 785, on remand 554 F.2d 653. Civil Rights 1091

Pretrial detainee failed to establish that officials at county detention center disregarded any known risks to the detainee's health or safety while incarcerated, and thus officials were entitled to qualified immunity in detainee's §§ 1983 action alleging deliberate indifference to his safety while incarcerated; detainee's allegations regarding inadequate records, overcrowding, poor supervision, and understaffing showed at most that officials were negligent, which did not rise to level of deliberate indifference. Crow v. Montgomery, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2005, 403 F.3d 598, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(7)

While mere medical malpractice is not tantamount to deliberate indifference for purposes of civil rights claim against prison officials, certain instances of medical malpractice may rise to level of deliberate indifference; namely, when malpractice involves culpable recklessness, i.e., act or failure to act by prison doctor that evinces conscious disregard of substantial risk of serious harm. Hathaway v. Coughlin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 99 F.3d 550. Civil Rights 1091

In order to succeed in civil rights action based on alleged inadequate medical treatment, prisoner must show more than negligence, prisoner must show deliberate indifference to serious medical need. Durmer v. O'Carroll, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1993, 991 F.2d 64. Civil Rights 1091

Negligent medical care does not constitute valid § 1983 claim. Mendoza v. Lynaugh, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1993, 989 F.2d 191. Civil Rights 1032

Deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs sufficient to support action under federal civil rights statute may be established by showing that prison doctors or prison guards intentionally denied or delayed access to medical care requested by prisoner, but inadvertent or negligent conduct in diagnosing or treating medical condition will not state constitutional violation merely because victim is prisoner. Barfield v. Brierton, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1989, 883 F.2d 923. Civil Rights 1091

Not every claim by a prisoner that he has not received medical treatment is sufficient to state cause of action under this section providing cause of action for deprivation of rights; inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care cannot be said to constitute wanton infliction of unnecessary pain or to be repugnant to the conscience of mankind. Wood v. Worachek, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1980, 618 F.2d 1225. Civil Rights 1091

Negligence in the treatment of a prisoner's illness or injury may give rise to a state cause of action but it is not a violation of the Constitution's proscription of cruel and unusual punishment; however, deliberate neglect of a prisoner's important need for medical treatment is such a violation. Withers v. Levine, C.A.4 (Md.) 1980, 615 F.2d 158, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 136, 449 U.S. 849, 66 L.Ed.2d 59. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

An error of judgment or inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care to a prisoner, while perhaps sufficient to support an action for malpractice, will not constitute a constitutional deprivation redressable under this section; it is only when there is deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of a prisoner that the conduct of the physician rises to the level of the constitutional deprivation. Boyce v. Alizaduh, C.A.4 (Md.) 1979, 595 F.2d 948. Civil Rights 1091

Simple malpractice in medical care given prison inmate does not give rise to action under this section. Shields v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Kunkel, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1971, 442 F.2d 409. See, also, Tolbert v. Eyman, C.A. 9 (Ariz.) 1970, 434 F.2d 625. Civil Rights 1091

Although prisoner, who alleged that his shoulder caused him extreme pain during the period which physicians failed to treat his injury, effectively raised a disputed issue of fact as to whether he labored under a serious medical condition, prisoner failed to raise an issue of fact with respect to whether physicians knew of and consciously disregarded an excessive risk to his health, and therefore failed to establish Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need; prisoner's claims of incompetent medical care only gave rise to a claim of negligence, which was not actionable under §§ 1983. Benjamin v. Galeno, S.D.N.Y.2005, 415 F.Supp.2d 254. Prisons 17(2)

Mere negligence will not support a §§ 1983 claim arising from alleged deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs, since the Eighth Amendment is not a vehicle for bringing medical malpractice claims, nor a substitute for state tort law; thus, not every lapse in prison medical care will rise to the level of a constitutional violation, but rather, the conduct complained of must shock the conscience or constitute a barbarous act. Pimentel v. Deboo, D.Conn.2006, 411 F.Supp.2d 118. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Dismissal of §§ 1983 action brought by prisoner against physicians and supervisory personnel at county medical center, stemming from removal of kidney and part of bladder, was not based on mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or newly discovered evidence; prisoner's allegations that personnel participated in or oversaw operation without definitive diagnosis of cancer raised claim of medical malpractice only, which was not cognizable under Eighth Amendment. Martino v. Miller, W.D.N.Y.2004, 341 F.Supp.2d 256. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate failed to allege that treatment of his injury by medical director of county correctional facility constituted conscious disregard of his medical condition, as required to state §§ 1983 claim of inadequate medical care; any question regarding propriety of additional diagnostic techniques or treatment at most constituted medical malpractice, which did not translate to constitutional violation. Davis v. Reilly, E.D.N.Y.2004, 324 F.Supp.2d 361 . Civil Rights 1091

Defendant's actions in filling cavities in prisoner's teeth, in allegedly extracting wrong tooth, and in fracturing tooth during extraction leaving a portion of root still in jaw was not evidence of deliberate indifference toward prisoner's dental needs, and thus dentist did not violate prisoner's Eighth Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment. Gindraw v. Dendler, E.D.Pa.1997, 967 F.Supp. 833. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Prisoner asserting unconstitutional denial of medical care must allege acts or omissions sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs; mere negligence in providing medical treatment does not give rise to Eighth Amendment claim. Davidson v. Harris, W.D.N.Y.1997, 960 F.Supp. 644. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate failed to state § 1983 civil rights claim against county jail physician for inadequate medical treatment of inmate's penile and testicular problems for time period after physician's examination of inmate; inmate's claims for that period rose, at best, to level of negligence, complaining that he did not receive any test results or follow-up appointment with physician and that physician did not perform appropriate diagnostic tests to detect his ailment. Jolly v. Klein, S.D.Tex.1996, 923 F.Supp. 931. Civil Rights 1395(7)

For inmate to recover on his § 1983 civil rights claim against county jail physician, arising from alleged denial of prompt and adequate medical treatment of inmate's penile and testicular problems, inmate had to prove that alleged constitutional or statutory deprivation was intentional or due to deliberate indifference, not the result of mere negligence. Jolly v. Klein, S.D.Tex.1996, 923 F.Supp. 931. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In order to prevail in a civil rights claim of denial of proper medical care to prisoner, prisoner must establish that physician was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical condition, and proof of medical malpractice is not enough to show constitutional violation. Mathieu v. Chun, E.D.Mich.1993, 828 F.Supp. 495. Civil Rights 1091

Failure of police officers to provide adequate medical care to prisoner rises to level of unconstitutional conduct when there is deliberate indifference to serious medical needs; negligent or inadvertent failure to provide medical care is not enough. Dayton v. Sapp, D.Del.1987, 668 F.Supp. 385. Prisons 17(2)

To prevail on a § 1983 claim for inadequate or improper medical care, a prisoner must allege and prove acts or omissions sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs; claim based on medical malpractice or mere negligence may not be brought under § 1983. Donlan v. Smith, D.Md.1986, 662 F.Supp. 352, affirmed 820 F.2d 1219. See, also, Peterson v. Davis, D.C.Md.1982, 551 F.Supp. 137, affirmed 729 F.2d 1453; Sturts v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1982, 529 F.Supp. 434. Civil Rights 1395(7)

While judgment of doctor which results in delay or deprivation of medical treatment may give rise to action in tort for malpractice or negligence, it does not amount to a federal constitutional violation; medical malpractice does not become a constitutional violation merely because the victim is a prisoner. Lee v. McManus, D.C.Kan.1984, 589 F.Supp. 633. Civil Rights 1091

Mere failure to treat all medical problems to a prisoner's satisfaction is insufficient to support a claim under this section even if that failure amounts to medical malpractice. Peterson v. Davis, D.C.Md.1982, 551 F.Supp. 137, affirmed 729 F.2d 1453. Civil Rights 1091

In order for claim that prisoner has not received adequate medical or dental treatment to state violation of prohibition of U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 8 against cruel and unusual punishment, and thus a claim under this section, facts must indicate such acts or omissions as are sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious needs, including intentional interference with professionally prescribed care or treatment, and negligent diagnosis, incorrect treatment or other circumstances that do not amount to more than professional malpractice will not suffice. Lewandowski v. Fauver, D.C.N.J.1981, 531 F.Supp. 53. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Negligence and malpractice are not sufficient to make out claim for prisoner under this section. Campbell v. Sacred Heart Hospital, E.D.Pa.1980, 496 F.Supp. 692. Civil Rights 1090

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether failure of physician employed by state's Department of Corrections to timely diagnose and treat inmate's colon cancer was the result of deliberate indifference, or only negligence, precluded summary judgment on inmate's §§ 1983 claim against physician for alleged deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment. Hart v. Blanchette, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2005, 149 Fed.Appx. 45, 2005 WL 2300225, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Inmate failed to prove that any of his health care providers were negligent in caring for him regarding a clival lesion at the base of his skull, thus precluding him from establishing deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment; the lesion received extensive medical attention, and no doctor found that surgery or any other treatment was appropriate; he was prescribed various medications for headaches which he attributed to the lesion, and any delays in forwarding MRI and CT scans to outside consultants had no impact on his treatment or well being. Pabon v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1787268, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner's allegations that he received prescription eye medication which irritated his eyes did not amount to more than a claim for negligence or gross negligence, and were therefore not cognizable under § 1983. Williamson v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Terhune, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 716246, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

Actions of county sheriff in allegedly exacerbating injury sustained by arrestee, who had a foreign object lodged in his ear, by pouring peroxide into ear, at most constituted negligence, and did not give rise to a claim for deliberate indifference to arrestee's serious medical needs. Mason v. Parkman, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 242 F.3d 376, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2732. Intent or knowledge, medical care of prisoners

State-prison physician was aware of a substantial risk of serious harm to injured inmate from the nature of the wound itself, for purposes of inmate's claim of constitutionally inadequate medical care; inmate's leg was crushed while he was on work release when the garbage collection truck on which he worked as a "hopper" collided with another vehicle, at the relevant time inmate's injury consisted of an open wound, and knowledge of the health risk inherent in that type of wound established the requisite awareness on the part of the physician, as needed to satisfy the first prong of the deliberate indifference inquiry. Gobert v. Caldwell, C.A.5 (La.) 2006, 463 F.3d 339. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Correctional officers were not subjectively aware that prisoner was suicide risk, and thus were not liable for Eighth Amendment violation in connection with his death, where they were informed that prisoner had requested to see crisis counselor, but were not informed that he had said he was suicidal, and inmates often requested meetings with crisis counselors for reasons both serious and mundane. Collins v. Seeman, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2006, 462 F.3d 757. Sentencing And Punishment 1547

Implicit in finding of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs required to establish § 1983 liability for denial of medical care is knowledge that medical need exists. Carr v. Tatangelo, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 338 F.3d 1259, as amended. Civil Rights 1039

Prison warden and director of state Department of Corrections could not be held liable under § 1983 for deliberate indifference to inmate's need for medical attention for broken arm, absent demonstration that officials were sufficiently informed of situation to require their intervention; although inmate claimed she sent letters to officials or had other inmates write letters on her behalf, no letters were produced, inmate claimed her injury precluded her from filling out prison request form for medical treatment, inmate later denied communicating with director, and no other prisoner testified to having written letters on inmate's behalf. Vance v. Peters, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1996, 97 F.3d 987, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 1822, 520 U.S. 1230, 137 L.Ed.2d 1030. Civil Rights 1358

To prevail on a § 1983 claim that medical care provided for inmate's slip and fall injury violated his rights under Eighth Amendment, inmate had to establish that prison officials intentionally inflicted needless suffering, and he could do that by showing that officials were deliberately indifferent to serious medical needs but that formula required proof that officials were both aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm existed and they also had to draw that inference. Ivey v. Harney, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1995, 47 F.3d 181. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

"Deliberate indifference" to prisoner's serious medical needs by prison officials and doctors, in violation of Eighth Amendment, may reside in "wanton" decisions to deny or delay care, where action is recklessness, not in tort law sense but in appreciably stricter criminal-law sense, requiring actual knowledge of impending harm, easily preventable. Watson v. Caton, C.A.1 (Me.) 1993, 984 F.2d 537. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Determination that public official was deliberately indifferent to rights of civil rights plaintiff does not require proof of intent to harm or detailed inquiry into official's state of mind. Weeks v. Chaboudy, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 984 F.2d 185, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1031

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Alleged delay by county deputies in getting medical attention for jail detainee was not "deliberate indifference" needed to support § 1983 civil rights claim given that jailors were not alleged to have known of injuries and deliberately ignored them. Sivard v. Pulaski County, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1992, 959 F.2d 662, on remand 809 F.Supp. 631 . Civil Rights 1088(4)

Condition for which there is no known or generally recognized method of treatment cannot serve as predicate for conclusion that failure to provide treatment constituted deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners under § 1983. Bailey v. Gardebring, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1991, 940 F.2d 1150, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 1516, 503 U.S. 952, 117 L.Ed.2d 652. Civil Rights 1091

Complaint alleging that prison doctor intended to inflict pain on prisoners without any medical justification, and alleging a large number of specific instances in which doctor allegedly insisted on continuing courses of treatment that doctor knew were painful, ineffective, or entailed substantial risk of serious harm to prisoners, including burning of prisoner who complained he could not feel anything in his hands, refusing to prescribe medication to reduce risk of peptic ulcer caused by other medication, and refusing hospitalization of prisoner following a heart attack, sufficed to state a violation of the Eighth Amendment and a concomitant right to relief under civil rights statute. White v. Napoleon, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1990, 897 F.2d 103. Civil Rights 1395(7); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Evidence established deliberate indifference by physician's assistant charged with medical treatment of road prison inmates, for purposes of civil rights claim under § 1983; prisoner had serious medical needs once he injured his leg while jumping off truck bed, physician's assistant's knowledge of need for medical care was conclusively established, but physician's assistant never apprised his superior, a medical doctor, of the prisoner's situation, obtained an x-ray of the prisoner's leg, or had the prisoner examined by a doctor or taken to a hospital, despite repeated requests by the prisoner and his parents directed toward the physician's assistant and prison superintendent. Mandel v. Doe, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1989, 888 F.2d 783. Civil Rights 1420

To establish deliberate indifference to serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment, a prisoner must prove that the defendant official had a culpable state of mind and intended wantonly to inflict pain. Bell v. Arnone, W.D.N.Y.2006, 455 F.Supp.2d 232. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Whether a prison official had the requisite knowledge of a substantial risk, so that the official acted with deliberate indifference, as element of §§ 1983 claim relating to prisoner's medical treatment, which claim alleges a violation of Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment, is a question of fact subject to demonstration in the usual ways, including inference from circumstantial evidence, and a factfinder may conclude that a prison official knew of a substantial risk from the very fact that the risk was obvious. Rasmussen v. Skagit County, W.D.Wash.2006, 448 F.Supp.2d 1203. Civil Rights 1429

Although prisoner, who alleged that his shoulder caused him extreme pain during the period which physicians failed to treat his injury, effectively raised a disputed issue of fact as to whether he labored under a serious medical condition, prisoner failed to raise an issue of fact with respect to whether physicians knew of and consciously disregarded an excessive risk to his health, and therefore failed to establish Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need; prisoner's claims of incompetent medical care only gave rise to a claim of negligence, which was not actionable under §§ 1983. Benjamin v. Galeno, S.D.N.Y.2005, 415 F.Supp.2d 254. Prisons 17(2)

Prison health services unit manager who was not shown to have ever been aware that prisoner had serious medical condition and was suffering pain could not be found to have been deliberately indifferent to prisoner's condition in violation of Eighth Amendment; prisoner's opinion that manager should have taken the initiative to review prisoner's medical charts over course of thirteen-month period could not establish deliberate indifference to a known medical need. Adsit v. Kaplan, W.D.Wis.2006, 410 F.Supp.2d 776. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State prison's health care administrator could not be liable in inmate's §§ 1983 Eighth Amendment action alleging deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, i.e. inmate's chronic obstructive pulmonary disease; administrator was neither prison doctor nor on medical staff, inmate was diagnosed and treated by others without ever seeing administrator, and inmate never filed any grievances that would have alerted administrator to any alleged mistreatment. Flanyak v. Hopta, M.D.Pa.2006, 410 F.Supp.2d 394. Civil Rights 1358

Material issues of fact, as to whether jail officer responsible for observing detainees knew or should have known that detainee was in need of medical suicide prevention assistance, precluded summary judgment in §§ 1983 action for violation of detainee's substantive due process rights arising from indifference to his needs and his subsequent suicide. Estate of Abdollahi v. County of Sacramento, E.D.Cal.2005, 405 F.Supp.2d 1194. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Prison official cannot be found liable under Eighth Amendment unless official knows of and disregards excessive risk to inmate health and safety; official must both be aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that substantive risk of serious harm exists and he must also draw that inference, i.e., court must determine whether prison official acted or failed to act despite his knowledge of substantial risk of serious harm, and allegations of inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care or negligent diagnosis fail to establish requisite culpable state of mind. Roach v. SCI Graterford Medical Dept., E.D.Pa.2005, 398 F.Supp.2d 379, appeal dismissed 2006 WL 1153738. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

With the exception of one deputy who did not directly interact with pretrial detainee and was not even present for most of the relevant events, material issues of genuine fact existed as to whether jail officials, who dealt directly with detainee and had opportunity to closely observe him and who acted inconsistently with county's own policies regarding medical care for inmates, knew that detainee was seriously ill, precluding summary judgment in favor of jail officials on qualified immunity ground on detainee's Fourteenth Amendment individual capacity deliberate indifference claims. Hollenbaugh v. Maurer, N.D.Ohio 2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 894. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Material issue of fact as to state of mind of correctional facility's nurse when she denied medical treatment to inmate altogether and threatened inmate with "the hole" precluded grant of summary judgment to nurse on inmate's §§ 1983 Eighth Amendment claim of deliberate indifference. Marcotte v. Monroe Corrections Complex, W.D.Wash.2005, 394 F.Supp.2d 1289, reconsideration denied 2005 WL 2978651. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Those police officers who were subjectively aware of the risk to detainee's well-being that his medical condition posed but did nothing to summon any medical care unconstitutionally deprived detainee of his Fourteenth Amendment right to medical care; however, genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether two other officers were subjectively aware of a substantial risk of serious harm to detainee, precluding summary judgment in favor of detainee's estate against those officers on deliberate indifference claim. Estate of Owensby v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2004, 385 F.Supp.2d 626, affirmed and remanded 414 F.3d 596, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2023. Municipal Corporations 747(3)

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether guards at state prison knowingly disregarded risks to pregnant prisoner when they allegedly ignored her suffering from contractions and failed to have her transported to hospital, precluding summary judgment for guards in prisoner's action under § 1983, alleging Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference claim. Doe v. Gustavus, E.D.Wis.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 1003. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Evidence that inmate was in pain, and told medical personnel that his shoulder had been dislocated was insufficient to establish that medical personnel strongly suspected that his shoulder was dislocated, as required to support inmate's § 1983 claim that he was denied constitutional right to medical care; inmate's constant refusal to permit any of personnel to palpate his arm, preferred method for confirming or dispelling any doubts as to condition of alleged dislocated shoulder, was effective bar to any liability under theory that personnel strongly suspected condition, but failed to act. Higgins v. Correctional Medical Services of Illinois, Inc., N.D.Ill.1998, 8 F.Supp.2d 821, affirmed 178 F.3d 508, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prisoner's allegations that prison's chief medical officer knew of his subordinates' failure to treat prisoner's medical needs through at least two letters prisoner sent to officer in attempt to remedy problem, yet officer failed to act on that knowledge stated valid claim that officer be held liable for constitutional violation of his subordinates. Barry v. Ratelle, S.D.Cal.1997, 985 F.Supp. 1235. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison official cannot be held liable under Eighth or Fourteenth Amendment for denying inmate humane conditions of confinement unless official knows of and disregards excessive risk to inmate health or safety. Jolly v. Klein, S.D.Tex.1996, 923 F.Supp. 931. Constitutional Law 272(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1533

Showing in civil rights action of prison officials' deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs requires showing of official's actual awareness of substantial risk of serious harm. Walker v. Godinez, N.D.Ill.1995, 912 F.Supp. 307. Civil Rights 1091

Inmate failed to establish deliberate indifference in connection with medical treatment she received at correctional facility, for purposes of civil rights cause of action, where from day inmate complained that she was not feeling well, she received medical attention on at least daily basis until she was transferred to hospital, and defendants were not shown to have had actual knowledge of easily preventable, impending harm. Unterberg v. Correctional Medical Systems, Inc., E.D.Pa.1992, 799 F.Supp. 490. Civil Rights 1091

Failure of police officers to obtain medical care for plaintiff at the time she was pretrial detainee, based on plaintiff's complaint that "she was hurting," did not arise to level of constitutional violation giving rise to section 1983 claim, in view of the facts that plaintiff did not know she had a serious infection at the time of her arrest, there was no visible signs of her illness, she did not give police any details as to the nature or source of her pain and thus at the time of her arrest officers had no reason to believe that she was suffering from serious illness or injury that would raise conduct above level of negligence. Porter v. City of Detroit, E.D.Mich.1986, 639 F.Supp. 589. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Given defendant prison officials' undisputed ignorance of refusal to treat prisoner's burns on one night, prison officials could not have been deliberately indifferent and therefore prisoner could not recover against them on his civil rights claim that there was a deliberate deprivation of medical care. Robinson v. Cuyler, E.D.Pa.1981, 511 F.Supp. 161. Civil Rights 1091

Assuming physician's note during state inmate's hospitalization for ulcers that caused gastrointestinal bleeding, which note recommended that inmate stop taking a particular prescription medication for his asthma condition, could establish that inmate should never have received the medication due to risk of gastrointestinal bleeding, such evidence did not establish that prison physicians knew of an unacceptable risk and consciously disregarded it, as basis, in §§ 1983 action, for Eighth Amendment claim of cruel and unusual punishment relating to improper medical care. Holman v. Horn, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2006, 170 Fed.Appx. 1, 2006 WL 279057, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison inmate failed to satisfy personal involvement requirement for stating § 1983 claim against prison superintendent by alleging that he wrote letters to superintendent regarding assault by officials and failure to provide medical care but received no response; the hundreds of letters addressed to superintendent by inmates went directly to various subordinates, and superintendent could not recall reading letter or knowing inmate. Hucks v. Artuz, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22019744, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prison inmate failed to satisfy personal involvement requirement for stating § 1983 claim against prison superintendent by alleging that he wrote letters to superintendent regarding assault by officials and failure to provide medical care but received no response; the hundreds of letters addressed to superintendent by inmates went directly to various subordinates, and superintendent could not recall reading letter or knowing inmate. Hucks v. Artuz, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22019744, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

Inmate failed to prove that Commissioner of the New York State Department of Correctional Services and the superintendent at a correctional facility were personally involved in his medical care, thus defeating the inmate's claims against them for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment; the Commissioner was not even alleged to have had knowledge of alleged delays in treatment, and the superintendent forwarded the inmate's complaint of delay to the health administrator responsible for fielding such complaints. Pabon v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1787268, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

Arrestee failed to show that county sheriff knew of and ignored any serious medical need on part of arrestee, as required to recover under § 1983 based on a denial of necessary medical treatment. Mason v. Parkman, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 242 F.3d 376, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Allegations that prison warden had knowledge of grievance filed by inmate, who alleged that prison medical personnel had refused to provide him with continuous positive air pressure (CPAP) machine which was required for him to sleep safely due to obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) from which he suffered, and attempted to expedite the grievance officer's decision, were insufficient to state claim against warden under § 1983 based on deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs. Meloy v. Schuetzle, C.A.8 (N.D.) 2000, 230 F.3d 1363, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2733. Differences of opinion, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner's claims of inadequate medical treatment which reflect a mere disagreement with prison authorities over proper medical treatment do not state claim of constitutional magnitude. Massey v. Hutto, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1976, 545 F.2d 45. Prisons 17(2)

Refusal of prison officials to permit medical treatment may in certain circumstances be actionable under this section; however, a difference of opinion between a prisoner-patient and prison medical authorities as to what treatment is proper and necessary does not give rise to a claim under this section. Mayfield v. Craven, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1970, 433 F.2d 873. Civil Rights 1091

Difference of opinion between physician and prisoner patient does not give rise to constitutional right or sustain claim under this section. Coppinger v. Townsend, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1968, 398 F.2d 392. Civil Rights 1091

Mere disagreement over the reasonableness of correctional facility's physician-assistant's diagnosis, treatment, and follow-up, without more, did not support inmate's §§ 1983 claim for deliberate indifference under Eighth Amendment. Marcotte v. Monroe Corrections Complex, W.D.Wash.2005, 394 F.Supp.2d 1289, reconsideration denied 2005 WL 2978651. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Mere disagreement by a prisoner with treatment prescribed for him by a physician, without other factors, does not represent a constitutional claim. Russell v. Enser, D.C.S.C.1979, 496 F.Supp. 320, affirmed 624 F.2d 1095. Civil Rights 1091

Difference of opinion between prison medical personnel and prisoner regarding treatment could not serve as basis for cause of action under this section. Jackson v. Moore, D.C.Colo.1979, 471 F.Supp. 1068. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State prisoner's disagreement with medical decisions regarding follow-up visits to specialist and physical therapy, without more, did not establish prison officials' deliberate indifference to his medical needs, as would constitute cruel and unusual punishment, relating to medical treatment after prisoner's Achilles tendon was torn by two-inch metal pipe protruding from floor in his cell. Brooks v. Beard, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 167 Fed.Appx. 923, 2006 WL 332547, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

To the extent state prisoner with a back fusion was dissatisfied with the type of medical care prescribed by prison physician, such a difference of opinion did not constitute deliberate indifference that violated prisoner's Eighth Amendment rights, for purposes of a §§ 1983 action, given that physician promptly treated prisoner's medical needs with over-the-counter and prescription medications, ordered x-rays, restricted prisoner from running, running in place, side straddle hops, windmills, sit-ups, and double-time marching, and, on two occasions, relieved prisoner of all activity for the day. Tucker v. Meyer, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2006, 165 Fed.Appx. 590, 2006 WL 226040, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2734. Cruel and unusual nature of punishment, medical care of prisoners

Treating physician did not violate prisoner's civil rights under Eighth Amendment by suggesting that surgery was one option in treatment of prisoner's broken hip or that prison could "do nothing" as acceptable course of treatment, since such conduct did not amount to act or omission sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Fitzgerald v. Corrections Corp. of America, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 403 F.3d 1134. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Mistreatment or nontreatment must be capable of characterization as cruel and unusual punishment in order to present a colorable claim under this section. Russell v. Sheffer, C.A.4 (Va.) 1975, 528 F.2d 318. Civil Rights 1090

Action against prison officials for inadequate medical care may be brought under this section when the prisoner's allegations rise to the level of cruel and unusual punishment in violation of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8. Martinez v. Mancusi, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1970, 443 F.2d 921, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 1202, 401 U.S. 983, 28 L.Ed.2d 335. Civil Rights 1091

It is only where inmate's complaint of improper or inadequate medical treatment depicts conduct so cruel or unusual as to approach violation of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8 prohibition of such punishment that colorable constitutional claim is presented. Gittlemacker v. Prasse, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1970, 428 F.2d 1. Civil Rights 1091

When a claim against prison official is based on improper medical treatment, it must depict conduct that is so cruel and unusual as to present a colorable claim under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8. Mitchell v. Hendricks, E.D.Pa.1977, 431 F.Supp. 1295. Civil Rights 1091

2735. Malicious treatment, medical care of prisoners

Not only absence of medical care gives rise to § 1983 cause of action on part of prisoner for inadequate medical care, but also malicious treatment of medical condition. Sappington v. Ulrich, E.D.Tex.1994, 868 F.Supp. 194. Civil Rights 1091

2736. Arrestees, medical care of prisoners

Officers did not intentionally, recklessly, or with deliberate indifference withhold medical care from drunk driving arrestee, for purpose of imposing § 1983 liability, though officers did not take arrestee back to hospital for another medical examination after arrestee stopped moving his arms and legs; officers could have interpreted his statement that his arms and legs would not move, his unresponsiveness to pain techniques and mace, and his general inactivity as result of heavy intoxication rather than as sign of injury requiring another medical examination. Brownell v. Figel, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1991, 950 F.2d 1285. Civil Rights 1088(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Assuming gross negligence to be applicable standard of care, town police officers were not grossly negligent for failing to provide pretrial arrestee, who later died in his cell, with medical treatment; officer had arrested decedent for drunk driving, but decedent had in fact ingested alcohol, glutethimide, and large quantities of codeine, and symptoms of this drug abuse was barely distinguishable from alcohol abuse. Carapellucci v. Town of Winchester, D.Mass.1989, 707 F.Supp. 611. Civil Rights 1088(4)

If widow could prove that her husband was in police custody at time vehicle in which he was passenger was detained for driver's having run a red light, and police officers knew that husband needed immediate medical attention and officers failed or refused to provide treatment causing husband's injury or death, widow could be able to recover damages under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 and, therefore, widow set forth claim against police officers sufficient to withstand motion for judgment on pleadings. Baldi v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1985, 609 F.Supp. 162. Civil Rights 1395(5)

2737. Serious medical need, medical care of prisoners--Generally

There is no need to distinguish between a prisoner's underlying serious medical condition and the circumstances of his serious medical need when the prisoner alleges, in a § 1983 deliberate indifference to serious medical needs claim against prison officials, that prison officials failed to provide general treatment for his medical condition, but where the prisoner is receiving appropriate on-going treatment for his condition and brings a narrower denial of medical care claim based on a temporary delay or interruption in treatment, the serious medical need inquiry can properly take into account the severity of the temporary deprivation alleged by the prisoner. Smith v. Carpenter, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 316 F.3d 178. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

To succeed on his § 1983 claim alleging that doctors at correctional facility violated his Eighth Amendment rights by failing to provide him with adequate medical care, prisoner had to show that he had objectively serious medical need and that the doctors knew of and disregarded that need. Miller v. Schoenen, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1996, 75 F.3d 1305 . Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Arrestee failed to demonstrate that he had a serious medical condition that required immediate treatment or that arresting officers were deliberately indifferent to his medical needs, so as to support §§ 1983 claim; given the fact that arresting officers called emergency medical services, the evidence demonstrated that they attempted to provide medical treatment for arrestee. Cea v. Ulster County, N.D.N.Y.2004, 309 F.Supp.2d 321. Civil Rights 1088(4)

In claim by prisoner under § 1983 arising from inadequate or insufficient medical care, court must evaluate whether there was evidence of serious medical need and if so whether defendant's response to that need amounted to deliberate indifference. Sult v. Prison Health Services Polk County Jail, M.D.Fla.1992, 806 F.Supp. 251. Civil Rights 1091

In context of civil rights action, prisoner must show not only that prison officials were callously indifferent to his medical needs but that those needs were serious and that the failure to treat them resulted in considerable harm; serious medical need is one which has been diagnosed by a physician as mandating treatment or one which is so obvious that even a lay person would easily recognize the necessity for a doctor's attention. Laaman v. Helgemoe, D.C.N.H.1977, 437 F.Supp. 269. Civil Rights 1091; Civil Rights 1404

Deprivation of medical treatment that seriously endangers prisoner's well-being would be actionable as violation of this section and U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8. Stokes v. Hurdle, D.C.Md.1975, 393 F.Supp. 757, affirmed 535 F.2d 1250. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In order for a denial of medical treatment for a prisoner to be actionable in civil action for deprivation of rights, absent a showing of intent to cause harm, reliance may be had upon the presence of severe and obvious injuries. Mathis v. Pratt, N.D.Ill.1974, 375 F.Supp. 301. Civil Rights 1091

2738. ---- Arrestees, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

A 14-hour delay between time of arrest and providing arrestee with medical care did not violate his Fourteenth Amendment due process rights; while arrestee sustained cut over one eye, bruises on shoulders and elbows, and a quarter-inch piece of glass was embedded in his palm, he presented no medical evidence that injuries were serious enough to require medical attention any earlier than he received it, and there was no evidence that delay in taking arrestee to hospital was done with specific intent to punish him. Martin v. Gentile, C.A.4 (Md.) 1988, 849 F.2d 863 . Constitutional Law 262; Prisons 17(2)

2739. ---- Broken bones, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

State trooper did not violate civil rights of arrested election poll watchers in pretrial detention by failing to provide adequate medical care; one plaintiff stated that her back was hurting, but she sustained no broken bones and her deposition disclosed no type of injury that would be obvious to laymen, and she was treated and released from emergency room of hospital which would tend to show that injuries were not serious, other plaintiff's injuries were not types of injuries obvious to laymen as requiring immediate medical attention absent some other outward indicia and there was no evidence that trooper was "deliberately indifferent" to a medical need. Shoop v. Dauphin County, M.D.Pa.1991, 766 F.Supp. 1327, affirmed 945 F.2d 396, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 1178, 502 U.S. 1097, 117 L.Ed.2d 422. Civil Rights 1088(4)

2740. ---- Choking, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Inmate who had been placed in four-point restraints and gagged failed to establish serious medical need other than to be constantly monitored to prevent possible choking, or to demonstrate deliberate indifference by nurse who examined him, as required to establish Eighth Amendment violation as to medical care; nurse suggested that inmate be allowed to exercise and use toilet, and recommended that some of his clothing be removed because of heat in his cell. Williams v. Burton, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1991, 943 F.2d 1572, rehearing denied 953 F.2d 652, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 3002, 505 U.S. 1208, 120 L.Ed.2d 877. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2741. ---- Colds, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Allegation by plaintiff that he was refused medical treatment for a cold at state correctional facility administered by defendants did not show deliberate indifference to a serious medical need and, hence, was not a basis for establishing a violation of plaintiff's constitutional rights. Gibson v. McEvers, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1980, 631 F.2d 95. Prisons 17(2)

Treating prisoner's cold and flu-like symptoms with aspirin, cough syrup and nasal spray did not demonstrate deliberate indifference required for § 1983 civil rights claim by prisoner, alleging that failure to provide appropriate medical care was cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment. Williams v. Keane, S.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 566. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

2742. ---- Depression, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner's conclusory statement that he was depressed failed to indicate a serious medical need such that prison medical technician's denial of access to psychological care might have indicated deliberate indifference on his part required for liability under this section prohibiting the deprivation of civil rights by state action. Partee v. Lane,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

N.D.Ill.1981, 528 F.Supp. 1254. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2742A. ---- Mental illness, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Prison employees did not violate the Eighth Amendment when they failed to provide prisoner with mental health treatment, so as to be liable under §§ 1983, since prisoner's health reports merely stated that psychiatric treatment could be helpful and employees denied any knowledge of those reports. Salley v. PA Dept. of Corrections, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 181 Fed.Appx. 258, 2006 WL 1410825, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1547

2743. ---- Diabetes, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Inmate who was diabetic sufficiently alleged that prison's failure to satisfy his dietary requirements threatened his serious medical needs to state claim under Eighth Amendment, where he alleged that dietician threatened his health and endangered his life by failing to provide him with required diet. Taylor v. Anderson, N.D.Ill.1994, 868 F.Supp. 1024. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Officer who was told by arrestee that he was a diabetic who had been in insulin shock violated arrestee's civil rights by totally disregarding arrestee's well-being; officer expressed no solicitude or interest in what arrestee, who at that point was facedown on floor of police cruiser, had said, rather, he dismissed arrestee's attempt to inform him with a flippant and incorrect observation that diabetics do not come out of insulin shocks; moreover, officer never broached subject with other officers at jail so that one of them might act on it. Thompson v. City of Portland, D.C.Me.1985, 620 F.Supp. 482. Civil Rights 1088(4)

2744. ---- Lice, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Federal pretrial detainee's alleged lice infestation, in and of itself, was insufficient to establish existence of serious medical need as required to state civil rights due process claim against county jail-related parties for inadequate treatment. Kost v. Kozakiewicz, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1993, 1 F.3d 176. Civil Rights 1091

2745. ---- Transsexuality, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Evidence sustained finding that prison officials were not deliberately indifferent to medical needs of prisoner who claimed to be transsexual and, thus, prison officials were not liable in prisoner's § 1983 action which alleged that prison officials' failure to treat his gender-identity disorder constituted cruel and unusual punishment; prison medical staff made numerous attempts to evaluate prisoner's psychological problems, prisoner refused to cooperate with attempted psychological treatments, and prison officials properly relied on medical judgment in refusing to provide tranquilizers for prisoner. Long v. Nix, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1996, 86 F.3d 761, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1420

Prisoner stated claim under § 1983 and Eighth Amendment, that prison officials had been deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical need, regardless of whether prisoner was entitled to estrogen treatment for gender dysphoria, by alleging a medical need for and general right to medical treatment for gender dysphoria and by alleging that he had not been offered any treatment at all. Brown v. Zavaras, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1995, 63 F.3d 967. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate stated civil rights cause of action against prison officials and prison doctor under Eighth Amendment by alleging that inmate was a transsexual, a condition which presented a serious medical need, and that prison officials and doctor were deliberately indifferent to that need by failing to provide inmate with any kind of medical treatment. Meriwether v. Faulkner, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1987, 821 F.2d 408, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 311, 484 U.S. 935, 98 L.Ed.2d 269. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2746. ---- Tuberculosis, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

No disregard of inmate's "serious" or "essential" medical needs was shown, and thus no violation of this section occurred, where specific medication had been prescribed for inmate as preventative measure inasmuch as tests had shown him to be susceptible to tuberculosis, the inmate had not had tuberculosis nor did he have it at time in question, the inmate allegedly failed to receive such medication for period of ten days, and such omission was medically insignificant and did not endanger the inmate's health or health of anyone with whom he came in contact. Butler v. Best, E.D.Ark.1979, 478 F.Supp. 377. Civil Rights 1420

Prison's medical employees were not deliberately indifferent to serious medical needs of inmate who tested positive for tuberculosis, e-coli, and H. pylori, where inmate received drug therapy for tuberculosis and he was evaluated annually, and his x-rays and sputum tests showed that the tuberculosis was not active, and one medical employee testified that inmate experienced no harm from the e-coli and that she afforded him standard and successful treatment for H. pylori. McAlphin v. Alexander, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2005, 125 Fed.Appx. 85, 2005 WL 280724, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2747. ---- Ulcers, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner's allegation that he was suffering from stomach ulcer was sufficient allegation of serious medical need to support § 1983 claim based on inadequate medical treatment from doctor's alleged refusal to provide special diet, in light of fact that stomach ulcer could cause intense and persistent pain and require emergency surgical intervention if left untreated. Coades v. Jeffes, E.D.Pa.1993, 822 F.Supp. 1189. Civil Rights 1091

2748. ---- Miscellaneous serious medical needs, medical care of prisoners

Genuine issues of material fact, as to whether county jail inmate suffered from serious heart condition, whether jail officials were notified of inmate's history of heart problems, whether officials failed to recognize that inmate was suffering from symptoms of heart attack that would be obvious to lay person, whether officials acted promptly to obtain necessary medical help, and whether officials were properly trained to deal with such medical emergency, precluded summary judgment in favor of jail officials and county, in inmate's §§ 1983 deliberate indifference claim. Plemmons v. Roberts, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 439 F.3d 818. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact existed regarding whether inmate at county jail suffered a seizure while incarcerated, precluding summary judgment in inmate's §§ 1983 action against jail employees alleging deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs. Phillips v. Jasper County Jail, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 437 F.3d 791. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Severe heartburn and frequent vomiting from which state prisoner suffered was "serious medical condition" from objective viewpoint, for purpose of prisoner's civil rights claim under Eighth Amendment alleging deliberate indifference, since even lay person would have recognized need for doctor's care to treat that condition. Greeno v. Daley, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2005, 414 F.3d 645. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner's HIV and hepatitis were "serious medical needs," for purposes of prisoner's Eighth Amendment claim. Brown v. Johnson, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2004, 387 F.3d 1344. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Allegations by state prisoner that he suffered from excruciating back pain, requiring significant and continuous medication, and that he fell or collapsed from the pain twice, exposing himself to further injury, without receiving proper treatment, met serious medical needs requirement to state claim for §§ 1983 Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Spruill v. Gillis, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2004, 372 F.3d 218. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Treating prison physician and physician's assistant were not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs involving hand injury, for purpose of prisoner's Eighth Amendment § 1983 claim; although hand surgery and other treatment were delayed, prisoner did not receive a medical hold to prevent his transfer to another facility while surgery was being contemplated, and he was denied some post-surgery treatment, most of the delay before surgery was caused by factors beyond physician's and assistant's control, as prisoner was not incarcerated for almost two years and prisoner was incarcerated at another facility for several months, some delay was caused by prisoner's other medical conditions, surgery was risky procedure, determination of medical hold was nurses' responsibility, and prisoner refused some recommended post-surgical treatment and received physical therapy. Hernandez v. Keane, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 341 F.3d 137, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 971, 543 U.S. 1093, 160 L.Ed.2d 905. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Correctional department employees were not deliberately indifferent to inmate's serious medical needs, as required to establish § 1983 claim alleging Eighth Amendment violations arising from inmate's exposure to environmental tobacco smoke; employees took action to house inmate in smoke-free cell and took reasonable steps to ensure that inmate's cellmate observed no-smoking rule. Weaver v. Clarke, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1997, 120 F.3d 852, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 898, 522 U.S. 1098, 139 L.Ed.2d 884. Sentencing And Punishment 1536; Prisons 17(2)

Prison nurses who failed to refer prisoner to doctor despite his repeated complaints of shoulder and arm pain over 11-month period were not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs, and thus could not be held liable in prisoner's civil rights action based on Eighth Amendment; nurses took both authorized options they had for obtaining further medical treatment for a patient by referring prisoner to physician's assistant on numerous occasions and by suggesting medical director review prisoner's file, nurses listened to and painstakingly chronicled prisoner's numerous medical complaints, and prisoner was sent seven times to local hospital for further treatment. Camberos v. Branstad, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1995, 73 F.3d 174. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Inmate who was shot by police officers with stun gun while officers attempted to quell his protests in isolation cell did not subsequently suffer deliberate indifference to his medical needs at hands of jailers, inasmuch as inmate's injuries were not serious enough to require immediate medical attention, and inmate produced no evidence that jailers acted with culpable state of mind. Caldwell v. Moore, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1992, 968 F.2d 595. Prisons 17(2)

Allegation that prison nurse refused to treat inmate's surgical wound for five days or to provide dressings or pain medication was sufficient to state Eighth Amendment cause of action for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, even though the wound did not become infected and eventually healed. Boretti v. Wiscomb, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1991, 930 F.2d 1150, rehearing denied. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner was not exposed to unreasonably high levels of environmental tobacco smoke, and he thus failed to establish deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, where only smoking allowed in prison was outdoors, he was not required to stand or sit next to staff or inmates while they were smoking outdoors, medical records revealed that he was seen for complaints relating to asthma only four times in three years, and that he did not claim second-hand smoke as potential cause of first three flare-ups. George v. Smith, W.D.Wis.2006, 2006 WL 3775929 . Sentencing And Punishment 1536

State prison officials were not deliberately indifferent to pretrial detainee's serious medical needs, in violation of Due Process Clause, even though he was not hospitalized or sent to plastic surgeon after he sustained large cut over his right eye, where detainee's treatment included sutures, bandaging of wound, and administration of medication, as well as follow-up visit, detainee was given instructions to contact medical department for any perceived problems with wound, and detainee did not seek additional treatment. Poole v. Taylor, D.Del.2006, 2006 WL 3740811. Prisons 17(2)

Criminal contemnor's alleged dizziness and terrible headache did not satisfy the objective component of the standard for her Eighth Amendment §§ 1983 claim against city arising out of alleged inadequate medical care when she came into the custody of the city police department after being found guilty of criminal contempt, and thus her medical needs did not rise to the level of a constitutional claim. Qader v. New York, S.D.N.Y.2005, 396 F.Supp.2d 466. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Pretrial detainee's heroin withdrawal presented "serious medical need" sufficient to support claim against county detention center's medical staff for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of Fourteenth Amendment; acute pulmonary distress, disease and pneumonia were among well-known medical complications suffered by heroin users during heroin withdrawal, and detainee died as result of those acute symptoms. Gonzalez v. Cecil County, Maryland, D.Md.2002, 221 F.Supp.2d 611. Constitutional Law 262; Prisons 17(2)

Hepatitis C and arthritis were serious medical needs, for purposes of inmate's § 1983 action alleging deliberate indifference by prison medical care provider to his serious medical needs, as would violate Eighth Amendment; both diseases could be chronic, debilitating and deforming. Christy v. Robinson, D.N.J.2002, 216 F.Supp.2d 398. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner's allegations in § 1983 complaint for deprivation of his right to medical attention, that over period of nearly two years in which his hemorrhoids were severe enough to lead prison physicians to perform three surgeries, he continually asked for treatment for his pain, discomfort, and bleeding, and that the physicians continued to administer the same treatment despite the fact his symptoms did not improve in the two years he suffered, provided an inference that the doctors knew of a serious risk, could support an inference that the doctors were deliberately indifferent to his suffering, and were sufficient to state a claim for violation of the Eighth Amendment. Jones v. Natesha, N.D.Ill.2001, 151 F.Supp.2d 938. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Alleged injuries suffered by state prisoner after prison guards used stun gun on him and beat him with their hands were not "serious medical needs," and therefore, prisoner's allegations in § 1983 complaint filed in forma pauperis that prison nurse failed to provide treatment for such injuries were insufficient to state claim for Eighth Amendment violation; prisoner alleged that he had three small cuts on his wrist which were bleeding, and that stun device left two sets of signature marks on his skin. Shelton v. Angelone, W.D.Va.2001, 148 F.Supp.2d 670, affirmed 49 Fed.Appx. 451, 2002 WL 31423846, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 1756, 538 U.S. 964, 155 L.Ed.2d 518 . Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner's § 1983 complaint, claiming that county medical personnel delayed giving him pain medicine and oxygen for six to eight hours out of their fear of his alleged litigiousness, failed to state cause of action for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs; prisoner, who had sustained stab wounds to back, chest, and head, did not plead or demonstrate that his condition was sufficiently serious to amount to a condition of urgency. Davidson v. Harris, W.D.N.Y.1997, 960 F.Supp. 644. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate raised genuine issue of material fact precluding summary judgment as to whether his need for removal of suture wire from his abdomen after hernia surgery was "serious medical need," as required to prevail on Eighth Amendment claim of deliberate indifference to serious medical need under § 1983; six doctors had recommended treatment for inmate's condition, defendant physician was the only doctor who determined that suture did not need to be removed, and inmate claimed that suture wire restricted his mobility and recreation, caused him recurring pain, and prevented him from earning good time credits and money by working in prison hospital and/or kitchen. Jones v. Granger, D.Md.1996, 935 F.Supp. 670. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Inmate stated § 1983 civil rights claim against county jail physician for inadequate medical treatment of inmate's penile and testicular problems for time period up to physician's examination of inmate; inmate pled sufficient facts from which it could be inferred that physician displayed deliberate indifference to inmate's medical problems, that problems were serious, and that inmate was injured as result of physician's acts or omissions. Jolly v. Klein, S.D.Tex.1996, 923 F.Supp. 931. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prisoner's complaints regarding his allergies, podiatric condition, post-surgery hernia, knee condition, and urological, dermatological, and cardiological problems did not present urgent medical conditions the maltreatment of which amounted to cruel and unusual punishment; though certain care of those conditions might be appropriate, the conditions themselves, as alleged in prisoner's petition for injunctive relief, were not life-threatening and did not cause the type of extreme pain cognizable in a constitutional claim. Davidson v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1996, 914 F.Supp. 1011. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Small abrasion on pretrial detainee's chest was not "serious medical need" required for detainee to prevail on § 1983 civil rights claim alleging that police officer violated due process by failing to provide detainee with timely medical treatment despite repeated requests. Anderson-EL v. O'Keefe, N.D.Ill.1995, 897 F.Supp. 1093. Civil Rights 1088(4)

For purposes of rule that prison officials violate civil rights of inmates when they display deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, "serious medical needs" can include serious psychological problems, such as desire to commit suicide. Clinton v. County of York, D.S.C.1995, 893 F.Supp. 581. Civil Rights 1091

Inmate temporarily denied medical treatment for two infected toes was not subjected to cruel and unusual punishment; prisoner's toes presented no substantial potential for harm if not promptly treated, and no serious harm was suffered. Andrews v. Glenn, C.D.Ill.1991, 768 F.Supp. 668. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner had serious medical condition, such that prison officials' deliberate indifference to that condition would be cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment, where prisoner suffered from urinary and bowel incontinence. De La Paz v. Peters, N.D.Ill.1997, 959 F.Supp. 909. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Fact that physician prescribed orthopedic shoes for inmate meant that he had "serious medical need" for Eighth Amendment purposes. Saunders v. Horn, E.D.Pa.1996, 959 F.Supp. 689, report and recommendation adopted 960 F.Supp. 893. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Claim of state prisoner, who was in maximum security classification, and who brought civil rights action against warden and chief correctional officer for locking him up for five days in "hole" for throwing hot coffee on another inmate, that he was denied medical attention for "stomach problem" by medical doctor, viewed in context of his hunger strike, failed to state claim under rationale of applicable case, for prisoner fell far short of alleging facts that would indicate that any defendant, or medical technicians who saw him, deprived him of necessary medical attention for serious medical need. Maxton v. Johnson, D.C.S.C.1980, 488 F.Supp. 1030. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prisoners' desire to establish and operate alcoholic rehabilitation program within prison was not a "serious medical need" for purposes of analysis under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8 and this section. Pace v. Fauver, D.C.N.J.1979, 479 F.Supp. 456, affirmed 649 F.2d 860. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner only had unrecoverable "de minimis injury," for purposes of his civil rights claim that was subject to Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) which alleged that prisoner personnel were deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment when they put him in small strip cage and kept him there for 12 hours, since swelling, pain, and cramps in prisoner's leg were not serious enough to mention to medical staff on day of his release from strip cage or two days later and incident did not result in medical findings at point at which prisoner claimed to have mentioned them to staff two weeks later. Jarriett v. Wilson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 162 Fed.Appx. 394, 2005 WL 3839415, Unreported. Civil Rights 1463

Prison officials did not act with deliberate indifference to inmate's hepatitis C condition by not allowing him to participated in hepatitis C protocol because he was due to be released from facility within one year; protocol took one year to complete, and it would have been more detrimental to inmate's health to discontinue or interrupt treatment prior to completion than to defer treatment until after release. Iseley v. Dragovich, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2004, 90 Fed.Appx. 577, 2004 WL 229449, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Arrestee's alleged back pain, asthma and chest pains did not rise to level of severe condition necessary to support Eighth Amendment claim under § 1983 that hospital where he was taken following arrest was deliberately indifferent to his medical needs. Flemming v. Velardi, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21756108, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1533; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Undisputed evidence established that a clival lesion at the base of an inmate's skull was benign and harmless, thus precluding him from establishing deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment regarding the lesion, despite his claim that the lesion was causing him "excruciating headaches"; nothing in the record suggested that the lesion was responsible for the symptoms of which the inmate complained, or was in any way threatening to his health. Pabon v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1787268, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate's allegations were insufficient to show that he suffered from a serious medical condition, thus defeating his claim that a correction officer was deliberately indifferent to his health and safety when the officer required him to clean pesticide residue from an exterminated beehive; the inmate simply had wheezing, which was not uncommon for persons with asthma, and a headache. Croswell v. McCoy, N.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 962534, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner's complaint failed to allege facts sufficient to satisfy either the subjective or objective elements required to establish a § 1983 claim against prison officials for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need, where the prisoner, who was initially placed in medical keeplock for 41 days for his refusal, on religious grounds, to submit to a tuberculosis (TB) screening test, and who subsequently agreed to submit to the test and tested positive, provided no specifics concerning his medical condition, failed to indicate that he was in pain or that any of the defendants ignored a condition which created a substantial risk of harm to him, and failed to allege sufficient facts to indicate how any of the named defendants were deliberately indifferent to his medical needs. Delisser v. Goord, N.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 133271, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2748A. ---- Pregnancy, serious medical need, medical care of prisoners

Facts alleged by county inmate, including that she had informed jail officials she was pregnant, bleeding, and passing blood clots, and that she was in extreme pain from cramping to point that it affected her ability to perform routine daily functions such as eating and showering, if proven, indicated that inmate had need for medical attention that would have been obvious to layperson, even if inmate was not visibly pregnant, and thus indicated that she had serious medical need for purposes of her Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Pool v. Sebastian County, Ark., C.A.8 (Ark.) 2005, 418 F.3d 934. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Pregnant prisoner's condition was serious for purposes of her Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference claim in action under § 1983 against security and nursing staff at state prison. Doe v. Gustavus, E.D.Wis.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 1003. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2749. Essential medical care, medical care of prisoners

Deprivation of essential medical care by state prison officials may be, in an exceptional circumstance, actionable in federal courts under this section. U.S. ex rel. Knight v. Ragen, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1964, 337 F.2d 425, certiorari denied 85 S.Ct. 1355, 380 U.S. 985, 14 L.Ed.2d 277. See, also, Dewell v. Lawson, C.A.10 (Okl.) 1974, 489 F.2d 877; Ross v. Bounds, D.C.N.C.1974, 373 F.Supp. 450; Hurley v. Field, C.D.Cal.1968, 282 F.Supp. 34.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2750. Causation, medical care of prisoners

In civil rights action brought by administrator of prisoner's estate against prison physician, evidence that physician intentionally failed to respond immediately to initial request that he come to emergency room, that physician entered emergency room ten to 15 minutes after he had first been notified of emergency, that immediate response to cardiac arrest is crucial, and that 27- year-old person with no prior heart disease found unconscious but with feeble pulse, such as prisoner, would have had excellent chance of being resuscitated if advanced cardiac life support was provided within two minutes supported finding of causal connection between prisoner's death by cardiorespiratory arrest and physician's conduct. Bass by Lewis v. Wallenstein, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1985, 769 F.2d 1173. Civil Rights 1420

Detainee who brought action against county, stemming from his alleged failure to receive adequate medical care, did not establish that county jail's written policy or de facto practice created risk that medical attention would be delayed or denied, as required to maintain § 1983 claims; although conduct of individual county employees may have constituted violation of detainee's constitutional rights, there was no proof that county policy was proximate cause of his injuries. Bunyon v. Burke County, S.D.Ga.2004, 306 F.Supp.2d 1240, affirmed 116 Fed.Appx. 249, 2004 WL 1936471. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Contractor which provided drug counseling services to inmates established the adequacy of its training program regarding sexual harassment, and the absence of a causal connection between any inadequacy in the program and any injury to an inmate resulting from sexual harassment by a counselor, thus defeating the inmate's § 1983 claim; the contractor had a written policy at the relevant time against any sexual impropriety by an employee with a client, and the counselor received that written policy; moreover, the inmate' claim was the only claim of sexual harassment reported to the contractor in the many years it had provided in-jail services to county, and there was no evidence that the sexual harassment would have been avoided had the counselor been trained under a different program. Warns v. Vermazen, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 23025441, Unreported. Civil Rights 1098; Civil Rights 1339

2751. Damage or injury, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner did not make sufficient showing of substantial harm arising from alleged denial by prison officials of proper medical care to make a showing of exceptional circumstances required before federal court would inquire into adequacy of medical care available at prison. Patmore v. Carlson, E.D.Ill.1975, 392 F.Supp. 737. Prisons 17(2)

State prisoner, who did not claim that he was denied any medical care but rather that he received inadequate care without any indication that he had sustained physical injury as a result of alleged inadequate treatment, failed to state a claim for which relief could be granted in federal court. Argentine v. McGinnis, S.D.N.Y.1969, 311 F.Supp. 134. Prisons 17(2)

Prison inmate who claimed that practice of randomly double-celling inmates in administrative segregation had resulted in his being temporarily placed with an inmate whom he feared, and caused him to suffer mental anguish, constituted deliberate indifference to his rights, failed to allege that he had suffered any actual physical injury, as required to allow recovery under § 1983 for claimed mental or emotional injury. Kellensworth v. Norris, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 221 F.3d 1342, Unreported. Civil Rights 1463

2752. Increase in risk of disease or injury, medical care of prisoners

Alleged slippery floors resulting from standing water problem in prison shower area did not rise to level of a condition posing a substantial risk of serious harm, for purposes of inmate's § 1983 action alleging that his Eighth

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Amendment right against cruel and unusual punishment was violated by the alleged hazardous conditions, and therefore his complaint failed to state a claim, even though inmate was on crutches and had specifically warned officials he was at a heightened risk of falling. Reynolds v. Powell, C.A.10 (Utah) 2004, 370 F.3d 1028. Prisons 17(1); Sentencing And Punishment 1536

Inmate who claimed that he had been denied proper medical treatment because he had not been given prescription medicine was not required to show that the lack of medication resulted in more than a 50% risk of developing active tuberculosis; he was required only to show that his risk had increased due to deprivation. Hill v. Marshall, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1992, 962 F.2d 1209, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 2992, 509 U.S. 903, 125 L.Ed.2d 687. Civil Rights 1091

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether jail inmate was exposed to levels of environmental tobacco smoke (ETS) sufficient to pose an unreasonable risk of serious damage to his health, whether the individual defendants knew or reasonably should have known of the ETS problem at the jail, and whether their conduct rose to the level of deliberate indifference, precluding summary judgment, on basis of qualified immunity, for individual defendants in inmate's §§ 1983 action. Williams v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.2006, 439 F.Supp.2d 34. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

2753. Preexisting injuries, medical care of prisoners

Measured by standard that deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners constitutes unnecessary infliction of pain proscribed by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8, allegations of prisoner, who had known preexisting eye injury, that prison doctor cursorily examined him after his initial complaint of pain and loss of vision and never reexamined him despite later complaints, after which it was discovered that prisoner was suffering from serious eye disease, did not state constitutional claim, entitling prisoner to recover from prison authorities; even if doctor were negligent in examining and diagnosing prisoner, his failure to exercise sound professional judgment did not constitute deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Wester v. Jones, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1977, 554 F.2d 1285. Prisons 17(2)

2754. Refusal of treatment, medical care of prisoners

Prison officials' action of requiring prisoner to undergo liver biopsy before considering him eligible for Hepatitis C treatment was not violation of prisoner's due process right to refuse medical treatment; prisoner was not forced to undergo biopsy, but consented to do so, apparently to avail himself of benefits of treatment. Pabon v. Wright, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2006, 459 F.3d 241. Prisons 17(2)

Physician who tried to provide appropriate treatment for prisoner's condition, but who was thwarted by other staff, was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical need, for purpose of prisoner's civil rights suit under Eighth Amendment. Greeno v. Daley, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2005, 414 F.3d 645. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison personnel's refusal to give prisoner medical treatment during his time in strip cage despite his complaints of pain and swelling in his leg was not subjectively unreasonable in light of clearly established Eighth Amendment rights, for purpose of prison personnel's claim to qualified immunity in prisoner's civil rights lawsuit which alleged deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, since personnel took reasonable action to check on prisoner's records when he mentioned his leg injury and there was no reason to believe that he could not be placed in strip cage, and personnel offered to accommodate prisoner if he cooperated with them. Jarriett v. Wilson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 414 F.3d 634. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State can force prisoner to take psychotropic drugs and need not allow prisoner to stop taking drugs in order to prove that he can do without them, so long as state finds that medication is in prisoner's medical interest, physician's decision to force medication is subject to review by independent and impartial panel or tribunal which considers prisoner's best interests, and prisoner is able to argue capably before review tribunal that he does not need forced medication. Sullivan v. Flannigan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1993, 8 F.3d 591, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1376, 511 U.S. 1007, 128 L.Ed.2d 52. Prisons 17(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment substantively protects certain fundamental rights, including right to be free from unjustified intrusions into the body, which in turn includes right to refuse unwanted medical treatment and right to sufficient information to intelligently exercise those rights, and retaliation for exercise of those constitutionally protected rights is itself a violation of rights secured by the Constitution and is actionable under civil rights statute. White v. Napoleon, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1990, 897 F.2d 103. Civil Rights 1028; Constitutional Law 274(5)

Corrections sergeant's hostile or derogatory comment about state prisoner, which referred to prisoner's earlier lawsuit against another Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) employee, did not rise to the level of retaliation, for purposes of prisoner's retaliation claim under the First Amendment, in civil rights action under §§ 1983 alleging that he was denied needed pain medication in retaliation for two lawsuits he had previously brought against DOCS staff members, where prisoner received his medication on the very evening that sergeant allegedly uttered the offending words. Davidson v. Bartholome, S.D.N.Y.2006, 460 F.Supp.2d 436. Prisons 17(2)

Evidence did not sustain prisoner's § 1983 civil rights claim that he was refused medical treatment in prison for broken jaw where attendant doctors' declarations overwhelmingly showed that prisoner refused necessary treatments, was totally noncompliant, and otherwise impeded his recovery in numerous ways. Zatko v. Rowland, N.D.Cal.1993, 835 F.Supp. 1174. Civil Rights 1420

Prison personnel's refusal to give prisoner medical treatment during his time in strip cage despite his complaints of pain and swelling in his leg was not objectively unreasonable in light of clearly established Eighth Amendment rights, for purpose of prison personnel's claim to qualified immunity in prisoner's civil rights lawsuit which alleged deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, since medical records did not support prisoner's argument that he suffered sufficiently serious injury such that even lay person easily would have recognized necessity for doctor's attention. Jarriett v. Wilson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 162 Fed.Appx. 394, 2005 WL 3839415, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Correctional facility inmate's right to refuse medical treatment was not violated when facility's nurse and physician's assistant told him that he would not be treated or given pain medication for kidney stone unless he consenting to catheterization to obtain urine sample; inmate actually consented to catheterization, and fact that he was faced with unattractive choices did not mean his right to refuse medical treatment was violated. Flemming v. Corrections Corp. of America, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 143 Fed.Appx. 921, 2005 WL 1706972, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

State inmate stated § 1983 claim against member of infirmary staff by alleging that she, along with others, failed continually to respond to inmate's persistent requests for competent care of his ongoing medical problems following his injuries from altercation with another prisoner, even though she was mentioned nowhere in the factual recitation or the "parties" portion of the complaint. Donahue v. Bennett, W.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21730698, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Alleged failure of nurse administrator and another prison supervisor to act on prisoner's information about alleged indifference to his medical needs did not violate Eighth Amendment; supervisors were not personally involved in prisoner's medical treatment, no unconstitutional custom or practice was implicated, supervisory officials were not grossly negligent, and there was no underlying violation by medical personnel. Patterson v. Lilley, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21507345, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2755. Request for treatment, medical care of prisoners

Inmate's allegations that he was not treated for three weeks although he daily requested treatment, that prison nurse dismissed his grievances in a disparaging manner, that prison doctor failed to treat him, and that his condition finally required gall bladder removal stated a claim of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs under federal civil rights statute. Toombs v. Bell, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1986, 798 F.2d 297. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Where jail inmate's brother visited inmate same day as shooting and testified that all inmate said was that he was hurt and did not mention that inmate asked for further medical attention, where inmate stated that he requested medical attention at about 8:00 p.m., and where paramedic came in and inmate was then sent to medical center at about 9:30, there was no "deliberate indifference" on part of officials to inmate's serious medical needs as required for him to recover on his claim of denial of medical treatment in civil rights action following his accidental shooting by police officer. Mills v. Smith, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1981, 656 F.2d 337. Civil Rights 1091

While failure of prison authorities to respond to every request of a prisoner for medical attention may not necessarily give rise to a cause of action under the civil rights provisions and while the courts are not to engage in the process of second-guessing in every case involving the adequacy of medical care that the state provides a prisoner, prison authorities may not be deliberately indifferent to the suffering of prisoners under their care, for fundamental fairness and the most basic conception of due process mandate that medical care be provided to one who is incarcerated and may be suffering from serious illness or injury. Westlake v. Lucas, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1976, 537 F.2d 857. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 17(2)

Inmate's unsupported allegation of need for specific medical treatment is insufficient to support claim that lack of treatment violates civil rights. Oldham v. Chandler-Halford, N.D.Iowa 1995, 877 F.Supp. 1340. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2756. Specialized treatment, medical care of prisoners

Pro se state prisoner's claim that he had not received specialized medical tests, which he viewed as necessary based on his reading of medical literature during his years of imprisonment, did not amount to a denial of medical care in violation of his Eighth Amendment rights, where medical care had been provided whenever prisoner sought it for each of his many alleged ailments, and prisoner's claims amount to nothing more than a difference of opinion regarding medical diagnosis and treatment. U.S. v. Smith, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2004, 102 Fed.Appx. 911, 2004 WL 1367293, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison health service director did not show deliberate indifference to inmate's fractured metacarpal, in violation of Eighth Amendment, when he declined to refer inmate for surgery; refusal was exercise of medical judgment not constituting indifference, which was further refuted by prompt treatment consisting of splinting and provision of pain medication. Ruiz v. Homerighouse, W.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21382896, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate failed to prove that the nurse administrator at correctional facility was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment, despite inmate's conclusory allegation that the administrator failed to send the inmate's medical records to specialist physicians; the inmate offered no competent evidence to support his allegation, and moreover, there was no evidence that any failings by the administrator were a result of deliberate indifference. Pabon v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1787268, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Wheelchair-bound inmate was not entitled to injunctive relief requiring that he be sent to specialized hospitals in his § 1983 suit; he did not explain the harm he faced if treated at the correctional facility, where he had received extensive care for his rheumatoid arthritis, degenerative joint disease, and leukemia. Woods v. Goord,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31296325, Unreported. Civil Rights 1454

2757. Court order, medical care of prisoners

Claim that jail physician denied state prisoner medical care in violation of a court order was sufficient to state a claim against physician. Maclin v. Paulson, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1980, 627 F.2d 83. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2758. Success of medical treatment, medical care of prisoners

Lack of success of medical treatment does not raise a constitutional claim under this section. Fearon v. Com. of Va., W.D.Va.1974, 383 F.Supp. 542. Civil Rights 1091

2759. Facilities, medical care of prisoners

A showing that prison medical facilities are so wholly inadequate for the prison population's needs that suffering is inevitable would make out a case under this section. Bishop v. Stoneman, C.A.2 (Vt.) 1974, 508 F.2d 1224. Civil Rights 1420

Averment that medical facilities at prison to which prisoner had been transferred were inferior, in providing prisoner care he required, to those at prison from which he had been transferred failed to state claim of constitutional deprivation. Gittlemacker v. Prasse, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1970, 428 F.2d 1. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Jail officials were required to provide rooms and equipment for physical examinations of inmates and entering prisoners, for treatment of medical emergencies, and minor injuries and illness; quarters for inmates too ill to remain safely as part of general population of prison but not sufficiently ill to require hospitalization, and adequate facilities for dental examinations and treatment. Jones v. Wittenberg, N.D.Ohio 1971, 330 F.Supp. 707, 29 Ohio Misc. 35, 58 O.O.2d 47, affirmed 456 F.2d 854, 62 O.O.2d 232. Prisons 17(2)

No serious deprivation occurred from leaky roof in state prison's medical unit, precluding HIV-infected prisoner's § §1983 Eighth Amendment action against corrections official alleging that his cough and skin lesions were result of exposure to asbestos and other contaminants from leak; medical records revealed no symptoms of pulmonary disease or any asbestos-related diseases, length of asbestos exposure was unlikely to result in future injury and could not have resulted in immediate injury at any rate, cough was consistent with inmate's medical history of gastroesophageal disease, and lesions were consistent with inmate's HIV treatment. Laureano v. Pataki, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 841067, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2759A. Equipment needs, medical care of prisoners

Prison medical personnel's alleged conduct of denying prisoner a wheelchair following an injury did not amount to deliberate indifference, as required for prisoner's Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference claim; medical staff denied his use of a wheelchair because they feared his leg muscles would atrophy, and, although an orthopedist initially recommended a wheelchair for prisoner, the orthopedist altered that assessment upon learning that prisoner would not need to walk far while he was housed in the medical department. Callahan v. Poppell, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2006, 471 F.3d 1155. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Physician was not liable to prisoner under §§ 1983 for denial of medical care, based on a failure to give him a wheelchair, where reports did not suggest that physician's numerous checkups of prisoner were inadequate and prisoner did not produce any medical evidence to counter physician's conclusion that he could walk and was merely malingering. Salley v. PA Dept. of Corrections, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 181 Fed.Appx. 258, 2006 WL 1410825, Unreported. Civil Rights 1339

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2760. Classification, medical care of prisoners

Prison inmate's disagreement with his medical classification was insufficient to establish constitutional violation. Wilson v. Budney, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1992, 976 F.2d 957. Prisons 17(2)

2761. Choice of treatment, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner would be entitled to recover under Eighth Amendment claim concerning medical treatment provided by prison officials and employees if he could prove that clinic personnel deliberately gave him certain kind of treatment knowing that it was ineffective, either as means of toying with him or as way of choosing easier and less efficacious treatment. Kelley v. McGinnis, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1990, 899 F.2d 612. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State inmate's claims that prison psychological staff failed to conduct adequate mental health examination and violated his privacy rights by insisting that he participate in group therapy sessions before he could be released from administrative segregation status constituted disagreement over treatment, and thus were not redressable under § 1983, even if state law provided privilege for privileged communications between psychologist and patient. Hunnicutt v. Armstrong, D.Conn.2004, 305 F.Supp.2d 175, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 152 Fed.Appx. 34, 2005 WL 2573525. Civil Rights 1091; Civil Rights 1092

Exercise by doctor of his professional judgment in treating prisoner is never deliberate indifference, and will not give rise to civil rights claim that improper medical treatment violated prisoner's Eighth Amendment rights. Gindraw v. Dendler, E.D.Pa.1997, 967 F.Supp. 833. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2762. Delay in treatment, medical care of prisoners

Prison doctor's alleged action of postponing course of treatment for inmate's Hepatitis C for five months because of the possibility of parole, without individualized assessment of inmate's actual chances of parole, if proven, was unreasonable, for purposes of inmate's Eighth Amendment claim. Salahuddin v. Goord, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2006, 467 F.3d 263. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

County jail officer was not deliberately indifferent to inmate's methadone withdrawal symptoms, and thus was not subject to liability under §§ 1983 for Eighth Amendment violation following inmate's death, even though officer received call from inmate's wife informing her that inmate had not yet received methadone treatment and was in excruciating pain, and responded that county "don't work that fast," where officer appropriately transferred call to person responsible for inmate's medical care, and there was no evidence that officer's job duties included anything more than answering telephones. Davis v. Carter, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2006, 452 F.3d 686. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Treating prison physician and physician's assistant were not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs involving hand injury, for purpose of prisoner's Eighth Amendment § 1983 claim; although hand surgery and other treatment were delayed, prisoner did not receive a medical hold to prevent his transfer to another facility while surgery was being contemplated, and he was denied some post-surgery treatment, most of the delay before surgery was caused by factors beyond physician's and assistant's control, as prisoner was not incarcerated for almost two years and prisoner was incarcerated at another facility for several months, some delay was caused by prisoner's other medical conditions, surgery was risky procedure, determination of medical hold was nurses' responsibility, and prisoner refused some recommended post-surgical treatment and received physical therapy. Hernandez v. Keane, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 341 F.3d 137, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 971, 543 U.S. 1093, 160 L.Ed.2d 905. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Determination that jail medical providers were not liable for injuries to inmate who suffered from Wilson's Disease, in inmate's civil rights action against providers in which inmate alleged that he failed to receive medical treatment as a result of providers' deliberate indifference, and that alleged failure caused his injuries, was supported by evidence that, at time of injuries, providers were seeking inmate's records to appropriately administer medication, which was very dangerous if inappropriately given, that proximate cause of injuries was assault by other inmate, and testimony that even if inmate had received medication, at time of assault he would have still exhibited symptoms which he claims caused assault. Peterson v. Willie, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1996, 81 F.3d 1033. Civil Rights 1420

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmate's allegation that prison staff delayed for nearly two hours in providing him with medical attention after he was stabbed by another inmate was sufficient to state claim against prison officials for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Reed v. Dunham, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1990, 893 F.2d 285. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prison officials were not deliberately indifferent to inmate's serious medical needs, in violation of Eighth Amendment, as result of contract medical provider's failure to provide inmate with dental treatment for over nine months, where state agreed that delay was unacceptable, and awarded contract to another provider, which provided treatment in timely manner. Samuel v. First Correctional Medical, D.Del.2006, 463 F.Supp.2d 488. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issue of material fact, as to whether jailer delayed in summoning aid for pretrial detainee after discovering that detainee appeared not to be breathing, precluded summary judgment granting qualified immunity on claim that jailer was deliberately indifferent to detainee's serious medical needs in violation of Fourteenth Amendment. Patrick v. Lewis, D.Minn.2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 1134. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact concerning sixty-day delay before inmate could see ophthalmologist precluded summary judgment on inmate's §§ 1983 claim of deliberate indifference by health-care administrator to inmate's need for eye treatment; it was unclear whether inmate continued to suffer blurred vision, headaches, and photophobia during this time period or whether he used over-the-counter treatment to adequately relieve his symptoms, especially given the fact that his iritis was deemed resolved by the date of the appointment. Wood v. Idaho Dept. of Corrections, D.Idaho 2005, 391 F.Supp.2d 852. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Any delay in prison nurse's response to call for immediate medical help for inmate did not create or exacerbate injuries inmate received from alleged beating by prison guards, as required for nurse to be liable to inmate's estate under §§ 1983 for violating inmate's Eighth Amendment rights through deliberate indifference to a serious medical need, since nurse arrived within minutes of receiving the call and guards were attending to inmate's medical needs by administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). Valdes v. Crosby, M.D.Fla.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 1084, affirmed 2006 WL 1474726. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Correctional facility's medical director was not liable to prisoner for allegedly deliberate indifference to his medical welfare in violation of Eighth Amendment rights based on delay in surgery and performance of surgery on injured shoulder, where there was no allegation that director was personally involved in constitutional deprivation complained of and only allegation against director was that he could have intervened to encourage orthopedic surgeon to accelerate surgery. Benjamin v. Schwartz, S.D.N.Y.2004, 299 F.Supp.2d 196. Civil Rights 1358

Parent of deceased inmate who brought § 1983 action against correctional facility staff, stemming from fatal prison riot, failed to establish that staff acted with deliberate indifference toward constitutional rights of inmate, as required to maintain Eighth Amendment claim; all inmates injured in riot received treatment shortly thereafter, and brief delay before inmate was transferred to outside hospital did not evidence requisite recklessness or intention to surmise that staff deliberately deprived inmate of proper medical attention. Alsina Ortiz v. Laboy, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 286 F.Supp.2d 133, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 400 F.3d 77. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546 prisoner alleged that he writhed in excruciating pain for approximately three days, that officials were aware of his abdominal ailment but failed to follow up on his sonogram and condition, and waited before taking prisoner to the infirmary. Muniz Souffront v. Alvarado, D.Puerto Rico 2000, 115 F.Supp.2d 237. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prisoner stated valid claim against corrections officials for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need;

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Intermittent delays during three-day period in supplying inmate in administrative segregation with adult undergarments as treatment for incontinence of bowel and bladder were not sufficiently serious deprivations to establish Eighth Amendment violation; inmate did not show that delays resulted in unnecessary infliction of pain or worsening of his incontinence condition, but rather, at worst, he showed that delays caused him to suffer indignity and discomfort of wearing urine and/or feces-soiled clothing for several hours at a time. Miller v. Michigan Dept. of Corrections Health Care Providers, W.D.Mich.1997, 986 F.Supp. 1078, affirmed 173 F.3d 429. Sentencing And Punishment 1553; Prisons 17(2)

Fifty minutes between time of inmates' attack on prisoner to the time of medical attention did not amount to deliberate indifference and because correction officers' conduct, although possibly negligent, was not wanton, prisoner failed to state claim under § 1983 that delay in medical treatment on part of officers violated his Eighth Amendment rights; officers took steps to ensure that prisoner received proper medical attention and although prisoner alleged facts that could possibly amount to negligence, negligence was insufficient. Caldwell v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.1995, 901 F.Supp. 7, appeal dismissed 1996 WL 587652, rehearing denied. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Police officer named as defendant in § 1983 civil rights suit by pretrial detainee did not act with "deliberate indifference" by temporarily delaying detainee's transport to hospital; three-hour delay was not excessive in light of abrasion injury on detainee's chest. Anderson-EL v. O'Keefe, N.D.Ill.1995, 897 F.Supp. 1093. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Jail clinic nurse who took prisoner's vital signs three hours after receiving sick-call slip was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's medical needs, even if slip had been received the day before; prisoner saw clinical health specialist the next morning, and those actions were reasonably prompt. Aaron v. Finkbinder, E.D.Mich.1992, 793 F.Supp. 734, affirmed 4 F.3d 993. Prisons 17(2)

Slowness in providing medical and dental care while inmate suffered from minor medical conditions was not deliberate indifference to a serious medical need of inmate which would constitute a violation of inmate's due process rights. Tyler v. Rapone, E.D.Pa.1985, 603 F.Supp. 268. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 17(.5)

If prisoner were to show that he suffered cruel and unusual punishment through failure of prison officials to permit him to see a physician for the first three days following knee injury, he would be entitled to recover damages in civil rights action for pain and suffering during the three-day delay which could have been alleviated by treatment or medication had it been rendered. Walnorch v. McMonagle, E.D.Pa.1976, 412 F.Supp. 270. Civil Rights 1462

Evidence in §§ 1983 action did not establish prison officials' deliberate indifference to state prisoner's medical needs, as would constitute cruel and unusual punishment, relating to medical treatment after prisoner's Achilles tendon was torn by two-inch metal pipe protruding from floor in his cell; even if medical treatment was delayed, prisoner caused part of the delay by refusing to sign a cash slip as required by prison policy, and such nonchalant behavior by prisoner belied his assertion that his injury constituted an excessive risk to his health. Brooks v. Beard, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 167 Fed.Appx. 923, 2006 WL 332547, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner had to describe objective symptoms that he manifested after 10 day course of antibiotics that were sufficient to trigger need for additional treatment, in order to state civil rights claim under Eighth Amendment on basis that state prison officials delayed in providing follow-up care for prisoner's skin condition in deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs; although prisoner had been diagnosed with staphylococcus aureus skin infection, most skin conditions were not intuitively serious. Stepnay v. Goff, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2006, 164 Fed.Appx. 767, 2006 WL 182059, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Illinois inmate failed to show that jail officials acted with deliberate indifference toward inmate's serious medical need in violation of Fourteenth Amendment by delaying surgery for his hernia while he was in pre-trial detention, where inmate presented no evidence that jail administrators knew that the delays they were contemplating in scheduling surgery created a substantial risk of medical harm, and jail administrators were entitled to rely on judgment of medical professionals, who were not named as defendants in inmate's civil rights suit. Heard v. Sheahan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 148 Fed.Appx. 539, 2005 WL 2030660, Unreported, rehearing denied. Prisons 17(2)

Inmate failed to establish that twenty-month delay in scheduling elbow surgery after it was recommended was deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical need, as required to support inmate's §§ 1983 action against medical provider; delay was due to staff misunderstanding and miscommunication concerning scheduling process, not provider's policy, surgery was elective and not medical emergency, and delay in surgery was not detrimental to inmate. Buckley v. Correctional Medical Services, Inc., C.A.8 (Mo.) 2005, 125 Fed.Appx. 98, 2005 WL 600651, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

Inmate failed to prove that either of two prison doctors acted with deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, in violation of his Eighth Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment, despite his claims that they delayed and denied him adequate medical care for an umbilical hernia, and delayed and denied treatment for liver disease in the form of a liver transplant; the inmate only established a difference of opinion regarding the feasibility of a liver transplant, and both doctors determined that the inmate was not a good candidate for hernia surgery due to the high risk of infection caused by his prior self-inflicted injury and his liver problems. Horton v. Ward, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 123 Fed.Appx. 368, 2005 WL 419814, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner failed to establish that nurse and office assistant were deliberately indifferent to his medical needs related to an eye condition in violation of the Eighth Amendment, as required to support his § 1983 claim; nurse was not responsible for canceling or rescheduling prisoner's appointments or for responding to prisoners' medical concerns, office assistant inadvertently delayed prisoner's prescription medication, but matter was cleared up quickly, and prisoner was not harmed by delays in treatment. Canady v. Wilkinson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2004, 90 Fed.Appx. 863, 2004 WL 232728, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether inmate's delayed dental care met the "sufficiently serious" criteria for an Eighth Amendment claim, whether prison officials had notice of his needs, and whether they were deliberately indifferent to those needs precluded summary judgment against the inmate on his § 1983 claim. Stack v. McCotter, C.A.10 (Utah) 2003, 79 Fed.Appx. 383, 2003 WL 22422416, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Delay in state prisoner's receipt of medical treatment following assault did not constitute deprivation of constitutional rights, for purpose of § 1983 Eighth Amendment claim; prisoner admitted that his injuries of a split lip and scrape near his eye healed in a couple of days and that he was treated by a nurse within 11 minutes of the alleged assault. Harris v. Skinner, W.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22384794, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Deputy supervisor of administration and deputy supervisor of security for prison did not violate Eighth Amendment, through showing of deliberate indifference to inmate's metacarpal fracture, when appointment with outside orthopedist was delayed one week due to unavailability of security vehicle; fracture was insufficiently severe medical condition for Eighth Amendment purposes, earlier contact with orthopedist would not have avoided pain and disfigurement claimed by inmate, and prompt treatment with splint and pain medication precluded showing of necessary hostility on part of prison staff. Ruiz v. Homerighouse, W.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21382896, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State prison's medical staff could not be held liable under § 1983 for alleged deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical need for knee surgery when his surgery was delayed where it was not clear that the prison's medical staff was responsible for any delays, given medical clinic's cancellation of appointments, and given that, even if the prison held up surgery by failing, for example, to obtain MRI results, inmate did not introduce medical evidence to show any effect of the delay on his condition. Bieber v. Wisconsin Dept. of Corrections, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2003, 62 Fed.Appx. 714, 2003 WL 1870892, Unreported, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 113, 540 U.S. 843, 157 L.Ed.2d 78. Civil Rights 1091

Inmate claiming that he received inadequate medical care for injuries sustained when he fell out of his upper bunk at most alleged negligence, and thus, failed to state a claim under the Eighth Amendment in his section 1983 suit; a delay of three hours in treating his injuries did not rise to the level of deliberate indifference to his medical needs, and his allegation that he did not receive follow-up care after stitches were removed was belied by his statement that he later received medication for his ongoing pain and sleep-loss symptoms. Rossby v. Santa Clara County, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 297537, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2763. Diagnosis, medical care of prisoners

Prison physician who provided medication for respiratory infection and to reduce fever and coughing to prisoner who complained of cough, chills, fever, rapid pulse, low blood pressure, and swelling and redness in calf, did not consciously disregard the substantial risk of serious harm arising from prisoner's symptoms, and thus was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs, even if, at most, physician's actions amounted to misdiagnosis or failure to conduct further testing; prisoner's symptoms were consistent with respiratory infection, and treatment was appropriate. Self v. Crum, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2006, 439 F.3d 1227, petition for certiorari filed 2006 WL 1591905. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Incorrect diagnosis by prison medical personnel does not suffice to state claim for deliberate indifference; rather, plaintiff must show that officials refused to treat him, ignored his complaints, intentionally treated him incorrectly, or engaged in any similar conduct that would clearly evince wanton disregard for any serious medical needs. Domino v. Texas Dept. of Criminal Justice, C.A.5 (Tex.) 2001, 239 F.3d 752, rehearing denied. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Forced submission of arrestee to x-rays and blood test at county jail did not constitute unlawful search in violation of Fourth Amendment, for purposes of civil rights action; county's interest in diagnosing severe medical problems to prevent transmission of serious disease among general jail population was sufficiently compelling to preclude finding that such searches were unreasonable within meaning of Fourth Amendment. Thompson v. City of Los Angeles, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1989, 885 F.2d 1439. Searches And Seizures 78

Alleged negligence in course of handling, diagnosis, or treatment of state prisoner's medical complaint was not actionable under this section. Nettles v. Rundle, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1971, 453 F.2d 889. Civil Rights 1091

Fact that plaintiff disagreed with prison doctors' diagnosis of his ills was not a sufficient basis for civil rights action. McKinney v. People of State of Cal., C.A.9 (Cal.) 1970, 427 F.2d 160. Civil Rights 1091

Claim by inmate that prison medical personnel misdiagnosed or mistreated his or her condition arises under state medical malpractice law, and is not cognizable under § 1983. Lewis v. Angelone, W.D.Va.1996, 926 F.Supp. 69. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Alleged misdiagnosis by county jail nurses of inmate's finger injury, and their failure to order an x-ray of his injured finger, which, the inmate contended, would have established that the finger was fractured, did not amount to deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, and thus inmate had no cognizable claim under § 1983 for cruel and unusual punishment. Rodriguez v. Joyce, D.Me.1988, 693 F.Supp. 1250. Civil Rights 1091

Neither evidence of prison physician's negligence in diagnosing or treating prisoner's medical condition, nor evidence of disagreement between physician and prisoner regarding medical care, were sufficient to establish §§ 1983 claim against prison officials for deliberate indifference to prisoner's medical needs. Green v. Khrisnaswamy, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 134 Fed.Appx. 465, 2005 WL 1389495, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2764. Medical records access, medical care of prisoners

Allegations by patient at state hospital that psychiatrist and psychologist refused him permission to see his mental health records failed to state claim under § 1983 for violation of federal constitutional or statutory right; patient had no constitutional right to see his own medical records, and Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) and Privacy Act applied only to federal, not state, agencies. Collins v. Khoury, N.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 1941150, Unreported. Mental Health 21; Records 51

2765. Diet, medical care of prisoners

Prison officials were not deliberately indifferent to serious medical needs of insulin-dependent diabetic in implementing policy requiring penal institutions to provide "Heart Healthy" diet to inmates and failing to authorize therapeutic outpatient diets, notwithstanding inmate's personal belief that diet was unhealthy for him and his hospitalizations and development of diabetic myelopathy while incarcerated; medical evidence indicated that diet could be appropriate for diabetics, and inmate failed to tie his health problems to diet. Baird v. Alameida, C.D.Cal.2005, 407 F.Supp.2d 1134. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate failed to prove that corrections officials and contractors were deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in failing to provide him with a medical order for a "high fiber bland diet" as a treatment for a diverticulosis condition; the inmate had regular consultation for his condition, he was provided a high fiber diet, that was nutritionally adequate, as a form of treatment, and his desire for a "bland seed free diet" constituted nothing more than a disagreement with the treatment provided to him. Kirkham v. Wilkinson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2004, 101 Fed.Appx. 628, 2004 WL 1380083, Unreported. Prisons 17(3)

There was no evidence that correctional medical services nurse was deliberately indifferent to health and safety of inmate in violation of his rights under Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments by placing him on alternative meals for seven days, and thus, inmate was not entitled to damages under § 1983; inmate did not dispute that there was no medical reason why he could not be placed on alternative diet, and inmate presented no evidence of being starved or otherwise injured as a result of the diet. Fudge v. May, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2003, 84 Fed.Appx. 702, 2003 WL 22998106, Unreported. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Wheelchair-bound inmate was not entitled to injunctive relief requiring that he be granted a feed-in permit allowing him to have food brought to him in his cell in his § 1983 suit, despite his claim that a prior feed-in permit was revoked in retaliation for his having filed a lawsuit against the correctional facility and its officers and doctors; he was not singled out, but rather, the feed-in permits of a whole group of inmates was revoked on the ground that they could move about with the assistance of a wheelchair, and he was granted a feed-in permit for breakfast, when he was less mobile. Woods v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31296325, Unreported. Civil Rights 1454

2766. Drugs or medicine, medical care of prisoners--Generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Any failure by prison officials to ensure that bipolar prisoner's medications were promptly transferred with him to solitary confinement did not constitute deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment, absent showing by prisoner that he suffered harm as result. Moots v. Lombardi, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 453 F.3d 1020. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Jail's doctor who prescribed anti-seizure medicine to inmate was not deliberately indifferent to the inmate's serious medical needs, even though medication prescribed was different from medication inmate had taken in past; doctor did not know that medication prescribed would present danger to inmate or that he was prescribing less medication than was required. Phillips v. Jasper County Jail, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 437 F.3d 791. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether nurse's decision to withhold one particular medication from state prisoner and give him medication known to aggravate his esophageal condition, taken together with her threat that prisoner would be "locked up" if he continued to complain, could have supported conclusion that nurse was deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs, precluding summary judgment in prisoner's civil rights lawsuit under Eighth Amendment. Greeno v. Daley, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2005, 414 F.3d 645. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Prison officer's alleged refusal to provide inmate with prescribed psychotropic medication to be dispensed upon inmate's release and to make any effort to obtain medication for inmate supported § 1983 claim that officer exhibited deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, in violation of Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, given inmate's inability to obtain such medication on his own immediately following his release. Wakefield v. Thompson, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1999, 177 F.3d 1160. Prisons 17(2)

Record supported award of $9,500 to prison inmate who brought § 1983 action against psychiatrist who ordered administration of antipsychotic medications to inmate without his consent, and without complying with applicable due process requirements, despite claim that inmate would have received same treatment even if he had been afforded due process; inmate was afforded virtually no procedural protections, and experienced severe side effects that continued for weeks after medications were discontinued. Doby v. Hickerson, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1997, 120 F.3d 111. Civil Rights 1464

Prisoner's allegation that prison psychiatrist prescribed prolixin in violation of prisoner's due process and Eighth Amendment rights, even though prisoner did not believe he needed drug did not state § 1983 claim against psychiatrist; inadequate prison health care rises to constitutional violation only if prison officials are deliberately indifferent to serious medical need, and mere disagreement with medical treatment does not constitute constitutional violation. Lair v. Oglesby, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1988, 859 F.2d 605. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prisoner who allegedly was denied Rebetron Therapy to treat his Hepatitis C, despite his "relapse" while being treated with Interferon alone, because he tested positive for use of controlled substance, alleged unaddressed "serious medical need" for purposes of Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference. Johnson v. Wright, S.D.N.Y.2002, 234 F.Supp.2d 352. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Eighth Amendment violation was not stated by prison medical staff member's allegedly requiring prisoner to wait certain lengths of time before getting appointments to review his complaints of penile pain, which could have been matters of medical judgment, even if bad ones, but an alleged refusal to prescribe pain medication during the waiting periods, and the alleged prescription of medication some time later that was intended to make prisoner ill, was actionable as being deliberately indifferent to prisoner's pain. Adsit v. Kaplan, W.D.Wis.2006, 410 F.Supp.2d 776. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Correctional sergeant who, prior to dispensing inmate's pain medication, was called away to prison emergency did not act with deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical need, since in fact another officer replaced sergeant and continued to dispense medications, but plaintiff inmate inexplicably did not remain in line to receive his; thus, any pain he suffered as result of missing medication was result of his own choice, not of any Eighth Amendment violation. Upthegrove v. Kuka, W.D.Wis.2006, 408 F.Supp.2d 708. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State inmate exhausted administrative remedies with respect to prison doctor, as required under the as required under the Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), prior to bringing claim pursuant to §§ 1983 alleging inadequate medical treatment in violation of the Eighth Amendment; although the doctor was not named in original prison grievance, inmate sent letter to grievance resolution committee while grievance was still pending, which plainly stated that the doctor violated inmate's Eighth Amendment rights by prescribing medications without examining physician. Evan v. Manos, W.D.N.Y.2004, 336 F.Supp.2d 255. Civil Rights 1319

County jail officials were not indifferent, as required to support inmate's § 1983 claim of deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, when they allegedly failed to recognize, treat, or provide psychotropic medication for the inmate's psychological conditions, including anxiety and panic attacks, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and depression, where neither the county jail staff nor the inmate himself were aware of any mental health problems in need of treatment during the time that he was at the jail. Simpson v. Penobscot County Sheriff's Dept., D.Me.2003, 285 F.Supp.2d 75. Civil Rights 1091

Prison employees' insistence upon clinical observation prior to administration of drug to treat inmate's hemophilia was not "deliberate indifference" to inmate's health, as required to find Eighth Amendment violation; while some doctors believed that drug should generally be administered on demand, inmate would sometimes demand and get drug, and then refuse to take it, resulting in expensive waste, other doctors believed that there should be some objective manifestation of bleed before drug was administered, and some doctors believed that drug should be administered prophylactically on set schedule. Walker v. Peters, N.D.Ill.1997, 989 F.Supp. 971. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Inmate protesting medical treatment, who failed to contest nature of diagnoses and prescriptions given, failed to state a cognizable claim under civil rights statute. Kopec v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1991, 767 F.Supp. 467, affirmed 952 F.2d 394. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Inmate's pro se claim that medical personnel at correctional facility did not prescribe medicine he requested and did not place him on soft diet as he requested, and that he suffered three month delay for skin lotion were insufficient to support § 1983 action for cruel and unusual punishment arising out of denial of medical treatment, particularly where no injury was demonstrated and not only was inmate abusive to medical personnel, but refused to allow doctor to examine him or draw blood. Peterson v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1989, 707 F.Supp. 759. Civil Rights 1091

Prison medical staff's refusal to continue to supply inmate with chronic spinal condition with drugs Valium and Talwin did not violate inmate's Eighth Amendment right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, so that inmate was not entitled to injunction requiring that he be supplied with those drugs; staff determined that inmate should be treated with medicine other than those drugs based on belief that use of drugs could cause addiction abuse and that their presence could encourage barter system in prison. Wolfel v. Ferguson, S.D.Ohio 1987, 689 F.Supp. 756. Civil Rights 1455; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison doctor's alleged failure to inform state inmate of side effects of prescribed medicine was nothing more than negligence, and thus did not support §§ 1983 claim under Eighth Amendment for deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs. Jetter v. Beard, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 130 Fed.Appx. 523, 2005 WL 1051180, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 566, 163 L.Ed.2d 475. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate failed to establish that health care administrator of correctional facility was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs by failing to provide him with Motrin for back pain, as required to support § 1983 action against administrator, where inmate's Motrin prescription had expired, inmate's request for renewal was sent to doctor on more than one occasion, and inmate was provided Tylenol to help ease back pain until prescription for Motrin could be reviewed. Mack v. Wilkinson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2004, 90 Fed.Appx. 866, 2004 WL 232730, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Physician was not deliberately indifferent to a serious medical condition of an inmate assaulted by other inmates while he was a pretrial detainee, despite his claim that the physician prescribed medicine for him that almost caused him to have a heart attack, and that she denied him an MRI and a CAT scan to investigate his headaches; there was no evidence that the physician prescribed the medication recklessly or even negligently, the inmate did not allege that his headaches impaired his activities of daily living, and there was no evidence that the physician knew or should have known that a CAT scan or MRI was necessary and recklessly or maliciously failed to order one. Renelique v. Doe, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 23023771, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Issue of whether county prison's medical staff was deliberately indifferent to risks to inmate arising from their administration of another prisoner's prescription medications presented fact questions that could not be resolved on motion to dismiss inmate's § 1983 suit against staff members for violation of his Eighth Amendment rights. Bowers v. Milwaukee County Jail Medical Staff, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2002, 52 Fed.Appx. 295, 2002 WL 31688877, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 1831

2767. ---- Time of dispensing, drugs or medicine, medical care of prisoners

Evidence that prison staff denied seizure medication to inmate who reported to prison medical unit outside 30-minute period set aside for dispensing medication was insufficient to establish deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, in violation of inmate's civil rights, absent evidence that dosages that inmate was denied because of his late arrival caused alleged seizures that occurred at least three weeks later. Moyers v. Buescher, E.D.Mo.1992, 806 F.Supp. 218. Civil Rights 1420

Nurse's allegedly retaliatory act in refusing to administer to state prisoner a single dose of an over-the-counter pain reliever was de minimis, for purposes of prisoner's First Amendment retaliation claim, in civil rights action under §§ 1983 alleging that he was denied needed pain medication in retaliation for two lawsuits he had previously brought against Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) personnel, where prisoner had received his medication a few hours earlier, he received more medication a few hours after nurse allegedly refused to treat him, and a person of ordinary firmness would not be deterred from exercising his constitutional right to file grievances and lawsuits simply because he had to wait a few hours for access to his non-narcotic pain medication. Davidson v. Bartholome, S.D.N.Y.2006, 460 F.Supp.2d 436. Prisons 17(2)

2768. ---- Interruption of dispensing drugs or medicine, medical care of prisoners

Proper focus of prisoner's § 1983 deliberate indifference to serious medical needs claim against prison officials was on particular risks attributed to his missed HIV medication, rather than on his HIV-positive status alone, in evaluating whether he demonstrated a serious medical need as required to establish an Eighth Amendment violation when he was twice deprived of his HIV medication for several days, once due to delay in refilling his prescriptions and once due to confiscation of his medicine in a random search of his living quarters. Smith v. Carpenter, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 316 F.3d 178. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

There was no evidence showing when alleged deprivations of prisoner's allergy medication occurred, or that any deprivation caused him serious health effects, as required to support his claim against prison officials for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. George v. Smith, W.D.Wis.2006, 2006 WL 3775929. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Nurse's allegedly retaliatory act in refusing to administer to state prisoner a single dose of an over-the-counter pain reliever was de minimis, for purposes of prisoner's First Amendment retaliation claim, in civil rights action under §§ 1983 alleging that he was denied needed pain medication in retaliation for two lawsuits he had previously brought against Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) personnel, where prisoner had received his medication a few hours earlier, he received more medication a few hours after nurse allegedly refused to treat him, and a person of ordinary firmness would not be deterred from exercising his constitutional right to file grievances and lawsuits simply because he had to wait a few hours for access to his non-narcotic pain medication. Davidson v. Bartholome, S.D.N.Y.2006, 460 F.Supp.2d 436. Prisons 17(2)

Health care providers who provided medical services at state correctional facility did not violate inmate's due process rights when they denied him certain medication for Hepatitis C based on inmate's failed drug test without first offering him a hearing to confirm the results of that test; prison regulations stated medical decisions were not disciplinary in nature and were "the sole province" of prison physicians, inmate was made aware of the policy, and health care providers acted consistent with community standards in refusing to provide the medication. Niemic v. Maloney, D.Mass.2006, 448 F.Supp.2d 270. Prisons 17(2)

Prison nurse's failure to administer prisoner's hypertension medication on one day did not cause prisoner to suffer a serious medical condition, and thus nurse and correction officer who escorted nurse were not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment, where prisoner was taking relatively low dose of medication for mild hypertension, prisoner took his medication on every other day that month, prisoner's blood pressure was normal when checked three weeks later, and there was no indication that the missed dose of medication interfered with prisoner's activities or caused him medical complications. Torres v. Trombly, D.Conn.2006, 421 F.Supp.2d 527. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Evidence was sufficient to prove that prisoner suffered physical harm as the result of not receiving his HIV medication for a period of three days while in custody, and therefore that prison health services exhibited deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs, depriving him of his constitutional rights and discriminating against him on the basis of his HIV status in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA); although prisoner's expert witness was unable to say that "more probably than not" the symptoms suffered by prisoner while in jail were related to the interruption in medication, evidence showed that prisoner suffered from fever, chills, and flu-like symptoms that possibly were caused by the fact that prisoner was refused his HIV medication. McNally v. Prison Health Services, D.Me.1999, 52 F.Supp.2d 147. Civil Rights 1420

Prisoner's allegations that he did not receive his blood pressure or pain medication at least 26 times during his incarceration and that he suffered headaches and had to lie down when he did not receive his medications stated a missed-medication claim against correction officials under §§ 1983. King v. Busby, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 162 Fed.Appx. 669, 2006 WL 122424, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Decision of county jail physician not to place prisoner on psychiatric medications, after he attempted to swallow a razor blade, was not deliberate indifference that would support a §§ 1983 claim; physician determined prisoner was not psychotic, but placed him on permanent segregation, transferred him to single cell observation, had prisoner monitored closely by jail's mental health nurses, mental health director, staff psychologists, and correctional officers, and, when necessary, placed him under more scrupulous levels of observation with additional restrictions on his access to personal property. Edmonds v. Horton, C.A.6 2004, 113 Fed.Appx. 62, 2004 WL 2203575, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

Former inmate failed to establish that defendants acted with deliberate indifference, as required to support his § 1983 claim alleging the medical care he received while incarcerated violated the Eighth Amendment; although inmate occasionally did not receive prescribed medication for hypertension and degenerative joint disease, occasions were isolated and brief, inmate failed to establish that lapses posed an excessive risk to his health or that defendants knew of risk and disregarded it, and inmate failed to substantiate his claim that his medical records were falsified. Lindwurm v. Wexford Health Sources, Inc., C.A.10 (Wyo.) 2003, 84 Fed.Appx. 46, 2003 WL 22969348, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2768A. Withdrawing treatment, medical care of prisoners

State prison medical administrator and doctor were deliberately indifferent to serious medical needs of prisoner with HIV and hepatitis, where they had completely withdrawn the prescribed treatment for his illnesses; prisoner was not receiving any treatment apart from clinic visits, despite his deteriorating condition. Brown v. Johnson, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2004, 387 F.3d 1344. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2769. Drug treatment, medical care of prisoners

Even if state and federal regulations relating to methadone detoxification program induced expectation, rising to constitutionally protected liberty interest, in participants that their methadone dependency would be terminated only by prescribed program of detoxification, such "right" was foregone by participants once they were incarcerated in penal institution unable to continue the program; fact of confinement, together with legitimate goals and policies of the penal institution, served to limit any such "right." Fredericks v. Huggins, C.A.4 (Va.) 1983, 711 F.2d 31. Constitutional Law 274(2)

Where inmates of county jail who had been receiving methadone treatment prior to incarceration from an approved clinic in the county were given methadone treatment through their sixth day of confinement, after which treatment was terminated, system of methadone treatment at jail would not constitute denial of due process, where there was medical testimony to the effect that system was adequate and where record did not establish any deliberate indifference to inmates' serious medical needs. Inmates of Allegheny County Jail v. Pierce, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1979, 612 F.2d 754, on remand 487 F.Supp. 638. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Eighth Amendment violation was not stated by prison medical staff member's allegedly requiring prisoner to wait certain lengths of time before getting appointments to review his complaints of penile pain, which could have been matters of medical judgment, even if bad ones, but an alleged refusal to prescribe pain medication during the waiting periods, and the alleged prescription of medication some time later that was intended to make prisoner ill, was actionable as being deliberately indifferent to prisoner's pain. Adsit v. Kaplan, W.D.Wis.2006, 410 F.Supp.2d 776. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Pretrial detainee stated claim for deliberate indifference to his medical needs by alleging that intake physician at correctional institution denied him methadone which his condition on arrival warranted; if, based on detainee's condition, it was medical necessity that he receive methadone immediately, physician's action was something more than negligent. Messina v. Mazzeo, E.D.N.Y.1994, 854 F.Supp. 116. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Inmate who suffered from schizophrenia and who alleged that prison doctor administered an unapproved drug that caused potentially serious side effects and then later discontinued inmate's approved medications altogether stated claim under §§ 1983 for violation of his rights under Eighth Amendment. Adams v. Durai, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 153 Fed.Appx. 972, 2005 WL 2867785, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2770. Experiments, medical care of prisoners

Evidence in prison inmate's action under this section alleging that inmate was forced to participate in mass tuberculosis experiment established that defendants were not deliberately indifferent to inmate's serious medical needs. Lee v. Armontrout, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 991 F.2d 487, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 209, 510 U.S. 875, 126 L.Ed.2d 166, rehearing denied 114 S.Ct. 462, 510 U.S. 973, 126 L.Ed.2d 394. Civil Rights 1420

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Allegations that prisoner suffered ill effects after participating in medical experiment, that prison physician was not informed as to which inmates were involved in the experiment, that prisoner merely complained to the prison doctor that he had a sore throat and was hurting and did not tell the physician that he was taking medication as part of an experiment, and that, after returning from city hospital, prisoner sometimes missed sick call because he didn't feel like waiting in line but that, whenever he was in line, he was not denied treatment demonstrated that prisoner was not afforded such inadequate medical treatment as to give rise to civil rights claim under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8. Roach v. Kligman, E.D.Pa.1976, 412 F.Supp. 521. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2771. Lock downs or lock ups, medical care of prisoners

Alleged conduct of corrections officer in intentionally provoking or inciting pretrial detainee into "rage attacks" by relentlessly taunting him, so that she could subsequently discipline him by imposing administrative lock down, was not subject to Eighth Amendment's "deliberate indifference" standard that applied to denial of appropriate medical care. O'Connor v. Huard, C.A.1 (Me.) 1997, 117 F.3d 12, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 691, 522 U.S. 1047, 139 L.Ed.2d 636. Sentencing And Punishment 1554

Use of lock down as alternative to appropriate mental health care for inmates with serious mental illnesses was deliberate indifference to serious mental health needs of inmates and violated their constitutional right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment. Casey v. Lewis, D.Ariz.1993, 834 F.Supp. 1477. Sentencing And Punishment 1547; Prisons 17(2)

No inmate at Minnesota State prison shall be deprived of medical care or attention because he is confined in 24-hour lockup and each inmate shall be provided with medical request forms that shall be transmitted to prison medical staff which shall make personal visit to inmate the same day. Hines v. Anderson, D.C.Minn.1977, 439 F.Supp. 12. Prisons 17(2)

2772. Medical history, medical care of prisoners

Physician at correction facility was not deliberately indifferent to medical needs of inmate during period prior to date of inmate's death, despite allegation that physician failed to prepare adequate medical history, and thus estate could not maintain civil rights action against physician on that basis; officials took health history of inmate. Kelly v. Wehrum, S.D.Ohio 1997, 956 F.Supp. 1369. Civil Rights 1091

2773. Number of cellmates, medical care of prisoners

Prison officials were not liable to prisoner, under this section prohibiting deprivation of civil rights by state action, for allegedly denying him due process by not giving him his own cell or a different cellmate since prison doctor had merely recommended, rather than ordered, that prisoner be celled alone or with a compatible cellmate, and the recommendation was expressly contingent upon approval of hospital administration. Partee v. Lane, N.D.Ill.1981, 528 F.Supp. 1254. Civil Rights 1091

2774. Organ donation and transplantation, medical care of prisoners

To prevail in § 1983 action alleging that doctors' refusal to provide kidney transplant violated inmate's Eight Amendment rights, inmate was required to show that course of treatment doctors chose was medically unacceptable under the circumstances and that they chose their course in conscious disregard of an excessive risk to inmate's health. Jackson v. McIntosh, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 90 F.3d 330, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 584, 519 U.S. 1029, 136 L.Ed.2d 514. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State prisoner under death sentence had no right cognizable under this section to be taken to hospital in another state so that he might donate a kidney. Campbell v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1969, 416 F.2d 949, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 980, 397 U.S. 953, 25 L.Ed.2d 135. Prisons 13(1)

2775. Corrective devices, medical care of prisoners

Administrative delay in securing vendor to provide prisoner with shoe insert to remedy foot condition did not demonstrate deliberate indifference, required for § 1983 civil rights claim alleging that failing to properly provide required medical care was cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment. Williams v. Keane, S.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 566. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Prison officials' actions of ignoring fact that physician had prescribed orthopedic shoes for inmate, that shoes had been taken from him on day he arrived at facility, and that failure to provide proper footwear caused him to suffer constant pain constituted "deliberate indifference" to inmate's serious medical need and violated Eighth Amendment. Saunders v. Horn, E.D.Pa.1996, 959 F.Supp. 689, report and recommendation adopted 960 F.Supp. 893. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

State prison's medical staff could not be held liable under § 1983 for alleged deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical need for his prescribed knee brace when they substituted an elastic sleeve for the brace because they believed that metal in the brace posed a security risk, even though they knew that his knee, if left unsupported, jeopardized his physical well-being, absent any evidence that they knew the brace was essential to treat his knee injury. Bieber v. Wisconsin Dept. of Corrections, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2003, 62 Fed.Appx. 714, 2003 WL 1870892, Unreported, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 113, 540 U.S. 843, 157 L.Ed.2d 78. Civil Rights 1091

Wheelchair-bound inmate was not entitled to retain his old orthopedic boots and elbow braces after receiving new ones, and thus, failed to state a § 1983 claim regarding a requirement that he give up his current equipment in order to receive new equipment, except insofar as there may have been a time when he was denied any elbow braces. Woods v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31296325, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

2776. Exercise, medical care of prisoners

Inmate's allegations that prison officials knew that there were serious adverse affects to inmates who were denied exercise, that he repeatedly complained to prison officials, that he filed a grievance and requested medical attention because he could not exercise outside his cell, and that prison officials did nothing satisfied subjective deliberate indifference requirement, for purposes of inmate's § 1983 action against prison officials alleging violation of Eighth Amendment protection against cruel and unusual punishment. Delaney v. DeTella, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2001, 256 F.3d 679. Prisons 17(5); Sentencing And Punishment 1541

Regional director in the Wisconsin Department of Corrections, Bureau of Health Services did not show deliberate indifference to condition of prison inmate, in violation of inmate's Eighth Amendment rights, when she denied inmate's request for access to weight training equipment; there was no showing director knew weight training was necessary to treat femoral neuropathy and several other leg ailments, precluding necessary determination that director was aware of facts supporting inference that inmate was being subjected to serious harm, and that director drew inference. Reimann v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 1059. Sentencing And Punishment 1541

Inmate's claim that he was deprived of out-of-cell exercise for six months during prison lockdown, and that he became depressed as a result, presented cognizable § 1983 claim of cruel and unusual punishment, where the only outings offered to inmate were weekly showers and a handful of family and medical visits, and inmate did not appear to present any particularized security risk that might justify loss of his exercise privileges. Delaney v. DeTella, N.D.Ill.2000, 123 F.Supp.2d 429, order affirmed and remanded 256 F.3d 679. Prisons 17(5); Sentencing And Punishment 1541

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2777. Outside medical care, medical care of prisoners

State prison superintendent, who adopted the regional medical director's denial of a referral for an outside dermatologist consultation for prisoner suffering from keloid formation on his face at site of a knife wound, was not deliberately indifferent to prisoner's medical needs, barring prisoner's § 1983 claim against superintendent for deliberate indifference in violation of the Eighth Amendment, absent any evidence that superintendent had any medical training or that he understood that an outside consultation would be necessary or useful to treat prisoner's condition. Brock v. Wright, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 315 F.3d 158. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Refusal of prison warden to allow prisoner to leave the facility for examination by his own doctor was within the warden's discretion where two doctors employed by university hospital had examined prisoner and found no need for surgery and had so advised the warden; mere difference of opinion as to diagnosis and treatment between the prisoner and medical report submitted to the warden could not serve as basis for cause of action, i.e., that refusal to permit prisoner to visit his own doctor constituted cruel and unusual punishment. McCracken v. Jones, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1977, 562 F.2d 22, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 1474, 435 U.S. 917, 55 L.Ed.2d 509. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

State prisoner was not entitled to order requiring prison authorities to furnish him with outside medical care and could not recover damages for injuries allegedly sustained by him through failure of prison officials to provide proper medical attention where, a few days after suit had been filed, prisoner had been discharged from hospital and hospital medical personnel found that he had not been suffering from any mental or physical illness. Byrd v. Wolff, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1974, 490 F.2d 1277. Civil Rights 1448; Civil Rights 1462

Refusal to allow prisoner to consult doctor of his own choice at his own expense would not violate prisoner's civil rights. Gahagan v. Pennsylvania Bd. of Probation and Parole, E.D.Pa.1978, 444 F.Supp. 1326.

2778. Periodic examinations, medical care of prisoners

Prison's lack of a program of routine medical examinations did not constitute deliberate indifference to a serious medical need, and did not violate prisoner's civil rights. Tunnell v. Robinson, W.D.Pa.1980, 486 F.Supp. 1265. Prisons 17(2)

Complaint by black inmates of state prison seeking injunctive relief requiring that all black inmates be routinely examined to determine if they had sickle-cell anemia or carried such trait did not state claim cognizable under this section. Ross v. Bounds, E.D.N.C.1974, 373 F.Supp. 450. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2779. Physical therapy, medical care of prisoners

Wheelchair-bound inmate was not entitled to injunctive relief requiring that he be provided with physical therapy in his § 1983 suit, despite his claim that he was being denied such therapy in retaliation for having filed a lawsuit against the correctional facility and its officers and doctors; the inmate made no specific claims of retaliation, and he was not likely to succeed on his underlying claim, particularly as a physician did provide some physical therapy treatment, i.e., the lifting of a can of beans, even if it was not what was ordered by a surgeon. Woods v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31296325, Unreported. Civil Rights 1454

2780. Poisons, medical care of prisoners

Allegations that plaintiff prisoner became ill as a result of drinking wood alcohol obtained from an unknown source at state prison and that the defendant prison officials did not have the wood alcohol secured away from the prisoners did not rise to the level of a constitutional deprivation cognizable under this section where the plaintiff pointed to no specific constitutional guarantee safeguarding the interest allegedly invaded and made no claim that any of the officials were in any way responsible for his ingestion of wood alcohol. Clark v. People of State of Mich., E.D.Mich.1980, 498 F.Supp. 159. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2781. Prostheses, medical care of prisoners

Actions by prison's health services administrator who took steps to remedy inmate's situation, made arrangements to correct problems with inmate's crutches and informed inmate that he would arrange for prosthesis if it were deemed necessary at inmate's next medical evaluation, did not show deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs as required for actionable civil rights claim. Kopec v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1990, 767 F.Supp. 463, vacated on other grounds 922 F.2d 152, on remand 767 F.Supp. 467. Civil Rights 1091

2782. Removal from hospital or infirmary, medical care of prisoners

Alleged conduct of prison authorities in removing prisoner from hospital where prisoner had undergone surgery, before prisoner was ready to be moved and despite surgeons' orders and without obtaining a discharge, was more than "mere negligence" and gave rise to cause of action under this section for violation of proscription by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8 of cruel and unusual punishment. Martinez v. Mancusi, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1970, 443 F.2d 921, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 1202, 401 U.S. 983, 28 L.Ed.2d 335. Civil Rights 1091

Complaint of prisoner, who was suffering from chronic thrombophlebitis in his left leg, when he was transferred to correctional facility, who refused to take his medication because he was not initially housed in infirmary and who further alleged that he was discharged from infirmary for other than legitimate medical purposes, stated medical malpractice claim at most but did not state a valid claim under this section. Bourgeois v. Hongisto, S.D.N.Y.1980, 488 F.Supp. 304. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2783. Shots or inoculations, medical care of prisoners

Requests by special needs unit manager at state prison that schizophrenic inmate take his psychotropic medication did not violate inmate's due process rights, for purposes of inmate's § 1983 claim; although inmate was urged to take his medication and was punished for misbehavior that occurred when he was not taking his medication, he was never forcibly injected with antipsychotic medications, and he was permitted to refuse the medication. Whittington v. Vaughn, E.D.Pa.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 621. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 17(2)

Forced administration of diphtheria-tetanus inoculation to inmate by prison personnel did not violate his civil rights since there was no conscious or callous indifference to inmate's rights, but rather inoculation was administered solely to protect inmate and other inmates from spread of contagious disease. Zaire v. Dalsheim, S.D.N.Y.1988, 698 F.Supp. 57, affirmed 904 F.2d 33. Civil Rights 1098

2784. Sick-call procedures, medical care of prisoners

Evidence that sick call procedure at prison had serious deficiencies, that prison medical unit personnel were not qualified to treat cardiac arrest cases, that prisoner made several requests for medical treatment without any response other than being sent two pills, that, when prisoner was finally brought to emergency room, prison physician failed to respond immediately to request that he come to emergency room, and that prisoner died of cardiorespiratory arrest supported finding that there were such systematic and gross deficiencies in staffing, personnel, and sick call procedures that prisoner was effectively denied access to adequate medical care. Bass by Lewis v. Wallenstein, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1985, 769 F.2d 1173. Civil Rights 1420

2785. Size of staff, medical care of prisoners

Where size of prison medical staff in relation to number of inmates having serious health problems constitutes an effective denial of access to diagnosis and treatment by qualified health care professionals, "deliberate indifference" standard for determining whether medical treatment afforded prisoners is constitutionally adequate has been violated, for, in such circumstances, exercise of informed professional judgment as to serious medical problems of individual inmates is precluded by patently inadequate size of the staff. Inmates of Allegheny County Jail v. Pierce, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1979, 612 F.2d 754, on remand 487 F.Supp. 638. Prisons 17(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmates' Eighth Amendment rights were violated where, as result of inadequate staff members, existing staff could not adequately treat mental health problems of inmates. Casey v. Lewis, D.Ariz.1993, 834 F.Supp. 1477. Sentencing And Punishment 1547; Prisons 17(2)

2786. Suicide, medical care of prisoners--Generally

Corrections officer did not recklessly or intentionally disregard known risk of suicide, and thus was not liable under §§ 1983 for Eighth Amendment violation, where he immediately informed control room after prisoner requested crisis counselor and said he was feeling suicidal, officer then returned to prisoner's cell and received assurance that prisoner would be all right until counselor arrived, officer again returned to cell within 15 to 20 minutes, and another officer then assumed responsibility for monitoring prisoner. Collins v. Seeman, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2006, 462 F.3d 757. Sentencing And Punishment 1537

Fact that no previous suicides had occurred in county jail did not negate possibility of practice of deliberate indifference toward suicidal pretrial detainees on part of county contractor that provided medical and mental health services at jail, and thus did not preclude finding of contractor's liability in detainee's estate's §§1983 Eighth Amendment action against contractor. Woodward v. Correctional Medical Services of Illinois, Inc., C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 368 F.3d 917. Civil Rights 1339; Sentencing And Punishment 1547

County jail official's alleged failure to conduct regular cell checks did not constitute deliberate indifference to safety of inmate who committed suicide, for purpose of proving Eighth Amendment violation in § 1983 action, even though jail had policies and training materials that reflected its concern over possibility of inmate suicide; general risk of suicide among inmates was not substantial, where only one other inmate committed suicide in 15 years prior to inmate's death, and there were approximately two suicide attempts per year. Hott v. Hennepin County, Minnesota, C.A.8 (Minn.) 2001, 260 F.3d 901. Prisons 17(1); Sentencing And Punishment 1554

Prison case manager who waited longer than half an hour to check on prisoner following telephone call from prisoner's ex-wife indicating that prisoner had contacted her and planned to commit suicide was not "deliberately indifferent" to prisoner's risk of suicide in violation of the Eighth Amendment, and therefore, case manager was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action following suicide; case manager's only indication of suicide risk was ex-wife's phone call. Gregoire v. Class, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2000, 236 F.3d 413. Civil Rights 1376(7); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Jail supervisor was not liable under § 1983 in suicide of inmate, on theory of failure to properly train employees to identify, monitor, and refer for mental evaluations detainees exhibiting abnormal behavior, and for having no written detoxification plan, where jail had a detoxification plan and a policy addressing the classification and segregation of inmates when there is a suspected medical or mental problem, and there was no showing of a pattern or practice by supervisors at the jail in failing to segregate and bringing about serious harm to inmates or detainees. Williams v. Kelso, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 201 F.3d 1060, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1358

Jailer did not violate civil rights of prisoner who attempted to hang himself with belt that jailer had not detected in pat search, absent showing that jailer possessed level of knowledge required under deliberate indifference standard that would alert him to strong likelihood that prisoner would attempt suicide; prisoner's offhand comment during booking procedure "well I think I'll shoot myself" could not reasonably constitute serious suicide threat when no gun was available, and there was no evidence that jailer was familiar with "suicide profile" or that he was under any duty to be. Bell v. Stigers, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1991, 937 F.2d 1340. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

There was no evidence that prison officials were deliberately indifferent to serious mental health needs of inmate who committed suicide, even though they failed to provide inmate with psychiatric, as opposed to psychological, care, and even though officials did not place inmate in "suicide cell"; record showed that prison officials accommodated inmate both times he expressed need for mental health attention. Torraco v. Maloney, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1991, 923 F.2d 231. Prisons 17(2)

Deliberate indifference standard applicable to civil rights actions arising out of jail suicides requires a strong likelihood, rather than a mere possibility, that the self-infliction of harm will occur, and deliberate indifference will not be found to exist in the face of only negligence. Popham v. City of Talladega, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1990, 908 F.2d 1561. Civil Rights 1091

Finding that warden had been deliberately indifferent to inmate's serious medical needs was sufficiently supported by evidence presented in civil rights action, including evidence that warden knew or should have known of inmate's suicidal tendencies, but had nevertheless failed to deprive him of death dealing instrumentalities prior to placing him in solitary confinement immediately prior to death in cell. Lewis v. Parish of Terrebonne, C.A.5 (La.) 1990, 894 F.2d 142, rehearing denied 901 F.2d 1110. Civil Rights 1420

County, which had completed extensive improvement of its policies for prevention of inmate suicide, was not deliberately indifferent to needs of inmate who committed suicide, so as to support §§ 1983 liability, despite claim that policy did not adequately ensure that guards received notice of inmate's suicidal tendencies. Estate of Abdollahi v. County of Sacramento, E.D.Cal.2005, 405 F.Supp.2d 1194. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Evidence of conversations between county jail inmate's spouse and jail employee about the inmate's suicide risk, a correctional officers' note that the inmate's wife said she thought they should keep an eye on the inmate, and another correctional officer's report that the inmate may have been trying to save up some of his medications to take at a later time, was insufficient to establish that sheriff and jail administrator knew of the inmate's potential risk of suicide, as required to hold them liable under §§ 1983 for alleged deliberate indifference toward the inmate's substantial suicide risk, absent any evidence that the sheriff and administrator were aware of the alleged conversation or the documents. Harvey v. County of Ward, D.N.D.2005, 352 F.Supp.2d 1003. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1547

Claims arising from a jail suicide are considered and treated as claims based on the failure of jail officials to provide medical care for those in their custody; under that standard, a plaintiff must prove that the defendant was deliberately indifferent to a substantial risk that the inmate might attempt to commit suicide. Estate of Sisk v. Manzanares, D.Kan.2002, 262 F.Supp.2d 1162. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1547

For prison officials to be liable for prisoner's suicide, it is not necessary that prison officials knew specifically that prisoner was a suicidal inmate, but only that they were aware that a group of prisoners to which he belonged (suicidal inmates) faced a serious risk of harm caused by their deliberate indifference. Swan by Carello v. Daniels, D.Del.1995, 923 F.Supp. 626. Prisons 17(2)

In parent's § 1983 civil rights action alleging cruel and unusual punishment based on son's suicide while in custody of state department of corrections, complaint sufficiently alleged that probation officer and department employee did not take adequate measures in response to substantial risk of decedent's suicide, in support of claim of cruel and unusual punishment, where complaint asserted that probation officer did not communicate information on decedent's mental health to department and that department employee did not ensure that decedent received adequate counseling and observation. Viero v. Bufano, N.D.Ill.1995, 901 F.Supp. 1387. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Generally, in jail suicide case under § 1983, to establish knowledge of strong risk of suicide, plaintiff would have to show that defendant officials were aware of previous threat or earlier attempt at suicide. Clinton v. County of York, D.S.C.1995, 893 F.Supp. 581. Civil Rights 1091

Jury finding that jail officials willfully and wantonly failed to prevent prisoner's suicide, giving rise to § 1983 civil rights liability, was supported by evidence that inadequate personal inspections of prisoner were done despite knowledge of prisoner's suicidal tendencies and that audio and video monitoring were insufficient. Bragado v. City of Zion/Police Dept., N.D.Ill.1993, 839 F.Supp. 551. Civil Rights 1420

Actions of line corrections officer at county jail, in allegedly delaying his inspection of inmate's cell as part of suicide watch for four minutes while he went to the bathroom, did not manifest any "deliberate indifference" to inmate's constitutional rights, such as might support § 1983 action against officer when inmate hanged himself in cell; officer had never been told anything by inmate indicating that he intended to commit suicide, and officer was surprised that inmate committed suicide. Russell v. Knox County, D.Me.1993, 826 F.Supp. 20. Civil Rights 1091

Wife of prisoner who hung himself in jail failed to adduce substantial evidence that would support finding that official conduct in failing to prevent suicide constituted deliberate indifference to prisoner's safety from self-harm; there was no evidence of any knowledge on part of officials of previous threat or attempted suicide by prisoner. Popham v. City of Talladega, N.D.Ala.1989, 742 F.Supp. 1504, affirmed 908 F.2d 1561. Civil Rights 1420

Communications operator on duty at county jail when prisoner attempted suicide, who had no knowledge regarding prisoner's arrest and suicide potential, did not display deliberate indifference to strong likelihood that prisoner would attempt suicide in violation of prisoner's civil rights under § 1983. Bell v. County of Washington County, Iowa, S.D.Iowa 1990, 741 F.Supp. 1354, reversed in part on other grounds 937 F.2d 1340. Civil Rights 1091

Allegations of administratrix of inmate's estate concerning inmate's suicide death while incarcerated in county jail were insufficient to state civil rights claimed against county and county officials; although administratrix claimed that officials failed to take sufficient steps to prevent inmate's suicide, inmate was placed in segregation, provided with psychiatric care and placed under suicide watch, making his death at most a result of negligence, not deliberate indifference to his needs. Snyder v. Baumecker, D.N.J.1989, 708 F.Supp. 1451. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Complaint which alleged that prisoner's civil rights were violated when inadequate supervision and treatment provided during his incarceration resulted in his suicide stated a cognizable claim under this section, despite contention that U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 8 does not reach instances of deliberate self-injury. Guglielmoni v. Alexander, D.C.Conn.1984, 583 F.Supp. 821. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2787. ---- Availability of state remedy, suicide, medical care of prisoners

Brother of prisoner who committed suicide while in custody could not maintain a procedural due process action under § 1983 against chief deputy sheriff and jailer, as adequate relief existed under state law pursuant to the wrongful death statute, Miss.Code 1972, § 11-7-13. McGowan v. Riley, N.D.Miss.1985, 628 F.Supp. 1087. Civil Rights 1319

2788. ---- Arrestees, suicide, medical care of prisoners

Jail booking officer, who described detainee's mental state when he arrived at jail as "disoriented, confused and removed from reality," did not demonstrate deliberate indifference under Eighth Amendment standards in failing to immediately contact a mental health professional or assign special classification to such detainee, who had been involved in drunken assaultive behavior, and even if officer were deemed to be deliberately indifferent, there was no basis for § 1983 claim, as there was no causative connection between his failure to act and detainee's suicide four days later. Williams v. Kelso, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 201 F.3d 1060, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1088(4); Sentencing And Punishment 1547

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County officers and jail personnel owed duty to pretrial detainee to not act with deliberate indifference to substantial risk of suicide by detainee, not duty to act in objectively reasonable manner with respect to risk of suicide, regardless of whether detainee has been taken before magistrate judge or other judicial officer to determine legality of arrest. Barrie v. Grand County, Utah, C.A.10 (Utah) 1997, 119 F.3d 862. Civil Rights 1088(4)

In § 1983 action against sheriff by guardian of arrestee who was rendered incompetent by suicide attempt in county jail, guardian failed to show that sheriff's unwritten policy for dealing with suicidal inmates was unconstitutional; policy made effort to identify and protect potentially suicidal inmates from self-harm, and guardian did not show that sheriff's department employees' failure to do more resulted from inadequate training amounting to deliberate indifference to needs of jail's inmates. Schmelz v. Monroe County, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1992, 954 F.2d 1540. Civil Rights 1358

Police officers sued under federal civil rights statute for death of arrestee were not liable when they failed to remove his belt before placing him in a cell where he subsequently hanged himself, as it could not be proved that they knew arrestee had suicidal tendencies, despite evidence that it was widely known throughout 35-person police department that arrestee had such tendencies. Williams v. Borough of West Chester, Pa., C.A.3 (Pa.) 1989, 891 F.2d 458, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1091

Material issues of fact, as to whether county jail policies relating to suicide prevention, heroin detoxification, and cell checks, for which sheriff was responsible, played part in alleged violations of constitutional rights of detainees who committed suicide in their cells, precluded summary judgment that sheriff was not deliberately indifferent to situation of detainees, and thus liable in his official capacity, in §§ 1983 action alleging violation of detainees' substantive due process rights. Estate of Abdollahi v. County of Sacramento, E.D.Cal.2005, 405 F.Supp.2d 1194. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Parents of teenager who committed suicide while in custody at juvenile detention center operated by county stated claim against county under § 1983 for violating juvenile's Fourteenth Amendment right to medical protection against his own suicidal intentions; parents alleged that facility supervisors' practice of pre-recording inspection records and then avoiding visual checks on juveniles was so pervasive as to constitute custom or policy, and that such practice was result of inadequate training. Smith v. Blue, S.D.Tex.1999, 67 F.Supp.2d 686. Civil Rights 1395(7)

In the absence of any allegation that arrestee had attempted suicide previously or that he was threatening suicide on the night he was arrested, police officers were not deliberately indifferent in their treatment of arrestee even though they left him in a situation in which he was able to gain control of a gun and shoot himself. McDay on Behalf of McDay v. City of Atlanta, N.D.Ga.1990, 740 F.Supp. 852, affirmed 927 F.2d 614. Civil Rights 1395(6)

2789. Work assignments, medical care of prisoners

Prison officials did not show deliberate indifference to inmate's health by requiring him to do field work despite complaints of asthma, and thus did not violate Eighth Amendment, where officials told inmate to continue working only after consulting with prison hospital staff, which informed officials that inmate was capable of work in question despite his condition. Lewis v. Lynn, C.A.5 (La.) 2001, 236 F.3d 766. Convicts 7(1); Sentencing And Punishment 1535

Failure to act upon request for reinstatement in prison job, absent some allegation that prison official was told, and it was true, that without reassignment to clinic prisoner would suffer medical impairment or pain, did not suggest deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, and thus denial of medical care did not result in pain and suffering sufficient to state cause of action under this section. Watts v. Morgan, N.D.Ill.1983, 572 F.Supp. 1385. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Since it appeared from entire record that prison medical authorities had made a sincere and reasonable effort to handle prisoner's medical problems, his constitutional rights had not been violated when he was made to work on a road crew despite his medical complaints. Bennett v. Reed, E.D.N.C.1981, 534 F.Supp. 83, affirmed 676 F.2d 690 . Prisons 17(2)

Refusal of prison officials, after taking prisoner's temperature and determining that it was normal, to permit prisoner to be absent from work due to alleged headaches and dizziness and their subsequent actions in ordering him to work and punishing him for refusing did not constitute denial of medical attention so grievous as to work denial of constitutional rights. Turner v. Plageman, W.D.Va.1976, 418 F.Supp. 132. Prisons 17(2)

Alleged negligence of prison physician in failing to notify prison officials that prisoner should not be required to work on "garden unit" was not actionable under this section. Heard v. Boren, E.D.Ark.1974, 368 F.Supp. 1321. Civil Rights 1091

2790. X-rays, medical care of prisoners

Prison inmate's allegations that physician refused to take X-rays and that treatment rendered "failed to meet the 14th Amendment standard of due process" were insufficient to establish physician's deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, as required for civil rights action. Gordon v. Higgs, D.Nev.1989, 716 F.Supp. 1351 . Civil Rights 1395(7)

2791. Abortion, medical care of prisoners

Louisiana prison's maintenance of policy requiring judicial approval of elective medical procedures did not cause injury to female prisoner seeking non-therapeutic abortion, as required to impose liability under §§ 1983; prisoner retained attorney, who chose not to base his early release on prisoner's desire for abortion. Victoria W. v. Larpenter, C.A.5 (La.) 2004, 369 F.3d 475. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Director of correctional health services was not deliberately indifferent to privacy right of inmate who was unable to obtain abortion when gestation was determined for second time, was increased, and was set at 24 weeks; director scheduled appointment within allowable time period based upon his medical opinion. Bryant v. Maffucci, S.D.N.Y.1990, 729 F.Supp. 319, affirmed 923 F.2d 979, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 152, 502 U.S. 849, 116 L.Ed.2d 117. Prisons 17(2)

2792. AIDS, medical care of prisoners

A genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether prison defendants were deliberately indifferent to prisoner's HIV/AIDS condition and Hodgkin's disease, precluding summary judgment in favor of prison defendants on Eighth Amendment claim; there were strong indications that, at least during part of the period pertinent to the action, defendants failed to properly monitor the progression of prisoner's HIV/AIDS, and often failed to timely provide him with necessary medications. Jackson v. Fauver, D.N.J.2004, 334 F.Supp.2d 697, amended on reconsideration in part 2005 WL 1677513. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Family of inmate who died from AIDS had viable civil rights claim against prison medical personnel for alleged pattern of repeatedly refusing to provide medical treatment for prisoner's AIDS symptoms, which they allegedly misdiagnosed and refusal to treat inmate after he collapsed; however, alleged failure would not rise to level of violation of civil rights unless family proved deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. Maynard v. New Jersey, D.N.J.1989, 719 F.Supp. 292. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Former pretrial detainee who had contracted the Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) virus failed to prove that jail doctor was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs, so as to violate Due Process, despite the detainee's claim that the doctor delayed in obtaining his required medication, failed to administer it according to the precise schedule required, and disregarded his complaints of pain and other serious symptoms of his condition; medical records reflected that he received medical treatment on a regular basis throughout the time he was at the jail, and as soon as blood test results showed that he needed a blood transfusion, the doctor transferred him to a hospital, where he received the transfusion and other medical treatment. Sandifer v. Green, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 126 Fed.Appx. 908, 2005 WL 699309, Unreported. Constitutional Law 262; Prisons 17(2)

2793. Amputations, medical care of prisoners

Treatment of prisoner at prison hospital where prisoner's legs were amputated as a result of frostbite injuries suffered by prisoner during an escape did not constitute deliberate indifference. Bass v. Sullivan, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1977, 550 F.2d 229, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 195, 434 U.S. 864, 54 L.Ed.2d 138. Prisons 17(2)

2794. Asthma, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner's bare assertion that being placed in small shower stall during cell shakedowns aggravated his asthma was insufficient to support claim that being placed in stall was violation of his rights under Eighth Amendment. Aswegan v. Henry, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1995, 49 F.3d 461. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Corrections officials were not deliberately indifferent to non-smoking state prison inmate's asthma by failing to accommodate inmate's request for non-smoking housing until inmate had spent total of 17 weeks housed with smokers, precluding recovery in inmate's §§ 1983 Eighth Amendment action against officials; there was no evidence of need for treatment beyond inhaler that inmate already had, and even assuming serious medical need, there was no evidence of denial of access to medical care, or of specific asthma attacks occurring while inmate was housed with smokers. Bartlett v. Pearson, E.D.Va.2005, 406 F.Supp.2d 626. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2795. Burns, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner's allegation that he received severe burns on his hands and did not receive proper treatment and that this resulted from conspiracy to harm and intimidate him stated a civil rights claim. Bontkowski v. Jenkins, N.D.Ill.1987, 661 F.Supp. 576, affirmed 860 F.2d 1082. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2796. Cancer, medical care of prisoners

Proper standard of adequate medical treatment had not been accorded inmate whose past medical history and present condition indicated a possibility of cancer. Sawyer v. Sigler, D.C.Neb.1970, 320 F.Supp. 690, affirmed 445 F.2d 818.

That inmate became ill after consuming water, without any other evidence, could not alone establish that he had, or that the water caused, a serious illness, so as to support a §§ 1983 claim. Ford v. Mercer County Correctional Center, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2006, 171 Fed.Appx. 416, 2006 WL 714674, Unreported. Prisons 17(1)

2797. Concussions, medical care of prisoners

Confinee's unsupported allegations of conscious indifference to his medical needs were insufficient to establish civil rights claim arising from county's failure to treat him for mild concussion and broken jaw while he was in jail, in view of evidence that treatment was at most negligent. Jones v. Lewis, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1989, 874 F.2d 1125, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2798. Dental problems, medical care of prisoners

State prisoner failed to establish that prison warden, prison health service administrator, and prison dental assistance acted with deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs by not obtaining dental care for him for thirty or forty days, as required to support his §§ 1983 action alleging denial of dental care; unchallenged prison dental policy provided for outside resources for a dental emergency only when such emergency was identified by designated medical personnel, no such designated personnel declared that prisoner had a dental emergency, and thus prison officials were not aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm existed. Johnson v. Mullin, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 422 F.3d 1184. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Pro se inmate's allegations that unknown nurse assisted in his tooth extraction and that dentist failed to see that inmate received a partial plate he had prescribed were insufficient to support inmate's §§ 1983 action against dentist and nurse alleging Eighth Amendment violations based on complications related to a tooth extraction. Finnegan v. Maire, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2005, 405 F.3d 694, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Even if Court of Appeals were to reach issue of whether bankruptcy court had abused its discretion in declining to appoint Chapter 11 trustee, an issue that party moving for appointment of trustee failed to raise on appeal in asserting only that bankruptcy court had employed wrong evidentiary standard, Court would not find any abuse of discretion, where allegations of self-interest by debtor's principal were as yet unproven, and where movant would have opportunity to test and ultimately resolve these allegations in other pending proceedings. In re G-I Holdings, Inc., C.A.3 (N.J.) 2004, 385 F.3d 313. Bankruptcy 3624; Bankruptcy 3771

Claim of state prisoner that he was victim of malpractice by defendant dentist in connection with extraction of teeth and treatment of gums and that such conduct constituted cruel and unusual treatment and a denial of equal protection was frivolous in that it amounted to no more than a tort claim for malpractice, not cognizable under this section. Isenberg v. Prasse, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1970, 433 F.2d 449. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Evidence was insufficient to prove that pro se state prisoner received inadequate medical care in prison, for purpose of §§ 1983 claim against corrections officials; prisoner had lengthy medical history, during which he was examined by several doctors and transported to outside facilities as necessary for tests and medical procedures, and although he was denied a particular prescription to treat his hepatitis C, the treatment was denied because of a doctor's medical judgment that the medication would have been ineffective in light of prisoner's prior narcotics use. MacLeod v. Kern, D.Mass.2005, 379 F.Supp.2d 103. Civil Rights 1420

Special circumstances existed to justify state inmate's failure to exhaust administrative remedies, pursuant to Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), before bringing §§ 1983 action, to the extent that such remedies were available to inmate for his claim against prison dentist for deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs, when inmate did not learn that his pain resulted from foreign object and reactive lesion in area of his mouth from which tooth had been extracted until after he was transferred to different correctional facility. Borges v. Piatkowski, W.D.N.Y.2004, 337 F.Supp.2d 424. Civil Rights 1319

State prison inmate's allegations, in § 1983 action, that dentist employed by New York State Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) was negligent in filling inmate's cavities and that inmate disagreed or was dissatisfied with treatment provided by dentist, including allegation that dentist should have given inmate the option of using plastic tooth-colored fillings instead of metal amalgam, did not establish objective and subjective components of deliberate indifference to serious medical need, as would be required to establish cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment. Green v. Khrisnaswamy, W.D.N.Y.2004, 328 F.Supp.2d 417, affirmed 134 Fed.Appx. 465, 2005 WL 1389495. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County jail inmate's failure to allege blanket custom or policy of not medically treating inmates with hepatitis C did not preclude his § 1983 Eighth Amendment claim against private entities that contracted with county to provide inmates with medical services, in which he alleged that he had been denied adequate dental care by dentist's refusal to treat him due to his hepatitis C; even absent blanket policy, if inmate could demonstrate that contractor's employee was final policymaker with respect to treatment and decided not to treat pursuant to unconstitutional custom or policy, contractors could be liable. Wall v. Dion, D.Me.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 316. Civil Rights 1351(4)

State prisoner's allegations in his complaint, that oral surgeon started extraction of tooth without first taking an x-ray, that he suffered severe, unbearable, and great pain as a result of prison dentists' alleged refusal to provide him with pain medication, and that he was later diagnosed with temporomandibular disorder but dentists refused to follow prescribed course of treatment, stated claim against prison dentists and staff for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs. Rivera v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2000, 119 F.Supp.2d 327. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate's claim that he was threatened with disciplinary action, physical violence, extension of time in keeplock, and possible segregation if he continued to seek dental care, without any allegation of injury or damage, did not establish a violation of a constitutional right and could not state a § 1983 claim. Malsh v. Austin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 901 F.Supp. 757. Civil Rights 1091; Civil Rights 1092

Recommendation of prison physician that prisoner's four bad teeth be extracted which was made without first taking X-rays and refusal of prison to allow prisoner to visit periodontist for examination and treatment unless prisoner paid for visit himself did not constitute "deliberate indifference" to prisoner's rights as would allow recovery by prisoner in federal civil rights action based on violation of his rights under Eighth Amendment; action was one involving prisoner being dissatisfied with diagnosis of prison physician, and prisoner's claim at best rose to level of negligence. Hogan v. Russ, N.D.N.Y.1995, 890 F.Supp. 146. Civil Rights 1091; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Inmate stated prima facie case under § 1983 for denial of medical care resulting in infliction of unnecessary pain and suffering without legitimate penological justification, in violation of Eighth Amendment; inmate alleged that intake center nurse refused to refer inmate to qualified doctor or dentist respecting inmate's missing dental filling which caused severe pain and that prison officials allowed nurse to determine whether inmate should be seen by doctor or dentist without ensuring that qualified health care personnel were present. Canell v. Bradshaw, D.Or.1993, 840 F.Supp. 1382, affirmed 97 F.3d 1458. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2799. Diabetes, medical care of prisoners

State physicians were not deliberately indifferent to state prison inmate's diabetes, precluding recovery in inmate's § § 1983 Eighth Amendment action against physicians, where physicians treated condition by prescribing insulin, adjusting prescribed level of insulin, and supplying instruments for self-monitoring of blood sugar levels; rather, inmate's complaint that insulin levels were not adjusted more frequently and that blood work was done too infrequently amounted to allegation of negligent care, which could not rise to level of deliberate indifference. Boomer v. DePerio, W.D.N.Y.2005, 405 F.Supp.2d 259. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

In light of expert's opinion and findings that prison defendants failed to properly monitor and control the level of sugar in prisoner's blood, and that such failure resulted in irreversible damage to prisoner's heart and kidneys, prisoner raised genuine issues of material fact as to whether prison defendants were deliberately indifferent to his serious need for medical care for diabetes, precluding summary judgment in favor of prison defendants on Eighth Amendment claim; however, prisoner failed to establish Eighth Amendment claim with regard to the treatment of his cardiac problems since he failed to show that defendants ignored or refused to treat his cardiac problems or that he was exposed to treatment under unsanitary conditions. Jackson v. Fauver, D.N.J.2004, 334 F.Supp.2d 697, amended on reconsideration in part 2005 WL 1677513. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5; Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

If jail officials knew of inmate's diabetes, knew that by doing nothing it likely would worsen and, after time to reflect on situation, decided to do nothing more than wait until it actually worsened before acting, inference could be made that some sort of punitive intent motivated them, and thus that officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 for failing to provide useable insulin in timely manner. Flowers v. Bennett, N.D.Ala.2000, 135 F.Supp.2d 1150. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Inmate's claim that prison dietician failed to provide him with diabetic meals stated claim under § 1983, where he informed prison officials of his condition, complained about nutritionally inadequate meals provided, met with dietician, and still did not receive adequate diabetic meals. Taylor v. Anderson, N.D.Ill.1994, 868 F.Supp. 1024. Civil Rights 1091

Jail clinic nurse did not demonstrate deliberate indifference to insulin-dependent diabetic prisoner's medical needs, even if she misread or improperly administered random blood-sugar tests and did not take appropriate precautionary steps when she noted prisoner's nausea and headaches; nurse took action to alleviate prisoner's condition and prisoner should have brought claim for medical malpractice rather than civil rights violations. Aaron v. Finkbinder, E.D.Mich.1992, 793 F.Supp. 734, affirmed 4 F.3d 993. Civil Rights 1091; Prisons 17(2)

2800. Digestive problems, medical care of prisoners

Prison officials did not show deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs relating to his stomach problems, though inmate maintained he received inadequate medical treatment, where inmate received doctor's care for his stomach problems nearly every month he spent at prison, inmate was provided medication and bland diet according to doctor's orders and was given vegetarian meals when his stomach problems did not sufficiently respond, and there was no evidence that inmate's digestive troubles and dietary needs were ignored, or his prescribed treatment thwarted, by prison officials; inmate received ongoing medical attention and treatment and, at most, his claims of inadequate treatment sounded in tort. Stroud v. Roth, E.D.Pa.1990, 741 F.Supp. 559. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2801. Eyesight, medical care of prisoners

Lack of verifying medical evidence that delay in provision of sunglasses following inmate's eye surgery had any adverse affect on inmate's prognosis precluded inmate's § 1983 claim for deliberate indifference to his medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment; inmate's physician gave deposition testimony that "whether or not he had the sunglasses certainly caused no further damage or less damage to his eye." Crowley v. Hedgepeth, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1997, 109 F.3d 500. Civil Rights 1420

Prisoner's eye condition was not serious medical need, and, thus, delay in eye examination was not deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, where prison optometrist did not find his eyes to be particularly light sensitive, and report indicating that prisoner may have had light sensitivity and watery eyes was 14 years old. George v. Smith, W.D.Wis.2006, 2006 WL 3775929. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Optometrist was not deliberately indifferent to inmate's medical needs by not providing a full eye examination when seeing inmate for eye pain less than two years after last examination; the optometrist did not see anything in his examination of inmate that caused him to believe that a full eye examination was medically necessary at that time. Wood v. Idaho Dept. of Corrections, D.Idaho 2005, 391 F.Supp.2d 852. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prison officials' decision not to order tinted glasses requested by inmate, which he claimed he had to wear because of eye condition, even assuming that decision was wrong, did not constitute deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs particularly given evidence that inmate received extensive care, including being seen by ophthalmologist as well as numerous other specialists. Abdul-Matiyn v. New York State Dept. of Correctional Services, N.D.N.Y.1994, 871 F.Supp. 1542, affirmed 66 F.3d 309. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

Allegation that inmate had been deliberately deprived of his eyeglasses although he was legally blind stated cognizable claim under this section for deliberate indifference to medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment. Williams v. ICC Committee, N.D.Cal.1992, 812 F.Supp. 1029. Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

For purposes of civil rights claim, inmate failed to establish deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in connection with allegedly excessive waiting period to see doctor; delays of seven days on inmate's request for routine eye examination and approximately two weeks for treatment concerning hair loss problem were reasonable under the circumstances. Harris v. Murray, E.D.Va.1990, 761 F.Supp. 409. Civil Rights 1091

State prisoner's complaint against prison officials and optometrist on account of alleged injury to his vision due to failure to replace broken glasses alleged simply ordinary negligence which, although cognizable under state law, did not amount to denial of constitutional or federally protected right which could be redressed under this section. Di Febo v. Keve, D.C.Del.1975, 395 F.Supp. 1350. Civil Rights 1395(7)

In promptly answering inmate's request to see an eye doctor by referring request to prison health care administrator the following day, and promptly responding to inmate's request for medical treatment by responding the following day verifying that inmate was scheduled for surgery that same day, prison superintendent did not demonstrate conscious disregard of an excessive risk to inmate's health or safety, and thus, superintendent was not liable to inmate under §§ 1983 for violating Eighth Amendment by delaying surgical treatment for inmate's eye condition. Brown v. Thomas, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 172 Fed.Appx. 446, 2006 WL 825777, Unreported. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2802. Heart disease, medical care of prisoners

Pretrial detainee, who allegedly had heart attack approximately three months prior to detention, failed to establish, in § 1983 civil rights action against parish prison officials, that he had been denied reasonable medical care; evidence supported conclusion that prison officials had made every effort to accommodate detainee's special medication, exercise, and dietary requirements. Cupit v. Jones, C.A.5 (La.) 1987, 835 F.2d 82. Civil Rights 1420

Physician's failure to order follow-up diagnostic work to determine whether prison inmate was suffering from heart disease, while possibly amounting to departure from good medical practice, was not deliberate indifference amounting to cruel and unusual punishment or violation of due process, despite physician's knowledge of some of inmate's medical history, inmate's complaints of hyperventilation and chest pains, and indications contained in hospital reports and tests. Lynsky v. City of Boston, D.Mass.1990, 761 F.Supp. 858. Constitutional Law 272(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546; Prisons 17(2)

State prisoner failed to establish a claim under this section against correctional officials for inadequate medical attention for his alleged heart condition, where, as shown by his medical records, several physicians were involved in examining and treating him, each of whom concluded that he suffered from no heart disorder. Phillips v. Keve,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

D.C.Del.1976, 422 F.Supp. 1136. Civil Rights 1420

2803. Knee injuries, medical care of prisoners

Inmate, who asserted he was denied pain medication for knee injury, that nurse stated that infirmary personnel did not want to see inmate in infirmary for any medical reason unless it was emergency, and that doctor had cancelled appointment with specialist for knee, stated civil rights cause of action for improper medical care. Ellis v. Butler, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1989, 890 F.2d 1001. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison officials' alleged denial of proper rehabilitative therapy for inmate who suffered from knee problems did not amount to "deliberate indifference" to inmate's medical needs, as required to support inmate's Eighth Amendment claim for denial of medical treatment; prison officials delegated decision as to whether inmate's condition warranted transfer for medical reasons to medical staff, and there was absolutely nothing unconstitutional in delegation of such decision to medical staff. Boblett v. Angelone, W.D.Va.1997, 957 F.Supp. 808. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

2804. Paralysis, medical care of prisoners

Prison doctor's deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of paralyzed prisoner, as needed in § 1983 civil rights action, was established where doctor knew of prisoner's paraplegia, knew that prisoner was not permitted wheelchair in cellblock, and refused to admit prisoner to infirmary where wheelchair could be used; prisoner was not bathed or given hospital mattress for several days. Weeks v. Chaboudy, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 984 F.2d 185, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1091

2805. Psychological problems, medical care of prisoners

Alleged failure of former inmate's court-appointed psychologist to find inmate an outpatient sexual offender treatment program that would not require inmate to admit culpability for sexual assault of his daughter, even if psychologist had duty to find such program and failure to do so resulted in incarceration and assault by fellow inmate, did not constitute deprivation of federal right as required to support § 1983 action against psychologist in his individual capacity. Morstad v. Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, C.A.8 (N.D.) 1998, 147 F.3d 741. Civil Rights 1091

Sex offender inmates did not state Eighth Amendment claim for denial of necessary medical treatment by prison officials when they alleged that they suffered from sex addiction mental disorder, that they were driven by deviant, sexually compulsive drives, and that condition eroded their self-esteem to point of apathy, reinforcing fear and feelings of differentness, and asserted that weekly group sessions they received were inadequate; seriousness of medical need was not shown, given lack of averments of physician's diagnosis of condition mandating treatment or of conditions lay person would easily recognize as necessitating doctor's attention, and failure to provide specialized treatment did not show requisite unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain by prison officials. Riddle v. Mondragon, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1996, 83 F.3d 1197. Sentencing And Punishment 1547

State security hospital did not violate civil rights of inmate during his civil commitment as psychopathic personality by failing to provide specific sexual offender treatment program; as dangerous psychopath civilly committed for purposes of safekeeping, defendant had no such constitutional right. Bailey v. Gardebring, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1991, 940 F.2d 1150, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 1516, 503 U.S. 952, 117 L.Ed.2d 652. Civil Rights 1054

At time prison psychiatrist prescribed a medication to which inmate claimed to be allergic, it was not clearly established that such conduct constituted deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical needs and therefore prison psychiatrist was entitled to qualified immunity in inmate's suit alleging Eighth Amendment violation. Givens v. Jones, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1990, 900 F.2d 1229. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Forensic psychiatrist at state hospital was not liable under this section for death of county prisoner, who previously had allergic reaction to "some medicine," had been taking tranquilizer, was sent to hospital to obtain pretrial diagnosis of his mental condition and died shortly after being given injection of drug assertedly used for control of psychosis, in light of fact that prisoner did not have constitutional right to have psychiatrist receive recommendation from prisoner's father as to kind of drugs which should be used, that psychiatrist had not failed to give adequate attention to or withhold treatment from prisoner and that cause of death was not established. Daniels v. Gilbreath, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1982, 668 F.2d 477. Civil Rights 1091

Where prison inmate had removed and burned her paper dress and danced about the flames clapping her hands, reaction of prison officials which was treatment by isolation in clinic where she could be observed, and where she was free from further threats from fellow prisoners, and administration of sedatives was appropriate response to what had been observed and was not overreaction or serious inattention to her medical needs. Lee v. Downs, C.A.4 (Va.) 1981, 641 F.2d 1117. Prisons 17(2)

"Deliberate indifference" standard for determining whether medical treatment afforded prisoners is constitutionally adequate is applicable in evaluating constitutional adequacy of psychological or psychiatric care provided at a jail or prison; key factor in determining whether system for psychological or psychiatric care in a jail or prison is constitutionally adequate is whether inmates with serious mental or emotional illnesses or disturbances are provided reasonable access to medical personnel qualified to diagnose and treat such illnesses or disturbances. Inmates of Allegheny County Jail v. Pierce, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1979, 612 F.2d 754, on remand 487 F.Supp. 638. Prisons 17(2)

For a constitutional tort to arise and for a cause of action to be stated under this section with respect to psychological or psychiatric treatment afforded a prisoner, prisoner must allege deliberate indifference to his continued health and well-being. Bowring v. Godwin, C.A.4 (Va.) 1977, 551 F.2d 44. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prison officials did not display deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of mentally ill and suicidal inmate, in violation of Eighth Amendment, when he was examined, and prescribed various antipsychotic medications, and only alleged deficiency was failure to provide therapeutic art supplies when requested. Scarver v. Litscher, W.D.Wis.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 986, affirmed 434 F.3d 972. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State prisoner suffered from serious mental illness, as would support prisoner's § 1983 action against prison psychologist for deliberate indifference in violation of Eighth Amendment, where prisoner twice set fire to the toilet paper he had wrapped around his limbs, wrote a note indicating his lack of will to live and ate his own feces. Means v. Cullen, W.D.Wis.2003, 297 F.Supp.2d 1148. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1547

Allegation that Missouri prison officials withheld treatment of sex offenders under Missouri sex offenders program (MOSOP) until prescribed time prior to release and failed to provide competent psychiatrically trained personnel despite declaring all sexual offenders in need of such care did not state claim under § 1983; there was no indication that prison officials had been deliberately indifferent to prisoners' serious medical needs or that they even had serious medical needs. Patterson v. Webster, E.D.Mo.1991, 760 F.Supp. 150. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2806. Seizures, medical care of prisoners

Physician at prison did not act with deliberate indifference to inmate's medical condition in violation of § 1983 by not taking other actions to insure that inmate took seizure medication; physician took active measures to monitor inmate's condition, counseled inmate about importance of taking his medication, altered inmate's regimen to make it easier for him to follow, and believed inmate was capable of following regimen. Whitley v. Lewis, E.D.Va.1994, 844 F.Supp. 276, affirmed 48 F.3d 1218. Civil Rights 1091

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Allegation that prisoner received pills for headache, continued to complain of discomfort, was told that a doctor would see him before the end of the day, was never called to the hospital, passed out later that evening, regained consciousness in prison hospital and was informed that he had had a seizure and was ultimately transferred to civilian hospital and that he continued to have headaches and dizzy spells did not state a claim upon which relief could be granted under this section. Williams v. Manson, D.C.Conn.1974, 374 F.Supp. 1009. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2807. Surgery, medical care of prisoners

Inmate who brought § 1983 action against prison superintendent, chief medical officer of State Department of Corrections, and prison health care supervisor failed to establish Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs arising from delay in surgery scheduled by inmate's orthopedic physician; chief medical officer had final authority to decide whether surgery should be performed, there was no evidence that chief's decision to delay surgery so deviated from professional standards that it amounted to deliberate indifference, and uncontroverted evidence showed that chief did not rely on any alleged false statements of supervisor. Czajka v. Caspari, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 995 F.2d 870. Civil Rights 1420

Persistent delay in priority one surgery for inmate inflicts the sort of pain and suffering which would not serve any penological purpose, and violates the Eighth Amendment. Johnson v. Lockhart, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1991, 941 F.2d 705. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Allegations that inmate was still bleeding from surgery incisions when he was returned to state correctional facility, that he was kept in lockup and unhealthful living conditions and was denied a medically prescribed diet because prison physician refused to change inmate's medical status following surgery, that he was denied information about a heart condition, that he was refused an examination of his swollen leg following surgery, and that he had been given false information by physician was sufficient to state a claim for injunctive, declaratory and monetary relief against alleged unconstitutional medical treatment. Kelsey v. Ewing, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1981, 652 F.2d 4. Prisons 17(2)

Initial failure to properly diagnose prisoner's injury may be attributable to no more than error in judgment, which may or may not be actionable as negligence, but failure to promptly schedule surgery, once need for it was recognized and in face of prisoner's repeated complaint of severe pain, raised questions regarding prison hospital officials' concern for their patient. Duncan v. Duckworth, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1981, 644 F.2d 653. Prisons 17(2)

Prison physician's failure to surgically repair inmate's bilateral inguinal hernia did not amount to deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical condition, in violation of Eighth Amendment, even though inmate had recurrent blood in his urine and semen, where physician ordered that another urinalysis be performed, ordered urine culture if urinalysis was positive for blood, and ordered follow-up medical appointment. Lawrence v. Virginia Dept. of Corrections, E.D.Va.2004, 308 F.Supp.2d 709. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prison inmate's claims of medical malpractice against prison doctors were insufficient to state § 1983 claim where there was clearly split of opinion among the medical experts whether knee replacement surgery that inmate requested was necessary; medical care that inmate received did not constitute indifference to his medical problems where physicians recommended physical therapy before knee surgery, and inmate had refused to cooperate with the treatment program and failed to show that nonsurgical methods were not viable course of treatment. Calvert v. Hun, N.D.W.Va.1992, 798 F.Supp. 1226. Civil Rights 1091

Inmate, in failing to renew his grievance or otherwise seek to use an extensive inmate grievance resolution program in place at correctional facility, did not exhaust his administrative remedies, as required by the Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), thus barring his § 1983 suit alleging cruel and unusual punishment in connection with an eight-month delay of allegedly necessary surgery for an inguinal hernia; even if he initially thought that he had been promised prompt surgery after his informal grievance review, shortly thereafter he obviously knew that surgery had not been performed, or even scheduled, and he presented no explanation as to why he did not at least inquire as to why surgery that he allegedly thought he had been promised had not been forthcoming. Arroyo v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22211500, Unreported. Civil Rights 1311

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2808. Trench mouth, medical care of prisoners

Alleged negligence of warden of county prison in which inmate contracted trench mouth while awaiting trial was not cognizable under this section. Bush v. Robinson, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1971, 442 F.2d 393. Civil Rights 1098

2809. Tuberculosis, medical care of prisoners

Section 1983 plaintiffs asserting medical mistreatment claim under Eighth Amendment failed to adequately allege requisite "deliberate indifference," in connection with assertions that inmate received medical examination which failed to reveal any abnormality in size of inmate's liver, that employees of county department of corrections administered tuberculosis medication to inmate at several times normal dosage, and that inmate's condition deteriorated until he eventually died; even if department employees affirmatively made inmate ill by administering medication to him improperly, plaintiff still alleged only single course of medical negligence received by one person, not pattern or systemic deficiencies required to show "deliberate indifference" under Eighth Amendment. Freeman v. Fairman, N.D.Ill.1996, 916 F.Supp. 786. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2810. Ulcers, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner who brought civil rights action claiming that his constitutional rights were violated when prison authorities denied him medical treatment for a bleeding ulcer after repeated requests and after he began to vomit blood stated a cause of action. Westlake v. Lucas, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1976, 537 F.2d 857. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2811. Miscellaneous medical problems, medical care of prisoners

Prisoner only had unrecoverable "de minimis injury," for purposes of his civil rights claim that was subject to Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) which alleged that prisoner personnel were deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment when they put him in small strip cage and kept him there for 12 hours, since swelling, pain, and cramps in prisoner's leg were not serious enough to mention to medical staff on day of his release from strip cage or two days later and incident did not result in medical findings at point at which prisoner claimed to have mentioned them to staff two weeks later. Jarriett v. Wilson, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 414 F.3d 634. Civil Rights 1463

Jury was free to consider absence of concrete medical injury to prisoner as relevant factor in determining whether alleged deprivation of his HIV medication for several days on two occasions was sufficiently serious to satisfy the objective serious medical need standard for a deliberate indifference to serious medical needs claim under § 1983, absent any evidence that the alleged deprivation resulted in permanent or on-going harm to his health, or any evidence explaining why the absence of actual physical injury was not relevant in assessing severity of his medical need, and in view of credible medical testimony suggesting that the prisoner was not exposed to an unreasonable risk of future harm due to the periods of missed HIV medication. Smith v. Carpenter, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 316 F.3d 178. Civil Rights 1424; Sentencing And Punishment 1546

District court did not err in allowing the government to dismiss, on the morning of trial, a lesser count charging defendant with maintaining a premises for manufacturing drugs, notwithstanding defendant's claim that the government dismissed the lesser count to gain a strategic advantage, since alleged strategic decision did not rise to the level of bad faith. U.S. v. Rush, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2001, 240 F.3d 729. Criminal Law 303.25

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Whether prison doctor was deliberately indifferent to inmate's serious medical needs was for jury in inmates § 1983 action which alleged that doctor violated inmate's Eighth Amendment rights; doctor failed to disclose to inmate that there were broken pins in his hip, failed to discuss option of surgery with inmate despite inmate's frequent complaints of pain after pins broke, and failed to refer inmate to specialist for reevaluation for surgery despite requests from inmate and student attorneys acting on his behalf. Hathaway v. Coughlin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 37 F.3d 63, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1108, 513 U.S. 1154, 130 L.Ed.2d 1074, on subsequent appeal 99 F.3d 550. Civil Rights 1429

Inmate's allegations in pro se complaint were sufficient to state Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in failing to operate on his diseased toe, failing to address his complaints of pain, and transferring him to non-medical facility, notwithstanding that complaint was disjointed and failed to contain specific allegations against some defendants. Carter v. Newland, D.Mass.2006, 2006 WL 1913947. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Belief of prisoner that his penile pain could be alleviated by circumcision did not, under Eighth Amendment, require Department of Corrections (DOC) or any officers to make arrangements to have the procedure performed free of charge. Adsit v. Kaplan, W.D.Wis.2006, 410 F.Supp.2d 776. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

State inmate's allegation that prison officials failed to adequately treat her gender identity disorder (GID) in accordance with policy that prohibited any hormone or surgical treatment for inmates suffering from GID, regardless of their medical condition, was sufficient, when inmate's pro se complaint was liberally construed, to state claim under § 1983 against Commissioner of New Hampshire Department of Corrections in his individual capacity. Barrett v. Coplan, D.N.H.2003, 292 F.Supp.2d 281. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Allegations that prison physicians were aware that prisoner had hernia condition which required surgery, and yet allowed they prisoner to remain in pain for two years without even giving him a truss once need for surgery was identified stated § 1983 that physicians were deliberately indifferent to his medical needs. Barry v. Ratelle, S.D.Cal.1997, 985 F.Supp. 1235. Civil Rights 1395(7)

High level prison officials were not entitled to dismissal of prisoner's Eighth Amendment claim for failure to accommodate medical condition, where inferences drawn from complaint were that prison officer discarded inmate's doctor-prescribed orthopedic shoes and canes, that he did not obtain medical treatment from prison doctor, that standard issue shoes he was required to wear caused him constant pain, and that inmate wrote to high level officials about his difficulties. Saunders v. Horn, E.D.Pa.1997, 960 F.Supp. 893. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prisoner's tinnitus was not an urgent medical condition the maltreatment of which presented a constitutional claim, though condition might be painful, where prisoner did not demonstrate condition was degenerative or caused extreme pain; furthermore, circumstances that made condition more difficult to bear, such as noisy environment, insufficient ear plug supply, failure to provide prisoner with medicine of his choice, and failure to permit him to participate in sleep study, did not amount to cruel and unusual punishment even though changes in circumstances might ease his condition. Davidson v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1996, 914 F.Supp. 1011. Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Female prison inmate's claim, that medical treatment she received while incarcerated resulted in damage to her reproductive organs and rendered her unable to have children, did not establish deliberate indifference to her medical needs. Pohlman v. Stokes, S.D.Ohio 1987, 687 F.Supp. 1179. Prisons 17(2)

County jailers did not act with deliberate indifference, in violation of due process, to pretrial detainee's medical needs after application of cast to detainee's ankle, though jailers did not call primary care physician or orthopedic specialist when detainee reported increased pain; laypersons would not know that medical attention was required if a person experienced increased pain following application of cast to swollen fractured ankle, and jailers followed

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

specialist's specific instructions to give detainee regular doses of nonprescription pain medication and to keep his leg elevated. Johnson v. Myers, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 109 Fed.Appx. 792, 2004 WL 1873207, Unreported. Constitutional Law 262; Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Prisoner failed to show that doctor's alleged failure to recognize prisoner's need for treatment for deep vein thrombosis (DVT) amounted to deliberate indifference to a serious medical need in violation of his civil rights, where, when doctor last saw prisoner for his ankle injury, ankle was discolored but the swelling had decreased somewhat, and because prisoner's symptoms had not entirely resolved, doctor referred him to the medical director for approval of an orthopedic consult, and when prisoner's entire leg became severely swollen and blue three days later, it was a nurse, not the doctor, who observed but ignored the change in his condition. Hanic v. Schaeffer, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2003, 58 Fed.Appx. 665, 2003 WL 470574, Unreported. Civil Rights 1091

Prison medical authorities' were not deliberately indifferent to medical needs of prisoner, who brought § 1983 lawsuit under Eighth Amendment, even though prison was unable to provide elective surgery for prisoner's recurrent inguinal hernia; prisoner was examined on numerous occasions by medical doctors, he was prescribed a truss and medicine to alleviate his pain, he was restricted from lifting any significant weight, and repeated attempts were made to provide him with surgery at outside hospital. Iniguez v. Chief Medical Officer, San Quentin State Prison, N.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 31750217, Unreported. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

XXI. TRANSFER OF PRISONERS

<Subdivision Index>

Access to courts, effect of transfer 2853
Approval of classification board 2866
Bad faith 2845
Deliberate indifference 2843
Different wing of same institution, place of transfer 2857
Disciplinary reasons, grounds for transfer 2849
Discrimination 2846
Duration of transfer 2864
Effect of transfer 2852-2854
- Effect of transfer - Generally 2852
- Effect of transfer - Access to courts 2853
- Effect of transfer - Medical treatment 2854

Grounds for transfer 2848-2851
- Grounds for transfer - Generally 2848
- Grounds for transfer - Disciplinary reasons 2849
- Grounds for transfer - Retaliatory transfers 2850
- Grounds for transfer - Security reasons 2851

Hearing 2867

Interstate transfers, place of transfer 2861
Intrastate transfers, place of transfer 2860
Maximum security prisons, place of transfer 2856
Medical treatment, effect of transfer 2854
Negligence 2844
Place of transfer 2855-2862
- Place of transfer - Generally 2855
- Place of transfer - Different wing of same institution 2857

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Place of transfer - Interstate transfers 2861
Place of transfer - Intrastate transfers 2860
Place of transfer - Maximum security prisons 2856
Place of transfer - Same county jails 2858
Place of transfer - Solitary confinement and segregation of prisoners 2862
Place of transfer - State and local institutions 2859
Promises by prison officials 2847
Responses to inquiries 2865
Retaliatory transfers, grounds for transfer 2850
Same county jails, place of transfer 2858
Security reasons, grounds for transfer 2851
Solitary confinement and segregation of prisoners, place of transfer 2862
State and local institutions, place of transfer 2859

State-created right 2842
Transfer of prisoners generally 2841
Western Interstate Corrections Compact 2863

2841. Transfer of prisoners generally

Prisoners generally do not have constitutionally-protected liberty interest in being held at, or remaining at, given facility. Pratt v. Rowland, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1995, 65 F.3d 802. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Transfer of prisoner to another institution did not violate his due process rights since the transfer did not impose an atypical and significant hardship in relation to the ordinary incidents of prison life. Torres Garcia v. Puerto Rico, D.Puerto Rico 2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 373. Prisons 13.5(1)

Fact that federal prisoner's claims regarding refusal of Bureau of Prisons (BOP) to exercise its discretion to transfer him to Community Correction Center (CCC) could have been brought under Administrative Procedure Act (APA) or §§ 1983 did not preclude the possibility of relief through habeas corpus. Pimentel v. Gonzales, E.D.N.Y.2005, 367 F.Supp.2d 365. Habeas Corpus 277

Prisoner had no constitutionally protected right to be confined in any particular correctional facility, and thus his request to direct correctional officials not to transfer him did not state cognizable claim in civil rights action. Osuch v. Gregory, D.Conn.2004, 303 F.Supp.2d 189. Civil Rights 1095; Prisons 13.3

Prison inmates do not have constitutional right to choose a prison or to prevent prison officials from transferring them to particular prison. Knecht v. Collins, S.D.Ohio 1995, 903 F.Supp. 1193, affirmed in part, vacated in part and reversed in part 187 F.3d 636. Prisons 13.5(1)

Mere allegations of inconsistencies in transfer of prisoners within state prison system fell short of stating a constitutional claim of discrimination. Joyner v. McClellan, D.C.Md.1975, 396 F.Supp. 912. Prisons 13.5(1)

Prisoner has no federally protected rights as to the institution at which he is confined. Christian v. Anderson, E.D.Okla.1974, 381 F.Supp. 168. Prisons 13.3

Indigent federal prisoner was not entitled to appointment of counsel, in §§ 1983 action against prison officials alleging he was transferred to another prison in retaliation for exercising his rights, to review confidential prison reports submitted by prison officials to district court for in camera review in connection with prison officials' motion for summary judgment, so that counsel could use the confidential prison reports as a "fishing expedition" to find some evidence which might have allowed prisoner to resist summary judgment. Martinez v. True, C.A.10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

(Kan.) 2005, 128 Fed.Appx. 714, 2005 WL 896443, Unreported. Civil Rights 1445

2842. State-created right, transfer of prisoners

Surest source of a state-created liberty interest against prison transfer is an explicit grant of right in positive law not to be treated adversely absent certain conditions; such right may be created by statute or by prison rules and regulations. Garcia v. De Batista, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1981, 642 F.2d 11. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Neither Colorado statutes nor Department of Corrections regulations created any liberty interest in prisoner's transfer; accordingly, prisoner failed to state civil rights cause of action based on transfer. Klein v. Pyle, D.Colo.1991, 767 F.Supp. 215. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Criminal conviction entitled state to confine prisoner in any of its facilities; so long as conditions of confinement do not violate constitutional norms, prisoner has no constitutionally derived liberty interest in particular assignment, but if any state statutory or regulatory enactment sufficiently restrict officials' ability to transfer inmates, liberty interest may nonetheless exist. Parker v. Lane, N.D.Ill.1988, 688 F.Supp. 353. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13.3

Prisoner had no right to be moved to another facility of South Carolina Department of Corrections in absence of state-created right to serve his sentence at facility that may be more to his liking than facility at which he was confined. Maxton v. Johnson, D.C.S.C.1980, 488 F.Supp. 1030. Prisons 13.5(1)

2843. Deliberate indifference, transfer of prisoners

Transfer of inmate to corrections facility which housed members of gang to which inmate had once belonged despite known threat to inmate's safety was not "cruel and unusual punishment," for purposes of inmate's § 1983 action, where transfer was necessary because inmate's admitted liaison with female staff member had compromised security at prison from which he was transferred; prison officials were not "deliberately indifferent" to inmate's safety. King v. Fairman, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1993, 997 F.2d 259. Sentencing And Punishment 1537

Prisoner stated §§ 1983 claim against District of Columbia, on allegations that municipality acted with deliberate indifference to safety and well-being of prisoner, through policy or custom of not reporting separation orders to ensure that its prisoners would be accepted for transfer at other correctional institutions without problems or delay, that municipality knew that prisoner faced specific danger from particular inmate, and that particular inmate incited other inmates against prisoner to injure him. Ashford v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.2004, 306 F.Supp.2d 8. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Allegations that prison officials intentionally disregarded inmate's request for transfer for protection from other prisoners did not rise to level of constitutional violation. Schaal v. Rowe, S.D.Ill.1978, 460 F.Supp. 155. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2844. Negligence, transfer of prisoners

Allegations that prison personnel broke inmate's television and lost some of inmate's items upon inmate's transfer failed to support a § 1983 claim for due process violations, given that the alleged violation amounted, at most, to mere negligence, which is not equivalent to a constitutional tort as required in a § 1983 claim. Roberts v. Champion, N.D.Okla.2003, 255 F.Supp.2d 1272, affirmed 91 Fed.Appx. 108, 2004 WL 249617. Constitutional Law 272(2); Convicts 3

Alleged negligence on part of warden of state prison in failing to transfer prisoner to another institution or to change restrictions placed on prisoner in protective confinement was not a sufficient basis for obtaining an award

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

of damages in action under this section. Joyner v. McClellan, D.C.Md.1975, 396 F.Supp. 912. Civil Rights 1095

2845. Bad faith, transfer of prisoners

Transfer of inmate to another prison because of overcrowded conditions, as to which transfer there was no evidence of any motivation of malice or ill will, did not violate any constitutional rights of inmate. Mack v. Johnson, E.D.Pa.1977, 430 F.Supp. 1139, affirmed 582 F.2d 1275, affirmed 582 F.2d 1276. Prisons 13.5(1)

2846. Discrimination, transfer of prisoners

Indian-American/Mexican-American prisoner who suffered from bowel and urinary incontinence failed to establish that denial of his request for transfer to honor dorm at which he could have showered more frequently was motivated by racial discrimination, and thus denial did not violate his equal protection rights; mere fact that there were very few Mexican-American inmates in honor dorm was insufficient to establish racial discrimination. De La Paz v. Peters, N.D.Ill.1997, 959 F.Supp. 909. Constitutional Law 223; Prisons 13(6)

2847. Promises by prison officials, transfer of prisoners

Prisoner's claim that he had been promised a transfer to some other institution for undertaking to locate illegal weapons for correctional officials was frivolous and had no constitutional dimensions. Taylor v. Strickland, D.C.S.C.1976, 411 F.Supp. 1390. Prisons 13.5(1)

2848. Grounds for transfer, transfer of prisoners--Generally

It was proper for prison authorities to transfer inmate from one institution to another of the same security level in order to give prison staff a respite from the prisoner's continuous barrage of grievances where inmate's failure to adjust was detrimental to himself and posed potential threat to other inmates and staff. Ward v. Dyke, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 58 F.3d 271, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 524, 516 U.S. 991, 133 L.Ed.2d 431. Prisons 13.5(1)

Prisoner's transfer to out-of-state correctional system was not adverse, for purposes of prisoner's First Amendment retaliation claim under §§ 1983, where transfer out of state was made at prisoner's request and with his consent. Price v. Wall, D.R.I.2006, 2006 WL 3254530. Prisons 13.5(2)

When a state prisoner is transferred for reasons entirely extrinsic to his conduct, it is not for federal courts to meddle with internal operation of prisons simply because prisoner is understandably unhappy in his new situation. Rosenberg v. Preiser, S.D.N.Y.1975, 388 F.Supp. 639. Prisons 13.5(3)

2849. ---- Disciplinary reasons, grounds for transfer, transfer of prisoners

Prison did not put forward "some evidence" in support of its disciplinary action against prisoner, alleged to have struck another prisoner, as required to defeat claim that punishment imposed was in retaliation for prisoner's having brought civil action against prison alleging overcrowding; confidential informant's statement that prisoner had been person who had assaulted fellow prisoner lacked sufficient indicia of reliability, as informant communicated only what someone else had said he saw, prison officials failed to properly investigate confidential informant's source of knowledge, victim claiming that he had been struck by prisoner never testified under oath and his statements were procured by leading questions with promised reward of transfer to more desirable facility. Goff v. Burton, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1996, 91 F.3d 1188. Prisons 13(7.1)

In any penal system embracing several institutions, transfer from one to another is often effective disciplinary procedure as well as administrative necessity, and is not necessarily improper. Gomes v. Travisono, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1974, 510 F.2d 537. Prisons 13.5(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Evidence that inmate was transferred to another correctional facility because of belief that inmate had been chief organizer of food strike precluded § 1983 civil rights claim by inmate alleging that transfer occurred solely because of inmate's race, in violation of inmate's right to equal protection. Gaston v. Coughlin, W.D.N.Y.1994, 861 F.Supp. 199, affirmed in part, vacated in part 249 F.3d 156. Civil Rights 1420

2850. ---- Retaliatory transfers, grounds for transfer, transfer of prisoners

Prisoner's transfer to another prison did not constitute disciplinary retaliation supporting §§ 1983 liability, where he disputed neither computation of his classification score nor conclusion that his score made him ineligible to remain at prison from which he was transferred. Moots v. Lombardi, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 453 F.3d 1020. Civil Rights 1095

An issue of fact does not trigger the application of the retaliatory transfer standard, rather than the retaliatory discipline standard, on a claim by prison officials that they merely transferred the inmates, and did so to investigate whether they were soliciting signatures in violation of prison rules, rather than in retaliation for filing their civil rights lawsuit. Nei v. Dooley, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2004, 372 F.3d 1003. Prisons 13.5(1)

Trial court could find that prison officials' transfer of prisoner from correction facility to penitentiary, for allegedly striking fellow prisoner, was actually in retaliation for prisoner's having filed civil rights action against prison, alleging overcrowding; although prison officials had information tending to implicate prisoner in assault, they took no action until after civil complaint had been received, there was testimony from other prisoners that guard had told them that return of prisoner to penitentiary was retaliatory, and it was admitted that prisoner's detention in penitentiary for several weeks without further investigation was atypical. Goff v. Burton, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1996, 91 F.3d 1188. Prisons 13.5(3)

Inmate who brought § 1983 action alleging that prison officials had transferred him from one prison to another, and placed him in double cell, in retaliation for his exercise of his First Amendment rights in giving interview to television network, did not establish that transfer was effected for retaliatory reasons, and was not justified by neutral institutional objectives, as required to show likelihood of success on merits, and so he was not entitled to preliminary injunction; there was no evidence that officials who were involved in transfer decision were aware of interview, interview occurred after officials' meeting to transfer inmate, there was no evidence that officials at new prison who placed inmate in double cell were aware of interview, transfer was justified by neutral objective of allowing inmate to be closer to his wife and children, and placement in double cell was justified by legitimate reason that prison was operating at over 200% capacity. Pratt v. Rowland, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1995, 65 F.3d 802. Civil Rights 1457(5)

Though correspondence in dates between institution of suit and transfer of plaintiff prisoner between correctional institutions raised an inference of retaliation on part of defendant supervisory official, where case against inference was substantial in that a physician testified that person responsible for transfer was himself and that transfer was effected so as to enable plaintiff to receive treatment for drug addiction, defendant prison official could not be held liable in civil rights action on a claim of improper transfer. Layne v. Vinzant, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1981, 657 F.2d 468. Civil Rights 1095

Inasmuch as it had been alleged that the reason for transfer was prisoner's exercise of constitutional rights, prisoner's claim that he was transferred to another prison in retaliation for filing civil rights action stated cause of action. Garland v. Polley, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1979, 594 F.2d 1220. Civil Rights 1395(7)

While some transfers of prisoners conceivably might not serve as penalty for participation in protected conduct, test for whether transfer is sufficiently punitive would not be whether prison officials deemed it punitive, but rather it would be an inquiry into, among other things, relative conditions in institutions and harms of dislocation itself and how inmate perceived them. Buise v. Hudkins, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1978, 584 F.2d 223, certiorari denied 99 S.Ct. 1234, 440 U.S. 916, 59 L.Ed.2d 466. Prisons 13.5(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prisoner's transfer to out-of-state correctional system was not in retaliation for his legal activities, as would violate prisoner's First Amendment right to petition the government, where prisoner requested and consented to transfer. Price v. Wall, D.R.I.2006, 2006 WL 3254530. Prisons 13.5(2)

Transfer of prisoner whose leg had been amputated to maximum security housing unit where his privileges were significantly curtailed, in order to place him near a handicapped accessible shower during renovation of his current housing unit, was not in retaliation for prisoner's exercise of constitutional rights, as would violate §§ 1983, though prisoner was transferred immediately after he complained to sheriff about showers; transfer was made in good faith, and prisoner was returned to his previous housing unit upon his request. Partelow v. Massachusetts, D.Mass.2006, 442 F.Supp.2d 41. Civil Rights 1095

Inmate stated a §§ 1983 claim for retaliation in violation of the First Amendment where he alleged that corrections officials intentionally transferred him to the facility where he was confined, which did not have rehabilitation programs, in an effort to frustrate his rehabilitation, in retaliation for his court action challenging their failure to provide him with court ordered rehabilitation programs; the question was not whether the defendants had a right to transfer the inmate, but whether such action was accomplished for an unlawful purpose. Price v. Wall, D.R.I.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 52. Prisons 13.5(1)

Prison inmate stated claim that he was retaliated against for exercise of his constitutional rights, when he alleged that he was transferred to another corrections facility within hours after informing guard that he intended to file suit against facility due to failure of mailroom staff to deliver magazine to him. Reimann v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 1059. Prisons 13.5(1)

Existence of county custom or policy of engaging in retaliatory transfers of jail inmates, which could support civil rights claim against county, was not established absent evidence of similar activity against jail inmates other than civil rights plaintiff. Lipton v. County of Orange, NY, S.D.N.Y.2004, 315 F.Supp.2d 434. Civil Rights 1351(4)

Analytical framework applicable in determining prisoner's § 1983 claim alleging retaliatory transfer for exercise of First Amendment rights required prisoner to first demonstrate (1) that he engaged in protected First Amendment activity, (2) suffered an adverse action because of that activity, and (3) show a causal connection between the two; it prisoner came forward with such evidence, the burden would then shift to prison defendants to prove that they would have transferred prisoner anyway for legitimate reasons. Osterback v. Kemp, N.D.Fla.2003, 300 F.Supp.2d 1238, on reconsideration 300 F.Supp.2d 1263. Civil Rights 1404; Constitutional Law 82(13)

In view of prisoner's acknowledgment that his misconduct was sufficient to justify his housing re-assignment, retaliation for grievance filed against officer was not a substantial factor in sheriff's department's decision to transfer prisoner to a cell block. Miller v. Loughren, N.D.N.Y.2003, 258 F.Supp.2d 61. Prisons 13(4)

Inmate's allegation that prison officials conspired to transfer him to another facility in retaliation for filing class action lawsuit against governor and parole board did not support inmate's retaliation claim; evidence indicated that officials became aware of inmate's class action suit only after instituting disciplinary proceedings against him. Talbert v. Hinkle, E.D.Va.1997, 961 F.Supp. 904. Civil Rights 1420

Inmate's transfer to protective custody following allegations of rape by guard was not unconstitutional act of retaliation for her assertion of the claims. Carrigan v. State of Del., D.Del.1997, 957 F.Supp. 1376. Prisons

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

13(5)

Inmate has viable § 1983 claim if prison authorities transfer him in retaliation for exercising constitutional rights. Maguire v. Coughlin, N.D.N.Y.1995, 901 F.Supp. 101. Civil Rights 1095

Inmate failed to establish that transfer was retaliation for his initiation of state negligence claims against prison officials, since transfer process was initiated prior to filing of any legal action by inmate. Banks v. Mannoia, N.D.N.Y.1995, 890 F.Supp. 95. Civil Rights 1095

State inmate established likelihood of success necessary for preliminary injunction on his claim that his transfer and placement in double cell were in retaliation for exercise of his First Amendment rights; transfer was ordered on Christmas Eve, two days after inmate decided to accept television interview, regular transfer procedures were not followed, Christmas Eve meeting covered inmate's case only and involved no staff preparation or recommendation, origin of transfer order was obscured, inmate was summarily placed in double cell upon transfer despite his assertion that his medical condition required that he be housed in single cell and was given work assignment that conflicted with all visitation hours, and, on two prior occasions, courts had found actual or probable retaliation against inmate by state corrections officials. Pratt v. Rowland, N.D.Cal.1994, 856 F.Supp. 565, reversed 65 F.3d 802. Civil Rights 1457(5)

2851. ---- Security reasons, grounds for transfer, transfer of prisoners

State inmate's challenge to a transfer from one security level to another or from one prison to another is cognizable under §§ 1983. Boutwell v. Keating, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 399 F.3d 1203. Civil Rights 1095

Transfers between prison institutions are made for a variety of reasons and often involve no more than informed predictions as to what would best serve institutional security or safety and welfare of inmate, and were court of appeals to hold Due Process Clause, U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 5 and 14, § 1, applicable to out-of-state transfer of Connecticut prisoners, such court would place clause astride day-to-day functioning of state prisons and involve judiciary in issues and discretionary decisions that were not business of federal judges. Cofone v. Manson, C.A.2 (Conn.) 1979, 594 F.2d 934. Prisons 13.5(2)

Even if inmate's sharing of senator's letter with other inmates led to his segregation and transfer, prison officials showed that they had legitimate penological reasons for segregation and transfer, barring inmate's retaliation claim; sharing of letter caused unrest within prison, creating potentially serious security risk. Talbert v. Hinkle, E.D.Va.1997, 961 F.Supp. 904. Civil Rights 1092

Allegations of personal involvement accompanied with other allegations that named prison officials acted with deliberate indifference to prisoner's safety, and failed to move prisoner to area of safety as ordered by judge at prisoner's preliminary hearing, were sufficient to state cause of action against named officials for violation of this section. Barr v. Hardiman, N.D.Ill.1982, 583 F.Supp. 1. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2852. Effect of transfer, transfer of prisoners--Generally

Losses such as a job, friendships, and the like resulting from transfers within state prison system are not constitutionally protected interests. Twyman v. Crisp, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1978, 584 F.2d 352. Prisons 13.5(1)

2853. ---- Access to courts, effect of transfer, transfer of prisoners

If a prisoner is transferred for exercising his own right of access to the courts, or for assisting others in exercising their right of access to the courts, he has a claim under § 1983. Higgason v. Farley, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1996, 83 F.3d 807 . Civil Rights 1094

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Corrections officials were not liable under §§ 1983 for conspiring to deprive inmate of his right of access to the courts by deciding to transfer him from one correctional facility to another, absent showing that officials made decision in an attempt to thwart inmate's ability to litigate his lawsuits. Mark v. Gustafson, W.D.Wis.2006, 2006 WL 845851. Conspiracy 7.5(1)

Even if civil rights action was appropriate means for seeking relief on claim that action pertaining to transfer of prisoners to Texas Department of Corrections pending appeal from convictions was unconstitutional because prisoner, on transfer from county jail, would be forced to perform labor tasks of regular inmates and would be deprived of time to work on appeal and of full access to legal materials, such cause of action did not raise any cognizable federal constitutional questions and thus did not state cause of action under this section. Leahy v. Estelle, N.D.Tex.1974, 371 F.Supp. 951, affirmed 503 F.2d 1401. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Administrative transfer of prisoner from one penal institution to another did not make out a deprivation of his civil rights even if communication with his counsel was hampered by the transfer. Wells v. McGinnis, S.D.N.Y.1972, 344 F.Supp. 594. Civil Rights 1095

2854. ---- Medical treatment, effect of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Even if prison physician had no objection to transfer of state prisoner to another institution in order to obtain vocational training, where prisoner's illness due to epilepsy and frequency of his seizures, notwithstanding medication, was undisputed, decision of committee of laymen, in determining to deny request for transfer, that closer supervision and more readily available medical facilities at state prison were more appropriate for prisoner was well within administrative discretion of committee and was neither arbitrary nor capricious. Mueller v. Turcott, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1974, 501 F.2d 1016. Prisons 13.5(1)

There was no violation of this section in transferring Missouri prisoner, notwithstanding that transfer would result in his being deprived of participation in sexual offender program as prisoner had no expectation under the due process clause of U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 14 to remain in subject correction center. Burnside v. Frey, E.D.Mo.1983, 563 F.Supp. 1344. Civil Rights 1095

2855. Place of transfer, transfer of prisoners--Generally

There is no constitutional right not to be transferred from one level II institution to another when prison officials, in exercise of their discretion, determine that prisoner is an adjustment problem. Ward v. Dyke, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 58 F.3d 271, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 524, 516 U.S. 991, 133 L.Ed.2d 431. Prisons 13.5(1)

Transfer between two correctional institutions of similar character was within administrative discretion of state correctional officials and constituted neither deprivation of civil rights nor cruel and unusual punishment. Figueroa v. Kapelman, S.D.N.Y.1981, 526 F.Supp. 681. Sentencing And Punishment 1534; Prisons 13.5(1)

A prisoner has no constitutional right to be held in a particular facility; the courts will not undertake to supervise or review an administrative decision to transfer a prisoner from one cellhouse to another. Seibert v. McCracken, E.D.Okla.1974, 387 F.Supp. 275. Prisons 13.5(3)

Transfer of prisoner between two correctional institutions of similar character and security classification is within the administrative discretion of state officials. Schumate v. People of State of N. Y., S.D.N.Y.1974, 373 F.Supp. 1166. Prisons 13.5(1)

State prisoner had no liberty interest in being placed in state prison facility, rather than a county jail, and thus, since prisoner was not deprived of constitutionally protected property or liberty interest when he was moved to county jail before being placed in another state facility, prison officials did not violate his due process rights. Hunter v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Ortiz, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2005, 125 Fed.Appx. 241, 2005 WL 459606, Unreported. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13.3

2856. ---- Maximum security prisons, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Decision of Illinois Department of Correction (IDOC) officials to hold prisoner at maximum security prison until Supreme Court issued its mandate following reversal of conviction, did not violate any of prisoner's constitutional rights, as decision was management decision within scope of officials' discretion. Crane v. Logli, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1993, 992 F.2d 136, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 245, 510 U.S. 889, 126 L.Ed.2d 198. Prisons 13.3

No due process clause liberty interest of Florida prisoner was infringed on transfer from minimum-medium security to maximum security without notice and hearing since West's F.S.A. § 945.09 does not condition reclassification and transfer on a specific finding of misconduct and the only thing a transfer is conditioned on is that it is subject to grievance procedure, which itself is not structured to be a condition precedent to action by prison administrators. Franklin v. Fortner, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1976, 541 F.2d 494. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Procedural protections of the due process clause did not apply to transfer of state prisoners to maximum security by Virginia State Penitentiary institutional classification committee in the wake of episodes of prison violence in which prisoners were allegedly involved. Cooper v. Riddle, C.A.4 (Va.) 1976, 540 F.2d 731. Prisons 13(7.1)

Prisoner stated due process claim against Puerto Rico Department of Corrections' officials based on his transfer from a minimum security unit to a maximum security unit in violation of prison rule creating a liberty interest in a timely post-transfer hearing; however, since officials fell under the umbrella of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and prisoner failed to allege their personal involvement to such extent or sufficient to invoke liability, prisoner could seek only injunctive relief. Torres Garcia v. Puerto Rico, D. Puerto Rico 2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 373. Prisons 13.5(3)

Allegations that prison officials conspired to have inmate classified as a maximum security inmate, which resulted in his transfer to high-security facility, failed to support inmate's § 1983 conspiracy claim against prison officials for violations of due process, given that the record demonstrated that inmate's change of classification resulted from inmate's menacing statement to prison personnel, and that inmate had no constitutional right to be incarcerated in the facility of his choice. Roberts v. Champion, N.D.Okla.2003, 255 F.Supp.2d 1272, affirmed 91 Fed.Appx. 108, 2004 WL 249617. Conspiracy 7.5(2)

State inmate did not have federally protected liberty interest in being housed in particular facility, and thus inmate was not entitled to any due process protection before he was moved to high security facility and placed in administrative confinement, even if his placement violated state law. Moore v. Litscher, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2002, 52 Fed.Appx. 861, 2002 WL 31805012, Unreported, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 2649, 539 U.S. 963, 156 L.Ed.2d 665, rehearing denied 124 S.Ct. 43, 539 U.S. 985, 156 L.Ed.2d 701. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

2857. ---- Different wing of same institution, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Transfer of prisoners to a different wing of the same prison, wherein conditions of confinement were more stringent, was a serious deprivation requiring at least a minimal level of due process protection. Carlo v. Gunter, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1975, 520 F.2d 1293. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13.5(1)

No liberty interest of prisoner was infringed by his transfer to different unit within same prison facility, especially where prisoner did not even experience more burdensome conditions as a result of the transfer. Hudson v. Johnson, E.D.Mich.1985, 619 F.Supp. 1539. Prisons 13.5(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Where inmates of "third wing" of prison, housing inmates who could not safely be kept in general prison population, were better off in some respects than inmates of other wings but were not as well off as inmates in general population and suffered deprivations that general population inmates did not suffer, Constitution required that status of third wing inmates be evaluated and reevaluated periodically in order to determine whether or not particular inmates could safely be returned to general population or should be transferred to other institutions. Finney v. Hutto, E.D.Ark.1976, 410 F.Supp. 251, affirmed 548 F.2d 740, certiorari granted 98 S.Ct. 295, 434 U.S. 901, 54 L.Ed.2d 187, affirmed 98 S.Ct. 2565, 437 U.S. 678, 57 L.Ed.2d 522, rehearing denied 99 S.Ct. 1035, 439 U.S. 1122, 59 L.Ed.2d 83. Prisons 12

2858. ---- Same county jails, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Constitution did not secure to prisoner the right to be confined in any particular jail, and decision to transfer prisoner from one county jail to another county jail was not subject to review in subsequent action under this section even though conditions surrounding confinement at second facility may have been quite different from those existing at former facility. Lyons v. Papantoniou, E.D.Tenn.1982, 558 F.Supp. 4, affirmed 705 F.2d 455. Civil Rights 1095; Prisons 13.5(1)

Process of transferring prisoner back and forth between county jails did not deny prisoner his right of freedom of association, speech and expression under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1, despite allegation that people with whom prisoner wished to visit were discouraged and caused additional expense in traveling to either of the two detention facilities, where there was no allegation that prisoner was held incommunicado nor was there any allegation of conspiratorial scheme to deprive prisoner of human contact or communication. Mingo v. Patterson, D.C.Colo.1978, 455 F.Supp. 1358. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.3); Constitutional Law 91

2859. ---- State and local institutions, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Plaintiff, who successfully sought reversals of two separate convictions in state courts, had no right under the Constitution or laws of the United States to be held at any particular place, and the fact that he was held in the Texas Department of Corrections pending retrial, rather than in the Dallas county jail, did not in itself state any ground on which relief could be granted on his civil rights complaint. Lowery v. Estelle, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 533 F.2d 265. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Allegations that inmate was confined in state correctional facility designed for housing convicted prisoners for at least ten months after his conviction was reversed, instead of being transferred back to city correctional facility where pretrial detainees were kept, stated § 1983 claim for violation of due process. Robbins v. Doe, S.D.N.Y.1998, 994 F.Supp. 214. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Even if state prisoner had liberty interest in being confined in county facility after his conviction was overturned and he was awaiting a second trial, prison superintendent could not be held liable, for period of time during which superintendent was unaware that conviction had been overturned, for violating prisoner's civil rights by failing to transfer him; superintendent at most acted with negligence and did not have requisite state of mind to violate prisoner's Fourteenth Amendment liberty interest. Getch v. Rosenbach, D.N.J.1988, 700 F.Supp. 1365. Civil Rights 1095

Delay in transferring prisoner from city jail to Virginia correctional system after his conviction did not violate this section where Va.Code 1950, § 19.2-310 stated that transfer of prisoners was within discretion of director of the Department of Corrections, taking into consideration space available in the units, transportation required, and categories within the priority system, in that Virginia did not provide inmates awaiting transfer from jail to state system with an interest that was protected by the Constitution. Miller v. Landon, W.D.Va.1982, 545 F.Supp. 81. Civil Rights 1095

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2860. ---- Intrastate transfers, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Prisoner's right to due process may be infringed if he is arbitrarily subjected to a serious deprivation, and due process deprivation may result from interstate or intrastate transfer of prisoner, but magnitude of such deprivation in the case of intrastate transfer is generally insufficient to invoke federal due process protection. Beatham v. Manson, D.C.Conn.1973, 369 F.Supp. 783. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Transfer of state prisoner from one state prison to another does not violate any constitutional right of prisoner and does not entitle prisoner to relief under this section. U. S. ex rel. Thomas v. Bookbinder, E.D.Pa.1971, 330 F.Supp. 1125. Civil Rights 1095; Prisons 13.3

Transfer of state prisoners from one state institution to another is peculiarly within scope of the administration of the state penal system. U. S. ex rel. Verde v. Case, E.D.Pa.1971, 326 F.Supp. 701. Prisons 13.5(1)

2861. ---- Interstate transfers, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

Transfer of prisoners from Alaska state prison to prisons in other states, though without the consent of the transferees, presented no issue related to federally protected constitutional rights of prisoners, cognizable by federal courts. Fajeriak v. McGinnis, C.A.9 (Alaska) 1974, 493 F.2d 468. Prisons 13.5(2)

Prisoner maintained no right or justifiable interest in remaining in Connecticut correctional facility, and therefore prisoner's challenge under federal civil rights statute to authenticity of state contract regarding transfer of prisoners to out-of-state prison failed to state cognizable constitutional claim, where no Connecticut statute, rule or regulation substantively limited discretion of Commissioner of Correction to transfer prisoners. Tyson v. Tilghman, D.Conn.1991, 764 F.Supp. 251. Civil Rights 1095

State prisoner had no due process right to be housed in particular facility, so he could not raise civil rights claim based on state's practice of transferring prisoners to out-of-state private prisons, especially where prisoner had not been transferred to an out-of-state or private prison. Madyun v. Litscher, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2002, 57 Fed.Appx. 259, 2002 WL 31898230, Unreported, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 2225, 538 U.S. 1062, 155 L.Ed.2d 1114. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13.3

2862. ---- Solitary confinement and segregation of prisoners, place of transfer, transfer of prisoners

State prisoner could not use § 1983 to contest his placement in disciplinary segregation; prison disciplinary board decision would not lead to § 1983 award of damages as it was still open to contest under federal habeas statute on theory that it reduced prisoner's good-time credit-earning class, prisoner had been barred from filing any § 1983 litigation based on his failure to pay sanctions imposed for his history of vexatious civil litigation, and prisoner had neither liberty nor property interest in remaining in prison's general population. Montgomery v. Anderson, C.A.7 (Ind.) 2001, 262 F.3d 641, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1092

Inmate, by way of rules resulting from consent decree specifying procedure to be used by Rhode Island correctional institutions with regard to inmate disciplinary actions, had state created liberty interest under due process clause in remaining in general prison population and, thus, inmate's complaint that he was sentenced to punitive segregation for providing false information in connection with complaint he filed stated claim under § 1983. Nicholson v. Moran, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1992, 961 F.2d 996, on remand 835 F.Supp. 692. Civil Rights 1395(7); Constitutional Law 272(2)

Decision of sheriff to transfer prisoner in county jail to segregated confinement as a minor disciplinary matter was one that was better left to discretion of prison officials and was not a basis for obtaining relief under this section governing deprivation of civil rights in absence of evidence of harshness or arbitrariness. Knott v. Kerkhoff,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

W.D.Va.1976, 410 F.Supp. 1236. Civil Rights 1092

Where procedures resulting in order transferring a prisoner from minimal security of a prison farm to segregation failed to meet with due process, disciplinary decision of the board would be invalidated and prison record would be expunged of findings and conclusions by that of board. King v. Higgins, D.C.Mass.1974, 370 F.Supp. 1023, affirmed 495 F.2d 815. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13.5(3)

2863. Western Interstate Corrections Compact, transfer of prisoners

Transfer of state prisoner from Hawaii state prison to California's Folsom state prison under western interstate corrections compact, though against prisoner's will, presented no issue related to federally protected constitutional rights of prisoner cognizable by federal district court. Hillen v. Director of Dept. of Social Service and Housing, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 1972, 455 F.2d 510, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 331, 409 U.S. 989, 34 L.Ed.2d 256. Prisons 13.5(2)

Nevada prisoner's § 1983 claims concerning provisions of Western Interstate Corrections Compact dealing with notice of length of his transfer to Arizona prison and provisions for his retaking by Nevada Department of Prisons were frivolous, since those matters related to arrangements between the two contracting states and did not confer any rights on prisoner. Cooper v. Sumner, D.Nev.1987, 672 F.Supp. 1361. Civil Rights 1095

Interstate compact between western states, regarding corrections questions, had not become federal law for purposes of supporting § 1983 action, by virtue of Congress having given consent to states to enter into agreements for cooperative efforts and assistance, and having recognized existence of compact in terms of later amending legislation. Griffin v. Riveland, E.D.Wash.1993, 148 F.R.D. 266. Civil Rights 1090

2864. Duration of transfer, transfer of prisoners

In civil rights action brought against county sheriff by prisoner who had formerly been incarcerated in county jail, prisoner failed to establish that he was deprived of any constitutional rights, when he was temporarily transferred to old county work farm which had been converted into detention facility, in view of fact that any loss of mail or visitation privileges allegedly suffered by prisoner while at such farm was not significant enough to raise issue of legal proportion given very temporary nature of prisoner's confinement at the farm. Cook v. Brockway, N.D.Tex.1977, 424 F.Supp. 1046, affirmed 559 F.2d 1214. Civil Rights 1095

2865. Responses to inquiries, transfer of prisoners

Inmate's constitutional rights would not have been violated by mere failure of assistant warden to respond to inmate's inquiries regarding inmate's transfer to another prison or by inmate being twice ordered by guard to return to area where assault occurred as condition precedent to the transfer. West v. Rowe, N.D.Ill.1978, 448 F.Supp. 58. Prisons 13.5(1)

2866. Approval of classification board, transfer of prisoners

State prisoner's claims that he was unjustly transferred from one state prison to another, that his transfer was accomplished without approval of central classification board, that his personal property was sent to his home and he had to purchase similar items from prison commissary and that he was defamed by correctional officer and threatened by correctional officer failed to state any claim cognizable in federal court. Ward v. Johnson, E.D.Va.1977, 437 F.Supp. 1053. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2867. Hearing, transfer of prisoners

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prison official's violation of prison rule requiring inmate be afforded posttransfer hearing within seven working days after her transfer violated inmate's due process rights. Maldonado Santiago v. Velazquez Garcia, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1987, 821 F.2d 822. Constitutional Law 272(2)

A prisoner does not have a right to a hearing before being transferred and he can be transferred for no reason at all, but he may nevertheless establish a claim under this section if decision to transfer him was made by reason of his exercise of constitutionally protected freedoms under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1. McDonald v. Hall, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1979, 610 F.2d 16. Civil Rights 1095; Prisons 13.5(3)

Transfers of prisoners, suspected of illicit drug traffic, to maximum security prison were disciplinary in nature and resulted in substantial deprivations thus requiring hearing under minimum standards in accord with those of Wolff. Stone v. Egeler, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1974, 506 F.2d 287. Prisons 13.5(3)

Inmate had no liberty interest in remaining at state prison under New Hampshire law, and thus, inmate had no due process right to hearing on transfer to out-of-state prison or to independent determination of confidential informant's reliability. Guglielmo v. Cunningham, D.N.H.1993, 811 F.Supp. 31. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13.5(2)

Prisoner, who was transferred from work release center to penitentiary pursuant to T.C.A. § 41-1810 which did not condition authority for such a transfer on occurrence of some misconduct or other event, had no constitutional right to a hearing and thus was not entitled to declaratory judgment and monetary damages under this section prohibiting the deprivation of constitutional rights. Delp v. Harris, E.D.Tenn.1980, 503 F.Supp. 101, affirmed 698 F.2d 1218. Prisons 13.5(3)

XXII. DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS IN PRISON

<Subdivision Index>

Amendment of procedure 2895
Appeal 2913
Assistance of counsel 2902
Assistance to inmates 2903
Bias of decisionmaker 2901
Calling or production of witnesses 2907
Committees authorized to discipline 2899
Composition of disciplinary committee 2900
Confrontation or examination of witnesses 2908
Damage 2892

Detriment 2892
Disciplinary proceedings in prison generally 2891
False disciplinary charges 2893
Harm or prejudice 2892
Hearing 2897
Informants 2909
Injury 2892
Inspection or production of documents 2906
Interpreters 2904
Necessity of hearing 2897
Notice 2896
Overturned judgment requirement 2894

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Participation by inmate 2905
Prejudice 2892
Prejudice of decisionmaker 2901
Record of proceeding 2911
Reports of misbehavior 2910
Retaliation 2914
Statement of reasons 2912
Time of hearing 2898

2891. Disciplinary proceedings in prison generally

Prison disciplinary proceedings are not part of a criminal prosecution, and the full panoply of rights due a defendant in such a prosecution does not apply; rather, there must be a mutual accommodation between institutional needs and objectives and the provisions of the Constitution that are of general application. Wolff v. McDonnell, U.S.Neb.1974, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 418 U.S. 539, 41 L.Ed.2d 935, 71 O.O.2d 336. Prisons 13(6)

When a prisoner's challenge to a disciplinary proceeding involves a sanction that affects only his conditions of confinement, and not his term of confinement, the prisoner may maintain an action under §§ 1983 without showing, as required by the favorable termination rule, that the sanction, or the procedures that led to it, had been previously invalidated. Peralta v. Vasquez, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2006, 467 F.3d 98. Civil Rights 1092

A prisoner alleging retaliatory punishment in a § 1983 action against prison officials bears the burden of showing that the conduct at issue was constitutionally protected and that the protected conduct was a substantial or motivating factor in the prison officials' decision to discipline the prisoner; the burden then shifts to the officials to show that the prisoner would have received the same punishment even absent the retaliatory motivation. Gayle v. Gonyea, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2002, 313 F.3d 677. Civil Rights 1404

The "favorable termination rule," under which a § 1983 plaintiff cannot seek damages for harm caused by actions the unlawfulness of which would necessarily render the fact or length of his confinement invalid, unless he can prove that the conviction, sentence, or prison disciplinary sanction that resulted from those actions has been reversed, invalidated, or called into question by a grant of federal habeas corpus relief, does not apply to prison disciplinary sanctions that affect only the conditions, and not the fact or duration, of a prisoner's confinement. Torres v. Fauver, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2002, 292 F.3d 141. Civil Rights 1092

Determination of whether prisoner's challenge to procedures used in disciplinary proceeding is properly brought under § 1983 must be made based upon whether nature of challenge to procedures is such as necessarily to imply invalidity of judgment; if challenge would necessarily imply invalidity of judgment or continuing confinement, then challenge must be brought as petition for writ of habeas corpus, not under § 1983. Butterfield v. Bail, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1997, 120 F.3d 1023. Civil Rights 1311; Habeas Corpus 513

In action by federal prison inmates complaining of procedures before institution's disciplinary committee, reviewing court would assume that disciplinary committee operates under established practices reasonably designed to promote discipline of the institution and that there was some uniformity in practices throughout the federal prison system. Rivera v. Toft, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1973, 477 F.2d 534.

State prison officials were not required to promulgate and adhere to rules and regulations regarding either trial-type procedures in prison disciplinary hearings or procedures to be used in determining whether inmate should be confined to psychiatric observation cell, but "minimally fair and rational" inquiry would require observation of such basic safeguards against arbitrariness as adequate notice, opportunity for prisoner to reply to charges lodged against him, and reasonable investigation into relevant facts at least in cases of substantial discipline. Wright v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

McMann, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 460 F.2d 126, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 115, 409 U.S. 885, 34 L.Ed.2d 141. Prisons 13(7.1)

Procedure whereby penitentiary inmate, prior to imposition of confinement in segregation, is taken before disciplinary captain for hearing and determination of guilt or innocence, and if found guilty, to have captain designate punishment satisfies concept of procedural due process. Adams v. Pate, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1971, 445 F.2d 105. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prison disciplinary hearings may constitute a denial of due process in the context of civil rights actions under §§ 1983 when they are instituted for the sole purpose of retaliating against an inmate for his exercise of a constitutional right. Nicholson v. Carroll, D.Del.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 429. Constitutional Law 272(2)

When prisoner faces disciplinary charges, prison officials must provide prisoner (1) a written statement at least 24 hours before the disciplinary hearing which includes the charges, a description of the evidence against prisoner, and an explanation for the disciplinary action taken; (2) an opportunity to present documentary evidence and call witnesses, unless calling witnesses would interfere with institutional security; and (3) legal assistance when the charges are complex or prisoner is illiterate. Wolff v. Hood, D.Or.2002, 242 F.Supp.2d 811. Prisons 13(8); Prisons 13(9)

Prisoner's later success in administrative appeal following disciplinary hearing conviction does not bar § 1983 claim. Porter v. Novak, N.D.N.Y.1995, 898 F.Supp. 79. Civil Rights 1311

Prison's failure to follow its own rules in disciplinary proceedings violates inmate's civil rights. Duckett v. Ward, S.D.N.Y.1978, 458 F.Supp. 624. Civil Rights 1092

Although no consensus may have been reached as to what procedural safeguards must precede the imposition of prison discipline, there is no serious doubt that due process applies, and that suits alleging its denial are valid sources of judicial inquiry under this section. Crafton v. Luttrell, M.D.Tenn.1973, 378 F.Supp. 521. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Even though inmate had right under New York regulation to be present at prison disciplinary hearing, inmate's ejection during his disciplinary hearing did not constitute due process violation, as required to support § 1983 claim against state prison employees, arising from his ejection from hearing; even though due process requirement provided inmate limited right to call witnesses and present documentary evidence in his defense, it did not provide right to be physically present at testimony. Bogle v. Murphy, W.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22384792, Unreported. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(7.1)

2892. Harm or prejudice, disciplinary proceedings in prison

State prison inmate's 90-day disciplinary confinement in special housing unit (SHU) did not impose an atypical and significant hardship on the inmate in relation to the ordinary incidents of prison life, and thus, inmate did not have a protected due process liberty interest, as to the procedures used at the prison disciplinary hearing at which the disciplinary confinement was ordered. Durran v. Selsky, W.D.N.Y.2003, 251 F.Supp.2d 1208. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

State inmate was not denied his constitutional rights with respect to his disciplinary hearing; although hearing officer may have mishandled tape, transcript showed that inmate was able to make statement and offer evidence in his defense, hearing officer repeated testimony that might have been lost, inmate agreed that hearing officer accurately summarized said testimony, inmate was given advance written notice of charges and opportunity to prepare for hearing, and he was also provided with substantial assistance. Abdul-Matiyn v. New York State Dept.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

of Correctional Services, N.D.N.Y.1994, 871 F.Supp. 1542, affirmed 66 F.3d 309. Prisons 13(8)

Deprivation of inmate's due process rights during pendency of prison disciplinary hearings could not be basis for § 1983 civil rights claim, even though determination of guilt was ultimately overturned, given that guilty verdict was based on some evidence and inmate was credited for time served on special housing unit. Gaston v. Coughlin, W.D.N.Y.1994, 861 F.Supp. 199, affirmed in part, vacated in part 249 F.3d 156. Civil Rights 1092

Despite alleged violations of prison regulations, prisoner could not recover in civil rights action for delay from discovery of offense to issuance of disciplinary "ticket," for failure to read Miranda warnings to prisoner, or for absence of 24-hour notice of hearing, where prisoner claimed no harm or prejudice from 72-hour delay, no statement was used against him, and 20-day continuance rendered absence of 24-hour notice harmless. Harris v. MacDonald, N.D.Ill.1982, 532 F.Supp. 36. Civil Rights 1092

2893. False disciplinary charges, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Prisoner's verified § 1983 complaint, stating that several prison officials were involved in charging him with false misbehavior report and punishing him with keeplock confinement in retaliation for his exercise of his constitutional right to file grievance, met requirement of summary judgment rule that affidavits be made on basis of personal knowledge, set forth facts that would be admissible in evidence, and demonstrate affiant's competency to testify to matters in affidavit. Gayle v. Gonyea, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2002, 313 F.3d 677. Federal Civil Procedure 2538

State prisoner failed to state cognizable claim under § 1983 when he alleged that defendants violated his due process rights by considering false information in his prison file to find him ineligible for parole, notwithstanding that prisoner sought money damages rather than parole as remedy; claim necessarily implicated validity of his continuing confinement, and thus did not accrue unless and until conviction or sentence was reversed, expunged, invalidated or impugned by grant of writ of habeas corpus. Butterfield v. Bail, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1997, 120 F.3d 1023. Civil Rights 1097

There was no independent injury requirement for inmate to bring § 1983 action alleging that correctional officer violated prisoner's First Amendment right of petition by bringing false disciplinary charge against prisoner in retaliation for prisoner's use of prison grievance procedures; injury to constitutional right to seek redress of grievances inhered in retaliatory conduct itself. Dixon v. Brown, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1994, 38 F.3d 379, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1092

Inmate stated claim for violation of his procedural due process rights by alleging that prison officials repeatedly and systematically filed and approved false and unjustified disciplinary charges, which resulted in segregation and loss of good time. Black v. Lane, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1994, 22 F.3d 1395, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(6)

Filing of disciplinary charge against inmate, although otherwise not actionable under § 1983, is actionable under § 1983 if done in retaliation for his having filed a grievance pursuant to established procedures; prison officials cannot properly bring a disciplinary action against an inmate for filing a grievance that is determined by those officials to be without merit any more than they can properly bring a disciplinary action against an inmate for filing a lawsuit that is judicially determined to be without merit. Sprouse v. Babcock, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1989, 870 F.2d 450. Civil Rights 1092

Allegation that state prison officials intentionally filed false disciplinary charges against inmate in retaliation for his cooperation with state administrative investigation of alleged incidents of inmate abuse stated claim under civil rights statute; although allegations did not directly implicate inmate's right of access to the courts or similar judicial forums, they implicated his constitutional right to petition government for redress of grievances. Franco v. Kelly, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 854 F.2d 584. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Correctional officers were not liable to inmate under §§ 1983 for conspiring to bring false disciplinary charges against him and to fabricate evidence to deny him a meaningful ability to defend himself against the charges, where inmate was able to present his version of events at the disciplinary hearing. Orwat v. Maloney, D.Mass.2005, 360 F.Supp.2d 146. Conspiracy 7.5(2)

State prison officers were liable, under § 1983, for First Amendment retaliation against prisoner who had met with prison officials to discuss prison's violation of New York law limiting number of hours that inmates were required to work; although prisoner was allegedly disciplined for instigating a "work stoppage," there was no evidence that any work stoppage occurred, and prisoner was restricted from working in prison kitchen and transferred to another prison approximately one month after making his complaint. Gaston v. Coughlin, N.D.N.Y.1999, 81 F.Supp.2d 381, reconsideration denied 102 F.Supp.2d 81. Civil Rights 1092

Prisoner has no general constitutional right to be free from being falsely accused in misbehavior report, unless report is filed in response to undertaking constitutionally protected activity. Hameed v. Pundt, S.D.N.Y.1997, 964 F.Supp. 836. Constitutional Law 82(13)

If false disciplinary ticket is issued against inmate in retaliation for inmate's exercise of rights protected under First Amendment, claim under § 1983 may exist. Husbands v. McClellan, W.D.N.Y.1997, 957 F.Supp. 403, motion to amend denied 990 F.Supp. 214. Civil Rights 1092

Allegations by former jail inmate that correctional officer had made up charges which resulted in inmate being placed in disciplinary segregation were sufficient to state federal civil rights claim based on violation of inmate's liberty interest in avoiding term in segregation. Marshall v. Fairman, N.D.Ill.1997, 951 F.Supp. 128. Civil Rights 1404

Direct threats and harassment by corrections officials, cited by inmate in support of § 1983 civil rights action against those officials alleging retaliation against him for his activities as a representative on inmate grievance resolution committee, suggested a possible correlation between defendants' actions and inmate's activities as a representative, precluding summary judgment against inmate on his retaliation claim. Alnutt v. Cleary, W.D.N.Y.1996, 913 F.Supp. 160. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Allegedly false charges against inmate did not give rise to per se constitutional violation actionable under § 1983, where inmate was provided a hearing and was given opportunity to rebut charges against him. Hodges v. Jones, N.D.N.Y.1995, 873 F.Supp. 737. Civil Rights 1092

Though filing of false charges against prisoner is normally not actionable under civil rights statute, prisoner stated claim by alleging that guard filed false weapon possession claim against him in retaliation for reporting incident in which fire was allegedly set by another correction officer. Payne v. Axelrod, N.D.N.Y.1995, 871 F.Supp. 1551. Civil Rights 1092

Cause of action may arise under § 1983 for administrative decisions made in retaliation for exercise of inmate's constitutional rights. Candelaria v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1992, 787 F.Supp. 368, affirmed 979 F.2d 845. Civil Rights 1090

Inmate stated claim against corrections officer under § 1983 for falsely accusing inmate of misconduct, where defendant was not afforded due process at disciplinary hearing. Vines v. Howard, E.D.Pa.1987, 658 F.Supp. 34. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Allegedly false disciplinary ticket by which prison guard charged prisoner with a rule violation, ending in a hearing before adjustment committee which resulted in sanctions, was insufficient to form a basis for a civil rights claim when prisoner was otherwise shown to have received due process protections mandated in such matters. Galimore

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

v. Lane, N.D.Ill.1986, 635 F.Supp. 1367. Civil Rights 1092

2894. Overturned judgment requirement, disciplinary proceedings in prison

The favorable termination rule, under which a § 1983 plaintiff cannot seek damages for harm caused by actions the unlawfulness of which would necessarily render the fact or length of his confinement invalid, unless he can prove that the conviction, sentence, or prison disciplinary sanction that resulted from those actions has been reversed, invalidated, or called into question by a grant of federal habeas corpus relief, did not bar § 1983 claim of former prisoner, who was no longer in custody, challenging the procedures by which he was sentenced to disciplinary detention and administrative segregation; the sanctions imposed implicated only the conditions, and not the fact or duration, of his confinement. Torres v. Fauver, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2002, 292 F.3d 141. Civil Rights 1092

Former inmate who challenged conditions of confinement to which he allegedly was subjected without procedural due process in prison disciplinary proceedings, but did not challenge disciplinary proceedings on basis that they affected overall length of his confinement, was not required to show that disciplinary rulings were invalidated through administrative or judicial review to seek relief under § 1983. Sims v. Artuz, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2000, 230 F.3d 14, on remand 2003 WL 1746263. Civil Rights 1311

Inmate's claim that he was unlawfully seized was not barred by rule of Heck v. Humphrey, since proof that inmate's initial seizure and detention by officers was without probable cause would not necessarily imply the invalidity of his drug-possession conviction. Moore v. Sims, C.A.8 (Neb.) 2000, 200 F.3d 1170. Civil Rights 1088(4)

"Conviction" in prison disciplinary proceedings, for purposes of Heck v. Humphrey principle that prisoner cannot bring § 1983 action seeking damages based on "conviction" in prison disciplinary proceeding in certain circumstances, includes a ruling in a prison disciplinary proceeding that results in a change to the prisoner's sentence, including the loss of good-time credits. Clarke v. Stalder, C.A.5 (La.) 1998, 154 F.3d 186, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 1052, 525 U.S. 1151, 143 L.Ed.2d 58. Civil Rights 1092

Prison inmate could not maintain § 1983 claim alleging that one-year term of disciplinary segregation violated due process because chairman of conduct adjustment board (CAB) failed to provide adequate written record of evidence relied upon to support finding that inmate had threatened third party; even if such claim was independently cognizable, inmate's primary claim, that finding of guilt was not supported by reliable evidence, was barred by Heck v. Humphrey, because disciplinary judgment had not been overturned, and inmate failed to assert claim alleging absence of written record separately from primary claim. Stone-Bey v. Barnes, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1997, 120 F.3d 718. Civil Rights 1092

Prisoner's civil rights action under § 1983 against superintendent of state prison, alleging she was wrongfully placed in "keeplock" confinement as result of defective disciplinary hearing, was precluded on ground that "keeplock" sentence had not been overturned. Eason v. New York, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22232945, Unreported. Civil Rights 1092

2895. Amendment of procedure, disciplinary proceedings in prison

No cause of action under this section was averred by state penitentiary inmates' complaint which challenged the manner in which the penitentiary's "Adult Rules, Regulations and Disciplinary Procedures" were amended, alleging that the Louisiana Administrative Procedures Act, LSA-R.S. 49:951-49:968, had not been followed. Martin v. Blackburn, C.A.5 (La.) 1978, 581 F.2d 94. Civil Rights 1395(6)

2896. Notice, disciplinary proceedings in prison

State inmate's claims against corrections officer for constitutional violations and mental and emotional pain and suffering from deprivation of constitutional rights based on alleged failure to serve inmate with proper notice of disciplinary hearing were complete as soon as inmate discovered that he had been deprived of notice and did not depend upon anything that happened at hearing that notice was for; thus, deciding those claims did not require federal court to decide whether disciplinary process against inmate reached correct result and did not implicate habeas corpus claims which would have required inmate to first exhaust state remedies before bringing action. Clayton-El v. Fisher, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1996, 96 F.3d 236. Civil Rights 1319

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prison authorities' failure to provide inmate subject to discipline with written statement giving facts relied on and reasons for conclusions reached might subject them to liability in damages for bad faith where due process rights violated by prison authorities were clearly established at time of inmate's disciplinary hearing, authorities knew or should have known of that right by the time of inmate's hearing, and authorities must have known that their meager statement of facts relied on and reasons for conclusions reached did not satisfy due process norm; however, authorities' failure to inform inmate of substance of investigatory report containing exculpatory evidence would not necessarily subject authorities to damages for bad faith, since due process right to exculpatory evidence in prison disciplinary proceeding was not clearly established at time of inmate's hearing. Chavis v. Rowe, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1981, 643 F.2d 1281, certiorari denied 102 S.Ct. 415, 454 U.S. 907, 70 L.Ed.2d 225. Civil Rights 1092

District court's finding that the potential impact of bad-conduct report on plaintiff inmate, who alleged that defendant correctional official denied him due process by not giving him advance written notice of the charge brought against him in prison disciplinary proceeding, was not purely "speculative" was supported by the overwhelming weight of the evidence; moreover, even assuming arguendo that the finding was unjustified, defendants' "grievous loss" analysis completely missed the mark by focusing solely on the impact of the discipline that plaintiff actually received after the hearing rather than on the potential loss that he could have received. Ware v. Heyne, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1978, 575 F.2d 593. Prisons 13(8)

Any procedural defect in failing to deliver to inmate notice of misbehavior report was cured where inmate received notice at initial hearing, after which it was adjourned for one week. Payne v. Axelrod, N.D.N.Y.1995, 871 F.Supp. 1551. Prisons 13(8)

It would be preferable for inmate guide, which was prisoner manual that contained description of disciplinary procedures followed in South Carolina Department of Corrections, to be amended to expressly authorize preventive detention when it was necessary to utilize that tactic to control unruly inmate, as specific standards were preferable to necessity for prison officials to handle each case on ad hoc basis. Maxton v. Johnson, D.C.S.C.1980, 488 F.Supp. 1030. Prisons 13(5)

Prisoner's allegation that prison officials subjected him to corrective custody for rule infractions which he did not commit was not of such character as to shock general conscience or to be intolerable to fundamental fairness, in view of deference policy of federal courts to administrative officials in management of penal institutions and in view of fact that prisoner was given notice of charges against him and was given opportunity to be heard in front of conduct adjustment board. Mingo v. Patterson, D.C.Colo.1978, 455 F.Supp. 1358. Prisons 13(4)

Prison inmate could not bring § 1983 action against warden and disciplinary hearing officer, in which he alleged that warden and officer had failed to give him adequate notice of the disciplinary proceedings against him, in violation of his due process rights, where challenged disciplinary ruling had not been invalidated through a state or federal habeas corpus proceeding; even though inmate sought award of damages, rather than earlier release, a judgment in his favor would necessarily imply the invalidity of disciplinary result which had lengthened his sentence. Early v. Blankenship, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 221 F.3d 1342, Unreported. Civil Rights 1092

2897. Necessity of hearing, disciplinary proceedings in prison

In the future, state penal authorities would be obliged to conduct a fair disciplinary hearing prior to meting out punishment for violation of prison rules of restriction of visiting time, loss of good time and denial of school attendance rights. Johnson v. Wolff, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1974, 501 F.2d 407. Prisons 13(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Inmate who brought § 1983 civil rights action against corrections officials based on disciplinary hearing at which he was found guilty of drug use was not entitled to relief to the extent that claim was based on allegedly false information on testing procedures in the misbehavior report charging him with drug use; defendant was afforded a proper due process hearing on the underlying drug charge. Alnutt v. Cleary, W.D.N.Y.1996, 913 F.Supp. 160. Civil Rights 1092

While it is to be hoped that prison follows administrative guidelines, evidently intended to maintain order and discipline, violation of guideline providing that prehearing detention is authorized only when accused inmate's behavior is considered to be dangerous to persons or property, if shown, would not state claim under this section, in that there was no liberty interest associated with administrative policy guidelines. Sellers v. Roper, E.D.Va.1982, 554 F.Supp. 202. Civil Rights 1092

Complaint which alleged that prisoner was subjected to punishment without being given due process hearing and that, on at least one occasion, disciplinary captain, who was alleged to have participated in beatings of prisoner, made the initial report against the prisoner, sat in judgment upon him, and then determined his punishment stated a cause of action for denial of due process in violation of civil rights. Butler v. Bensinger, N.D.Ill.1974, 377 F.Supp. 870. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Provided he accompany his complaint with accusation that he is being punished in retaliation for exercise of constitutional right, prisoner may compel an evidentiary hearing in federal court when any disciplinary action is taken against him. Sellars v. Beto, S.D.Tex.1972, 345 F.Supp. 499. Prisons 13(3)

2898. Time of hearing, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Inmate's civil rights were not violated by his detention prior to hearing to determine accuracy of charge that he disobeyed direct order to leave visiting room in timely manner. Harris v. Murray, E.D.Va.1990, 761 F.Supp. 409. Civil Rights 1092

Prison warden's interpretation of policy statement as allowing investigations by Federal Bureau of Investigation or existence of emergencies to excuse hearings before prison disciplinary committee within three days of placement of inmate in temporary disciplinary segregation was unreasonable and was inconsistent with plain meaning of regulations, and thus Bureau investigations and alleged emergency conditions did not excuse warden's failure to comply with requirement of timely hearings. Jordan v. Arnold, M.D.Pa.1979, 472 F.Supp. 265, appeal dismissed 631 F.2d 725. Prisons 13(8)

Although administrative regulations of Illinois Department of Corrections provided for a hearing within 72 hours after a disciplinary ticket had been written, constitutional requirements of procedural due process did not impose such a 72-hour rule, and state penitentiary inmates' averment that Director of Department of Corrections had violated such administrative regulations failed to state cause of action under this section. Carlisle v. Bensinger, N.D.Ill.1973, 355 F.Supp. 1359. Civil Rights 1395(7); Constitutional Law 272(2)

2899. Committees authorized to discipline, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Since purpose of West Virginia statute providing for a disciplinary committee composed of warden, prison physician and chaplain to hear appeals from prisoners removed from overtime job assignments because of misconduct and to recommend what portion of accrued commutation of time should be forfeited for misconduct was not to supplant other legitimately constituted fact finding bodies, state prisoner's civil rights were not infringed by fact that existing disciplinary committee at Huttonsville, rather than the new committee, passed on his guilt or innocence on charges of violating institutional rules. Tawney v. McCoy, N.D.W.Va.1978, 462 F.Supp. 752. Civil Rights 1092

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

That state inmate, who had been charged with disruptive behavior in correctional unit, was tried before adjustment committee of another unit to which he had been transferred was proper. Cradle v. Superintendent, Correctional Field Unit No. 7, W.D.Va.1974, 370 F.Supp. 79. Prisons 13.5(3)

2900. Composition of disciplinary committee, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Even if inmate at state correctional institution had a liberty interest in state Department of Correction's policy requiring disciplinary committee members to have been employed for at least six months in department dealing firsthand with inmates, Department's lack of intent to deprive inmate of any interest defeated inmate's § 1983 claim for damages sustained in serving 82 days in punitive isolation based on disciplinaries which were subsequently reversed as result of ineligibility of a disciplinary committee member under the "six-month" requirement. Glick v. Walker, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1987, 834 F.2d 709. Civil Rights 1092

Prison official who assigned a subordinate to preside over prison inmate's second Tier III hearing on charges of assaulting a fellow inmate, after assigned official had reviewed inmate's misbehavior report prior to first hearing, was not liable to inmate for having made that assignment; there was no evidence that superior official had made assignment intentionally or through gross negligence, and mere negligence would not constitute a constitutional injury. Russell v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1991, 774 F.Supp. 189, on reargument 782 F.Supp. 876, reversed in part on other grounds 15 F.3d 219, modified on denial of rehearing, affirmed in part 35 F.3d 55. Civil Rights 1092

In prison disciplinary proceeding it is unfair for a superior to prosecute case before his immediate inferiors or to permit inferiors to sit in judgment over a charge brought by their superior, and when the warden has been intimately involved in the investigatory and accusatory stages of a prison disciplinary action, it may be necessary to purge the hearing panel of his inferiors, but where warden neither brought nor prosecuted disciplinary action, both his inferiors who served on disciplinary board testified that the warden's appearance and testimony before the panel did not affect their decision and the prison trustee, sitting as third member of the board, was independent of the warden, disciplinary hearing was free of command influence. Collins v. Vitek, D.C.N.H.1974, 375 F.Supp. 856.

2901. Bias of decisionmaker, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Standing alone, alleged fact that inmate told prison hearing examiner of inmate's pending civil action against examiner would not demonstrate that examiner's decision at disciplinary hearing was motivated by such suit. Carter v. Kane, E.D.Pa.1996, 938 F.Supp. 282. Civil Rights 1092

2902. Assistance of counsel, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Prisoner had no right to counsel at his disciplinary hearing. McDonald v. Hall, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1979, 610 F.2d 16. Prisons 13(9)

Hearing examiner's denial of counsel at state inmate's misconduct hearings did not violate inmate's due process rights, for purposes of his § 1983 claim; although inmate requested generally that he be provided with a lawyer or an "inmate and/or staff" in his misconduct hearings, he did not specify any particular individual from whom he sought assistance, and he never alleged that he was illiterate or baffled by the issues the misconducts involved. Whittington v. Vaughn, E.D.Pa.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 621. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(9)

Inmate was not entitled to assistance in prison disciplinary hearing, where issues were not unduly complex, inmate was not illiterate, and inmate was not housed in Special Housing Unit (SHU) or otherwise incapable of preparing for or participating in hearing. Payne v. Axelrod, N.D.N.Y.1995, 871 F.Supp. 1551. Prisons 13(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In order for inmate claiming that failure of chairman of prison adjustment committee to grant continuance of disciplinary proceedings to permit inmate to obtain an attorney was violation of prison guidelines and established cause of action under this section, he would have to show that if he had not relied on regulations permitting him to have his attorney present, he would have prevailed. Kelly v. Cooper, E.D.Va.1980, 502 F.Supp. 1371. Civil Rights 1404

At the present stage of development of prison disciplinary proceedings, inmates did not have a constitutional right to either retained or appointed counsel or counsel-substitute at disciplinary hearings, but where an illiterate inmate is involved or where the complexity of the issues makes it unlikely that the inmate will be able to collect and present evidence necessary for an adequate comprehension of the case, he should be free to seek the aid of a fellow inmate or, if that is forbidden, to have adequate substitute aid in the form of help from the staff or from sufficiently competent inmate designated by the staff. Sykes v. Kreiger, N.D.Ohio 1975, 451 F.Supp. 421. Prisons 13(9)

Inmate was not entitled to counsel in disciplinary hearing which resulted in confinement to quarters for 20 days. Russell v. Division of Corrections Com. of Virginia, W.D.Va.1975, 392 F.Supp. 476, affirmed 530 F.2d 969. Prisons 13(9)

2903. Assistance to inmates, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Inmate was not provided with assistance to which he was entitled in connection with disciplinary hearing, and thus hearing officer could be held liable for denying assistant to inmate, where sergeant, who was not designated by inmate on assistance sheet, was assigned and visited inmate in his cell, wrote on assistant sheet that inmate would prefer to see one of the assistants he had chosen, and did nothing more though inmate was unaware that assistants he had selected were unavailable, and where inmate specifically requested assistant from hearing officer at three of the hearing days and tried to do so at other hearings as well, and was never offered an assistant or even offered the aid of the same sergeant again. Lee v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 902 F.Supp. 424, reconsideration granted 914 F.Supp. 1004, on reconsideration 26 F.Supp.2d 615. Prisons 10; Prisons 13(9)

2904. Interpreters, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Revocation of prison inmate's good time credits following disciplinary hearings in which inmate, who was a Spanish-speaking native of Cuba, was not always provided with an interpreter, did not violate inmate's due process rights, even assuming that he had a protected liberty interest in credits, where inmate received assistance of an interpreter every time he requested it, and administrative law judge (ALJ) who presided over numerous hearings, both with and without interpreters, testified that he believed inmate's English skills were sufficient to understand and respond to proceedings. Gonzales-Perez v. Harper, C.A.8 (Iowa) 2001, 241 F.3d 633. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 15(7)

Hearing impaired inmate could not recover on § 1983 claim for violation of equal protection rights concerning prison's failure to provide sign language interpreter, absent allegation that he was treated differently from similarly situated inmates; inmate's claim instead asserted that he was not similarly situated to hearing inmates for purposes of participation in disciplinary hearings, medical care, and educational programs. Randolph v. Rodgers, E.D.Mo.1997, 980 F.Supp. 1051, reversed in part, vacated in part 170 F.3d 850. Civil Rights 1098

2905. Participation by inmate, disciplinary proceedings in prison

The 1968 disciplinary procedure wherein disciplinary ticket was read to state prison inmate, who hit prisoner with shovel, inmate was asked for reasonable explanation for his conduct, ticket was reviewed by senior captain who recommended that inmate be demoted to "C" grade, merit staff made report which contained statements describing inmate's background, his past disciplinary record, shovel incident and recommended that he be demoted and wherein warden approved report did not deny due process, though inmate did not participate in consideration of matter by captain, merit staff or warden. Haines v. Kerner, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1974, 492 F.2d 937. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2906. Inspection or production of documents, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Inmate who was disciplined for writing letter to another inmate was not denied due process by failure of disciplinary committee chairperson to give him an opportunity to see the letter he was accused of writing, absent assertion that presentation of letter would have resulted in different outcome at disciplinary hearing, and inmate failed to present any evidence that acting prison superintendent and assistant superintendent should have been aware of any alleged due process violations, absent indication that he made them aware of his due process claims. Griffin-Bey v. Bowersox, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1992, 978 F.2d 455. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(7.1)

2907. Calling or production of witnesses, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Hearing officer in prison disciplinary proceeding did not violate any clearly established constitutional or statutory right of inmate in failing to call inmate's suggested witnesses, and officer was entitled to qualified immunity in inmate's subsequent civil rights action; officer provided inmate with explanation for his action, to which inmate did not respond, and colloquy at hearing indicated that officer reasonably regarded proffered testimony of two witnesses as duplicative or nonprobative. Russell v. Selsky, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 35 F.3d 55. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Constitutional violation occurred when penalty was imposed on prisoner without allowing him to call witnesses, in violation of state law and due process requirements, and, thus, any administrative appeal, whether successful or not, could not cut off prisoner's cause of action under § 1983. Walker v. Bates, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 23 F.3d 652, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 2608, 515 U.S. 1157, 132 L.Ed.2d 852. Civil Rights 1319

In hearing involving prisoner's refusing to work, an institutional offense, adjustment committee's decision to allow physician examining prisoner, who claimed that he had liver condition which prevented him from working, to testify regarding prisoner without benefit of test results was not an abuse of discretion. Zaczek v. Hutto, C.A.4 (Va.) 1981, 642 F.2d 74. Prisons 13(8)

Right of inmate to call witnesses in a prison disciplinary proceeding is "limited." Hayes v. Walker, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1977, 555 F.2d 625, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 491, 434 U.S. 959, 54 L.Ed.2d 320. Prisons 13(9)

In prison disciplinary proceedings, prison officials must have discretion to refuse to call witnesses if to do so might create risk of reprisal or undermine authority. Palmigiano v. Baxter, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1974, 510 F.2d 534, certiorari granted 95 S.Ct. 2414, 421 U.S. 1010, 44 L.Ed.2d 678, reversed on other grounds 96 S.Ct. 1551, 425 U.S. 308, 47 L.Ed.2d 810, on remand 536 F.2d 305. Prisons 13(9)

Inmate's disciplinary proceedings satisfied due process requirements, where inmate received a copy of the offense report prior to his misconduct hearing, inmate received statements of evidence relied upon in addition to the rationale for the punishment imposed, and inmate was allowed to submit testimony from witnesses in the form of written witness statements. Roberts v. Champion, N.D.Okla.2003, 255 F.Supp.2d 1272, affirmed 91 Fed.Appx. 108, 2004 WL 249617. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(8); Prisons 13(9)

Prison officials were not required to take affirmative steps to interview all possible witnesses to incident involving inmate in order to assist inmate's defense, and thus officials were not subject to liability under § 1983 for failing to interview other inmates quickly enough after incident so that they could have been called at inmate's disciplinary hearing, where inmate did not claim that he was prevented from calling witnesses, nor that any specific witnesses would have testified for inmate but were not located in time. Delgado v. New York City Dept. of Correction, S.D.N.Y.1993, 842 F.Supp. 711. Civil Rights 1092; Prisons 13(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prisoner stated § 1983 claim against members of prison disciplinary board and deputy assistant director of the Department of Corrections, where prisoner was denied request to call as witnesses at his disciplinary hearing correctional officers who searched his cell and allegedly found homemade knife, and no reason for "unavailability" of witnesses was proffered at time of hearing; however, complaint failed to state claim against any prison officials who could not have participated in decision to deny request to examine witness or did not have authority to vacate guilty decision of disciplinary board. Morgan v. Ellerthorpe, D.R.I.1992, 785 F.Supp. 295. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison official was not liable under § 1983 on inmate's claim that officer failed to call two corrections officers as witnesses requested by inmate at inmate's first Tier III hearing on charges of assaulting fellow inmate; official explained that inmate had stated on record that one officer's testimony would merely be cumulative and that other officer's testimony had no probative value. Russell v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1991, 782 F.Supp. 876, reversed in part on other grounds 15 F.3d 219, modified on denial of rehearing, affirmed in part 35 F.3d 55. Civil Rights 1092

Failure to strictly comply with institutional rule that inmate had right to present voluntary testimony of witnesses at disciplinary hearing could not be translated into a constitutional deprivation as there is no constitutional right to have witnesses present at an institutional hearing. Pollard v. Baskerville, E.D.Va.1979, 481 F.Supp. 1157, affirmed 620 F.2d 294. Civil Rights 1092

2908. Confrontation or examination of witnesses, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Constitution at the present time does not impose requirement of confrontation and cross-examination in prison disciplinary proceedings. Wolff v. McDonnell, U.S.Neb.1974, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 418 U.S. 539, 41 L.Ed.2d 935, 71 O.O.2d 336. Criminal Law 662.3; Prisons 13(7.1)

Allegation that defendant prison officials deprived plaintiff inmate of his right of confrontation during an administrative hearing at state correctional facility for alleged rule violations because it was practicable for plaintiff to confront and cross-examine his accusing witness was sufficient to state a cause of action under this section notwithstanding alleged inconvenience of defendant prison officials when accusing witness was off duty. Adargo v. Barr, D.C.Colo.1980, 482 F.Supp. 283. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prisoner stated a claim, in §§ 1983 action, that prison officials violated his procedural due process rights in prison disciplinary proceedings; prisoner alleged he was evicted from and denied assistance during first disciplinary hearing, that he was denied opportunity to call "expert witness" in second disciplinary hearing, and that he was denied opportunity to call two witnesses, and to be present, at third disciplinary hearing. Chavis v. Zodlow, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 128 Fed.Appx. 800, 2005 WL 834646, Unreported. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(7.1); Prisons 13(9)

2909. Informants, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Some determination of reliability of confidential informants must be made for due process to be afforded to inmates in disciplinary proceedings involving confidential informants. Freitas v. Auger, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1988, 837 F.2d 806. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prison official who was sole witness at disciplinary proceeding against prisoner could not be held liable under § 1983 for hearing officer's alleged violation of prisoner's due process rights by failing to independently access credibility and reliability of confidential informant; although official provided testimony regarding reliability of informant who had implicated prisoner, hearing officer testified that she did not accept official's testimony without question and that she weighed official's testimony against prisoner's testimony. Cook v. Lehman, E.D.Pa.1994, 863 F.Supp. 207. Civil Rights 1420

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2910. Reports of misbehavior, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Prisoner suffered punishment as result of corrections officer's alleged retaliatory motive in issuing misbehavior report against prisoner, after prisoner filed grievance against officer alleging sexual assault, for purpose of prisoner's civil rights claim under First and Fourteenth Amendments, where prisoner was placed in less desirable housing because of officer's filing of misbehavior report. Rodriguez v. McClenning, S.D.N.Y.2005, 399 F.Supp.2d 228. Prisons 4(5)

Inmate's claim that prison officials falsely caused him to be convicted of misconduct offense, in retaliation for his exercise of First Amendment rights, was defeated by inmate's agreement with prison guard's misconduct report regarding incident; inmate's statement of facts reported dialogue in which he mocked guard's name several times, as alleged in misconduct report. Walker v. Roth, E.D.Mich.1997, 967 F.Supp. 250. Constitutional Law 82(13); Prisons 4(5)

Prisoner's complaint, alleging that several false inmate misbehavior reports (IMR) were filed in retaliation for prisoner having filed grievances, failed to state civil rights retaliation claim, where prisoner filed three grievances involving three different prison officials, none of those officials filed another IMR after prisoner's grievances had been filed, and there was no evidence that prison officials even knew about prisoner's grievances. Harris v. Keane, S.D.N.Y.1997, 962 F.Supp. 397. Civil Rights 1092

Inmate failed to assert specific allegations against correction officers apart from claims that they caused inmate to be confined to prison by filing misbehavior report against him, which in itself would not support finding of due process violation actionable under § 1983. Greaves v. State of N.Y., S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 142. Civil Rights 1395(7)

For purposes of inmate's § 1983 civil rights action against state correctional officers based on disciplinary hearing at which he was found guilty of drug use, there was no basis for liability against hearing officer concerning the sufficiency of the evidence; hearing officer was presented with ample evidence to support the guilty determination, including a misbehavior report, urine test results, and testimony by person who had performed the testing that proper procedures were followed, and the fact that that individual's testimony became suspect years later did not change result concerning the due process afforded inmate at time of hearing. Alnutt v. Cleary, W.D.N.Y.1996, 913 F.Supp. 160. Civil Rights 1092

Preparation of prison misbehavior report which is subsequently relied upon in an allegedly defective hearing does not constitute a violation of the constitutional rights of the inmate. Cepeda v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1992, 785 F.Supp. 385. Civil Rights 1092

2911. Record of proceeding, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Written record of disciplinary proceedings wherein prisoner is stripped of liberty interest protected by due process clause cannot satisfy due process requirements unless it is certain that inmate has complete and full access to it and such access is assured only if record is in fact furnished to him. Bills v. Henderson, E.D.Tenn.1978, 446 F.Supp. 967, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 631 F.2d 1287. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Jail officials were required to keep written record on individual basis showing time and place of infraction of jail rules and disciplinary measure imposed. Jones v. Wittenberg, N.D.Ohio 1971, 330 F.Supp. 707, 29 Ohio Misc. 35, 58 O.O.2d 47, affirmed 456 F.2d 854, 62 O.O.2d 232. Prisons 13(6)

2912. Statement of reasons, disciplinary proceedings in prison

In order to insure adequate review of prison hearing committee's decision and to protect prisoner from undue collateral consequences of committee's decision, written statement as to evidence relied on and reasons for disciplinary action must be complete unless exigent circumstances require special exclusions. Rhodes v. Robinson, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1979, 612 F.2d 766. Prisons 13(7.1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Institutional adjustment committee, in respect to prison disciplinary proceeding, failed to give an adequate statement as to evidence relied on or reasons for the action taken against plaintiff inmate; rather than pointing out the essential facts upon which inferences were based, the committee merely incorporated the violation report and the special investigator's report. Hayes v. Walker, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1977, 555 F.2d 625, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 491, 434 U.S. 959, 54 L.Ed.2d 320. Prisons 13(7.1)

2913. Appeal, disciplinary proceedings in prison

State prison official could not be liable, under § 1983, for allegedly violating inmate's due process rights by denying inmate's appeal of disciplinary sanction, where the inmate's due process claim against the prison official who initially imposed the 90-day disciplinary confinement was itself groundless. Durran v. Selsky, W.D.N.Y.2003, 251 F.Supp.2d 1208. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(10)

Claim that it took superintendent approximately 13 days to respond to inmate's appeal from adjustment committee decision did not state a claim upon which relief could be granted under this section since although department of corrections guideline required a more speedy response, such provision did not so closely relate to or protect a constitutional right that violation of the guideline entitled inmate to proceed under this section. Pollard v. Baskerville, E.D.Va.1979, 481 F.Supp. 1157, affirmed 620 F.2d 294. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2914. Retaliation, disciplinary proceedings in prison

Prisoner's conduct violation for fighting did not constitute retaliatory discipline supporting §§ 1983 liability, even though prisoner asserted that prison official asked him to dismiss his complaint near time of violation, where prisoner was bruised around his eye, and fact that conduct violation was later expunged did not mean that there was not some evidence for its imposition. Moots v. Lombardi, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 453 F.3d 1020. Civil Rights 1092

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether inmate would have suffered the same punishment as result of disciplinary action, regardless of corrections officer's alleged retaliatory motive, precluding summary judgment for officer in inmate's § 1983 action alleging that officer took retaliatory action, in violation of the First Amendment, against inmate for filing complaint against officer. Scott v. Coughlin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 344 F.3d 282. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Prison officials failed, in prisoner's § 1983 action alleging unlawful retaliation, to meet their burden of showing that they would have punished prisoner to same extent regardless of alleged retaliation, where officials argued that misbehavior report would have been filed in any case based on prisoner's threat of inmate unrest and admission to encouraging other inmates to file grievances, but prisoner denied making such inflammatory statements. Gayle v. Gonyea, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2002, 313 F.3d 677. Civil Rights 1092

Prison officials failed, in prisoner's § 1983 action alleging unlawful retaliation, to meet their burden of showing that they would have punished prisoner to same extent regardless of alleged retaliation, where officials argued that misbehavior report would have been filed in any case based on prisoner's threat of inmate unrest and admission to encouraging other inmates to file grievances, but prisoner denied making such inflammatory statements. Gayle v. Gonyea, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2002, 313 F.3d 677. Civil Rights 1092

Corrections officer's issuance of major misconduct ticket to inmate was not "shocking to the conscience," thus precluding inmate's recovery under § 1983, despite inmate's claim that ticket was issued in retaliation for grievance that inmate filed against officer, in which inmate alleged that officer violated inmate's First Amendment rights by destroying his legal materials and depriving him of his religious materials; inmate failed to show that his filing of grievance was substantial or motivating factor behind officer's issuance of misconduct ticket, in light of inmate's threats to kill officer. McLaurin v. Cole, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 115 F.3d 408, vacated 202 F.3d 269. Civil Rights 1092

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State prison officials did not retaliate against prisoner who intended to file lawsuit against prison officials regarding unauthorized opening of his legal mail; sanctions imposed were warranted after prisoner violated prison rules, and there was no evidence that officer who reassigned prisoner to different job knew of his intended lawsuit. Giba v. Cook, D.Or.2002, 232 F.Supp.2d 1171. Prisons 13(4)

Prisoner failed to state retaliation claim under §§ 1983 against captain who allegedly found him guilty on false disciplinary charges and whose motivation was because prisoner was a writ writer; secondary litigation activity did not comprise basis of retaliation claim. David v. Hill, S.D.Tex.2005, 401 F.Supp.2d 749. Civil Rights 1092

Prisoner provided sufficient circumstantial evidence to withstand summary judgment on his claim that corrections officer retaliated against him by planting evidence in his cell and filing misbehavior report against him, after prisoner filed grievance alleging sexual assault by officer, in violation of prisoner's civil rights under First and Fourteenth Amendments; alleged retaliation occurred only two days after officer responded in writing to prisoner's grievance, prisoner generally had good disciplinary record, and weapons charges against prisoner were dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence. Rodriguez v. McClenning, S.D.N.Y.2005, 399 F.Supp.2d 228. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Falsifying misconduct reports in retaliation for a prisoner's resort to legal process is a violation of the First Amendment guarantee of access to the courts. Nicholson v. Carroll, D.Del.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 429. Constitutional Law 91

Prisoner's actions of filing a grievance was not the cause of his removal from prison's driving while intoxicated program, as required for prisoner's §§ 1983 retaliation claim against program assistant, given that the assistant wrote poor evaluations for the prisoner before and after the filing of his grievance and there was no evidence that indicated the grievance was the cause of his removal from the program. Spies v. Kelleher, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 151 Fed.Appx. 72, 2005 WL 2650060, Unreported. Civil Rights 1092

Inmate stated a claim under §§ 1983 for retaliation by alleging that he was placed in segregation because he invoked his constitutional right to use the prison grievance procedures by filing grievances against correctional officers who called him names, regardless of whether inmate's placement in segregation independently violated the Constitution. Williams v. Snyder, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 150 Fed.Appx. 549, 2005 WL 2346964, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1434, 164 L.Ed.2d 137. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether female inmate, who received severe disciplinary sanction based on her sexual encounter with male prison guard, had been retaliated against for reporting guard, precluded summary judgment in inmate's § 1983 action against prison officials. Trammell v. Davis, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 208 F.3d 218, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Prisoner's allegations of retaliatory conduct by prison officials were sufficient, under liberal pleading standard, to state a First Amendment retaliation claim under § 1983, despite prisoner's failure to present chronology of events; prisoner alleged that after he filed grievances against them, officers retaliated by withholding his legal documents and destroying exhibits and personal photographs, and that remaining defendants participated in the ongoing retaliation by falsely telling his sister that her name was not on the visitor's list, denying him his state pay, preventing him from having his yearly interview, and otherwise unnecessarily harassing him. Hunter v. Welborn, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2002, 52 Fed.Appx. 277, 2002 WL 31688934, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

XXIII. SOLITARY CONFINEMENT OR SEGREGATION OF PRISONERS

<Subdivision Index>

Access to courts 2957-2959
Access to courts - Generally 2957
Access to courts - Assistance by other inmates 2958

Access to courts - Library or legal publications 2959
Access to mails 2960
Assault by other prisoners 2975
Assistance by other inmates, access to courts 2958
Books, magazines or other periodicals 2964
Conditions of confinement generally 2956
Death penalty inmates 2943
Diet 2969
Discriminatory treatment 2942
Drug use, grounds 2945
Due process, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners 2978a
Employment during confinement 2967
Equal protection, solitary confinement or segregration of prisoners 2978b
Evidence considered 2981
Exercise 2965
Gang affiliation, grounds 2946
Grooming requirements 2970
Grounds 2944-2953
Grounds - Generally 2944
Grounds - Drug use 2945
Grounds - Gang affiliation 2946

Grounds - Hunger strikes 2947
Grounds - Political beliefs 2948
Grounds - Refusal to work 2949
Grounds - Religious beliefs 2950
Grounds - Threat of harm by other inmates 2951
Grounds - Threat of harm to guards or other inmates 2952
Grounds - Violation of prison regulations 2953
Hearing 2979
Hunger strikes, grounds 2947
Hygienic conditions 2971
Interviews 2980
Length of confinement or segregation 2954
Library or legal publications, access to courts 2959
Lighting 2972
Lockups 2977
Medical care 2973
Miscellaneous confinements or segregations 2985
Necessity of hearing 2979
Notice 2978
Periodic review 2982
Political beliefs, grounds 2948

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Pretrial detainees 2955
Recreation 2965
Refusal to work, grounds 2949
Rehabilitation programs 2966
Religious beliefs, grounds 2950
Religious practice 2961, 2962
Religious practice - Generally 2961
Religious practice - Services 2962
Request of prisoner 2984
Riots or disturbances 2976
Services, religious practice 2962
Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners generally 2941
Statement of reasons 2983
Strip cells 2968
Temperature in facilities 2974
Threat of harm by other inmates, grounds 2951
Threat of harm to guards or other inmates, grounds 2952
Violation of prison regulations, grounds 2953
Visitation 2963

2941. Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners generally

Amount of due process that is due to state inmate who has been placed in administrative segregation is defined by federal rather than state law. Smith v. Shettle, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1991, 946 F.2d 1250. Constitutional Law 272(2)

State prisoners' complaint stated claim for relief on theory that punishment of disciplinary segregation was disproportionate to offenses committed. Madyun v. Thompson, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1981, 657 F.2d 868. Prisons 10

The due process clause of U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 5 and 14 does not of itself, make a state prisoner's freedom from transfer to administrative segregation a constitutionally protected liberty interest. Bills v. Henderson, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1980, 631 F.2d 1287. Constitutional Law 272(2)

In examining deprivations complained of by a prisoner as a result of confinement in a maximum security call, court must balance the legitimate rights of the prisoner with the necessary concern and responsibility of prison authorities for security and order. Crowe v. Leeke, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1976, 540 F.2d 740. Prisons 17(1)

State prisoner might have cause of action under this section by reason of his being placed in solitary confinement when he was returned to county prison for court appearances. U. S. ex rel. Arzonica v. Scheipe, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1973, 474 F.2d 720. Civil Rights 1092

Especially in view of actions taken by state of New York to remedy perceived deficiencies in treatment of inmates in general as well as those confined to segregation or psychiatric observation cells, court on complaints of state prisoners would not prohibit prison officials from confining any inmate to segregation or psychiatric observation cells until rules and regulations regarding conditions of such cells have been promulgated. Wright v. McMann, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 460 F.2d 126, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 115, 409 U.S. 885, 34 L.Ed.2d 141. Civil Rights 1448

Prisoner's misconduct which resulted in his being placed in solitary confinement related to internal affairs of state penal institution and, where lack of inquiry by prison board did not deprive prisoner of a fundamental constitutional right, federal court would not interfere. Courtney v. Bishop, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1969, 409 F.2d 1185, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 235, 396 U.S. 915, 24 L.Ed.2d 192. Prisons 13(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Inmate's disciplinary segregation did not constitute deprivation of protected liberty interest in violation of due process, since such segregation did not constitute atypical and significant hardship in relation to ordinary incidents of maximum security prison life; conditions of disciplinary segregation were essentially same as those in administrative segregation and protective custody. Mullins v. Smith, E.D.Mich.1998, 14 F.Supp.2d 1009. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

The state had granted prison inmates a protected liberty interest in remaining free from administrative segregation, as required in order for an inmate to maintain a civil rights action claiming that his due process rights were violated when he was placed in administrative segregation; there were regulations recognizing that administrative segregation was a real hardship, limiting the power to impose the hardship to cases in which the inmate's presence in the general prison population was a threat to safety and security, and setting forth a procedural mechanism to determine if the inmate met the substantive standards for imposition of the hardship. McClary v. Kelly, W.D.N.Y.1998, 4 F.Supp.2d 195. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prisoner asserting § 1983 claim based on segregated confinement must prove existence of state-created liberty interest protected by Due Process Clause by establishing two elements: that confinement creates atypical and significant hardship under Sandin and that state has granted its inmates, by regulation or statute, protected liberty interest in remaining free from that confinement. Cespedes v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1997, 956 F.Supp. 454, on reconsideration 969 F.Supp. 254. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Inmate had no constitutionally protected liberty interest in freedom from placement in disciplinary segregation, thus precluding relief on his § 1983 claim that he was gratuitously placed in segregated confinement for no reason at all. Leslie v. Doyle, N.D.Ill.1995, 896 F.Supp. 771, affirmed 125 F.3d 1132, rehearing denied. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prison regulations did not give inmate legitimate claim of entitlement to remain in general prison population or free from segregation, and thus did not provide liberty interest protected by Due Process Clause; provisions vested wide discretion in prison officials as to placement of inmates within prison. Blizzard v. Watson, D.Del.1995, 892 F.Supp. 587. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prisoner's mere retention in unlocked cell during five-day period could not be branded as segregation actionable as liberty claim. Harris v. MacDonald, N.D.Ill.1982, 555 F.Supp. 137. Prisons 13(5)

Illinois prisoners have protectible liberty interest in not being placed in disciplinary segregation absent a finding of major misconduct. Williams v. Franzen, N.D.Ill.1980, 499 F.Supp. 304. Prisons 13(5)

Placement of plaintiff in segregation at state prison did not of itself constitute a violation of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8 and was not, therefore, a basis for establishing a claim under this section. Freeman v. Trudell, E.D.Mich.1980, 497 F.Supp. 481. Civil Rights 1092

Prisoner cannot be placed in punitive confinement area to punish him for disciplinary infraction unless procedures employed by prison officials comport with minimum due process standards set out in applicable case. Maxton v. Johnson, D.C.S.C.1980, 488 F.Supp. 1030. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

Claims that state prisoners were held in "segregation unit" in violation of prison rules and regulations were cognizable in action under this section. Carter v. McGinnis, D.C.N.Y.1970, 320 F.Supp. 1092. See, also McAlister v. Robinson, D.C.Conn.1978, 488 F.Supp. 545, affirmed 607 F.2d 1058.

Decision of United States Supreme Court outlining certain procedural requirements that prison administrators must afford a prisoner before they can deprive him of accumulated "good time" credits or confine him to "solitary" for serious misconduct was inapplicable in situation where imposition of a much lesser penalty than "solitary" or deprivation of "good time" credits was involved. Knott v. Kerkhoff, W.D.Va.1976, 410 F.Supp. 1236. Prisons 13(6); Prisons 15(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Solitary confinement is not per se cruel and unusual punishment, and temporary inconveniences and discomforts incident thereto cannot be regarded as basis for judicial relief. Newsome v. Sielaff, E.D.Pa.1974, 375 F.Supp. 1189
.

State prisoner's claims that his disciplinary segregation was imposed in violation of applicable prison rules and laws and that, during the adjudication of his segregation challenge, he was denied the opportunity to present witness testimony and evidence of retaliatory conduct were not cognizable under the federal habeas statute, but rather, had to be brought under §§ 1983, as the claims did not challenge his placement in custody, but only the condition of his confinement or the severity of his custody. Jacobs v. Bertrand, E.D.Wis.2005, 228 F.R.D. 627, reconsideration denied 2005 WL 1719285. Habeas Corpus 277

2942. Discriminatory treatment, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

State corrections officials' policies placing extra restrictions on telephone use and number of visitations for inmates in segregation status, and prohibiting those inmates' possession of publications other than books, were reasonably related to legitimate penological interests and thus valid, precluding recovery in inmate's §§1983 action against officials arising from his loss of privileges upon transfer to segregation; policies were designed to promote security and rehabilitation by allowing for awarding of increased privileges for segregated inmates who demonstrated good behavior, and there was no showing that officials could further those interests with less restrictive means. King v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 977. Prisons 13(5)

Complaint of prisoner showing that of approximately 300 inmates improperly out of their cells at time of prison riot approximately 16 percent were white of whom only one was confined to segregation while approximately 83 percent of prisoners improperly out of their cells were black and approximately 20 percent were confined to segregation coupled with fact that prison guards who identified black plaintiff as one of those responsible for riot and as having a weapon were blindfolded at the time was sufficient to raise factual questions as to whether the disparity in the treatment of blacks and whites allegedly involved in the same activity was rationally based. Murphy v. Wheaton, N.D.Ill.1974, 381 F.Supp. 1252. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2943. Death penalty inmates, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Confinement of death sentence prisoners in facility within penitentiary separate from maximum security unit within which incorrigible and insane inmates were housed and separate from general prison population without permitting death sentence inmates to commingle with general prison population did not violate any of plaintiff death sentence prisoner's federally protected rights. Glenn v. Wilkinson, W.D.Mo.1970, 309 F.Supp. 411. Prisons 13(5)

LSA-R.S. 15:568 requiring that until time of execution convict should be kept in solitary confinement and no one allowed access to him without court order except prison officials, counsel, physicians, spiritual advisor and designated members of family is nondiscriminatory on its face. Labat v. McKeithen, E.D.La.1965, 243 F.Supp. 662, affirmed 361 F.2d 757. Prisons 13(5)

2944. Grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners--Generally

Administrative segregation is not per se unconstitutional; validity depends upon existence of valid and subsisting reason or reasons for segregation and relative humaneness of the conditions; prison warden may not constitutionally put inmate in administrative segregation, involving solitary confinement or other rigorous conditions of imprisonment, simply because he dislikes inmate or desires to punish him for past misconduct. Kelly v. Brewer, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1975, 525 F.2d 394. Prisons 12

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Where plaintiff was placed in isolation on four occasions totaling eight days as result of his conduct in damaging prison security cameras and his placement in isolation was of an administrative nature to preserve the security in jail, actions of sheriff in placing plaintiff in isolation did not involve punishment so as to subject sheriff to liability under this section for subjecting plaintiff to cruel and unusual punishment. Potter v. Clark, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1974, 497 F.2d 1206. Civil Rights 1092

Although solitary confinement does not of itself violate constitution, it must be imposed for proper disciplinary purposes. Stinson v. Sheriff's Dept. of Sullivan County, S.D.N.Y.1980, 499 F.Supp. 259. Prisons 13(5)

Where record established that purpose of placing state prisoner in special custody was not punishment but separation from rest of prison population because of a belief that such segregation was essential to security of entire institution, as well as prisoner's own protection, action taken by prison officials was within discretion normally accorded them in general administration of prison affairs, and prisoner's application for relief was subject to dismissal. Rivera v. Fogg, W.D.N.Y.1974, 371 F.Supp. 938. Prisons 13(5)

2945. ---- Drug use, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Inmates who did not allege that prison official knew or should have suspected that drug test results which resulted in disciplinary proceedings against them were false did not state civil rights claim against him. Allen v. Purkett, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 5 F.3d 1151, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 100, 513 U.S. 829, 130 L.Ed.2d 49. Civil Rights 1092

2946. ---- Gang affiliation, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Placement of state prison inmate in administrative segregation because of his gang affiliation did not deprive inmate of constitutionally cognizable liberty interest. Pichardo v. Kinker, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1996, 73 F.3d 612. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) regulations providing for gang validation based on association, and on that basis housing inmate in secure unit, bore rational relation to goal of penological interest in institutional security, in determining whether regulations violated state prison inmate's First and Fourteenth Amendment associational rights as alleged in inmate's §§ 1983 action, even though inferences might be substituted for direct evidence that inmate would pose threat to security under those regulations. Stewart v. Alameida, N.D.Cal.2006, 418 F.Supp.2d 1154. Prisons 13(5)

State prison's placement of inmate in administrative segregation for gang affiliation was supported by "some evidence," and thus did not violate his federal due process rights, even if double counting of one piece of evidence meant that prison regulation, requiring three pieces of evidence, was not met. Verwolf v. Hamlet, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 22159055, Unreported. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(7.1)

2947. ---- Hunger strikes, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Action taken to place inmate who began hunger strike in administrative segregation was taken in compliance with policy of Kansas Department of Corrections, and, thus, inmate's constitutional rights were not violated. Ball v. Sledd, D.Kan.1993, 814 F.Supp. 48. Prisons 13(5)

2948. ---- Political beliefs, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Absent some specific allegation of unjustifiably discriminatory administration of the correctional practices with relation to segregation or the use of them as punishment without procedural due process, no federal question was raised in state prisoner's action, under this section, complaining that he was being subjected to penalties for political beliefs. Morgan v. LaVallee, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1975, 526 F.2d 221. Civil Rights 1395(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2949. ---- Refusal to work, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Solitary confinement of state prisoner for his refusal to accept work in steward's department did not violate prisoner's civil rights. Rhinehart v. Rhay, W.D.Wash.1970, 314 F.Supp. 81. Civil Rights 1092

2950. ---- Religious beliefs, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

If sole reason for segregation of Black Muslim prisoner was his refusal to obey an order that violated his rights under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1, i.e., handle pork, punitive segregation for violation of such order would be entirely impermissible. Chapman v. Kleindienst, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1974, 507 F.2d 1246. Constitutional Law 84.5(14)

Prisoner's incarceration in maximum security was not the result of religious discrimination in view of evidence that plaintiff had never indicated to any prison personnel his preference for the Black Muslim religion and that plaintiff had been guilty of behavior warranting disciplinary action. Mason v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1969, 417 F.2d 769.

2951. ---- Threat of harm by other inmates, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Prisoner who was securely locked by himself in maximum security cell was not confined under conditions posing substantial risk of serious harm, as required to establish Eighth Amendment claim based on prison officers' failure to prevent harm, notwithstanding fact that inmate located outside cell succeeded in inflicting injury upon him. Grimsley v. MacKay, C.A.10 (Utah) 1996, 93 F.3d 676. Sentencing And Punishment 1553

Placement of intersexual inmate, who was of alleged female gender but was anatomically situated as a male due to the presence of a penis, in segregated confinement for a period of 438 days, with concomitant severely limited privileges, solely because of the condition and status of ambiguous gender was not a violation of the Eighth Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment; safety of inmate and other inmates was secured by placing inmate in administrative segregation, and inmate was provided the basic necessities of food, shelter, clothing and medical treatment. DiMarco v. Wyoming Dept. of Corrections Div. of Prisons, Wyo. Women's Center, D.Wyo.2004, 300 F.Supp.2d 1183. Prisons 13(5); Sentencing And Punishment 1553

Inmate did not have right under United States Constitution or Pennsylvania law to any specific custody status and, thus, inmate could not state § 1983 civil rights claim for damages against correctional officers based on allegations that he was placed in administrative confinement against his wishes based on false information that threats had been made against inmate's life. Oden v. Caison, E.D.Pa.1995, 892 F.Supp. 111. Civil Rights 1092

Restrictions to which state prisoner was subjected while he was in protective segregation were not constitutionally impermissible in view of fact that prisoner was exposed to a real danger from attack from any of a number of persons in prison population. Joyner v. McClellan, D.C.Md.1975, 396 F.Supp. 912. Prisons 13(5)

It was within discretion of prison officials, utilizing good faith, experience and expertise, to place inmate in administrative segregation for his own safety, in view of threat upon his life, though inmate desired to be released to general prison population. Daughtery v. Carlson, E.D.Ill.1974, 372 F.Supp. 1320. Prisons 13(5)

2952. ---- Threat of harm to guards or other inmates, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Full accommodation of state prison inmate's First and Fourteenth Amendment associational rights by precluding

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

gang validation through associations and resultant housing of inmates in secure unit, as provided for by California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) regulations, would seriously hinder objective of institutional security and compromise safety of inmates and correctional officers, in determining whether the regulations violated inmate's First and Fourteenth Amendment associational rights as alleged in §§ 1983 action. Stewart v. Alameida, N.D.Cal.2006, 418 F.Supp.2d 1154. Prisons 13(5)

In absence of some specific factual information indicating that a particular prisoner poses a threat of harm to other inmates, there is no duty to isolate him, and, in that connection, there is no difference between convicted inmates and pretrial detainees. Campbell v. Bergeron, M.D.La.1980, 486 F.Supp. 1246, affirmed 654 F.2d 719. Prisons 4(4); Prisons 13(1)

Concern which state prisoner expressed as to danger of contact with fellow prisoner housed in same general area was sufficient to raise concern by prison classification committee regarding prisoner's personal security and justified a separation from fellow prisoner under "padlock" status whereby prisoner was required to remain in cell at all times save for minimal periods of exercise and for sanitary purposes. Cousins v. Oliver, E.D.Va.1974, 369 F.Supp. 553. Prisons 13(5)

Under evidence that certain Black Muslim prisoners were engaged in a power struggle which endangered the safety and security of the penitentiary, action of prison officials in placing such inmates in segregated confinement did not constitute abuse or caprice. Long v. Harris, D.C.Kan.1971, 332 F.Supp. 262, affirmed 473 F.2d 1387. Prisons 13(5)

2953. ---- Violation of prison regulations, grounds, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Inmate placed in disciplinary segregation for speaking with inmate from another residence area did not, by virtue of prison regulations, have any liberty interest protected by due process. Mujahid v. Meyer, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 1995, 59 F.3d 931. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

In absence of any extreme circumstances, federal court refused to grant relief to state prisoner seeking to obtain his permanent release from administrative segregation on ground that his confinement was unlawful because he had violated no prison regulations. Young v. Wainwright, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1971, 449 F.2d 338. Prisons 13(5)

Prison authorities' placing prisoner in maximum security area was not, in view of prisoner's repeated violations of prison rules, arbitrary or capricious. Abernathy v. Cunningham, C.A.4 (Va.) 1968, 393 F.2d 775. Prisons 13(5)

Because inmate was found not guilty by inmate advisory council did not require conclusion that prison official did not have probable cause to file charges for violation of prison rules for purposes of § 1983 action, given information available at time he filed charges. Keeler v. Pea, D.S.C.1992, 782 F.Supp. 42. Civil Rights 1092

Even though state prisoner was incarcerated in isolation cell, where prisoner was not subjected to isolation status but kept in detention because of violation of institutional rules and had all his personal belongings, including writing materials, was fed three meals daily and was kept in warm cell and where prisoner's hearing on charges was postponed for four days because prisoner wished to employ private attorney to represent him at hearing, prisoner was not entitled to recover damages from prison officials because of such isolation. Cradle v. Superintendent, Correctional Field Unit No. 7, W.D.Va.1973, 374 F.Supp. 435. Civil Rights 1462

2954. Length of confinement or segregation, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Former inmate alleged deprivations that were sufficiently atypical to implicate liberty interest in avoiding such punishment, as required to state due process claims against state prison officials, when he alleged that due process violations occurring in underlying disciplinary proceedings resulted in his being sentenced to special housing confinement for excessive lengths of time, placement in full restraints for nearly seven months, not being allowed to exercise without restraints, deprivation for two 14-day periods of normal meals, and being forced to remain naked in his cell for number of days. Sims v. Artuz, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2000, 230 F.3d 14, on remand 2003 WL 1746263 . Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Where there was no proof that seven days' disciplinary segregation for refusal to follow order of prison staff officer, a "major violation" under bureau of prisons policy, was cruel or unusual punishment, severity of such punishment for prisoner's refusal of order to shave his beard furnished no basis of liability in action seeking damages solely for alleged constitutional violation. Jihaad v. O'Brien, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1981, 645 F.2d 556. Prisons 10

Three-day separation of prisoner from prison population and its normal privileges while restricted to his own cell did not present a federal constitutional question. Jordan v. Jones, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1980, 625 F.2d 750. Civil Rights 1092

Fact that segregated confinement is prolonged and indefinite is not sufficient in itself to command constitutional protection, though it is a factor to be considered, especially if the confinement is punitive rather than administrative or protective. Sweet v. South Carolina Dept. of Corrections, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1975, 529 F.2d 854. Prisons 13(6)

It is permissible to keep a prisoner in segregation until he agrees to abide by rules of institution. Mukmuk v. Commissioner of Dept. of Correctional Services, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1976, 529 F.2d 272, certiorari denied 96 S.Ct. 2238, 426 U.S. 911, 48 L.Ed.2d 838. Prisons 13(5)

In view of prisoner's criminal record and several recent incidents of his resisting orders from prison officials and his frequent transfers between state facilities, district court could properly determine, in prisoner's civil rights action seeking injunction and damages, that prisoner presented a "clear and imminent danger" warranting protective confinement and that protective custody of 35 days did not constitute an unduly long observation period. Bloeth v. Montanye, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1975, 514 F.2d 1192. Prisons 13(5)

Fact that state prison inmate's disciplinary segregation lasted only 77 days did not, by itself, mandate finding that segregation did not impose atypical and significant hardship on inmate, and in turn did not preclude inmate's §§ 1983 due process claim against corrections department hearing officer alleging that confinement was result of officer's improper denial of inmate's right to present witnesses at disciplinary hearing; whether conditions of confinement were atypical was unknown. Withrow v. Donnelly, W.D.N.Y.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 108. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

Inmate suing prison officials under § 1983 was not entitled to develop factual record regarding types of restrictive confinement employed in New York prisons generally and prison in which he was confined in particular, absent any allegation in his complaint of hardship other than that arising out of length of his confinement in prison's Special Housing Unit (SHU), as length of inmate's confinement in SHU was dispositive absent such allegation. Cespedes v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1997, 956 F.Supp. 454, on reconsideration 969 F.Supp. 254. Civil Rights 1397

Inmate stated at least arguable claim that he had "artificial liberty interest" that was violated when he received unwarranted additional two days of segregation, and thus, inmate was allowed to proceed in forma pauperis in civil rights action; Wisconsin prison regulations could be construed as containing binding, exhaustive, and definite criteria that limited discretion of prison officials to place inmates in adjustment segregation for particular length of time. Rose v. Kettle Moraine Correctional Inst. Officials, E.D.Wis.1991, 778 F.Supp. 1009. Federal Civil Procedure 2734

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Seven-day delay in release of prisoner from administrative segregation following discovery that he had been mistakenly identified as person who assaulted fellow prisoner would not rise to level of constitutional violation cognizable under federal statute governing civil action for deprivation of rights. Shango v. Jurich, N.D.Ill.1985, 608 F.Supp. 931. Civil Rights 1092

2955. Pretrial detainees, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Pretrial detainee placed in segregated confinement for administrative reasons anchored in desire to foil his escape was not denied procedural due process by lack of hearing at which he could contest reasons for his confinement, as he was not subjected to "discipline" for violation of prison rule and, thus, could derive no liberty interest from regulatory provision requiring jailers to provide for disciplinary hearings in cases of alleged violations of prisoner conduct rules. Martucci v. Johnson, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1991, 944 F.2d 291, rehearing denied. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

District court should not have dismissed former pretrial detainee's § 1983 claims regarding his placement in administrative segregation for nine months without reviewing state law to determine whether statute or regulation prescribed mandatory procedures governing administrative as opposed to punitive segregation so as to create liberty interest in remaining in general population, and without analyzing possible punitive aspects of such lengthy segregation. Covino v. Vermont Dept. of Corrections, C.A.2 (Vt.) 1991, 933 F.2d 128. Federal Civil Procedure 1788.10

Where correctional officers and social service employees were not responsible for pretrial detainee's confinement in maximum security cell nor did his confinement there result from officers' or employees' intent to punish him, detainee was not deprived of his civil rights under this section, or under § 1985 of this title, prohibiting conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. Villanueva v. George, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1980, 632 F.2d 707, on rehearing 659 F.2d 851. Civil Rights 1098; Conspiracy 7.5(2)

2956. Conditions of confinement generally, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

District court abused its discretion, for purpose of consideration of civil rights complaint under statute that governed proceedings in forma pauperis, in concluding that there was no arguable basis that three-year period of administrative segregation during which time state prisoner was confined to his cell for all but five hours each week and denied access to any outdoor recreation was not "atypical," in violation of his due process rights. Fogle v. Pierson, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2006, 435 F.3d 1252. Federal Civil Procedure 2734

Former inmate was not required to raise claim for being placed in administrative segregation allegedly without due process through petition for writ of habeas corpus, rather than through his § 1983 action; former inmate challenged only conditions of his confinement, and not its duration. Brown v. Plaut, C.A.D.C.1997, 131 F.3d 163, 327 U.S.App.D.C. 313, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 2346, 524 U.S. 939, 141 L.Ed.2d 716, on remand 66 F.Supp.2d 41. Civil Rights 1311

Remand of inmate's § 1983 action, alleging cruel and unusual punishment claim for conditions of confinement in prison's most restrictive segregation unit, was required for district court to enter more precise findings on contested issues about allegedly inhumane conditions as to temperature, sanitation, and ventilation; although district court resolved claim on lack of culpable state of mind by prison officials, if conditions were truly as dreadful as inmate claimed, then defendants would in all probability have had requisite state of mind to satisfy subjective component of Eighth Amendment claim. Isby v. Clark, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1996, 100 F.3d 502, on remand 1997 WL 471833. Federal Courts 922

Alleged denial of exercise opportunities or denial of the more liberal commissary and visitation privileges for the general prison population did not state claims for denial of civil rights of prisoners in segregation unit. Beck v. Lynaugh, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1988, 842 F.2d 759. Civil Rights 1092

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Showing that deputies acted with malicious and sadistic intent in subjecting prisoner to solitary confinement in extremely cold cell and in forcing prisoner to sleep on floor where rats crawled over him was not prerequisite to maintaining § 1983 action against county jail officials for violating the Eighth Amendment; treatment of prisoner did not arise out of situation posing significant risk to rights of inmates and prison staff, and thus, prisoner was only required to show that infliction of pain was unnecessary and wanton. Foulds v. Corley, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1987, 833 F.2d 52. Civil Rights 1092

Temporary solitary confinement did not amount to cruel and unusual punishment and did not amount to denial of due process for which damages were recoverable under this section, notwithstanding hard bed, cramped quarters, continuous light, and other restrictions. Gregory v. Wyse, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1975, 512 F.2d 378. Civil Rights 1092; Sentencing And Punishment 1553

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether segregated confinement of pregnant prisoner was cruel and unusual punishment, precluding summary judgment for guard captain, who ordered that prisoner be placed in segregation, in prisoner's action under § 1983, alleging Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference claim. Doe v. Gustavus, E.D.Wis.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 1003. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Despite allegations of toilets close to beds, low-calorie food, poor ventilation, and denial of meaningful exercise, inmates did not show that they were denied food or exercise, that ventilation was so poor as to pose risk of serious harm, or that prison officials acted with deliberate indifference, as would support claim that confinement to Administrative Segregation and Detention Area (ASDA) constituted cruel and unusual punishment. Blizzard v. Watson, D.Del.1995, 892 F.Supp. 587. Sentencing And Punishment 1553

Conditions which might constitute infringements of civil rights of prisoners in special housing unit included excessive and unnecessary use of force by correctional officers, grossly inadequate provision for exercise, denial of access to psychological and mental health care specialists, unsanitary food utensils, including cigarette burns and hair on food trays, portions of food smaller than those provided to inmates in general population and destruction and/or loss of mail sent to superintendent. Griffin v. Smith, W.D.N.Y.1980, 493 F.Supp. 129. Civil Rights 1092; Civil Rights 1093

2957. Access to courts, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners-- Generally

A prison official was forbidden from denying to prisoners in punitive isolation writ papers, etc., for their use in petitioning the courts or from in any way interfering with or restricting prisoners from petitioning the court or communicating with their attorneys. McCray v. Sullivan, S.D.Ala.1975, 399 F.Supp. 271, supplemented 413 F.Supp. 444. Prisons 4(13)

Where prison inmate presented no evidence that prison warden or director of board of corrections directly or indirectly denied him access to courts while he was confined in administrative segregation, inmate had not established cause of action under this section. Phillips v. Anderson, E.D.Okla.1974, 386 F.Supp. 371. Civil Rights 1420

Effective access to courts, by prisoners, is too crucial a right to be awarded or withheld as a disciplinary tool particularly when an inmate is confined in solitary and effectively cut off from all but his custodians. Johnson v. Anderson, D.C.Del.1974, 370 F.Supp. 1373, modified on other grounds 420 F.Supp. 845. Prisons 13(5)

2958. ---- Assistance by other inmates, access to courts, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Forbidding inmate in administrative segregation or punitive housing from receiving assistance of another inmate in preparation of legal draft challenging conditions of confinement did not violate inmate's constitutional right to counsel for purposes of civil rights statute [42 U.S.C.A. § 1983], where inmate had limited access to law library, court officials, and inmate assistants known as "writ writers." Little v. Norris, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1986, 787 F.2d 1241. Civil Rights 1094

2959. ---- Library or legal publications, access to courts, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

District court abused its discretion, for purpose of consideration of prisoner's civil rights complaint under statute that governed proceedings in forma pauperis, in concluding that there was no arguable basis for state prisoner's claim of denial of access to prison law library on allegations that he was completely denied access to law library and its accompanying resources and that denial prevented him from filing non-frivolous claims. Fogle v. Pierson, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2006, 435 F.3d 1252. Federal Civil Procedure 2734

Prison's policy of banning prisoners who were confined in protective custody from library did not prejudice inmate; there was no showing that policy prevented inmate from obtaining case law. Jenkins v. Lane, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 977 F.2d 266. Prisons 4(13)

Evidence in prisoner's action against prison administrators, on account of deprivation of legal materials, and advice during period of disciplinary isolation, supported finding of good-faith application of rule to all inmates with honest belief in its constitutionality. Knell v. Bensinger, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1975, 522 F.2d 720. Civil Rights 1423

Inmate failed to state § 1983 cause of action for denial of access to the courts arising out of his being placed in segregation and being denied opportunity to perform legal research; there was only a 20-day delay and inmate failed to show that he had been prejudiced. Kness v. Sondalle, E.D.Wis.1989, 725 F.Supp. 1006, affirmed 917 F.2d 1306. Civil Rights 1094

Inmates of administrative segregation unit in detention facility could be restricted from keeping more than five nonlegal books at one time in their cells; such restriction could not, however, apply to law books, legal periodicals or other legal materials. Giampetruzzi v. Malcolm, S.D.N.Y.1975, 406 F.Supp. 836. Prisons 4(8)

2960. Access to mails, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Fact that while inmate was in punitive isolation, inmate was denied right to receive or send personal correspondence, but was entitled to receive legal and media mail, did not deny inmate's constitutional rights, where purpose of withholding personal mail was to make punitive isolation unpleasant, and thereby discourage improper behavior and promote security within prison, and such sanction was only imposed for 30 days. Little v. Norris, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1986, 787 F.2d 1241. Prisons 4(9)

2961. Religious practice, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners-- Generally

District court abused its discretion, for purpose of consideration of prisoner's civil rights complaint under statute that governed proceedings in forma pauperis, in concluding that there was no arguable basis for prisoner's First Amendment religious practice claim on allegations that state prison officials placed unreasonable constraint on prisoner's sincerely held religious beliefs by denying him all opportunity for "Christian fellowship" while in administrative segregation. Fogle v. Pierson, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2006, 435 F.3d 1252. Federal Civil Procedure 2734

Prison inmate in protective custody who admitted that chaplains visited the cell block and that one visited him every time he requested a personal visit of the chaplain could not constitutionally demand more. Sweet v. South Carolina Dept. of Corrections, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1975, 529 F.2d 854. Prisons 4(14)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Conclusory allegation of inmate, who had been placed in administrative segregation, that prison officials had interfered with inmate's free exercise of religion was insufficient to render officials liable to inmate in inmate's § 1983 civil rights action, where inmate had not met his initial obligation of demonstrating that he had sincerely held religious belief, or that officials substantially interfered with such belief by placing him in administrative segregation. Speed v. Stotts, D.Kan.1996, 941 F.Supp. 1051. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prison policy allowing prison-employed chaplains to have contact visits with "death watch" inmates on regular basis, while prohibiting nonemployee Catholic priest from having contact visits with death watch inmates, did not deprive Roman Catholic inmate who was on death watch of equal protection of the laws, although all prison chaplains were Protestants; prison allowed outside religious leaders to visit inmates on regular basis, all inmates had equal access to outside religious representatives, and all inmates had equal access to institutional chaplains. Card v. Dugger, M.D.Fla.1988, 709 F.Supp. 1098, affirmed 871 F.2d 1023. Constitutional Law 250.3(2); Prisons 4(14)

Prison policy of permitting inmates held in segregation to receive visits from clergymen of their faith but not to attend religious services was reasonable. U.S. ex rel. Wolfish v. Levi, S.D.N.Y.1977, 439 F.Supp. 114, affirmed 573 F.2d 118, certiorari granted 99 S.Ct. 76, 439 U.S. 816, 58 L.Ed.2d 107, reversed 99 S.Ct. 1861, 441 U.S. 520, 60 L.Ed.2d 447. Prisons 4(14)

2962. ---- Services, religious practice, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Inasmuch as prison inmate's mere presence in the general prison population had practically precipitated a riot and inmate's life was thereby put in jeopardy, prison authority's refusal to allow inmate to attend regular chapel services along with the general prison population represented a reasonable judgment. Sweet v. South Carolina Dept. of Corrections, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1975, 529 F.2d 854. Prisons 4(14)

Prison officials' decision to place inmate in solitary housing unit for seven hours during ceremony in prison chapel conducted by Catholic cardinal due to security risk defendant posed to ceremony was reasonable, and thus did not violate inmate's due process rights, absent the imposition of some atypical and significant hardship on the inmate in relation to the ordinary incidents of prison life. Gonzalez v. Narcato, E.D.N.Y.2005, 363 F.Supp.2d 486. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

Restricting prisoner's attendance at general religious services did not violate prisoner's civil rights; prisoner was prevented from attending communal religious services because he was not permitted to mix with general inmate population, and prisoner was ministered to each week in private and attended bible study classes conducted on maximum security tier. Bellamy v. McMickens, S.D.N.Y.1988, 692 F.Supp. 205. Civil Rights 1092

2963. Visitation, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Visitation restrictions on prisoner in restrictive housing unit for prisoners with misconduct violations did not amount to condition of confinement in violation of prisoner's constitutional rights; prisoner was restricted to visitation during weekdays and was not permitted to touch visitors due to plexiglass partition installed for security reasons. Brooks v. Kleiman, E.D.Pa.1989, 743 F.Supp. 350. Prisons 13(4)

Long-term prison inmate, who was objectively in danger of violent assault from other inmates and who was segregated in a maximum security housing unit at his own request for his own protection, was not entitled to extension of hours for visitation so as to equal the number of hours afforded inmates in general population for reason that there was a valid security justification for the limited hours of visitation. Wojtczak v. Cuyler, E.D.Pa.1979, 480 F.Supp. 1288. Prisons 4(6)

Prison rule requiring inmate held in administrative segregation unit of detention center to submit request slip before receiving clothing from visitors was valid as being based on the security considerations. Giampetruzzi v. Malcolm, S.D.N.Y.1975, 406 F.Supp. 836. Prisons 4(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2964. Books, magazines or other periodicals, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Where state prison inmate was not denied periodic access to prison law library, the taking of dictionary and almanac from him when he was placed in segregation for disciplinary reasons violated no federal right and was not sufficient basis for civil rights action. Williams v. Wilkins, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1963, 315 F.2d 396, certiorari denied 84 S.Ct. 112, 375 U.S. 852, 11 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1094

2965. Recreation, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

District court abused its discretion, for purpose of consideration of civil rights complaint under statute that governed proceedings in forma pauperis, in concluding that there was no arguable basis that state prisoner suffered unconstitutionally cruel and unusual punishment by being denied all outdoor exercise for three years that he was in administrative segregation. Fogle v. Pierson, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2006, 435 F.3d 1252. Federal Civil Procedure 2734

Record required conclusion that an order requiring a change in exercise periods, in prison segregation unit, from two days a week to three or five, or some other number, would be an unwarranted intrusion upon Bureau of Prisons' discretion, since the denial of additional exercise periods is not a sufficiently grave deprivation of bodily needs to trigger special injunctive relief from court. Dorrough v. Hogan, C.A.5 (Ga.) 1977, 563 F.2d 1259, rehearing denied 567 F.2d 390, certiorari denied 99 S.Ct. 153, 439 U.S. 850, 58 L.Ed.2d 153. Prisons 17(5)

2966. Rehabilitation programs, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Persons in administrative segregation unit at detention center were entitled to partake of volunteer social services and counseling as long as such programs took place outside administrative segregation unit. Giampetruzzi v. Malcolm, S.D.N.Y.1975, 406 F.Supp. 836. Prisons 4(5)

2967. Employment during confinement, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Long-term prison inmate, who was segregated in a maximum security housing unit at his own request for his own protection, was entitled to be provided with remunerative employment when suitable employment was available and when that was consistent with security precautions and he was also entitled to be given idle pay when he was not working where general prison population was given opportunities to engage in remunerative employment or receive idle pay when work was not available. Wojtczak v. Cuyler, E.D.Pa.1979, 480 F.Supp. 1288. Convicts 7(1)

2968. Strip cells, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Civil rights of prisoner, accused of murder, were not violated by his being kept in solitary confinement, naked, in "strip cell" for extended period where there was no indication that confinement conditions were imposed as punishment rather than for protection, and where purpose of confinement was to protect prisoner from fellow inmates and to prevent him from again attempting to commit suicide. McMahon v. Beard, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1978, 583 F.2d 172. Civil Rights 1095

2969. Diet, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Deprivations of food and water imposed on inmate in special housing unit of state prison were not sufficiently serious to constitute cruel and unusual punishment under Eighth Amendment; inmate was deprived of one meal for violation of requirement of returning trays and cups before receiving next meal and deprived of water because he was using it to flood gallery. Warren v. Irvin, W.D.N.Y.1997, 985 F.Supp. 350. Sentencing And Punishment 1553; Prisons 17(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Fact that defendants, while acting under color of state law, may have violated state law or state Constitution in confining prisoners to isolation cell where they were deprived of food and water for 52 hours, was not basis for action under this section unless such violations resulted in deprivation of some right which prisoners had under federal Constitution and laws. Ruark v. Schooley, D.C.Colo.1962, 211 F.Supp. 921. Civil Rights 1092

2970. Grooming requirements, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Prison regulation under which person, who was incarcerated in state institution in lieu of bail, was placed in administrative segregation for wearing beard and goatee was unreasonable where body vermin was not problem in institution and where it was not contended that need to make prompt and accurate identification of inmates was interfered with. Seale v. Manson, D.C.Conn.1971, 326 F.Supp. 1375. Prisons 4(7)

2971. Hygienic conditions, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Civil rights complaint alleging that prison inmate was denied deodorant, soap, and shampoo while he was in special housing unit failed to show a constitutional deprivation. Thomas v. Smith, W.D.N.Y.1983, 559 F.Supp. 223 . Civil Rights 1092

2972. Lighting, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

State prison inmate who was in segregation status was not deprived of basic human need by presence of constantly illuminated nine-watt fluorescent light in his cell, precluding recovery in inmate's §§1983 Eighth Amendment action against corrections officials alleging that light had caused him sleeplessness and other problems; registered nurse and psychologist both concluded after examining inmate that he suffered no ill effects, and at any rate there was no showing of deliberate indifference on part of corrections officials or showing that alleged ill effects outweighed security concerns promoted by illumination. King v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 977. Sentencing And Punishment 1553

Keeping light on 24 hours a day during solitary confinement did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment and did not give rise to an action under this section. U. S. ex rel. Pope v. Hendricks, E.D.Pa.1971, 326 F.Supp. 699. Civil Rights 1092; Sentencing And Punishment 1553

2973. Medical care, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Where two medical technicians visited protective custody cell block three times each day to receive any complaints from the inmates and to provide any medication that might be requested or would appear appropriate, prison did not fail to meet its constitutional obligation for providing adequate medical services. Sweet v. South Carolina Dept. of Corrections, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1975, 529 F.2d 854. Prisons 17(2)

State prison inmate did not suffer inadequate medical treatment, precluding recovery in his §§1983 Eighth Amendment action against corrections officials, when corrections officer responsible for distributing prescription drugs to inmates was, on single occasion, unable to dispense inmate's prescription for insomnia medication due to fact that prison had run out of drug; panic attack and similar symptoms claimed by inmate could not have resulted from single missed dose, there was no showing of deliberate indifference, and alleged symptoms could not place inmate in jeopardy or cause permanent harm. King v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 977. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Allegations of state prisoners, concerning alleged improper treatment while in isolation cells, relating to, among other things, denial of medical assistance for some 14 hours, without specifying any individual suffered therefrom, and deficiencies with respect to food service and cleanliness failed to reach the constitutional dimensions required for court intervention. Jones v. Superintendent, W.D.Va.1974, 370 F.Supp. 488. Prisons 17(2)

2974. Temperature in facilities, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

General poor physical conditions in segregation unit at state prison during prisoner's confinement in administrative segregation, including fact that atmospheric temperature often dipped into the 40 degree range and occasionally into the 30's and that length of detention was uncertain constituted a violation of cruel and unusual punishment clause of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8. Parker v. Cook, S.D.Fla.1979, 464 F.Supp. 350, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds 642 F.2d 865. Sentencing And Punishment 1553

2975. Assault by other prisoners, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Allegations that officials of transferor prison and transportation officer were aware that inmate had been placed in protective custody at transferor prison and medical intake report indicating that inmate was in protective custody status were insufficient to support inmate's claim against prison officials under § 1983, alleging that he was subjected to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment when he was placed with general prison population, instead of continuing in protective custody, at transferee prison, and that as result, he was attacked and injured by unknown inmate; inmate showed only inadvertent or good-faith error by prison officials. Blankenship v. Meachum, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1988, 840 F.2d 741. Civil Rights 1395(7)

Prison guards' failure to prevent and protect prisoner from beatings by fellow inmates did not violate this section, especially where prisoner could have requested to be put in segregation for his own protection but did not. Schyska v. Shifflet, N.D.Ill.1973, 364 F.Supp. 116. Civil Rights 1093

2976. Riots or disturbances, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Evidence presented on prison guards' motion for summary judgment on inmate's Eighth Amendment claim supported reliable inference of wantonness in infliction of pain when prison guards placed inmate in four-point restraints for eight hours, without permitting him to wash off mace that had been sprayed on him during prison disturbance, to use toilet, or to receive medical attention; inmate was allegedly screaming in pain as mace "burned" his face, once immobilized, he begged and pleaded for water to wash off mace, guards refused to wash off mace or permit him to wash himself, and no medical personnel checked on his condition and he was left helpless and in immense pain for eight hours. Williams v. Benjamin, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1996, 77 F.3d 756. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Discretion of prison authorities to confine prisoners in cells because of riot emergency was not wholly immune from judicial review. La Batt v. Twomey, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1975, 513 F.2d 641.

After all lesser methods to regain control of state prison in which there had been three days of flooding, burning and destruction of property by inmates had failed, confinement of agitators in maximum security seclusion cell did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment for which prisoner so confined could recover damages under this section, though several prisoners were caused to share the same cell for a period of time, where such confinement was for short period during emergency while attempts were made to make other arrangements and where the nutritional and hygienic needs of the inmates were satisfied. Beishir v. Swenson, W.D.Mo.1971, 331 F.Supp. 1227. Civil Rights 1092; Sentencing And Punishment 1553

2977. Lockups, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Complaint wherein three inmates of Louisiana State Penitentiary alleged that they had been deprived of due process of law in a prison disciplinary hearing which resulted in their being sentenced to a "lock down" stated a claim upon which relief could be granted. Mitchell v. Beaubouef, C.A.5 (La.) 1978, 581 F.2d 412, rehearing denied 586 F.2d 842, certiorari denied 99 S.Ct. 2416, 441 U.S. 966, 60 L.Ed.2d 1072. Prisons 13(10)

Holding inmate in keeplock confinement for eight days prior to superintendent's disciplinary hearing in violation of New York regulations requiring that hearing be held, absent exigent circumstances, within seven days of inmate's initial confinement, did not amount to constitutional violation redressable under § 1983. Howard v. Wilkerson, S.D.N.Y.1991, 768 F.Supp. 1002. Civil Rights 1092

Prison officials' failure to provide disciplinary hearing during six and eight-day periods that inmate was in "keeplock" and their failure to submit a misbehavior report, the mechanism which triggered procedural safeguards accorded inmates confined in keeplock, inexcusably denied inmate opportunity to be heard for an "indefinite period of time," particularly absent allegation of any circumstances justifying postponement. Scott v. Coughlin, W.D.N.Y.1990, 727 F.Supp. 806. Prisons 13(7.1); Prisons 13(8)

Inmate's claim that he was denied due process in his adjustment committee hearing and placement in keeplock did not constitute a claim cognizable under § 1983; New York prison regulation gave superintendent discretion to keep inmate in keeplock. Dell'Orfano v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1988, 692 F.Supp. 226. Civil Rights 1092; Constitutional Law 272(2)

Prisoners have reasonable expectation rooted in past practices of state prison authorities that they will not be confined indiscriminately in their cells, absent some situation that poses danger to smooth functioning of prison, but essential to all other correctional goals is institutional consideration of internal security within correction facilities themselves, and it is in light of this legitimate penal objective that court must assess challenges to prison regulations based on asserted constitutional rights of prisoners, and thus prisoners must expect that their limited freedom will be curtailed at times of indisputable crisis, and for reasonable periods thereafter for precautionary measures. Clifton v. Robinson, E.D.Pa.1980, 500 F.Supp. 30. Prisons 13(5)

Even if state prisoner, who was in maximum security classification, accurately characterized prison officials' action in locking him up for five days in "hole" for throwing hot coffee on another inmate as overreaction to "harmless horseplay," such overreaction did not represent violation of prisoner's rights under Constitution, but, rather, lockup, at most, represented error by prison officials in exercise of discretion placed in them to maintain discipline and security that was required within walls of maximum security prison. Maxton v. Johnson, D.C.S.C.1980, 488 F.Supp. 1030. Prisons 13(5)

2978. Notice, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Where guidelines in effect at Tennessee state prison provided that administrative segregation could be based on an inmate's entire past record, that disciplinary reports alleging general behavior requiring administrative segregation could be initiated only by the warden and not by prison employees generally and that administrative segregation was one option available to disciplinary board in response to finding that an inmate committed a specific rule infraction, inmates who were charged with threatening the security of the institution were entitled to notice regarding facts which triggered the charges; such notice should be sufficiently specific to enable inmates to marshal evidence in their behalf but need not disclose identity of informants or review all items in the inmate's prior record which might be properly considered. Bills v. Henderson, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1980, 631 F.2d 1287. Prisons 13(8)

State prisoner's complaint alleging that prison regulations set out the only reasons for which prisoners may be placed in close management status, that plaintiff was transferred to close management without notice or hearing and that failure to provide notice or hearing violated plaintiff's due process rights was sufficient to state claim for relief. Mitchell v. Hicks, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1980, 614 F.2d 1016. Prisons 13.5(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Once prisoner asserting § 1983 claim based on segregated confinement proves existence of state-created liberty interest protected by Due Process Clause, court must determine whether prison officials adequately protected that interest by granting prisoner: 24 hours notice of charges against him; written statement of evidence relied on by fact-finder at hearing; reasons for disciplinary action taken by hearing officer; meaningful assistance from prison employee in presenting defense; and fair and impartial hearing officer. Cespedes v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1997, 956 F.Supp. 454, on reconsideration 969 F.Supp. 254. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Segregated confinement procedures at state prison were constitutionally inadequate in that prison review committee failed to define standards and considerations by which need for inmate's continued segregated confinement was to be judged, inmate was not being provided with sufficient information as to why his segregated confinement was being continued, and committee failed to obtain sufficient information as to inmate's psychological condition to enable it to make informed decision on inmate's proper confinement status; prison officials would be enjoined from continuing unconstitutional procedures. U. S. ex rel. Hoss v. Cuyler, E.D.Pa.1978, 452 F.Supp. 256. Prisons 13(5)

2978A. Due process, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

State inmate did not have protected liberty interest in not being held in administrative segregation for three months, and thus inmate's placement in administrative segregation did not violate due process, where there was no evidence that conditions of confinement in administrative segregation imposed atypical and significant hardship. Wilkins v. Ramirez, S.D.Cal.2006, 455 F.Supp.2d 1080. Prisons 13(5)

Prison inmate who was retained in administrative segregation unit (ASU) after expiration of his disciplinary term in security housing unit (SHU) was not thereby deprived of any due process rights; after his initial placement in administrative segregation inmate received written notice of the reasons for his placement and a hearing at which he had opportunity to present his views, and thereafter he received periodic reviews of the placement. Lindgren v. Curry, C.D.Cal.2006, 451 F.Supp.2d 1073. Prisons 13(5)

2978B. Equal protection, solitary confinement or segregration of prisoners

Prisoner failed to state an equal protection claim based on allegation that majority of the inmates in special housing unit were black where he failed to allege intentional or purposeful discrimination. Dickens v. Taylor, D.Del.2006, 2006 WL 3190344. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State inmate failed to plead viable equal protection claim against prison officials and employees when he alleged that similarly situated inmates were not so arbitrarily administratively segregated from general population, were not required to complete two 30-day work evaluations to be eligible for good-time credits, and were not required to work for free or deprived of work, given that inmate, who did not claim fundamental right or differential treatment based on suspect classification, could not contend that his placement in administrative segregation was unreasonable in light of prison officials' considerable discretion in placement decisions, and did not allege that his work situation or conditions placed on his eligibility for good-time credits lacked rational basis. Hornsby v. Jones, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2006, 188 Fed.Appx. 684, 2006 WL 1728022, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

2979. Necessity of hearing, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Even if hearing accorded petitioner after he was placed in solitary confinement minimized or eliminated any compensable harm resulting from initial denial of procedural safeguards, his constitutional claim that he was unjustifiably placed in segregation without prior hearing was nonetheless actionable. Hughes v. Rowe, U.S.Ill.1980, 101 S.Ct. 173, 449 U.S. 5, 66 L.Ed.2d 163. Civil Rights 1092

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

District court's findings that prison official violated prisoner's procedural due process rights by placing him in administrative segregation without a hearing, and that official acted maliciously, arbitrarily and with punitive intent, was supported by sufficient evidence; issue of credibility was crucial because prisoner and official presented sharply conflicting evidence. Stevens v. McHan, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1993, 3 F.3d 1204. Civil Rights 1420

Responsible state officials who had the power to grant inmate a hearing prior to administrative segregation did not merely fail to follow state rules in providing deficient hearing, but obviously knew that inmate was in peril of being deprived of his liberty interest and, thus, the deprivation of liberty, giving rise to § 1983 claim, was neither "random" nor "unauthorized," so as to excuse, on grounds of impossibility, the state's failure to accord inmate a predeprivation hearing conforming to due process requirements. Patterson v. Coughlin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1985, 761 F.2d 886, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 879, 474 U.S. 1100, 88 L.Ed.2d 916. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Where placing prisoner in isolation for three days after he circulated a memorandum among other inmates informing them of state court action which he had commenced, and his later placement in a cell with two other inmates who were allegedly instructed not to mingle with him, were not so much intended as punishment as to preserve order in the jail, and since any punishment that might be inferred was minimal, prisoner was not denied due process by failure of jail officials to accord him an administrative hearing before imposition of punishment. Christman v. Skinner, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1972, 468 F.2d 723. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Confinement of intersexual inmate in administrative segregation for 438 days without a hearing solely due to a genetically created ambiguous gender violated inmate's due process rights; prison's decision to place inmate in administrative segregation for a legitimate security reason was a rationale choice for the first thirty days while they evaluated housing options and inmate's behavior patterns, but to continue the same placement with no attempts at elevating her living conditions was completely arbitrary and capricious and without a rationale basis. DiMarco v. Wyoming Dept. of Corrections Div. of Prisons, Wyo. Women's Center, D.Wyo.2004, 300 F.Supp.2d 1183. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

Failure to provide inmate with hearing pursuant to Kansas Administration Regulations within 72 hours of his placement in administrative segregation based upon finding that he was escape risk did not violate his constitutional rights, where inmate received hearing prior to his placement in administrative segregation. Jacobs v. Stotts, D.Kan.1993, 829 F.Supp. 1245. Prisons 13(8)

2980. Interviews, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Prison official's interviews of inmates placed in administrative segregation did not satisfy inmates' right to an informal interview for purposes of inmates' § 1983 procedural due process claims; official conducted investigation for his supervisors who would determine whether further steps, bringing criminal charges or issuing conduct violation, were necessary and thus, official was not the designated decision maker. Jones v. Coonce, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 7 F.3d 1359, rehearing denied. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(7.1)

2981. Evidence considered, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

In determining whether prisoners could safely be returned to general population from administrative segregation, it was not permissible for warden to give artificial weight to fact that each prisoner had been convicted of violent attack upon prison guard, i.e., warden could not properly consider such convictions as controlling or preponderant guidelines, but he could properly consider underlying facts and their convictions as historical facts of their cases and as factors to be considered among others in determining whether, after lapse of months or even of years, it was safe to terminate segregated status. Kelly v. Brewer, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1975, 525 F.2d 394. Prisons 12; Prisons 13(5)

Virginia prisoner was not deprived of his constitutional rights, on ground that his commitment to solitary confinement was based on knowing receipt of false testimony by prison officer as to defendant's alleged threat to do officer bodily harm, where prisoner's allegations in such regard were broad and unsupported and seemed to be partially refuted by his own pleadings, in which he pled that he "lost his temper," "cussed" the officer and "slammed a chair" into a table, and due process commands of governing Supreme Court decision were complied with; it seemed apparent that had the officer merely asserted statements contained in the pleadings the adjustment committee would have had reason to find that petitioner threatened the officer with bodily harm. Underwood v. Loving, W.D.Va.1975, 391 F.Supp. 1214. Civil Rights 1395(7); Constitutional Law 272(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2982. Periodic review, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Reason or reasons for administrative segregation of prisoner must not only be valid at outset but must continue to subsist during period of segregation, and where inmate is held in segregation for prolonged or indefinite period, due process requires that situation be reviewed periodically and meaningfully and by relevant standards. Kelly v. Brewer, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1975, 525 F.2d 394. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Members of administrative segregation review committee had sufficient "personal involvement" in constitutionally offensive decisions to keep prisoner in administrative segregation to impose liability under § 1983, despite fact that final determination was made by the prison superintendent; committee members were integral parts of the decision making process which the jury ultimately found to be unconstitutional since prison superintendents considered and relied on the recommendations of their committee. McClary v. Coughlin, W.D.N.Y.2000, 87 F.Supp.2d 205, affirmed 237 F.3d 185. Civil Rights 1358

Persons confined in administrative segregation are entitled to a periodic review of their confinement and prison administration must have valid reason for segregation. Hooker v. Arnold, M.D.Pa.1978, 454 F.Supp. 527. Prisons 13(5)

Decisions to place county jail inmates in indeterminate confinement in isolation must be reviewed at least every ten days by a panel of officials, none of whom made the original decision to place the inmate in indefinite confinement. Tate v. Kassulke, W.D.Ky.1975, 409 F.Supp. 651. Prisons 13(6)

Ideally, weekly evaluation of prisoners in segregation, for purpose of determining whether they were fit and ready to be returned to general prison population, would be conducted by impartial state official not under control of Commissioner of Corrections, rather than by Deputy Commissioner, but selecting appropriate procedure was judgment entrusted to state officials, not federal judges, and federal court could not, in civil action brought by state prisoner, mandate procedure deemed desirable. Tyree v. Fitzpatrick, D.C.Mass.1971, 325 F.Supp. 554, affirmed 445 F.2d 627. Civil Rights 1092; Courts 495; Prisons 13(5)

2983. Statement of reasons, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Assertion, by state prison inmate that his right to remain free from disciplinary segregation absent specified, substantive predicates complying with due process, was actionable under federal civil rights statute, as act relevant to deprivation was conscious act of disciplinary board in placing inmate in disciplinary segregation, not failure by board to render written statement of reasons for such confinement alleged by Board to constitute, at most, merely negligent conduct. Franklin v. Aycock, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1986, 795 F.2d 1253. Civil Rights 1092

State prison officials' decision to continue administrative confinement of prisoner had to be supported by specific evidence demonstrating applicability to some or all of certain approved criteria to prisoner's situation and by statement of reasons why applicable criteria required continued segregation of prisoner; absent finding that some or all of specified criteria required that prisoner's confinement be continued until next periodic review, prisoner was to be released from segregative confinement. U. S. ex rel. Hoss v. Cuyler, E.D.Pa.1978, 454 F.Supp. 51. Prisons 13(7.1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2984. Request of prisoner, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

State prisoner suffered no constitutional injury by being confined in protective custody at his own request. Taylor v. Strickland, D.C.S.C.1976, 411 F.Supp. 1390. Prisons 13(5)

Plaintiff prisoners, who were confined in protective custody cells at state prison pursuant to their own requests because of their fear that their lives would be in danger should they be returned to general prison population, failed to make required showing of barbaric conditions or exceptional circumstances which would entitle them to relief under this section. Fowler v. Anderson, E.D.Okla.1974, 386 F.Supp. 307. Civil Rights 1420

2985. Miscellaneous confinements or segregations, solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners

Disciplinary procedures in Nebraska prison which could result in loss of good-time credit or imposition of solitary confinement and which involved (1) a preliminary conference with chief correction supervisor and charging party at which prisoner was informed of misconduct charge and engaged in preliminary discussion on its merits, (2) preparation of a conduct report and hearing held before adjustment committee, at which report was read to inmate, and (3) opportunity at hearing to ask questions of the charging party were not fully adequate to satisfy due process requirements. Wolff v. McDonnell, U.S.Neb.1974, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 418 U.S. 539, 41 L.Ed.2d 935, 71 O.O.2d 336. Constitutional Law 272(2)

Gender-related disparate treatment in housing of homosexuals was rationally calibrated to address legitimate penological concerns, and was not in violation of equal protection, since institutions for females generally were much less violent than those for males and male inmates were more likely than female inmates to have homophobic attitudes. Veney v. Wyche, C.A.4 (Va.) 2002, 293 F.3d 726. Constitutional Law 224(5); Prisons 13(5)

Prison officials did not violate inmate's due process liberty interest by keeping inmate involuntarily in "voluntary" protective custody for six months; even though this placement cost him approximately half of his out-of-cell time, eliminated his access to employment, and restricted his access to prison facilities, such placement did not impose "atypical and significant hardship." Neal v. District of Columbia, C.A.D.C.1997, 131 F.3d 172, 327 U.S.App.D.C. 322, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 46, 525 U.S. 812, 142 L.Ed.2d 35. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

Inmate's segregation for 19 days was not atypical, significant deprivation as would support § 1983 action against prison officials for violating inmate's constitutional rights, even if inmate was locked in closed-front cell 24 hours per day, was not allowed to participate in activities available to general population or nonsegregated inmates housed in same area, was handcuffed whenever he left his cell, and lacked much contact with other inmates or staff. Williams v. Ramos, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1995, 71 F.3d 1246. Civil Rights 1092

Inmate was not kept in segregation in violation of prison regulation, and even if he had been so confined, his claim was for deprivation of liberty interest, under U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 14, § 1, an issue not presented. Ross v. Reed, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1983, 719 F.2d 689. Prisons 13(5)

Inmate's six-month confinement in segregated housing unit (SHU) following disciplinary hearing did not implicate liberty interest under Fourteenth Amendment so as to allow inmate to maintain civil rights action premised upon alleged procedural due process violations during disciplinary hearing; inmate was not subjected to punishment that imposed "atypical and significant hardship" in relation to ordinary incidents of prison life where, under New York prison regulations, inmates could be confined in SHU for extended periods for both punitive and nonpunitive reasons. Husbands v. McClellan, W.D.N.Y.1997, 957 F.Supp. 403, motion to amend denied 990 F.Supp. 214. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(5)

Inmate's confinement in administrative segregation did not give rise to viable claim under § 1983, absent allegation of deprivation of liberty which was atypical or substantial, or which was otherwise protected by state law. Everson v. Nelson, D.Kan.1996, 941 F.Supp. 1048. Civil Rights 1092

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 in connection with their decision to keep inmate in administrative segregation, where decision was based on variety of factors, including original circumstances that necessitated administrative segregation, events that occurred in interim, and committee's personal observations of inmate, inmate was given opportunity to present information to committee, and committee conducted regular reviews of his confinement, every seven days for first two months, and every month thereafter. Torres v. Irvin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 99 Fed.Appx. 292, 2004 WL 1147089, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

XXIV. VOTING AND ELECTIONS

<Subdivision Index>

Absentee ballots 3012
Appearance of name on ballot 3013-3015
Appearance of name on ballot - Generally 3013
Appearance of name on ballot - Deadlines 3015
Appearance of name on ballot - Position of name on ballot 3014
Apportionment 3016-3020
Apportionment - Generally 3016
Apportionment - At-large election 3019
Apportionment - One person one vote rule 3018
Apportionment - Racial discrimination 3017
Apportionment - Weighted voting 3020
At-large election, apportionment 3019
Campaign tactics 3021-3024
Campaign tactics - Generally 3021
Campaign tactics - Defamation 3022
Campaign tactics - Investigations 3023
Campaign tactics - Polls 3024
College students, primaries 3030
College students, registration 3037
Compelling state interest, recall elections 3033c

Contributions 3025
Counting of ballots 3026
Damages 3027
Deadlines, appearance of name on ballot 3015
Defamation, campaign tactics 3022
Investigations, campaign tactics 3023
Miscellaneous claims 3041
One person one vote rule, apportionment 3018
Polls, campaign tactics 3024
Position of name on ballot, appearance of name on ballot 3014
Primaries 3028-3030
Primaries - Generally 3028
Primaries - College students 3030
Primaries - Racial discrimination 3029
Qualifications of voters 3031, 3032

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualifications of voters - Generally 3031
Qualifications of voters - Racial discrimination 3032
Racial discrimination, apportionment 3017
Racial discrimination, primaries 3029
Racial discrimination, qualifications of voters 3032
Racial discrimination, registration 3036

Recall elections 3033a
Recall elections - Compelling state interest 3033c
Recall elections - Voters with direct interest 3033b
Referenda 3033
Refusal to hold election 3034
Registration 3035-3037
Registration - Generally 3035
Registration - College students 3037
Registration - Racial discrimination 3036
Residency requirements 3038
Stuffing of ballot box 3039
Voters with direct interest, recall elections 3033b
Voting and elections generally 3011
Voting devices 3040
Weighted voting, apportionment 3020

3011. Voting and elections generally

In light of unchallenged findings that no one was denied right to vote in state election and that votes claimed to have been wrongfully obtained would not have changed election, suit seeking to annul state election, which simply did not involve serious voting violations or aggravating factors such as racial discrimination or fraudulent conduct, did not justify federal intervention. Saxon v. Fielding, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1980, 614 F.2d 78. Federal Courts 52

If the election process itself reaches the point of patent and fundamental unfairness, a violation of the due process clause, U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14 § 1, may be indicated and relief available under this section proscribing a deprivation of rights. Griffin v. Burns, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1978, 570 F.2d 1065. Civil Rights 1032

Not every election irregularity will give rise to a constitutional claim and an action under this section. Hennings v. Grafton, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1975, 523 F.2d 861. Civil Rights 1032

Where no violation of voters' constitutional rights, privileges or immunities was shown in connection with election error, this section provided no remedy. Powell v. Power, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1970, 436 F.2d 84. Civil Rights 1029

County election workers' alleged act of refusing to permit voter whose voting machine had malfunctioned to cast another ballot was not cognizable as infringement on constitutional guarantees against discrimination in voting on account of sex or age, precluding voter's §§ 1983 action against county and county employees, absent evidence that employees had acted with sex bias or because of voter's age. Hill v. Gunn, S.D.N.Y.2005, 367 F.Supp.2d 532. Elections 11; Elections 13

Claims in voters' § 1983 action challenging state statutory requirement, that no vote cast in forthcoming gubernatorial recall election be counted for any candidate unless the voter also voted on the recall question itself, as a violation of their free speech, due process, and equal protection rights, as well as a violation of their right not to vote which was assertedly implicit in the Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-Sixth Amendments, would all be addressed under a single analytical framework. Partnoy v. Shelley, S.D.Cal.2003, 277

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

F.Supp.2d 1064, as modified on reconsideration. Constitutional Law 47

Although no precise line can be drawn between state action which will prompt a federal court to grant relief in an election dispute and that which will not, federal court intervention is more likely when the attack is on an officially sponsored election procedure which, in its basic aspect, is flawed than when the court is asked to count and validate ballots and enter into the details of the administration of the election. Duncan v. Poythress, N.D.Ga.1981, 515 F.Supp. 327, affirmed 657 F.2d 691, rehearing denied 664 F.2d 291, certiorari granted 102 S.Ct. 1426, 455 U.S. 937, 71 L.Ed.2d 647, certiorari dismissed 103 S.Ct. 368, 459 U.S. 1012, 74 L.Ed.2d 504. Elections 15

Before federal court could responsibly order a new presidential election in New York, claimants seeking extraordinary relief had to come forward with clear and convincing evidence that state officials or persons acting under color of state law, by intentionally depriving qualified voters of right to vote, altered outcome of election. Donohue v. Board of Elections of State of N. Y., E.D.N.Y.1976, 435 F.Supp. 957. Civil Rights 1422

While all procedures used by state as an integral part of the election process must pass muster against charges of discrimination or abridgement of the right to vote, it is not every limitation or incidental burden on the exercise of voting rights but is subject to a strict standard of review. Fishman v. Schaffer, D.C.Conn.1976, 418 F.Supp. 613. Elections 15

3012. Absentee ballots, voting and elections

Qualified voters who voted by absentee or shut-in ballots, later determined to be allowable only in general elections, in Democratic party primary for vacant city council seat in the 10th ward of the City of Providence were deprived by state officials of a constitutional right actionable under this section, since the state officials had, in effect, presented plaintiff class with "illegal ballots" and then refused to count their votes, and since plaintiffs' right to vote was thus clearly infringed. Griffin v. Burns, D.C.R.I.1977, 431 F.Supp. 1361, affirmed 570 F.2d 1065. Civil Rights 1029; Civil Rights 1032

3013. Appearance of name on ballot, voting and elections--Generally

Political party's refusal to permit prospective candidate to run for local party office failed to present justiciable controversy that was cognizable under statute that prohibits deprivation of federal constitutional rights under color of state law. Thompson v. Woodall, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1987, 819 F.2d 1052. Civil Rights 1032

If Illinois electoral Board did not perform, in opinion of plaintiff, its function of examining nominating petitions and certifying persons as candidates for elective office on ballot in accordance with law creating it, plaintiff was relegated to Illinois courts and was not entitled to relief in federal courts under this section. Daly v. Stratton, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1964, 326 F.2d 340. Courts 489(1)

Candidate and other civil rights plaintiff stated actionable § 1983 claim arising from appeal by board of elections from district judge's ruling in suit seeking to have candidate's name placed on ballot; plaintiffs alleged that filing of appeal and motion for stay pending appeal, as well as their timing, was specifically calculated to undercut exercise of candidate's First Amendment right to conduct his campaign, and that appeal and motion were frivolous. Hirschfeld v. Spanakos, S.D.N.Y.1994, 871 F.Supp. 190. Civil Rights 1395(1)

Strict application of cover sheet requirements of McKinney's N.Y. Election Code § 6-134, subd. 2 to petitions filed with the Board of Elections by plaintiffs and others on primary election ballot was not violative of this section as depriving plaintiffs of their constitutional right to appear on ballot absent evidence that plaintiffs relied upon advice given by the Board of Elections or any other state official to make out the cover sheet in the way they did or evidence that the cover sheet requirements were not otherwise applied uniformly among all candidates. Moldonado v. Rodriguez, S.D.N.Y.1981, 523 F.Supp. 177. Civil Rights 1033(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In view of fact that Florida election code provided no means by which an independent presidential candidate might objectively demonstrate his support and where independent presidential candidate who brought action under this section to challenge Florida statutory scheme had considerable national support, it was an unconstitutional abridgement of the rights of the candidate and of plaintiffs who were voters and potential electors to deny independent candidate opportunity to be placed on Florida ballot in upcoming presidential election. McCarthy v. Askew, S.D.Fla.1976, 420 F.Supp. 775, affirmed 540 F.2d 1254. Elections 22

For purpose of demonstrating that a would-be candidate has a significant measurable quantum of community support, requirements of Connecticut election law, C.G.S.A. §§ 9-453a to 9-453s, that a potential candidate submit petition signed by electors equal to only one percent of the number who voted for the same office in the previous election, with required forms being available after the previous statewide elections, impose no constitutionally impermissible burdens on prospective candidates in those respects. Fishman v. Schaffer, D.C.Conn.1976, 418 F.Supp. 613. Elections 21

3014. ---- Position of name on ballot, appearance of name on ballot, voting and elections

Denial of nominee's right to position on a ballot by episodic election irregularity in county primary election does not deprive his supporters of federal constitutional right. Gamza v. Aguirre, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1980, 619 F.2d 449, rehearing denied 625 F.2d 1016. Elections 22

3015. ---- Deadlines, appearance of name on ballot, voting and elections

There were no actions on part of state officials which barred political party from having its candidate for governor placed on ballot for 1994 general election, as required to support suit under § 1983, even though party claimed that it was precluded from filing its nominee for primary election by specified date due to mistaken belief by Secretary of State that party did not meet statutory requirements for a "political party"; there were other valid grounds for refusal to accept tendered nomination, as party had not filed required anti-Communist oath. Independent Party of Arkansas v. Priest, E.D.Ark.1995, 907 F.Supp. 1276. Civil Rights 1032

Where information voluntarily furnished plaintiffs' representative by Louisiana Secretary of State and State Attorney General as to deadline for placing name of plaintiff and his electors on 1976 general election ballot for office of President of United States was the law as it stood prior to 1974 amendment of LSA-R.S. 18.624(c) requiring nominating papers to be filed before the first, rather than second primary, as under prior law, and plaintiffs' petition was timely filed under preamendment law, state election officials were estopped from enforcing the amended law against plaintiff, notwithstanding contention that plaintiffs were charged with knowledge of the amended law and could not rely on opinions of the State Attorney General or that it was physically impossible to place another name on the ballot due to construction of the voting machines. McCarthy v. Hardy, E.D.La.1976, 420 F.Supp. 410. Estoppel 62.2(2)

3016. Apportionment, voting and elections--Generally

A claim that a state statute effected an apportionment that deprived plaintiffs of equal protection of the laws in violation of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14 did not assert a federal constitutional claim unsubstantial and frivolous, for purposes of determining jurisdiction of the subject matter. Baker v. Carr, U.S.Tenn.1962, 82 S.Ct. 691, 369 U.S. 186, 7 L.Ed.2d 663, on remand 206 F.Supp. 341. Federal Courts 180

Proposed city charter amendment relating to councilmanic districts was properly enjoined where it would produce unconstitutional variance between districts measured on basis of total population, although districts in question would have been sufficiently equal if measured by registered voters and even if existing charter required apportionment according to registered voters. Ellis v. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, C.A.4 (Md.) 1965, 352 F.2d 123, on remand 267 F.Supp. 263. Injunction 85(1); Municipal Corporations 80

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

City's redrawing of nine council districts based on census, resulting in an 8.8 percent deviation from the largest district population to the smallest, was a minor deviation, and thus, insufficient to create a prima facie case of invidious discrimination under the Fourteenth Amendment or a claim for denial of the right to vote under the Fifteenth Amendment. Baines v. Masiello, W.D.N.Y.2003, 288 F.Supp.2d 376. Constitutional Law 82(8); Constitutional Law 225.3(6); Municipal Corporations 80

Fact that some Tennessee voters for state senate had been moved from even-numbered district to odd-numbered district so that, under a staggered election plan, they would not vote for senator for another two years, did not render the plan unconstitutional. Mader v. Crowell, M.D.Tenn.1980, 498 F.Supp. 226. States 27(1)

3017. ---- Racial discrimination, apportionment, voting and elections

Plaintiffs who brought action under this section alleging that at-large method of electing city directors effectively diluted voting power of blacks and excluded them from meaningful participation in election of city directors and in political processes and government of city were not entitled to relief under any theory. Leadership Roundtable v. City of Little Rock, E.D.Ark.1980, 499 F.Supp. 579, affirmed 661 F.2d 701. Civil Rights 1448

3018. ---- One person one vote rule, apportionment, voting and elections

Where Massachusetts vocational district school committee representatives were not elected but were appointed by elected school committees of cities and towns, and appointees to district school committees did not have to be members of local school committee, system was appointive, not elective, and thus did not violate "one man, one vote" principle on theory that committee membership that was disproportionate to district population ratios. Burton v. Whittier Vocational Regional School Dist., D.C.Mass.1978, 449 F.Supp. 37, affirmed 587 F.2d 66. Constitutional Law 225.3(11)

3019. ---- At-large election, apportionment, voting and elections

Since Mobile, Alabama, is a unitary electoral district and city commission elections are conducted at large, there can be no claim that the "one person, one vote" principle has been violated, and therefore nobody's vote has been "diluted" in the sense in which that word is used in Reynolds v. Sims. (Per Mr. Justice Stewart with three Justices joining, one Justice concurring in the result, and one Justice concurring in the judgment.) City of Mobile, Ala. v. Bolden, U.S.Ala.1980, 100 S.Ct. 1490, 446 U.S. 55, 64 L.Ed.2d 47, dissenting opinion 100 S.Ct. 1519, 446 U.S. 55, 64 L.Ed.2d 47, on remand 626 F.2d 1324. Constitutional Law 225.3(1)

3020. ---- Weighted voting, apportionment, voting and elections

While weighted voting might not be desirable method for permanent reapportionment of parish school board, so long as plan was not shown to import its own discrimination it would be an acceptable palliative until permanent plan could be formulated. Dameron v. Tangipahoa Parish Police Jury, E.D.La.1970, 315 F.Supp. 137. Schools 48(1)

3021. Campaign tactics, voting and elections--Generally

Neither federal Constitution nor any civil rights law prohibits legitimate activity including canvassing, poster hanging and poll watching by partisan political personnel in election. Shakman v. Democratic Organization of Cook County, N.D.Ill.1969, 310 F.Supp. 1398, reversed on other grounds 435 F.2d 267, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 1383, 402 U.S. 909, 28 L.Ed.2d 650, on remand 356 F.Supp. 1241. Elections 319

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3022. ---- Defamation, campaign tactics, voting and elections

No authority could be read into this section which would provide for a cause of action thereunder by one candidate in a primary election against another candidate who, in the heat of political battle, made nonfactual averments or defamatory remarks against that official's reputation in a newspaper advertisement, and standing alone, such advertisement presented no invasion of constitutional rights nor any basis for a damage action under this section. Sinchak v. Parente, W.D.Pa.1966, 262 F.Supp. 79. Civil Rights 1038

3023. ---- Investigations, campaign tactics, voting and elections

Former county commissioner did not have civil rights cause of action under § 1983 for electoral loss allegedly caused by state attorney's alleged use of political power to oppose commissioner in his election campaign or pursuing bad faith investigation of him after his vehicle was stolen and obtaining civil contempt adjudication against him for refusal to answer questions during investigation of admitted thieves. Gersten v. Rundle, S.D.Fla.1993, 833 F.Supp. 906, affirmed 56 F.3d 1389, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 924, 516 U.S. 1118, 133 L.Ed.2d 853. Civil Rights 1032

Allegations by candidate for local election that conspiracy among township board of supervisors and election opponent to initiate criminal investigation caused candidate to be deprived of opportunity to win primary election for township board of supervisors did not state claim under § 1983 for violation of due process rights; there was no federally protected right to win election to public office. Lahaza v. Azeff, E.D.Pa.1992, 790 F.Supp. 88. Constitutional Law 274.2(1)

3024. ---- Polls, campaign tactics, voting and elections

Defeated candidate for Kentucky circuit judgeship had no right of action under this section against incumbent judge who was reelected, chairman and cochairman of election campaign of incumbent judge, and president and officers of bar association, in connection with poll of association members concerning qualifications of candidates. Gorman v. Lukowsky, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1970, 431 F.2d 971. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3025. Contributions, voting and elections

Federal court, hearing challenge of Wisconsin Socialist Workers 1976 Campaign Committee and others to W.S.A. 11.001 et seq., relating to disclosure of names of contributors and recipients of funds, would not require evidence or specific acts of harassment of contributors before granting relief, since to do so would impose unnecessarily strict burden on plaintiffs. Wisconsin Socialist Workers 1976 Campaign Committee v. McCann, E.D.Wis.1977, 433 F.Supp. 540. Declaratory Judgment 346

3026. Counting of ballots, voting and elections

General rule of non-intervention by federal courts in local election disputes precluded District Court's issuance of preliminary injunction, ordering the Puerto Rico Electoral Commission to identify and set aside, but not consider, certain ballots cast in Puerto Rico's gubernatorial election, the validity of which were challenged by losing gubernatorial candidate and his supporting voters, in §§ 1983 action against Election Commission and its officers; the Commission had ordered that the ballots were required to be counted, so that challenging candidate and voters could not show that a discrete group of voters had been disenfranchised. Rossello-Gonzalez v. Calderon-Serra, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2004, 393 F.3d 16, withdrawn from bound volume, opinion corrected and superseded 398 F.3d 1. Injunction 138.51

Federal court intervention was inappropriate in a civil rights action brought by political party challenging a ruling of the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico allowing the counting of ballots which were mismarked by the electors, but which clearly showed elector's intent. Partido Nuevo Progresista v. Perez, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1980, 639 F.2d 825, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 2318, 451 U.S. 985, 68 L.Ed.2d 842. Judgment 828.20(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3027. Damages, voting and elections

Even though municipal board of elections acted in bad faith by moving in Court of Appeals six days before election for stay of district court's order requiring board to place candidate's name on ballot, candidate failed to prove any damages in his subsequent § 1983 action against board; he did not show that board's action caused him to lose election or that his campaign would have spent less money but for board's actions, and attorney fees that Court of Appeals awarded to candidate as sanction after denying motion for stay eliminated that as item of damages necessary to make candidate whole. Hirschfeld v. Spanakos, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 104 F.3d 16. Civil Rights 1032

3028. Primaries, voting and elections--Generally

Recovery could be had for denial of right to vote at primary election for same reasons as apply to final election. Nixon v. Herndon, U.S.Tex.1927, 47 S.Ct. 446, 273 U.S. 536, 71 L.Ed. 759. Elections 57

Actions of state democratic party in certifying as democratic nominee for governor candidate receiving fewest total number of votes in runoff election did not implicate any federally protected right, where runoff was marked by widespread misrepresentations and illegal actions taken by other candidate and his staff at highest level, committee had attempted to determine lawful primary winner in circumstances where opponents had created situation making absolute accuracy impossible, and state process was available but not used to address any errors. Curry v. Baker, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1986, 802 F.2d 1302, stay denied 107 S.Ct. 5, 479 U.S. 1301, 93 L.Ed.2d 1, certiorari dismissed 107 S.Ct. 1262, 479 U.S. 1023, 93 L.Ed.2d 819. Elections 136.1

While the individual defendants, who were charged with conspiring together to take over or interfere with the American Labor Party locally by registering in primary election for mayor and voting in that election, may have taken a less than serious view of the fortunes and position of the Labor Party, their conduct did not amount to anything more than robust, though sometimes clownish, assertion of political rights; and although they obviously were in cahoots to accomplish whatever they did, their joint action was not a conspiracy to deprive anyone of constitutional rights within the meaning of this section. Hooks v. Eure, W.D.N.C.1976, 423 F.Supp. 55. Conspiracy 7.5(2)

3029. ---- Racial discrimination, primaries, voting and elections

Where local party authorities acting pursuant to regulation prescribed by party's state executive committee refused to permit Negro to vote in Democratic primary in Georgia to select candidates for state and federal offices solely on account of his race, they deprived Negro of a right secured to him by the constitution and laws of the United States in violation of U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 14, 15 and 17, for which he was entitled to recover damages under this section. Chapman v. King, C.C.A.5 (Ga.) 1946, 154 F.2d 460, certiorari denied 66 S.Ct. 905, 327 U.S. 800, 90 L.Ed. 1025.

3030. ---- College students, primaries, voting and elections

Election schedule, which set primary election in town for January 2, did not discriminate unconstitutionally against students who attended colleges located in town, in that burden on students imposed by election schedule was not so severe as itself to constitute an unconstitutionally onerous burden, and in that the election calendar was not arbitrary and was not unconnected to any important state goal. Walgren v. Board of Selectmen of Town of Amherst, Mass., D.C.Mass.1974, 373 F.Supp. 624, affirmed 519 F.2d 1364. Constitutional Law 225.2(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3031. Qualifications of voters, voting and elections--Generally

Voting Rights Act provision forbidding the practice of disqualifying potential voters for their failure to provide information irrelevant to determining their eligibility to vote could be enforced by a private right of action under § 1983; neither Voting Rights Act's provision for enforcement by the Attorney General nor Congress's failure to provide for a private right of action expressly in Voting Rights Act required the conclusion that Congress did not intend such a right to exist. Schwier v. Cox, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 340 F.3d 1284, on remand 412 F.Supp.2d 1266. Civil Rights 1040; Elections 12(9.1)

Short of attack on convictions of plaintiffs on their pleas of guilty to receiving unemployment compensation benefits by reason of misrepresentations, plaintiffs had no right to challenge their disqualification from voting that resulted from the convictions under constitutional Alabama law. Waddy v. Davis, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1971, 445 F.2d 1. Elections 90

3032. ---- Racial discrimination, qualifications of voters, voting and elections

City election poll worker's preventing black voter from voting was racially motivated, as required to support voter's § 1983 equal protection action against worker, even though voter's name was not on list of registered voters, where poll worker, who had known voter for years, did not follow state's instructions to call county clerk's office to verify residency, which may have revealed that voter met the residency requirement, and did not allow voter to fill out challenged ballot or direct voter to county polling place. Taylor v. Howe, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 225 F.3d 993. Constitutional Law 215.3; Municipal Corporations 747(1)

Provision of Texas Constitution and Texas Election Code barring convicted felons from voting or holding public office do not, on their face, deprive persons of any constitutional right on account of their race. Hayes v. Williams, S.D.Tex.1972, 341 F.Supp. 182.

3033. Referenda, voting and elections

Parents of school children failed to state a federal civil rights claim arising out of a referendum which rejected their attempt to "detach" their property from one school district and "attach" it to another; technical violation of notice requirements and limitations period for referendum were nothing more than garden variety election irregularities which could adequately be dealt with through state law procedures. Dieckhoff v. Severson, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1990, 915 F.2d 1145. Civil Rights 1317

Wrongs allegedly committed by village officials, who during period preceding public referendum on bond issue allegedly deliberately misrepresented facts concerning need for and cost of sewer system and failed to disclose material facts, including presumably their personal interests therein, were not intimately connected with ballot itself or right to vote on issue authorizing village to issue bonds to pay for 25 percent of cost of design and construction of sewer system, and thus did not provide basis for federal cause of action. Rudisill v. Flynn, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1980, 619 F.2d 692. Municipal Corporations 108.10

3033A. Recall elections, voting and elections

Claims in voters' § 1983 action challenging state statutory requirement, that no vote cast in forthcoming gubernatorial recall election be counted for any candidate unless the voter also voted on the recall question itself, as a violation of their free speech, due process, and equal protection rights, as well as a violation of their right not to vote which was assertedly implicit in the Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-Sixth Amendments, would all be addressed under a single analytical framework. Partnoy v. Shelley, S.D.Cal.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 1064, as modified on reconsideration. Constitutional Law 47

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

District court considering voters' challenge of state statutory requirement, that no vote cast in forthcoming gubernatorial recall election be counted for any candidate unless the voter also voted on the recall question itself, as a violation of their free speech, due process, and equal protection rights, was required first to determine the extent to which the statute burdened the voters' First and Fourteenth Amendment rights, and then to determine whether such a burden was either severe or only a reasonable nondiscriminatory restriction. Partnoy v. Shelley, S.D.Cal.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 1064, as modified on reconsideration. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.2); Constitutional Law 225.2(6); Constitutional Law 274.2(3)

3033B. ---- Voters with direct interest, recall elections, voting and elections

State's asserted interest in ensuring that only those voters with a direct interest in gubernatorial recall successor election are allowed to vote and in making certain that those votes are not diluted was not a compelling state interest, as required to justify, against First Amendment free speech and Fourteenth Amendment due process and equal protection challenge, statutory requirement that no vote cast in recall election be counted for any candidate unless the voter also voted on the recall question itself; simply because a person was either opposed to the recall election process or agnostic to its merits, would not mean that that person was not directly interested in who would be their next Governor. Partnoy v. Shelley, S.D.Cal.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 1064, as modified on reconsideration. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.2); Constitutional Law 225.2(6); Constitutional Law 274.2(3); States 52

3033C. ---- Compelling state interest, recall elections, voting and elections

State's asserted interest in protecting integrity and continuity of validly elected officials, and in protecting the people's interest in seeing their elected officials remain in office unless voters show substantial interest in whether the official is removed, was not a compelling state interest, as required to justify, against First Amendment free speech and Fourteenth Amendment due process and equal protection challenge, statutory requirement that no vote cast in recall election be counted for any candidate unless the voter also voted on the recall question itself; there was no requirement as to number of voters who must vote on the recall, and the requirement had effect of reducing the vote on the successor question, as it disallowed votes by otherwise properly registered voters. Partnoy v. Shelley, S.D.Cal.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 1064, as modified on reconsideration. Constitutional Law 90.1(1.2); Constitutional Law 225.2(6); Constitutional Law 274.2(3); States 52

3034. Refusal to hold election, voting and elections

Refusal of county board of supervisors to hold election on bond issue did not rise to level of constitutional deprivation; even if board members improperly eliminated signatures on plaintiffs' protest petition or viewed required number of signatures too restrictively, proper avenue for such claims was through established state election procedures and not federal courts. Thrasher v. Board of Sup'rs of Alcorn County, Miss., N.D.Miss.1991, 765 F.Supp. 896. Counties 178

Drainage commissioners did not, by failing to call drainage commissioner elections, deprive landowners of their constitutionally protected right to election, where commissioners did not interfere with landowners' ability to petition state court for election as provided under Illinois law. Spinka v. Brill, N.D.Ill.1990, 750 F.Supp. 306. Elections 15

3035. Registration, voting and elections--Generally

C.R.S. 1-2-203(2)(j), distinguishing between political parties and political organizations by allowing voter registrants to indicate their affiliations only with political parties unconstitutionally burdened opportunity of political organizations to promote their minority interests. Baer v. Meyer, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1984, 728 F.2d 471.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Elections 19

Help America Vote Act (HAVA) conferred right to vote in federal election, enforceable under §§ 1983. Florida Democratic Party v. Hood, N.D.Fla.2004, 342 F.Supp.2d 1073. Elections 8.1

Plaintiffs challenging state's claimed failure to comply with National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) stated claim under federal civil rights statute, § 1983, and thus failure to provide notice of violation to chief election official of state, as required for bringing a private right of action under NVRA, was irrelevant; NVRA creates enforceable right under § 1983 and contains no express provision limiting plaintiffs' remedy for violations to the remedy created by the Act, but instead states that rights and remedies created by NVRA "are in addition to all other rights and remedies provided by law." Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now v. Miller, W.D.Mich.1995, 912 F.Supp. 976, affirmed 129 F.3d 833. Civil Rights 1029

Provisions of election laws of New Hampshire, requiring that one seeking to change his party registration do so before the first day on which candidates could file for the next primary election and providing for newspaper notice and posting notice of the dates on which supervisors of the checklist would meet to allow such change of registration, did not violate constitutional and civil rights of independent voters who voted in party primaries but failed to appear before supervisors of the checklist to register again as independents. Young v. Gardner, D.C.N.H.1980, 497 F.Supp. 396. Civil Rights 1032; Elections 19

3036. ---- Racial discrimination, registration, voting and elections

Consistent and extreme form of discrimination engaged in by former, though not by current, board of registrars in registering voters was significant factor to consider in determining likelihood of future civil rights violations. U. S. v. Atkins, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1963, 323 F.2d 733. Injunction 80

3037. ---- College students, registration, voting and elections

Action under color of state law which allegedly subjects college students to discriminatory voter registration requirements will support an action under this section. Auerbach v. Kinley, N.D.N.Y.1980, 499 F.Supp. 1329. Civil Rights 1033(2)

3038. Residency requirements, voting and elections

Ark.Stats. §§ 19-201 et seq. providing for at-large election of aldermen who must reside in their respective wards was not per se violative of equal protection clause of provision precluding abridgment of right to vote. Dove v. Bumpers, D.C.Ark.1973, 364 F.Supp. 407, remanded on other grounds 497 F.2d 895, affirmed 539 F.2d 1152.

3039. Stuffing of ballot box, voting and elections

Stuffing of a ballot box would amount to a violation of both this section and § 241 of Title 18. Munoz v. Amador, S.D.Tex.1964, 230 F.Supp. 591, appeal dismissed 340 F.2d 590.

3040. Voting devices, voting and elections

Voters and incumbent candidate for town supervisor had no cognizable due process claim in their §§ 1983 action against county board of elections, board commissioners, and opposing candidate based on voting machine malfunction that allegedly resulted in undercounting of votes for incumbent, absent allegation of intentional deprivation of the right to vote; malfunctioning voting machine that failed to register votes was an unfortunate but unintended irregularity, and as such, differed significantly from purposeful state conduct directed at disenfranchising a class or group of citizens. Shannon v. Jacobowitz, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 394 F.3d 90.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Constitutional Law 274.2(3); Elections 222

There was no evidence of intentional or willful conduct by state officials in connection with late delivery of voting machines for Republican primary election for state senator, as required to support § 1983 claim for deprivation of right to vote. Coto v. New York City Bd. of Elections, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 101 F.3d 803. Civil Rights 1422

Candidates for state and federal offices in county general election were not entitled to recover from county election officials in civil rights action based on inaccuracies in computerized voting system, absent allegation that officials manipulated system to undermine the election. Bodine v. Elkhart County Election Bd., C.A.7 (Ind.) 1986, 788 F.2d 1270. Civil Rights 1032

Malfunctioning of electronic voting devices in election for county offices, and permitting some voters to vote a second time where it was discovered that one of the devices had failed to record votes, did not establish a constitutional deprivation cognizable under this section. Hennings v. Grafton, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1975, 523 F.2d 861. Civil Rights 1032

County election workers' alleged act of refusing to permit voter whose voting machine had malfunctioned to cast another ballot amounted to negligence or incompetence, not willful conduct, precluding voter's §§ 1983 due process claim against county and county employees, absent showing of intent to cause deprivation of voter's right to vote, as opposed to mere intent to deny her another ballot. Hill v. Gunn, S.D.N.Y.2005, 367 F.Supp.2d 532. Constitutional Law 274.2(3); Elections 57

Plaintiffs did not establish civil rights claim for relief with respect to completed elections, where none of the irregularities claimed resulted from intentional, systematic conduct aimed at corrupting state's electoral process; original malfunctioning of voting machines was purely fortuitous and courts merely attempted to rectify situation. Lake v. State Bd. of Elections of North Carolina, M.D.N.C.1992, 798 F.Supp. 1199. Elections 12(4)

Voters and incumbent candidate demonstrated that their right to vote and have their votes counted for office of town supervisor was violated, in lawsuit under §§ 1983, on evidence that 295 voters entered voting machine but 139 votes were not recorded for town supervisor, only 1 vote was recorded for incumbent, and companion voting machine had non-participation rate of 1.49%. Shannon v. Jacobowitz, N.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 180253, Unreported, reversed and remanded 394 F.3d 90. Elections 295(1)

Exception to mootness for conduct capable of repetition, yet evading review was applicable to civil rights case brought by voter against New Mexico Secretary of State, in which challenged the production and certification of the New Mexico general election ballot and sought to have write-in ballot instead, even though election had already taken place by the time that voter's appeal was considered, where the New Mexico statutes regarding ballot production and ballot certification continued to remain in effect, so it was likely that the same dispute would occur between voter and secretary of state. Pearlman v. Vigil-Giron, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2003, 71 Fed.Appx. 11, 2003 WL 21666673, Unreported, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 576, 540 U.S. 1021, 157 L.Ed.2d 438, rehearing denied 124 S.Ct. 1139, 540 U.S. 1145, 157 L.Ed.2d 963. Mandamus 187.8

3041. Miscellaneous claims, voting and elections

City election poll worker's requiring that black voter's chosen assistant, who was to help voter read ballot, first read section of ballot aloud to poll worker, was evidence of racial discrimination supporting voter's § 1983 equal protection action against worker, where state law and accepted practice dictated that disabled voter was entitled to assistance from any person of her choice. Taylor v. Howe, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 225 F.3d 993. Constitutional Law 215.3; Municipal Corporations 747(1)

Scheme under which water district for particular development was managed by officials elected by entire town had rational basis and did not impermissibly dilute voting power of residents of the development. Collins v. Town of Goshen, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1980, 635 F.2d 954. Waters And Water Courses 183.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Help America Vote Act (HAVA) conferred right to vote in federal election, enforceable under §§ 1983. Florida Democratic Party v. Hood, N.D.Fla.2004, 342 F.Supp.2d 1073. Elections 8.1

XXV. IMMUNITY GENERALLY

<Subdivision Index>

Affirmative defense 3076
Common law 3072
Counties 3083
Federal immunity compared 3073
First amendment rights 3075
Immunity generally 3071
Indians 3078
Internal Revenue Service agents 3079
Judges and court officials 3071a
Law enforcement 3085
Military officials 3080
Municipalities 3084
Parole officials 3081
Presidential immunity 3082
Private defendants 3077
Public policy 3074

3071. Immunity generally

Congress did not intend this section to abrogate immunities well grounded in history and reason. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1373

Immunity analysis, i.e., immunity from liability in damages under Civil Rights Act, rests on functional categories and not on status of a defendant. Briscoe v. LaHue, U.S.Ind.1983, 103 S.Ct. 1108, 460 U.S. 325, 75 L.Ed.2d 96. Civil Rights 1373

Two kinds of immunity from a § 1983 claim are qualified immunity and absolute immunity. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1376(1)

If parties seeking immunity from § 1983 claim were shielded from tort liability when Congress enacted § 1983, court infers from legislative silence that Congress did not intend to abrogate such immunities when it imposed liability for actions taken under color of state law; additionally, irrespective of the common-law support, court will not recognize immunity available at common law if § 1983's history or purpose counsel against applying it in § 1983 actions. In re Allen, C.A.4 (W.Va.) 1997, 106 F.3d 582, suggestion for rehearing denied 119 F.3d 1129, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 689, 522 U.S. 1047, 139 L.Ed.2d 635. Civil Rights 1373

Immunity is a judicially-developed limitation on protection established by Congress in this section. Henriksen v. Bentley, C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1981, 644 F.2d 852.

Since this section by its very terms admits no immunities, but rather imposes liability upon "every person" who, under color of state law, deprives another of his civil rights, courts are naturally loath to clothe any person with immunity which would frustrate design of this section of providing vindication of those wronged by misuse of state power. Marrero v. City of Hialeah, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1980, 625 F.2d 499, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1353, 450 U.S. 913, 67 L.Ed.2d 337. Civil Rights 1373

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Doctrine of immunity, absolute or qualified, extended to public officials in a civil rights suit is one of judicial making and involves the delicate balancing of the rights of citizens to obtain redress from wrong committed by public officials and the need to assure that public officials will perform their assigned duties unfettered by the prospect of being subjected to the costs of defense and consequences of the damage award against him for acts done in the course of their duties. Allred v. Svarczkopf, C.A.10 (Utah) 1978, 573 F.2d 1146. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Doctrine of official immunity should be applied sparingly since to hold all state officers immune from suit would largely frustrate the salutary purpose of this section providing for civil actions for deprivation of rights; it is necessary to balance competing considerations in determining whether particular officers are immune. C. M. Clark Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Maxwell, C.A.D.C.1973, 479 F.2d 1223, 156 U.S.App.D.C. 240. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Officials sued for violations of rights conferred by a statute or regulation, like officials sued for violation of constitutional rights, do not forfeit their immunity by violating some other statute or regulation; rather, these officials become liable for damages on § 1983 claims only to the extent that there is a clear violation of the statutory rights that give rise to the cause of action for damages. Estate of Phillips v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 69, motion to vacate denied 355 F.Supp.2d 212. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

Conduct by persons acting under color of state law which is wrongful under § 1983 cannot be immunized by state law. Hodgson v. Mississippi Dept. of Corrections, E.D.Wis.1997, 963 F.Supp. 776. Civil Rights 1373

Once prima facie case is established under § 1983, question becomes whether defendant is entitled to some kind of defense against or immunity from damages liability. Swenson v. Culberson County, W.D.Tex.1996, 925 F.Supp. 478. Civil Rights 1366; Civil Rights 1373

In civil rights cases in particular, the doctrine of official immunity should be applied sparingly. Williams v. Codd, S.D.N.Y.1978, 459 F.Supp. 804. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Proper approach, in determining whether a state official is immune from liability under this section, is to consider the precise function at issue, and to determine whether an officer is likely to be unduly inhibited in the performance of that function by the threat of liability for tortious conduct. Joyce v. Gilligan, N.D.Ohio 1974, 383 F.Supp. 1028, affirmed 510 F.2d 973. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Public official's defense of immunity from suit is to be sparingly applied in civil rights cases. James v. Ogilvie, N.D.Ill.1970, 310 F.Supp. 661. See, also, Jobson v. Henne, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1966, 355 F.2d 129; Stevenson v. Sanders, D.C.Ky.1970, 311 F.Supp. 683; Donovan v. Mobley, D.C.Cal.1968, 291 F.Supp. 930.

When immunity is properly invoked it constitutes a defense to civil rights action. DeFelice v. Philadelphia Bd. of Ed., E.D.Pa.1969, 306 F.Supp. 1345, affirmed 432 F.2d 1358. Civil Rights 1373

3071A. Judges and court officials, immunity generally

Receiver appointed pursuant to divorce proceeding to sell couple's property and divide proceeds enjoyed immunity against former husband's § 1983 civil rights claim attacking receiver's authority to act as receiver. Huszar v. Zeleny, E.D.N.Y.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 98. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Judges and court officials are immune from suit under § 1983 for acts performed in their official capacities; similarly, court-appointed receivers are also cloaked with judge's immunity. Huszar v. Zeleny, E.D.N.Y.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 98. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3072. Common law, immunity generally

Immunity available at common law will not be recognized if history or purpose of § 1983 counsel against applying that in § 1983 actions. Wyatt v. Cole, U.S.Miss.1992, 112 S.Ct. 1827, 504 U.S. 158, 118 L.Ed.2d 504, on remand 994 F.2d 1113. Civil Rights 1373

Section 1983 immunities are predicated upon considered inquiry into immunity historically accorded the relevant official at common law and the interests behind it. Tower v. Glover, U.S.Or.1984, 104 S.Ct. 2820, 467 U.S. 914, 81 L.Ed.2d 758. Civil Rights 1376(1)

In determining whether immunity defense is available in § 1983 suit, critical initial question is whether official claiming immunity can point to common-law counterpart to privilege he asserts. Enlow v. Tishomingo County, Miss., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1992, 962 F.2d 501, rehearing denied 971 F.2d 750. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Immunity from suit under § 1983 depends on whether such immunity was recognized at common law when statute was enacted and whether public policy would support such immunity. Manis v. Corrections Corp. of America, M.D.Tenn.1994, 859 F.Supp. 302. Civil Rights 1373

In determining whether individual is entitled to immunity in § 1983 action, inquiry is whether official, sued in individual capacity, can point to common-law counterpart to privilege he asserts, and whether § 1983's history or purpose would exclude same immunity in § 1983 action. Vines v. Howard, E.D.Pa.1987, 676 F.Supp. 608. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Common law official immunity is a judicially developed limitation on the civil rights protection established by Congress in this section. Friedman v. Weiner, D.C.Colo.1981, 515 F.Supp. 563. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3073. Federal immunity compared, immunity generally

In absence of Congressional direction to the contrary, there is no basis for according to federal officials a higher degree of immunity from liability when sued for constitutional infringement than is accorded state officials when sued for the identical violation under this section; federal officials should enjoy no greater zone of protection when they violate federal constitutional rules than do state officers. Butz v. Economou, U.S.N.Y.1978, 98 S.Ct. 2894, 438 U.S. 478, 57 L.Ed.2d 895, on remand 466 F.Supp. 1351. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Assuming that United States Supreme Court decision in Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents authorizes damage action for particular constitutional infringement by federal officer, federally determined immunity applicable in such case should be no different from federally determined immunity available in similar litigation brought against state official under deprivation provisions of this section. Briggs v. Goodwin, C.A.D.C.1977, 569 F.2d 10, 186 U.S.App.D.C. 179, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 3089, 437 U.S. 904, 57 L.Ed.2d 1133. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3074. Public policy, immunity generally

Supreme Court does not have license to establish immunities from § 1983 actions in interests of what Court judges to be sound public policy; when there is no historical tradition of immunity on which court can draw, its inquiry is at an end. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1373

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

For purposes of this section, immunities are extended to government officials only when overriding considerations of public policy demand that official be given a measure of protection from personal liability to ensure his ability to function effectively. Marrero v. City of Hialeah, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1980, 625 F.2d 499, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1353, 450 U.S. 913, 67 L.Ed.2d 337. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Questions concerning an official's immunity under this section may not be resolved simply on the basis of judicial notions of sound public policy. Raitport v. Provident Nat. Bank, E.D.Pa.1978, 451 F.Supp. 522. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Public policy requires that public officials be accorded protection against personal liability in some circumstances despite the existence of a violation of constitutional rights. Carey v. White, D.C.Del.1974, 375 F.Supp. 1327, supplemented 407 F.Supp. 121. Officers And Public Employees 114

3075. First amendment rights, immunity generally

Four-part inquiry for determining whether public official is qualifiedly immune from public employee's First Amendment claim is to be applied regardless of whether employer's claimed reasons for employee's termination are related to speech. Vista Community Services v. Dean, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1997, 107 F.3d 840. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Noerr-Pennington doctrine, granting First Amendment protection for actions arising out of citizen's right to petition government for redress, can be utilized to provide immunity regarding claims for civil conspiracy under § 1983. Nickum v. Village of Saybrook, C.D.Ill.1997, 972 F.Supp. 1160. Conspiracy 7.5(1)

3076. Affirmative defense, immunity generally

Immunity is an affirmative defense and does not go to existence of a cause of action under this section prohibiting the deprivation of civil rights under color of state law. Davidson v. Scully, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1982, 694 F.2d 50, on remand. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Question of whether a defendant is immune is not a jurisdictional issue in a civil rights suit; rather, immunity is an affirmative defense which may defeat relief once subject-matter jurisdiction has been established. Tayyari v. New Mexico State University, D.C.N.M.1980, 495 F.Supp. 1365. Civil Rights 1373

3077. Private defendants, immunity generally

Private party was not eligible for immunity from suit under § 1983 to challenge execution of default judgment and prejudgment attachment; private parties were not immune from suit at common law; and extension of immunity to private parties would not further policy goals to prevent injustice of subjecting to liability officer who is required to exercise discretion and to permit officer to execute office with decisiveness and judgment required by public good. Duncan v. Peck, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1988, 844 F.2d 1261, 95 A.L.R. Fed. 69. Civil Rights 1374

Any behavior by a private party that is protected from antitrust liability by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine is also outside the scope of section 1983 liability. Bayou Fleet, Inc. v. Alexander, E.D.La.1998, 26 F.Supp.2d 894. Civil Rights 1374

3078. Indians, immunity generally

Doctrine of tribal sovereign immunity barred former tribal police chief's action against tribal council and tribal administrator alleging deprivation of his First Amendment right to free speech in violation of § 1983 where actions of officials and administrator had no independent legal effect; rather, it was official action of tribe in terminating police chief that caused police chief's alleged injury. Miller v. Coyhis, E.D.Wis.1995, 877 F.Supp. 1262. Indians 27(1); Indians 32(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Indian tribe's sovereign immunity protected council members and chief from civil rights suit in individual and official capacities. Warn v. Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, W.D.N.C.1994, 858 F.Supp. 524. Civil Rights 1373

Common-law immunity from suit enjoyed by Indian tribes extended to tribal policemen and shielded them in their official capacities from actions, either for injunctive or for monetary relief, brought pursuant to this section. Bruette v. Knope, E.D.Wis.1983, 554 F.Supp. 301. Indians 27(1)

3079. Internal Revenue Service agents, immunity generally

Since Internal Revenue Service (IRS) agent's alleged action in seeking to initiate probation revocation proceedings against probationer convicted of tax evasion, by reporting probationer's illegal activities, was functionally identifiable as protected actions of law enforcement agent, agent was immune from suit for civil damages. Schiff v. Dorsey, D.Conn.1994, 877 F.Supp. 73. Internal Revenue 4464

3080. Military officials, immunity generally

Air National Guard airman's federal civil rights claims against individual guardsmen, seeking to recover for injuries incurred in "hazing" incident at national guard base, were barred by Feres doctrine, since United States was itself protected by Feres doctrine as to the same injury. Day v. Massachusetts Air Nat. Guard, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1999, 167 F.3d 678, on remand 37 F.Supp.2d 546. United States 50.10(5)

Insofar as Feres doctrine of intramilitary immunity extends to state National Guard units, it shields state military officers from constitutional claims brought under § 1983 to same extent that it protects federal military personnel from defending against Bivens actions raising very same claims. Bowen v. Oistead, C.A.9 (Alaska) 1997, 125 F.3d 800, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 2343, 524 U.S. 938, 141 L.Ed.2d 714. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Wisconsin Air National Guard commander's claim against Guard for damages under § 1983 arising from his discharge was not justiciable; immunity afforded federal military officials applied to state militia officials, in light of integral role of state national guard in national armed forces. Knutson v. Wisconsin Air Nat. Guard, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1993, 995 F.2d 765, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 347, 510 U.S. 933, 126 L.Ed.2d 311. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Feres doctrine of intramilitary immunity bars claims against military doctors for medical malpractice, civil rights claims against federal individuals brought under Bivens, civil rights claims by national guard personnel against state officers, and Title VII-type discrimination in employment claims; Feres also bars suits under the Public Vessels Act, and claims for age and disability discrimination. Flowers v. First Hawaiian Bank, D.Hawai'i 2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 1213. United States 78(16)

Doctrine of intramilitary immunity precluded former service member's claims against his military superiors for alleged violations of his rights under § 1983 and the United States Constitution for allegedly conspiring to remove him from the Air Force National Guard where alleged constitutional harms occurred incident to military service, while plaintiff was an active duty service member, and defendants were plaintiff's military superiors. Chandler v. Roche, D.D.C.2002, 215 F.Supp.2d 166. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Secretary of Army was immune from Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) cadet's § 1983 and constitutional claims arising out of her sexual harassment by another cadet and hostile environment created after she reported harassment under doctrine that military enjoys immunity to Bivens claims that it coextensive with its Feres immunity. Morse v. West, D.Colo.1997, 975 F.Supp. 1379, affirmed 172 F.3d 63. United States 50.10(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3081. Parole officials, immunity generally

Civil rights action for damages by prisoner claiming improper denial of parole would be barred due to the parole board's immunity from liability for damages. Lindsey v. Wells, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1990, 901 F.2d 96. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prisoners' federal civil rights lawsuit against prison authorities seeking compensatory damages for violation of alleged parole rights was properly dismissed as frivolous; parole officials were immune from damage suits under civil rights statute. Sultenfuss v. Snow, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1990, 894 F.2d 1277, on remand. Civil Rights 1376(7); Federal Civil Procedure 2734

3082. Presidential immunity, immunity generally

Sitting President of United States was entitled to limited or temporary Presidential immunity from immediate trial with respect to sexual harassment action brought against him for alleged conduct occurring when President was Arkansas governor and thus, President could not be tried until he left office, but discovery and deposition process could proceed as to all persons including the President; President should not have to devote his time and effort to defense of case at trial while in office, this was not case in which necessity existed to rush to trial nor case that would likely be tried with few demands on Presidential time, plaintiff was not in rush to get case to court, and allowing discovery process to proceed would eliminate problem that witnesses might die or become forgetful due to passage of time. Jones v. Clinton, E.D.Ark.1994, 869 F.Supp. 690, stay granted 879 F.Supp. 86, affirmed in part, reversed in part 72 F.3d 1354, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 81 F.3d 78, certiorari granted 116 S.Ct. 2545, 518 U.S. 1016, 135 L.Ed.2d 1066, motion granted 117 S.Ct. 291, 519 U.S. 925, 136 L.Ed.2d 210, affirmed 117 S.Ct. 1636, 520 U.S. 681, 137 L.Ed.2d 945, on remand 974 F.Supp. 712, on remand 990 F.Supp. 657. Federal Civil Procedure 1266; Federal Civil Procedure 1323.1; United States 26; United States 50.5(5)

3083. Counties, immunity generally

Counties and other local governments--while "persons" for the purposes of § 1983 liability in the sense that they can be sued--do not enjoy the defenses of absolute and qualified immunity that are available to human defendants sued in their individual capacities. Holloway v. Brush, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2000, 220 F.3d 767. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3084. Municipalities, immunity generally

In evaluating municipality's § 1983 liability, court looks only to whether municipality has conformed to requirements of the federal Constitution and statutes. Cagle v. Sutherland, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 334 F.3d 980, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 82 Fed.Appx. 216, 2003 WL 22076253. Civil Rights 1343

Corporation counsel for city waived defense of qualified immunity, in § 1983 action brought by lessee after he was evicted from premises obtained by city in foreclosure without any advance notice or hearing, where corporation counsel failed to assert such defense in his answer, and initially raised defense six months later prior to lessee's deposition. Kassim v. City of Schenectady, N.D.N.Y.2003, 255 F.Supp.2d 32, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 415 F.3d 246. Civil Rights 1398

There is no immunity defense, either qualified or absolute, available to a municipality sought to be held liable under § 1983. Juncewicz v. Patton, W.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31654957, Unreported, appeal dismissed 63 Fed.Appx. 44, 2003 WL 21105332. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3085. Law enforcement, immunity generally

Sheriff and his personnel were "persons" subject to suit under § 1983, and no further immunity analysis was warranted, where court first concluded that they were not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity. Layman v. Alexander, W.D.N.C.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 784. Civil Rights 1358; Civil Rights 1376(6)

XXVI. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY

<Subdivision Index>

Capacity 3120-3127

Colleges and universities, states and state agencies 3132
Continued violations 3112
Corrections departments, states and state agencies 3133
Counties and county officials, states and state agencies 3130
County officials, official capacity 3124
Court systems, states and state agencies 3131
Discrimination claims 3128
Education departments, states and state agencies 3134
Environment departments, states and state agencies 3135
Federal reimbursement 3119
Governors, official capacity 3123
Individual capacity distinguished, official capacity 3121
Injunctions 3115
Miscellaneous agencies, states and state agencies 3141
Miscellaneous officials, official capacity 3127
Money damages 3114
Municipalities and municipal agencies 3142
Official capacity 3120-3127
Official capacity - Generally 3120
Official capacity - County officials 3124
Official capacity - Governors 3123

Official capacity - Individual capacity distinguished 3121
Official capacity - Miscellaneous officials 3127
Official capacity - Police officers 3125
Official capacity - Prison officials 3126
Official capacity - Sheriff 3125a
Official capacity - State officials generally 3122
Persons within section distinguished 3113
Police officers, official capacity 3125
Prison officials, official capacity 3126
Public defender systems, states and state agencies 3136
Puerto Rico 3143
Regional planning agencies and members 3144
Reinstatement 3116
School boards, states and state agencies 3137
School districts, states and state agencies 3138
Sheriff, official capacity 3125a
Source of payment 3118

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Sovereign immunity generally 3111
State officials generally, official capacity 3122
States and state agencies 3129-3141
States and state agencies - Generally 3129

States and state agencies - Colleges and universities 3132
States and state agencies - Corrections departments 3133
States and state agencies - Counties and county officials 3130
States and state agencies - Court systems 3131
States and state agencies - Education departments 3134
States and state agencies - Environment departments 3135
States and state agencies - Miscellaneous agencies 3141
States and state agencies - Public defender systems 3136
States and state agencies - School boards 3137
States and state agencies - School districts 3138
States and state agencies - Tax departments 3139
States and state agencies - Utilities 3140
Tax departments, states and state agencies 3139
Tribal agencies 3145
Utilities, states and state agencies 3140
Waiver of immunity 3117

3111. Sovereign immunity generally

Scope of Eleventh Amendment is consideration in deciphering congressional intent as to scope of this section. Will v. Michigan Dept. of State Police, U.S.Mich.1989, 109 S.Ct. 2304, 491 U.S. 58, 105 L.Ed.2d 45. Federal Courts 265

This section which creates a cause of action for deprivation of civil rights under color of law did not abrogate the Eleventh Amendment immunity of the states. Quern v. Jordan, U.S.Ill.1979, 99 S.Ct. 1139, 440 U.S. 332, 59 L.Ed.2d 358. Federal Courts 265

When adjudging a § 1983 action, a federal court's remedial power, consistent with the Eleventh Amendment, is necessarily limited to prospective injunctive relief and may not include a retroactive award which requires payment of funds from the state treasury. Marrero Gutierez v. Molina, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 330 F.Supp.2d 45. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 272

Sovereign immunity barred federal civil rights claims against Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) by participant in Senior Environmental Employment (SEE) program. Jaffer v. National Caucus and Center on Black Aged, Inc., M.D.N.C.2003, 296 F.Supp.2d 639, motion for relief from judgment denied 2004 WL 3827544, appeal dismissed 108 Fed.Appx. 107, 2004 WL 1941240, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 1851, 544 U.S. 983, 161 L.Ed.2d 739, rehearing denied, rehearing denied 125 S.Ct. 2538, 162 L.Ed.2d 288. United States 125(28.1)

Congress has not abrogated state sovereign immunity under §§ 1983 or §§ 1981. Bennett v. City of Atlantic City, D.N.J.2003, 288 F.Supp.2d 675. Federal Courts 265

When an absolute immunity existed in 1871, and proves compatible with the purposes and policies of § 1983, it is incorporated into § 1983, and may bar liability of state public officials in their personal capacities. Mason v. Arizona, D.Ariz.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 807. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Inmate's § 1983 claims against state or its agencies were barred by the Eleventh Amendment. Johnson v. New York, S.D.N.Y.2003, 256 F.Supp.2d 186. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment immunizes state officials acting in their official capacity from § 1983 damages claims by individuals. Douris v. Schweiker, E.D.Pa.2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 391, reconsideration denied, affirmed 100 Fed.Appx. 126, 2004 WL 1396209. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment immunity applies to suits brought against the state pursuant to Section 1983. Board of Educ. of Pawling Cent. School Dist. v. Schutz, N.D.N.Y.2001, 137 F.Supp.2d 83, affirmed 290 F.3d 476, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 1284, 537 U.S. 1227, 154 L.Ed.2d 1088. Federal Courts 265

No direct action under Federal Constitution itself, as contrasted with § 1983 suit, exists against state actors in manner comparable to that provided against federal governmental officials under Bivens. Universal Outdoor, Inc. v. Elk Grove Village, N.D.Ill.1997, 969 F.Supp. 1124. Civil Rights 1322

Section 1983 did not abrogate state's Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court. Ryan v. Illinois Dept. of Children & Family Services, C.D.Ill.1997, 963 F.Supp. 1490, reversed 185 F.3d 751. Federal Courts 265

State's Eleventh Amendment immunity is not overridden by § 1983 claims, and New York has not consented to such suits in federal court. Molina v. State of N.Y., E.D.N.Y.1995, 956 F.Supp. 257. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 267

Action under § 1983 is subject to application of Eleventh Amendment. Edward B. v. Brunelle, D.N.H.1986, 662 F.Supp. 1025, on reconsideration 660 F.Supp. 51. Federal Courts 265

Eleventh Amendment barred § 1983 claims against Commonwealth in federal court, even though plaintiff alluded to acts by individual Commonwealth employees, where the only defendant named in complaint was the Commonwealth. Howard v. Commonwealth of Virginia, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2001, 8 Fed.Appx. 318, 2001 WL 278535, Unreported. Federal Courts 265

3112. Continued violations

Claim that policies and procedures of the Secretary of West Virginia Department of Health and Human Services (DHSS) had resulted in the denial of due process with respect to plaintiffs' benefits under Medicaid Home and Community Based Age/Disabled Waiver Program (ADWP) was actionable under §§ 1983, and thus served as an allegation of an ongoing violation of federal law, within Ex parte Young exception to Eleventh Amendment immunity. Cyrus ex rel. McSweeney v. Walker, S.D.W.Va.2005, 409 F.Supp.2d 748. Federal Courts 269

Official capacity §§ 1983 claims against state judge by his personal staff, who were discharged for reporting judge's alcohol abuse, were barred by the Eleventh Amendment; although staff characterized their claims as seeking only prospective relief, so as to avoid Eleventh Amendment bar, relief sought, which included reinstatement, was not intended to halt present, continuing violation of federal law, rather claims simply targeted judge's past action of discharging staff. Jakomas v. McFalls, W.D.Pa.2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 412. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

3113. Persons within section distinguished, sovereign immunity

State university and director of university-operated laboratory, in his official capacity, were persons under and could be fully liable for their actions under § 1983, as they were not entitled to Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity as arms of the state. Doe v. Lawrence Livermore Nat. Laboratory, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1995, 65 F.3d 771,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

certiorari granted 116 S.Ct. 2522, 518 U.S. 1004, 135 L.Ed.2d 1047, motion granted 117 S.Ct. 2, 518 U.S. 1036, 135 L.Ed.2d 1099, motion granted 117 S.Ct. 44, 519 U.S. 804, 136 L.Ed.2d 8, reversed 117 S.Ct. 900, 519 U.S. 425, 137 L.Ed.2d 55, on remand 131 F.3d 836. Federal Courts 269

To the extent a defendant is entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity, defendant is not a "person" within the meaning of statute allowing suit against a "person" acting under color of state law for violation of civil rights. Grabow v. Southern State Correctional Facility, D.N.J.1989, 726 F.Supp. 537. Civil Rights 1344

A state or state agency is not a "person" that Congress made amenable to suit in § 1983. Davis v. Bruce, D.Kan.2003, 215 F.R.D. 612, reconsideration denied 2004 WL 957854, affirmed in part 129 Fed.Appx. 406, 2005 WL 768778. Civil Rights 1344

3114. Money damages, sovereign immunity

Former state employee could not maintain § 1983 claims for monetary relief against state, or against its officials in their official capacity, as such claims were barred by the Eleventh Amendment, and even if they were not, state government was not "person" within meaning of § 1983. Lupo v. Voinovich, S.D.Ohio 2002, 235 F.Supp.2d 782. Civil Rights 1349; Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

On motion to dismiss, court would allow inmate's § 1983 damages claim against prison officials to stand, even though inmate did not specify in complaint that he was suing officials in their individual, rather than official, capacities, as required to avoid Eleventh Amendment immunity bar; inmate's responsive memorandum asserted that he was suing officials in their individual capacity as to damages, but in their official capacity as to injunctive relief, and he requested punitive damages. Bullock v. Barham, N.D.Ill.1997, 957 F.Supp. 154. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State defendants in § 1983 action brought by prisoner were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in their official capacity from inmate's claims for money damages. Mott v. State of Ind., N.D.Ind.1991, 793 F.Supp. 178, affirmed 966 F.2d 1456. Federal Courts 269

An entity can be a "person" within the scope of this section and still be immune under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 from suits for monetary relief. Zentgraf v. Texas A & M University, S.D.Tex.1980, 492 F.Supp. 265. Civil Rights 1343; Federal Courts 269

This section cannot be used to impose liability in the nature of monetary damages upon a government entity. Bennett v. Gravelle, D.C.Md.1971, 323 F.Supp. 203, affirmed 451 F.2d 1011, certiorari dismissed 92 S.Ct. 2451, 407 U.S. 917, 32 L.Ed.2d 692.

3115. Injunctions, sovereign immunity

Although Eleventh Amendment would bar suit by Indian band which named state itself as defendant or sought to enjoin violations of state law, suit seeking to enjoin governor and state officials responsible for enforcing state fish and game laws from interfering with treaty rights to hunt, fish, and gather natural resources from ceded territories sought to vindicate important federal rights and therefore fell squarely within doctrine of Ex parte Young. Fond du Lac Band of Chippewa Indians v. Carlson, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1995, 68 F.3d 253. Federal Courts 272

State employee's §§ 1983 claim against state officials in their official capacities for an injunction banning the officials from transferring him again without legitimate cause and specifically prohibiting them from taking job actions against him due to the exercise of his constitutional rights did not come within Ex parte Young exception to Eleventh Amendment immunity; there was no allegation of threatened illegal conduct, but rather, employee sought an adjudication of the legality of past state conduct. Bailey v. Montgomery, E.D.Ky.2006, 433 F.Supp.2d 806. Federal Courts 272

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Eleventh Amendment did not bar relief, under Civil Rights Act, in suit brought by teacher against state education department and high school vice principal, seeking injunction prohibiting future gender and national origin discrimination. Sherez v. State of Hawai'i Dept. of Educ., D.Hawai'i 2005, 396 F.Supp.2d 1138. Federal Courts 272

Eleventh Amendment did not bar request in § 1983 action against state chiropractic board members in their official capacities for reinstatement of chiropractor's license, as relief was prospective in nature. Mason v. Arizona, D.Ariz.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 807. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Suit by former patient of public psychiatric center, seeking equitable relief for § 1983 claim alleging that center subjected him to illegal strip search pursuant to center's general search policy, was within Ex Parte Young exception to Eleventh Amendment; prayer for injunctive relief was prospective in nature. Aiken v. Nixon, N.D.N.Y.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 211, affirmed 80 Fed.Appx. 146, 2003 WL 22595837. Federal Courts 272

Section 1983 claim against state officials, in their official capacities, for prospective injunctive relief was not barred by the Eleventh Amendment, as such claim, challenging the constitutionality of state officials' actions, was not considered suit against the state. Lupo v. Voinovich, S.D.Ohio 2002, 235 F.Supp.2d 782. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Eleventh Amendment rights of the state did not preclude former administrative law judge's (ALJ) claim for injunctive relief in § 1983 action against members of state Workers' Compensation Commission, based on her allegation that her termination violated her free speech rights. Harrison v. Coffman, E.D.Ark.1999, 35 F.Supp.2d 722. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Due to Eleventh Amendment immunity, prospective injunctive relief was only remedy available to former state employee for her § 1983 sex discrimination claim against former co-worker in his official capacity, and therefore dismissal of such claim was required in light of fact that co-worker no longer worked for state agency; court could not grant injunctive relief governing official's conduct who no longer worked as public servant. Coller v. State of Mo., Dept. of Economic Development, W.D.Mo.1997, 965 F.Supp. 1270. Federal Courts 272

State officials sued in their official capacity for injunctive relief are "persons " subject to suit under § 1983, as such actions are not treated as actions against the state. Alley v. Angelone, E.D.Va.1997, 962 F.Supp. 827. Civil Rights 1354

Michigan Board of Dentistry was not immune under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 from dentist's demand for injunctive relief from order suspending his license brought under this section. Jones v. State of Mich., E.D.Mich.1981, 525 F.Supp. 636, affirmed 705 F.2d 454. Federal Courts 272

With respect to prayer for injunctive relief by school teachers whose contracts were not renewed, doctrine of sovereign immunity did not bar action against joint school district and board of education, which rested on allegation that they had acted in violation of Constitution of the United States. Gouge v. Joint School Dist. No. 1, W.D.Wis.1970, 310 F.Supp. 984. Injunction 78

Arrested student's official capacity §§ 1981 and 1983 claims against public college official and security employees did not come within Ex Parte Young exception to Eleventh Amendment bar; claims sought solely retrospective compensatory relief. Obilo v. City University of City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1809471, Unreported. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

3116. Reinstatement, sovereign immunity

Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity did not apply to former county auditor's claims for reinstatement and attorney fees, in her § 1983 action against two Texas district judges who allegedly nonrenewed her appointment in retaliation for reporting numerous matters of public concern that involved violations of laws and administrative regulations. Warnock v. Pecos County, Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1996, 88 F.3d 341. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3117. Waiver of immunity, sovereign immunity

While this section provides federal forum to remedy many deprivations of civil liberties, it does not provide federal forum for litigants who seek remedy against state for alleged deprivations of civil liberties; Eleventh Amendment bars such suits unless state has waived its immunity or Congress has exercised its undoubted power under section 5 of Fourteenth Amendment to override that immunity. Will v. Michigan Dept. of State Police, U.S.Mich.1989, 109 S.Ct. 2304, 491 U.S. 58, 105 L.Ed.2d 45. Federal Courts 265

Where petitioners in actions which arose out of confrontation between students and national guard and which were brought under this section, and state laws alleged facts demonstrating intent to impose individual and personal liability upon named defendants, notwithstanding their state offices, for alleged deprivation of federal rights under color of state law, actions were not barred by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11. Scheuer v. Rhodes, U.S.Ohio 1974, 94 S.Ct. 1683, 416 U.S. 232, 40 L.Ed.2d 90, 71 O.O.2d 474. Federal Courts 268.1

Commonwealth did not waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity in §§ 1983 action due to its failure to address with specificity plaintiff's grounds for waiver of immunity, where state filed motion to dismiss on Eleventh Amendment grounds. Ramos-Pinero v. Commonwealth Of Puerto Rico, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2006, 453 F.3d 48. Federal Courts 266.1

State of Texas did not waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity from prisoner's civil rights claim by suing prisoner for child support in state court. Brandley v. Keeshan, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1995, 64 F.3d 196, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 947, 516 U.S. 1129, 133 L.Ed.2d 872. Federal Courts 266.1

U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 barred children's suit against Department of Correctional Services and Parole Board for their release of mother's husband from custody in violation of the law absent state's consent. Leonhard v. U. S., C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1980, 633 F.2d 599, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1975, 451 U.S. 908, 68 L.Ed.2d 295. Federal Courts 269

If action under this section to recover against utilities district was an attempted action against state agency, U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 precluded such action, absent showing that state had waived its sovereign immunity and consented to be sued. Jorden v. Metropolitan Utilities Dist., C.A.8 (Neb.) 1974, 498 F.2d 514. Federal Courts 270

State of California was immune from suit without its consent and that immunity extended to suits against it under this section. Bennett v. People of State of Cal., C.A.9 (Cal.) 1969, 406 F.2d 36, certiorari denied 89 S.Ct. 1320, 394 U.S. 966, 22 L.Ed.2d 568. States 191.4(4)

Appeals referee for state employment security commission (ESC) voluntarily waived Eleventh Amendment immunity in terminated employee's § 1983 action against referee in his official capacity; state removed case, and referee opposed remand, urging court to dispose of employee's claims on non-immunity grounds. Howard v. Food Lion, Inc., M.D.N.C.2002, 232 F.Supp.2d 585. Federal Courts 266.1

Employee's filing, in Ohio Court of Claims, of employment discrimination claims against state of Ohio constituted complete waiver, under Ohio's sovereign immunity statute, of any state or federal claims against state employees in their individual capacities, including §§ 1981 and §§ 1983 claims, though employee later voluntarily dismissed that suit before bringing §§ 1981 and §§ 1983 claims in federal court. Higginbotham v. Ohio Dept. of Mental Health, S.D.Ohio 2005, 412 F.Supp.2d 806. States 184

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State university did not waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity from its former police officer's claims, alleging it was vicariously liable for supervisor's battery, assault, intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED), and negligent infliction of emotional distress (NIED), as well as negligent retention and supervision, by removing officer's suit to federal court, given that State had not explicitly waived its sovereign immunity for such claims, under State Tort Claims Act or any other statute, in state court. Alston v. North Carolina A & T State University, M.D.N.C.2004, 304 F.Supp.2d 774. Federal Courts 266.1

To extent that Native American plaintiff's § 1983 action asserted claims for money damages and declaratory relief, against Nebraska State defendants in their official capacities, for violations of plaintiff's free exercise and equal protection rights arising out of plaintiff's arrest following a prayer march and protest, claims were barred by Eleventh Amendment; State had not waived its immunity from liability. Poor Bear v. Nesbitt, D.Neb.2004, 300 F.Supp.2d 904. Federal Courts 266.1; Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Alleged failure of Commissioner of New York State Department of Social Services (NYS DSS) to raise Eleventh Amendment immunity as defense in his amended answer did not impliedly waive Eleventh Amendment immunity in Medicaid recipients' § 1983 suit against Commissioner in his official capacity. Conrad v. Perales, W.D.N.Y.2000, 92 F.Supp.2d 175. Federal Courts 266.1

Individual may bring suit against state or state agency in federal court if state unequivocally waived its immunity or if congressional legislation operates as waiver of Eleventh Amendment's protection. LaFleur v. Wallace State Community College, M.D.Ala.1996, 955 F.Supp. 1406. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

Although states waive their Eleventh Amendment immunities through adoption of Fourteenth Amendment with respect to claims brought under certain civil rights statutes, neither statutory language nor legislative history of § 1983 evinces sufficient, express congressional intention to override traditional immunities of states to allow private damages actions against states and their officials pursuant to that statute. Dugas v. Jefferson County, E.D.Tex.1995, 911 F.Supp. 251.

Indian tribe did not waive its sovereign immunity to suit under § 1983 by engaging in gaming activity regulated by the IGRA. Miller v. Coyhis, E.D.Wis.1995, 877 F.Supp. 1262. Indians 27(1)

Native Hawaiians' claims against state or its agencies or departments under Hawaiian Homes Commission Act or Hawaii Admission Act for failing to hold public lands in trust for native Hawaiians were barred by Eleventh Amendment; State of Hawaii had not waived its sovereign immunity. Han v. Department of Justice, D.Hawai'i 1993, 824 F.Supp. 1480, affirmed 45 F.3d 333. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

Correctional center which was part of West Virginia's state prison system was immune from civil rights suit under § 1983 in federal forum by reason of Eleventh Amendment; prisoner had alleged deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs and conspiracy to remove appendix without cause to receive reimbursement money from state, but state had not waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity. Meadows v. Huttonsville Correctional Center, N.D.W.Va.1992, 793 F.Supp. 684, affirmed 991 F.2d 790. Federal Courts 266.1; Federal Courts 269

National Guard member could not bring action against state National Guard for violation of civil rights by causing him to resign from police department to accept appointment with Army Corps of Engineers where state had not given its consent to suit and there had been no waiver of its immunity under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11. Hilliard v. New Jersey Army Nat. Guard, D.C.N.J.1981, 527 F.Supp. 405. Federal Courts 269

Where state of Delaware did not waive sovereign immunity with respect to claims asserted by state prisoner who brought action against state and prison officials alleging violation of federally secured rights and alleging a state claim for assault and battery arising from injuries inflicted on prisoner by prison guards and seeking compensatory and punitive damages, state could not be sued on either common law assault claim or civil rights claim. Davidson

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

v. Dixon, D.C.Del.1974, 386 F.Supp. 482, affirmed 529 F.2d 511. Federal Courts 265

Where back bonuses and pay for services as prison barber which state prisoner sought to recover from the state would be paid out of the treasury of Virginia, and the Commonwealth of Virginia was not shown to have consented to the suit, the state prisoner's action under this section to recover such pay was barred by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11. Borror v. White, W.D.Va.1974, 377 F.Supp. 181. Federal Courts 268.1

3118. Source of payment, sovereign immunity

Eleventh Amendment shielded Arizona officials from damage claims under § 1983 for failing to pay minimum wages to inmates, since conduct complained of was not personal, and money damages for wages due would be paid out of state treasury regardless of whether officials were acting in accord with statutory duties; therefore, inmates could maintain action under § 1983 against individual officers for prospective relief only. Hale v. State of Ariz., C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1993, 993 F.2d 1387, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 386, 510 U.S. 946, 126 L.Ed.2d 335. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment limits relief available to § 1983 plaintiff, who may obtain damages only from personal estates of defendant state officials, not from state treasury. Wheaton v. Webb-Petett, C.A.9 (Or.) 1991, 931 F.2d 613. Federal Courts 269

Sheriff was not entitled to absolute immunity status in property owners' § 1983 action stemming from arrest for trespass on own property during attempt to recover possession where sheriff was county official and no contentions had been made that potential judgments against sheriff in his official capacity would be paid from state treasury rather than county funds. Hutton v. Strickland, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1990, 919 F.2d 1531. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Eleventh Amendment barred inmate's actions against prison officials in their official capacities, since any judgment against Idaho Department of Corrections or its employees acting in their official capacities would have to be paid out of state treasury. Leer v. Murphy, C.A.9 (Idaho) 1988, 844 F.2d 628. Federal Courts 269

Demands under § 1983 against state banking official for retroactive injunctive relief were barred by Eleventh Amendment as any remedy for damage already done would necessarily involve public expenditure. Rannels v. Hargrove, E.D.Pa.1990, 731 F.Supp. 1214. Federal Courts 272

Indiana Department of Corrections performed state governmental function and any judgment against Department would be paid out of state treasury and, thus, Department was entitled to sovereign immunity in action under § 1983. Grosz v. State of Ind., S.D.Ind.1990, 730 F.Supp. 1474. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Although action of terminal operator was fairly attributable to the state, for purposes of § 1983, terminal operator was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from liability in civil rights action brought by worker of company, which transported ship containers from terminal, after worker's involvement in fight on terminal premises; any judgment against operator would not be paid out of state treasury, and terminal operator had power to sue and be sued and was incorporated separately under Virginia Nonstock Corporation Act, not the Virginia Port Authority Enabling Act. Artist v. Virginia Intern. Terminals, Inc., E.D.Va.1988, 679 F.Supp. 587, affirmed 857 F.2d 977. Federal Courts 268.1

Civil rights action under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 against prison guards in their official capacities for death of prison inmate allegedly caused by deliberate indifference of guards in responding to inmate's safety and medical needs was barred under the Eleventh Amendment, which forbids bringing suits for monetary damages or other retroactive relief against a state in federal court, as any monetary relief against guards in their official capacities would necessarily be paid from public funds. Bailey v. State of Ill., N.D.Ill.1985, 622 F.Supp. 504. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

There is no remedial power in a federal court to require the payment of funds from a state treasury in an action under this section. Trotman v. Palisades Interstate Park Commission, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1977, 557 F.2d 35. See, also, King v. Carey, D.C.N.Y.1975, 405 F.Supp. 41; Klein v. New Castle County, D.C.Del.1974, 370 F.Supp. 85.

3119. Federal reimbursement, sovereign immunity

State would not receive federal reimbursement for its potential obligation to refund Medicaid recipients' wrongfully collected client shares, or Net Available Monthly Income (NAMIs), under Medicaid statute providing for federal reimbursement to states for costs that were "necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan" and, thus, state would not lose its Eleventh Amendment immunity because of availability of partial or total federal reimbursement. Conrad v. Perales, W.D.N.Y.2000, 92 F.Supp.2d 175. Federal Courts 265

3120. Official capacity, sovereign immunity--Generally

Only immunities available to defendant in official-capacity action under this section are those that governmental entity possesses. Hafer v. Melo, U.S.Pa.1991, 112 S.Ct. 358, 502 U.S. 21, 116 L.Ed.2d 301. Civil Rights 1376(1)

To sustain § 1983 claims against municipality and its officials in their official capacity, plaintiff has to establish that allegedly unconstitutional acts were official policy or custom of municipality, and allegations based upon respondeat superior are insufficient to support cause of action under § 1983. M.W. ex rel. T.W. v. Madison County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 737. Civil Rights 1345; Civil Rights 1351(1)

Even when state officials act under color of state law pursuant to § 1983, Eleventh Amendment bars monetary claims against them in their official capacity. Medina Perez v. Fajardo, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 467. Federal Courts 269

In addition to Eleventh Amendment immunity, § 1983 precludes official capacity claims for damages against state officials. Fernandez v. Wolff, N.D.Ill.1996, 919 F.Supp. 1120. Civil Rights 1354

The only immunities available to defendant in official capacity action under § 1983 are forms of sovereign immunity that governmental entity, qua entity, may possess, such as under the Eleventh Amendment. Craig v. St. Martin Parish Sheriff, W.D.La.1994, 861 F.Supp. 1290. Civil Rights 1376(1); Federal Courts 265

States and state officials acting in their official capacities are unamenable to suit under § 1983. MSA Realty Corp. v. State of Ill., N.D.Ill.1992, 794 F.Supp. 267, affirmed 990 F.2d 288. Civil Rights 1344; Civil Rights 1354

Eleventh Amendment did not bar § 1983 action, despite claim that defendants were acting in official capacity. Loukas v. Hofbauer, E.D.Mich.1991, 784 F.Supp. 377. Federal Courts 269

3121. ---- Individual capacity distinguished, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Personal-capacity suits under this section seek to impose individual liability upon government officer for actions taken under color of state law, and while plaintiff in personal-capacity suit need not establish connection to governmental 'policy or custom,' officials sued in their personal capacities, unlike those sued in their official capacities, may assert personal immunity defenses, such as objectively reasonable reliance on existing law. Hafer v. Melo, U.S.Pa.1991, 112 S.Ct. 358, 502 U.S. 21, 116 L.Ed.2d 301. Civil Rights 1354; Civil Rights 1376(2)

In an official capacity action, the personal immunity defenses available to a public official sued in his personal capacity in a suit under this section are unavailable and the only immunities that can be claimed are forms of sovereign immunity that the entity, qua entity, may possess, such as the Eleventh Amendment. Kentucky v. Graham, U.S.Ky.1985, 105 S.Ct. 3099, 473 U.S. 159, 87 L.Ed.2d 114, on remand 791 F.2d 932. Civil Rights 1376(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Eleventh Amendment did not bar applicant's § 1983 action against Nevada State Private Investigators Licensing Board members in their individual capacities, alleging that denial of application violated due process in that one Board member had pecuniary interest in outcome and was biased against applicant, and that, influenced by that member's bias, other Board members and Board investigators prejudged application and acted in arbitrary and improper manner. Stivers v. Pierce, C.A.9 (Nev.) 1995, 71 F.3d 732. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment did not bar oil and sludge transportation barge owners' § 1983 claims for damages against Commissioner and Executive Commissioner of New York State Department of Environmental Conservation in their individual capacities arising from their actions in imposing summary abatement orders prohibiting owners from operating barges in New York harbor; mere fact that state might reimburse Commissioner and Executive Commissioner did not make state real party in interest. Berman Enterprises, Inc. v. Jorling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 3 F.3d 602, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 883, 510 U.S. 1073, 127 L.Ed.2d 78. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment did not bar § 1983 claim filed by graduate assistant against state university's dean of graduate school and head of department of education; her suit named dean and department head in their individual rather than official capacities for actions they committed that allegedly violated her constitutionally protected rights. Mandsager v. University of North Carolina at Greensboro, M.D.N.C.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 662. Federal Courts 269

Fact that an official acts under color of law does not mean the he or she becomes the state; when sued in his or her individual capacity, he or she is a person for the purpose of § 1983 and enjoys no Eleventh Amendment immunity. Medina Perez v. Fajardo, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 467. Civil Rights 1354; Federal Courts 269

Because personal-capacity civil rights suits can be executed only against official's personal assets, personal-capacity suits do not extend any form of liability to the state, so Eleventh Amendment is not implicated even though named defendant is public official and acted under color of state law. Hodgson v. Mississippi Dept. of Corrections, E.D.Wis.1997, 963 F.Supp. 776. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment did not bar arrestee's §§ 1983 and 1985 claims for monetary damages against state trooper in his individual capacity, or arrestee's claims for declaratory and injunctive relief against trooper in his official capacity. Estes-El v. Town of Indian Lake, N.D.N.Y.1997, 954 F.Supp. 527. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Court possesses original jurisdiction over § 1983 claims against state officials in their individual or personal capacities; official sued in his or her individual capacity is not cloaked in state's Eleventh Amendment protection from suit and can be "person" liable under § 1983 for deprivation of federal rights. Flores v. Long, D.N.M.1995, 926 F.Supp. 166, appeal dismissed 110 F.3d 730. Civil Rights 1354; Federal Courts 269

State officers sued in their individual capacities are "persons" within meaning of § 1983, and Eleventh Amendment will not bar suits against these officers in their individual capacities nor are such officers absolutely immune from personal liability solely by virtue of "official" nature of their acts. Vaughn v. Kerley, M.D.Fla.1995, 897 F.Supp. 1413. Civil Rights 1354; Federal Courts 269

State official acting in his official capacity may not be sued for damages under § 1983. Singer v. State of Me., D.Me.1994, 865 F.Supp. 19, reversed in part 49 F.3d 837. Civil Rights 1354

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State prison officials were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from prisoner's § 1983 claims against them in their official capacities, but officials were not entitled to immunity for claims in their individual capacities. Britt v. Department of Corrections, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1338684, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

3122. ---- State officials generally, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Eleventh Amendment barred § 1983 monetary claims against Department of Education of Puerto Rico and individual department officials in their official capacity. Hatfield Bermudez v. Rey Hernandez, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 245 F.Supp.2d 383. Federal Courts 269

Officials of state of Rhode Island could not be sued under § 1983 for damages, in their official capacities, by union of corrections officer claiming violation of members' federal constitutional rights arising out of amendment to statute changing manner of determining incentive pay for officers amassing education credits. Rhode Island Broth. of Correctional Officers v. Rhode Island, D.R.I.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 87, affirmed 357 F.3d 42. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred § 1981, § 1983, and state law claims of African-American female secretary for state judge against state and its office of court administration (OCA), arising from judge's alleged sexual and racial harassment; state did not consent to suit in federal court, and no express override of state statutory authority had been enacted by Congress in association with §§ 1981 or 1983. Bland v. New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 263 F.Supp.2d 526. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

Secretary of Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare (DPW), acting in her official capacity, was immune under Eleventh Amendment from § 1983 suit brought by DPW employee only to the extent that employee sought damages for prior acts of discrimination, and not injunction for future discrimination. Nelson v. Com. of Pennsylvania Dept. of Public Welfare, E.D.Pa.2002, 244 F.Supp.2d 382. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Employees of Delaware Division of Family Services (DFS) were entitled to immunity, under the Eleventh Amendment, from § 1983 official capacity claims for monetary damages, arising from determination by DFS that father had abused his sons. Rodriguez v. Stevenson, D.Del.2002, 243 F.Supp.2d 58. Federal Courts 269

Delaware deputy attorney general was state agent who enjoyed Eleventh Amendment immunity from § 1983 official capacity claims for monetary damages. Rodriguez v. Stevenson, D.Del.2002, 243 F.Supp.2d 58. Federal Courts 269

Request for punitive damages against state officials is sure tip-off that suit must be individual capacity, not official capacity, action, for purposes of determining applicability of Eleventh Amendment immunity. Bullock v. Barham, N.D.Ill.1997, 957 F.Supp. 154. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred former employee's § 1983 claims against state officials in their official capacities for allegedly discharging her in violation of her free speech and due process rights, to extent such claims sought monetary damages, but not to extent claims sought reinstatement. Fry v. McCall, S.D.N.Y.1996, 945 F.Supp. 655. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Immunity for state officials from civil rights liability is rule, not exception. Brown v. Thompson, S.D.Ga.1994, 868 F.Supp. 326. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Official capacity suit against state official for monetary relief is no different from suit against state itself; in contrast, suit against state official in his or her individual capacity, which seeks to impose personal liability, is not suit against state subject to Eleventh Amendment immunity. Williams-El v. Dunning, E.D.Va.1993, 816 F.Supp.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

418. Federal Courts 269

Because state immunity extends to state officers who act on behalf of the state, where the state is the real, substantial party in interest, the Eleventh Amendment generally bars federal court jurisdiction over § 1983 actions against state officials acting in their official capacities. Brewer v. Jones, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22126718, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

3123. ---- Governors, official capacity, sovereign immunity

State governor and director of division of corrections were immune from civil rights suit by state prisoner for damages for confinement under allegedly improper court sentence of imprisonment. U. S. ex rel. Bailey v. Askew, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1973, 486 F.2d 134. Civil Rights 1376(7)

The governor of state had immunity from damage suits for acts within sphere of executive activity. Martone v. McKeithen, C.A.5 (La.) 1969, 413 F.2d 1373. States 191.1

Former governor, former secretary of justice, and other officials of government of Puerto Rico were not immune, under Eleventh Amendment, from suit by judgment creditor under § 1983, alleging that their actions directed towards goal of evading payment of judgment against corporation which was allegedly commonwealth's alter ego violated substantive due process and equal protection; judgment creditor's complaint specifically stated that individual officials were being sued in their personal capacities. Future Development of Puerto Rico v. Estado Libre Asociado De Puerto Rico, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 276 F.Supp.2d 228. Federal Courts 269

Indian tribe could not sue governor in his official capacity under § 1983 to secure state's compliance with Indian Gaming Regulation Act through governor as state's agent; governor had available to him same Eleventh Amendment immunity as state. Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. State of Ala., S.D.Ala.1992, 784 F.Supp. 1549, affirmed 11 F.3d 1016, certiorari granted 115 S.Ct. 932, 513 U.S. 1125, 130 L.Ed.2d 878, affirmed 116 S.Ct. 1114, 517 U.S. 44, 134 L.Ed.2d 252, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 1415, 517 U.S. 1133, 134 L.Ed.2d 541, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 1416, 517 U.S. 1133, 134 L.Ed.2d 541. Federal Courts 269

Where governor of state, joined as defendant in prison inmate's civil rights action, was sued as representative of state, and where his actions were within sphere of his executive activity and authorized by law, governor was immune from suit. Morrow v. Igleburger, S.D.Ohio 1974, 67 F.R.D. 675. Federal Courts 269

3124. ---- County officials, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Section 1983 conspiracy claim brought by former county employee against county officials and legislators, alleging disclosure of her sexual harassment accusations and identity to news media, was barred by intracorporate conspiracy doctrine, since defendants were acting within scope of their official duties by conducting investigation into alleged misconduct of employee's supervisor. Nassau County Employee "L" v. County of Nassau, E.D.N.Y.2004, 345 F.Supp.2d 293. Conspiracy 2

There is no good faith immunity under § 1983 for county officials acting in an official capacity since a suit against a county official acting in an official capacity is one against the county he represents, and counties are not entitled to assert defense of qualified immunity. Shipley v. First Federal Sav. and Loan Ass'n of Delaware, D.C.Del.1985, 619 F.Supp. 421. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3125. ---- Police officers, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Sheriff's department was not acting as an arm of the state when administering local county jails, and therefore, was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity on detainees' § 1983 claims for overdetention; county was financially liable for sheriff's department's actions in its capacity as administrator of local jails, sheriff's department did not act in a law enforcement capacity when administering county's jail release policy, and sheriff's department was a separately suable entity. Streit v. County of Los Angeles, C.A.9 (Cal.) 2001, 236 F.3d 552, certiorari denied 122 S.Ct. 59, 534 U.S. 823, 151 L.Ed.2d 27. Federal Courts 270

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Sheriff's deputies, who were members of multi-jurisdictional narcotics task force acting under the direction of the sheriff, were acting as "arms of the state" when they stopped the vehicle containing suspected drug suppliers and detained its occupants; therefore, Georgia county sheriff and deputies were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity on §§ 1983 claims brought against them in their official capacities arising from the stop and detention. Beaulah v. Muscogee County Sheriff's Deputies, M.D.Ga.2006, 447 F.Supp.2d 1342. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred all monetary damages claims brought under §§ 1983 and §§ 1988 against Puerto Rico police officers in their official capacity as state agents, brought by neighborhood residents who were allegedly assaulted by police deployed to the area due to drug trafficking activity. Nieves Cruz v. Com. of Puerto Rico, D.Puerto Rico 2006, 425 F.Supp.2d 188. Federal Courts 269

Federal civil rights suit for depriving another of federal right under color of state law could be maintained against state official in his individual capacity in federal court, over Eleventh Amendment challenge, even though acts complained of arose in course of official duties. Oliver v. Cuttler, E.D.N.Y.1997, 968 F.Supp. 83. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment did not bar arrestee's § 1983 suit against state troopers where officers were sued in their individual capacities. White v. Tamlyn, E.D.Mich.1997, 961 F.Supp. 1047. Federal Courts 269

Any civil rights damage claims against police officers in their official capacities would not be barred by Eleventh Amendment, since Amendment does not protect local government bodies, but by requirement that municipal policy or custom be proven in order for municipality to be liable under federal civil rights statute for actions of its officers. Ippolito v. Meisel, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 155. Civil Rights 1351(4); Federal Courts 270

Under doctrine of sovereign immunity, county sheriff could not be held liable in his official capacity for money damages in § 1983 action arising out of county employee's termination of employment; sheriff was considered state official entitled to sovereign immunity; under Wisconsin law. Smith v. Milwaukee County, E.D.Wis.1997, 954 F.Supp. 1314. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Eleventh Amendment barred arrestee's suit seeking monetary damages under §§ 1983 and 1985 against state police and state trooper in his official capacity. Estes-El v. Town of Indian Lake, N.D.N.Y.1997, 954 F.Supp. 527. Federal Courts 269

County sheriff and sheriff's department were arms of state and could not be held liable for monetary damages under § 1983 under Eleventh Amendment immunity doctrine. Blankenship v. Warren County, Va., W.D.Va.1996, 931 F.Supp. 447. Federal Courts 269

Under Alabama law, county sheriff was entitled to sovereign immunity from claim brought by citizen alleging that sheriff negligently, recklessly and/or wantonly failed to supervise, instruct or train deputy in his duties as result of which deputy unlawfully seized citizen's automobile; sheriff possessed authority to train his deputies and exercise of this authority was discretionary function for purposes of sovereign immunity. Williams v. Goldsmith, M.D.Ala.1995, 905 F.Supp. 996. Sheriffs And Constables 100

Eleventh Amendment precluded § 1983 action against Alabama deputy in his official capacity, as he was "state officer," and state had neither consented to be sued nor waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity in instant case. Cofield v. Randolph County Com'n, M.D.Ala.1994, 844 F.Supp. 1499. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Eleventh Amendment prohibited award of damages against sheriffs and deputy sheriff in their official capacities under Alabama law and § 1983 action brought by individual who claimed that deputy sheriff used excessive force and conducted unlawful search of his vehicle. Sanders v. Miller, N.D.Ala.1992, 837 F.Supp. 1106. Federal Courts 269

3125A. ---- Sheriff, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Under Maryland law, county sheriff and sheriff's deputy were state officials, and thus official capacity claims raised against sheriff and deputy under § 1983 were barred by Eleventh Amendment, even though county retained authority to provide for appointment of county police and to fix their compensation, where county had no authority to control sheriff's functions and duties. Rossignol v. Voorhaar, D.Md.2004, 321 F.Supp.2d 642. Federal Courts 269

3126. ---- Prison officials, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Sheriff functioned as an arm of the state, not of the county, when promulgating policies and procedures governing conditions of confinement at the county jail, and thus, was entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in his official capacity in that regard. Purcell ex rel. Estate of Morgan v. Toombs County, GA, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2005, 400 F.3d 1313. Federal Courts 269

State, state department of corrections, state prison, and prison officials in their official capacities were immune under Eleventh Amendment in prisoner's action under § 1983 alleging exposure to unreasonable levels of secondhand smoke in violation of Eighth Amendment. Davis v. New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2002, 316 F.3d 93. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

To extent that civil rights claim was brought against prison superintendent in his official capacity, it was barred by sovereign immunity. Koehl v. Dalsheim, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 85 F.3d 86. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State prison officials had immunity under the Eleventh Amendment from prisoner's suit against them in their official capacities under §§ 1983 for money damages. Hayes v. Woodford, S.D.Cal.2006, 444 F.Supp.2d 1127. Federal Courts 269

To the extent that prisoner sued prison officials in their official, as opposed to individual, capacities, and to recover money damages or other retroactive relief, officials were immune from liability under §§ 1983 pursuant to the Eleventh Amendment. Strong v. Woodford, C.D.Cal.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 1082. Federal Courts 269

Inmate's §§ 1983 action against prison personnel in their individual capacities was not barred by sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment. Davis v. Carroll, D.Del.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 415. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred civil rights damage claims against prison officials to extent they were sued in their official capacities. Ornelas v. Giurbino, S.D.Cal.2005, 358 F.Supp.2d 955. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred state prison inmate's pro se §§ 1983 action against corrections officials alleging that diet provided to inmate constituted infringement of inmate's free exercise rights and violation of equal protection; state had not waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity, officials were acting in their official capacities as secretary of state corrections department and warden, respectively, at all times relevant to suit, and complaint expressly named officials as defendants in their official capacities and made no mention of actions undertaken in officials' individual capacities. Johnson v. Simmons, D.Kan.2004, 338 F.Supp.2d 1241. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Sovereign immunity barred § 1983 claim against state prison officials, in their official capacities, seeking damages arising when one official told inmates that suing inmate was "snitch" and officials allegedly failed to adequately protect him against abuse afterwards. Burgess v. Morse, W.D.N.Y.2003, 259 F.Supp.2d 240. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Eleventh Amendment barred state prisoner's pro se § 1983 actionfor damages against prison chaplain in his official capacity, alleging that chaplain violated prisoner's First Amendment right to freely exercise his religion by intentionally interfering with prisoner's ability to observe a religious holiday. Wares v. VanBebber, D.Kan.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 1120. Federal Courts 269

Defendant state Department of Corrections and correctional institution personnel were immune from prisoner civil rights suit to the extent money damages were sought, pursuant to doctrine of sovereign immunity, as state officials acting in their official capacities are not "persons" within the meaning of § 1983. Alley v. Angelone, E.D.Va.1997, 962 F.Supp. 827. Civil Rights 1358; Civil Rights 1376(7)

Presumption arose that inmate had sued prison officials in their official capacity where he failed to state otherwise in complaint in his § 1983 suit, though that presumption was not conclusive. Bullock v. Barham, N.D.Ill.1997, 957 F.Supp. 154. Civil Rights 1404

Exceptions to Eleventh Amendment immunity did not apply in § 1983 action seeking damages from sheriff and investigator in their official capacities, inasmuch as Congress had not abrogated Eleventh Amendment immunity in § 1983 cases, and state of Alabama had not waived its immunity. Toth v. City of Dothan, Ala., M.D.Ala.1996, 953 F.Supp. 1502. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 266.1

Eleventh Amendment barred prison employees and officials from being held liable in their official capacities for money damages in federal civil rights action brought by prison inmate alleging use of excessive force. Roberts v. Samardvich, N.D.Ind.1995, 909 F.Supp. 594. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment precluded state prisoner from bringing § 1983 action against employees of state prison, in their official capacity. Thomas v. Brown, N.D.Ind.1993, 824 F.Supp. 160. Federal Courts 269

Neither prison mail room supervisor nor assistant warden could be held liable under § 1983 for official acts undertaken in their capacities as state officials. Johnson v. Daniels, E.D.Mich.1991, 769 F.Supp. 230, affirmed 70 F.3d 1272. Civil Rights 1358

Prison warden sued in his individual capacity under § 1983 based on his involvement in inmate's medical treatment was not entitled to absolute immunity under Eleventh Amendment, even though he was acting in his official capacity when alleged constitutional tort was committed; inmate alleged that, pursuant to warden's instruction, he was refused admission to medical facility for scheduled appointment concerning foot problem on ground that he was not wearing state-issued shoes. Harrington v. Grayson, E.D.Mich.1991, 764 F.Supp. 464. Federal Courts 269

Where parole officer was alleged to have acted beyond bounds of his special authority, action based on parole officer's alleged handcuffing of plaintiff and beating him without provocation could be brought against officer individually and U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 11 posed no obstacle to plaintiff's claim. Terry v. Burke, N.D.Ill.1984, 589 F.Supp. 853. Federal Courts 269

Prisoners' civil rights action against state prison officials challenging validity of prison rule prohibiting prisoners from joining in any petition or statement with another was not barred by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11, since plaintiffs could recover damages from defendant state officials under some circumstances, and whether those officials were entitled to immunity from damages could not be determined on record before the court. Broome v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Percy, E.D.Wis.1979, 470 F.Supp. 633. Federal Courts 269

Despite fact that segregated confinement evaluation procedures violated due process requirements, prison officials were immune from damage liability under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 and also by virtue of common law immunity applicable to governmental officials in civil rights actions. U. S. ex rel. Hoss v. Cuyler, E.D.Pa.1978, 452 F.Supp. 256. Civil Rights 1376(7); Federal Courts 269

U.S.C.A.Const. Amend 11 did not preclude federal district court's accepting jurisdiction of suit brought under this section against Director of Department of Corrections of Commonwealth of Virginia to recover for alleged assault perpetrated on plaintiff by adult prisoner while plaintiff was incarcerated in juvenile section of Prince William County jail; in addition, when viewed on basis of allegations in the complaint the alleged nonfeasance of the Director did not fall within the parameters of the qualified immunity attaching to state officials in suits under this section. Payne v. Rollings, E.D.Va.1975, 402 F.Supp. 1225. Civil Rights 1376(7); Federal Courts 268.1

Inmate stated a §§ 1983 claim against superintendent and physician for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, despite their claims that they were being sued in their official capacities, and were thus protected by Eleventh Amendment immunity; the inmate explicitly stated that "[e]ach defendant is sued in his individual capacity," and the defendants may very well have been personally involved in the alleged constitutional violations. Williams v. Koenigsmann, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 315279, Unreported. Civil Rights 1395(7)

State prison officials had Eleventh Amendment immunity, in their official capacities, from inmate's § 1983 suit. Derrick v. Ward, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2004, 91 Fed.Appx. 57, 2004 WL 38545, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

3127. ---- Miscellaneous officials, official capacity, sovereign immunity

Civil rights lawsuit, which sought equitable relief against governor and attorney general, on alleged basis that amendment to state constitution, which limited state-recognized institution of marriage to heterosexual couples, violated federal constitution, fell within exception to state's Eleventh Amendment immunity, and thus was justiciable; although question existed as to whether enjoining those two state officers would have fully redressed alleged injuries, officers had some connection with enforcement of amendment. Citizens for Equal Protection v. Bruning, C.A.8 (Neb.) 2006, 455 F.3d 859. Federal Courts 272

State university officials sued in their official capacities were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in action brought by former professor who claimed he was discharged for exercising his First Amendment rights. Feldman v. Bahn, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1993, 12 F.3d 730, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 571, 513 U.S. 1014, 130 L.Ed.2d 489. Federal Courts 269

Sheriff's Eleventh Amendment immunity extended to deputy sheriffs in § 1983 action brought to recover damages from sheriff and deputies in their official capacities; deputies had traditional function under Alabama law as sheriff's alter ego and there was absence of clear evidence that counties would pay damage award rendered against deputy sheriffs. Carr v. City of Florence, Ala., C.A.11 (Ala.) 1990, 916 F.2d 1521, rehearing denied 925 F.2d 1477 . Federal Courts 269

Suit against state officials for alleged improper administration of Montana Workers' Compensation Act in deprivation of plaintiffs' Fourteenth Amendment rights was not barred by the Eleventh Amendment to the extent plaintiffs sought relief against state officials in their individual capacities. Blaylock v. Schwinden, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1988, 862 F.2d 1352. Federal Courts 269

Section 1983 claims seeking monetary damages from state psychiatric center and individual center officials in their official capacities, in which former patient alleged that he was subjected to illegal strip search and body cavity search upon his voluntary admission to center in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights, were barred by

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Eleventh Amendment. Aiken v. Nixon, N.D.N.Y.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 211, affirmed 80 Fed.Appx. 146, 2003 WL 22595837. Federal Courts 48

Building commissioner, town supervisor, building inspector, and prior building commissioner, in their official capacities, could invoke Eleventh Amendment immunity as affirmative defense to homeowners' § 1983 claims of malicious prosecution and abuse of process concerning town officials' roles as representatives of state in pursuing criminal action against homeowner for zoning and building violations. Willner v. Town of North Hempstead, E.D.N.Y.1997, 977 F.Supp. 182. Federal Courts 270

Suit for money damages against Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) and its agents in their official capacities alleging that DEA and agents unlawfully deprived plaintiff of his truck in violation of his constitutional rights was really suit against United States and had to be dismissed, absent unequivocal waiver of sovereign immunity. Daniel v. U.S., N.D.Ga.1995, 891 F.Supp. 600. United States 125(28.1)

County board of commissioners, to extent that they were sued in their official capacities, were immune from county jailer's punitive damages claim under § 1983. Malone v. Chambers County Bd. of Com'rs, M.D.Ala.1994, 875 F.Supp. 773, reconsideration denied. Civil Rights 1474(2)

School and district officials in their official capacities were immune from claims for punitive damages under § 1983. Kessler v. Monsour, M.D.Pa.1994, 865 F.Supp. 234. Civil Rights 1465(2)

Action against state officials, in their individual capacities, for alleged sex discrimination against female teachers at state institutions of higher education was not barred by doctrine of sovereign immunity. Taliaferro v. State Council of Higher Ed., E.D.Va.1974, 372 F.Supp. 1378. States 191.10

3128. Discrimination claims, sovereign immunity

District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over attorney's claims under §§§§ 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, 1986, and the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), based on alleged conspiracy between federal agencies and officers to place attorney under surveillance in order to harass and intimidate him in retaliation for his role as counsel in certain legal proceedings, where the United States had not waived its sovereign immunity for claims under §§§§ 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, 1986, and RICO. Jones v. National Communication and Surveillance Networks, S.D.N.Y.2006, 409 F.Supp.2d 456. United States 125(9)

This section does not abrogate immunity of states under U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 11, even where claim alleges race and sex discrimination. Daisernia v. State of N.Y., N.D.N.Y.1984, 582 F.Supp. 792. Federal Courts 265

3129. States and state agencies, sovereign immunity--Generally

Section 1983 does not abrogate state's Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court. In re Secretary of Dept. of Crime Control and Public Safety, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1993, 7 F.3d 1140, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 2106, 511 U.S. 1109, 128 L.Ed.2d 667. Federal Courts 265

Congress did not abrogate states' Eleventh Amendment immunity by enacting federal civil rights statute. Williams v. State of Mo., C.A.8 (Mo.) 1992, 973 F.2d 599. Federal Courts 265

By virtue of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11, state was immune from suit brought under this section. Burton v. Waller, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1974, 502 F.2d 1261, certiorari denied 95 S.Ct. 1356, 420 U.S. 964, 43 L.Ed.2d 442, rehearing denied 95 S.Ct. 1668, 421 U.S. 939, 44 L.Ed.2d 95.

Eleventh Amendment did not bar §§ 1983 claim against municipality and its mayor, in his official capacity, claiming violation of employee's federally protected rights; Eleventh Amendment protected states and its employees. Figueroa-Garay v. Municipality of Rio Grande, D.Puerto Rico 2005, 364 F.Supp.2d 117. Federal Courts 270

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Eleventh Amendment barred § 1983 suit against state, claiming violation of nursing home services providers' substantive and procedural rights to reasonable and adequate Medicaid reimbursement rates; as Boren Amendment, which extended those rights, had been repealed, there was no need for injunctive relief to bar ongoing violations, which could otherwise be brought consistent with Eleventh Amendment, and Eleventh Amendment precluded determination that Boren Amendment was violated in past. In re NYAHSA Litigation, N.D.N.Y.2004, 318 F.Supp.2d 30, affirmed 444 F.3d 147. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 272

Eleventh Amendment barred § 1983 suit against State of Rhode Island, brought by union representing corrections officers, claiming violation of members' federal constitutional rights arising out of amendment to statute changing manner of determining incentive pay for officers amassing education credits. Rhode Island Broth. of Correctional Officers v. Rhode Island, D.R.I.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 87, affirmed 357 F.3d 42. Federal Courts 265

State agencies cannot be sued for damages under § 1983. Singer v. State of Me., D.Me.1994, 865 F.Supp. 19, reversed in part 49 F.3d 837. Civil Rights 1344

Congress did not intend to abrogate states' Eleventh Amendment immunity when it enacted § 1983. Black v. Goodman, D.Mont.1990, 736 F.Supp. 1042. Federal Courts 265

Statute which creates civil action for deprivation of rights under color of law does not override the state's protection under U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 11. Almond Pharmacy, Inc. v. Mankowitz, N.D.Ill.1984, 587 F.Supp. 925. Federal Courts 265

Congress did not exercise its power to abrogate state's immunity under U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 11 when it enacted this section. Coffin v. South Carolina Dept. of Social Services, D.C.S.C.1983, 562 F.Supp. 579. Federal Courts 265

State was immune from suit, brought under federal civil rights statute proscribing a deprivation of rights, under the protection of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11. Bohn v. State of N. Y., S.D.N.Y.1979, 467 F.Supp. 27. Federal Courts 265

State of New York is immune from suit. Stenson v. State of N. Y., S.D.N.Y.1976, 422 F.Supp. 38.

Political subdivisions of a state or the state itself are not amenable to suit under this section. Com. of Pa. v. Powers, E.D.Pa.1970, 311 F.Supp. 1219.

Eleventh Amendment barred criminal defendant's §§ 1983 action against district attorney in his official capacity and against county district attorney's office alleging that district attorney had violated his constitutional rights by failing to notify courts of notarized recantation by victim in state sexual assault prosecution following sentencing. Romero v. Boulder County DA's Office, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2004, 87 Fed.Appx. 696, 2004 WL 100523, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

3130. ---- Counties and county officials, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Louisiana parish sheriff was not an arm of the state entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in § 1983 suit by plaintiff who had been evicted from her residence; state was not liable for any damage caused by sheriff within course of his official duties. Cozzo v. Tangipahoa Parish Council--President Government, C.A.5 (La.) 2002, 279 F.3d 273.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Sheriff was county official and not agent of state so that Eleventh Amendment did not bar mother's suit under Civil Rights Act for sheriff's alleged wrongful seizure of child from her home; sheriff seized child pursuant to papers given sheriff by ex-husband incorrectly implying that husband had right to child. Hufford v. Rodgers, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1990, 912 F.2d 1338, rehearing denied 921 F.2d 283, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 1312, 499 U.S. 921, 113 L.Ed.2d 246. Federal Courts 269

Deputy county attorney, as prosecutor, was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in her official capacity, to citizen's civil rights lawsuit alleging that attorney participated in conspiracy with detective to search his residence and seize evidence without warrant in violation of Fourth Amendment, since attorney was properly classified as county officer, rather than state officer; Utah statutory law designated county attorney as "county officer," attorney could prosecute only those offenses committed within county, expenses of county attorney in prosecuting criminal cases were charged against county, and most of her enumerated duties related solely to county. Allison v. Utah County Corp., D.Utah 2004, 335 F.Supp.2d 1310. Federal Courts 269

County community service board was not immune under Eleventh Amendment from racial discrimination claims brought by African-American employee under § 1983, since employee's rights under § 1981, to which governmental immunity did not apply, were being vindicated through § 1983 action. Collier v. Clayton County Community Service Bd., N.D.Ga.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 1345, affirmed 82 Fed.Appx. 222, 2003 WL 22227530. Federal Courts 269

County, in adjudicating special use permit of less than 15 acres under state law, was not an "arm of the state," and thus was not protected by sovereign immunity from liability, for alleged civil rights violations by county planning commission of religious organization's Monell free exercise claim, although county was acting with delegated authority of state; county had enforcement powers and complete discretion to grant or deny permit, and nothing indicated state would pay or indemnify county for money judgments arising from unconstitutional exercise of discretion. Hale O Kaula Church v. Maui Planning Com'n, D.Hawai'i 2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 1056. Federal Courts 270

County probate judge was county official, rather than state official, and thus, judge, in his official capacity, was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from § 1983 action; Alabama Constitution limits probate courts' jurisdiction to county and probate judge is elected by vote of single county confined in duty to territorial limits of that county. Johnson v. Waters, M.D.Ala.1997, 970 F.Supp. 991. Federal Courts 269

Juvenile probation officer was "county official," rather than "state official," under Alabama law, and thus, officer was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in juvenile's § 1983 action alleging that he was harmed as result of illegal detention in county jail; it could be inferred that absence of state law codifying control over juvenile probation officers indicated delegation of such control to counties, and official considered herself employee not of state, but rather of county. A.M. By and Through Law v. Grant, M.D.Ala.1995, 889 F.Supp. 1495, affirmed 68 F.3d 486. Federal Courts 269

County clerk's liability in her official capacity in § 1983 suit was merely another way of naming liability of county, the responsible entity, and because plaintiffs would recover money damages from county, they could not recover additional money damages from clerk in her official capacity. Winters v. Mowery, S.D.Ind.1995, 884 F.Supp. 321. Damages 15

County official acted with final policy-making authority in imposing and continuing curfew, such that county could be held liable under § 1983 if action were unlawful, though Governor's executive order authorized curfew, where county had authority to declare state of emergency and impose curfew even if Governor had not declared state of emergency, and county official's decisions were not reviewable by Governor. Smith v. Avino, S.D.Fla.1994, 866 F.Supp. 1399, affirmed 91 F.3d 105. Civil Rights 1351(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Florida county sheriff and deputy sheriff were county, rather than state officials, and were not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in civil rights action. Colvin v. Curtis, M.D.Fla.1993, 860 F.Supp. 1503, vacated 62 F.3d 1316. Federal Courts 269

County sheriff was not acting as state official in executing arrest warrant issued by state court and, accordingly, was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in § 1983 action brought by plaintiff who was repeatedly arrested under warrant issued for another person. Jackson v. Doria, N.D.Ill.1994, 851 F.Supp. 288. Federal Courts 269

County and county board of commissioners were not protected by state's sovereign immunity in section 1983 action, nor were county department and board of social services so protected, inasmuch as they merely functioned as extensions of county. Meares v. Brunswick County, N.C., E.D.N.C.1985, 615 F.Supp. 14. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3131. ---- Court systems, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Eleventh Amendment barred Civil Rights Act claims brought by teacher against state education department and vice principal of high school in her official capacity, to extent that retrospective or compensatory damages were sought. Sherez v. State of Hawai'i Dept. of Educ., D.Hawai'i 2005, 396 F.Supp.2d 1138. Federal Courts 269

Official capacity § 1983 claims against state judge by his personal staff, who were discharged for reporting judge's alcohol abuse, were barred by the Eleventh Amendment; although staff characterized their claims as seeking only prospective relief, so as to avoid Eleventh Amendment bar, relief sought, which included reinstatement, was not intended to halt present, continuing violation of federal law, rather claims simply targeted judge's past action of discharging staff. Jakomas v. McFalls, W.D.Pa.2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 412. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Civil rights suit against Missouri circuit court was barred by Eleventh Amendment, as court is agency of the state. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Federal Courts 269

3132. ---- Colleges and universities, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Any §§ 1983 claim asserted by student against public university's athletic association, alleging student-on-student sexual harassment in violation of Title IX, was barred by Eleventh Amendment, even though Congress validly abrogated states' immunity from Title IX suits, absent Congressional abrogation of states' immunity from §§ 1983 suits or waiver by university or board. Williams v. Board of Regents of University System of Georgia, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2006, 441 F.3d 1287, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 2006 WL 1173185. Federal Courts 269

University and university board of regents were immune, under Eleventh Amendment, from suit on faculty members' due process and First Amendment claims brought under § 1983 arising from closing of university dental hygiene department. Brine v. University of Iowa, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1996, 90 F.3d 271, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 1082, 519 U.S. 1149, 137 L.Ed.2d 217. Federal Courts 269

University of Utah Medical Center was arm of the state, and therefore the Medical Center and its officials, in their official capacities, were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in § 1983 action brought by nurse formerly employed by the Medical Center; although the Medical Center received most of its budget from patient billing, it was integral part of the university and manager of the Utah Risk Management Fund stated that bulk of any money judgment awarded in the action would be paid from the Fund. Watson v. University of Utah Medical Center, C.A.10 (Utah) 1996, 75 F.3d 569. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Although function of state university in regulating public education was important central government function, university was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity for contract and § 1983 purposes in action arising out of employment with university-operated laboratory owned by the Department of Energy where Department of Energy, not the state, would be liable for any judgment rendered against university, California Constitution granted university power to sue and be sued, university had power to take property in its own name, and California Constitution established a corporation known as the Regents of University of California. Doe v. Lawrence Livermore Nat. Laboratory, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1995, 65 F.3d 771, certiorari granted 116 S.Ct. 2522, 518 U.S. 1004, 135 L.Ed.2d 1047, motion granted 117 S.Ct. 2, 518 U.S. 1036, 135 L.Ed.2d 1099, motion granted 117 S.Ct. 44, 519 U.S. 804, 136 L.Ed.2d 8, reversed 117 S.Ct. 900, 519 U.S. 425, 137 L.Ed.2d 55, on remand 131 F.3d 836. Federal Courts 269

College, as agent of state, enjoyed sovereign immunity under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11, and was not liable to professor for award of back pay arising from his alleged wrongful termination. Skehan v. Board of Trustees of Bloomsburg State College, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1978, 590 F.2d 470, certiorari denied 100 S.Ct. 61, 444 U.S. 832, 62 L.Ed.2d 41, on remand 501 F.Supp. 1360. Federal Courts 270

Under Pennsylvania law, state colleges are agencies of Commonwealth and are subject to claim of sovereign immunity, and thus, in teacher's civil rights suit against state college, back pay could not be awarded, and award of attorney's fees as costs taxed against college could only be made if college were found to have been obdurant in such litigation. Skehan v. Board of Trustees of Bloomsburg State College, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1976, 538 F.2d 53, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 490, 429 U.S. 979, 50 L.Ed.2d 588, on remand 431 F.Supp. 1379. Civil Rights 1480; Civil Rights 1471; States 191.10

Section 1983 claims against University of Texas Medical Branch (UTMB) and its Chief Administrative Officer of Correctional Managed Care/Associate Vice President for Managed Care were barred by doctrine of sovereign immunity. Bates v. University of Tex. Medical Branch, S.D.Tex.2003, 425 F.Supp.2d 826. Federal Courts 269

Athletic association was agency of state, entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from money damages in §§ 1983 wrongful termination suit, brought by former coordinator of state university's cheerleading program; association was subject to oversight, direction and control of university, assets were devoted exclusively to university's athletic program, and board was predominantly composed of university officials and faculty. Braswell v. Board of Regents of University System of Ga., N.D.Ga.2005, 369 F.Supp.2d 1371. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred Virginia state college employee's § 1983 claims against college and Commonwealth of Virginia alleging racial discrimination and retaliatory discrimination in employment. Allen v. College of William & Mary, E.D.Va.2003, 245 F.Supp.2d 777. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

Nebraska community college was not arm of state entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from § 1983 plaintiff's claim for money damages; college was not statutorily designated as state agency, was not under ultimate state control, was not primarily funded by state treasury, and there was no evidence that state would necessarily be liable for payment of any judgment rendered against college. Griner v. Southeast Community College, D.Neb.2000, 95 F.Supp.2d 1054. Federal Courts 269

Female college administrators could not maintain action under § 1983 against Alabama Board of Education or against college presidents, absent waiver of state's federal constitutional immunity from suit on behalf of entities under its control. Shuford v. Alabama State Bd. of Educ., M.D.Ala.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1486. Federal Courts 269

Texas A&M University is an alter ego of the State of Texas, accorded sovereign immunity, and thus university and its officials in their official capacities were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court under §§ 1981 and 1983. Chacko v. Texas A&M University, S.D.Tex.1997, 960 F.Supp. 1180, affirmed 149 F.3d

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

1175. Federal Courts 269

Community college was state agency protected from liability under § 1983 for its discriminatory decision not to renew contract of African-American instructor. LaFleur v. Wallace State Community College, M.D.Ala.1996, 955 F.Supp. 1406. Civil Rights 1349

Employees of state veterinary college considered arm of state enjoyed qualified immunity for acts taken in their individual capacities, and could not be sued for damages for acts undertaken in their official capacities. Carboni v. Meldrum, W.D.Va.1996, 949 F.Supp. 427, affirmed 103 F.3d 116. Federal Courts 269

State university was considered to be an arm of the state government and thus, under the Eleventh Amendment, it was immune from civil rights suit brought by student in federal court, and university coach was also immune from suit in his official capacity as to student's civil rights causes of action. Davis v. Kent State University, N.D.Ohio 1996, 928 F.Supp. 729. Civil Rights 1376(4); Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment was a bar not only as to employee's § 1983 claims against state university, but also as to employee's § 1983 claims against university officials in their official capacities; university, as arm and alter ego of the State of Tennessee, was entitled to the state's Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit. Hiefner v. University of Tennessee, E.D.Tenn.1995, 914 F.Supp. 1513. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred damages claims against state university officials in their official capacities under § 1983 and under state age discrimination law; however, Eleventh Amendment did not bar request for prospective injunctive relief. Van Pilsum v. Iowa State University of Science and Technology, S.D.Iowa 1994, 863 F.Supp. 935. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Tenured teacher's § 1983 action for alleged First Amendment violation against community college president in his official capacity was not barred by Eleventh Amendment, where community college was not arm of state; community college was more analogous to local school board than to state prisons or state mental institutions which were arms of state, and community college board of trustees was elected by community, not appointed by governor as was university board which was arm of state. Gardetto v. Mason, D.Wyo.1994, 854 F.Supp. 1520. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 270

University and members of its board of regents did not waive sovereign immunity from section 1983 suit by removing case from state court. Idoux v. Lamar University System, E.D.Tex.1993, 817 F.Supp. 637. Federal Courts 266.1

State university faculty member could not sue university at all under federal civil rights statute for alleged due process and equal protection violations and could sue university officials acting in their official capacity only for declaratory and injunctive relief. Derechin v. State University of New York, W.D.N.Y.1989, 731 F.Supp. 1160. Civil Rights 1349; Civil Rights 1455; Declaratory Judgment 210

Eleventh Amendment immunity applied to state university and its board of regents, precluding suit under §§ 1983. Kay v. Likins, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 2005, 160 Fed.Appx. 605, 2005 WL 3525618, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

City University of New York and one of its senior colleges were effectively arms of state, and thus entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from § 1981 and § 1983 claims by student who was arrested and prosecuted for sexually assaulting classmate; any damage award would be paid out of state treasury, and state exercised significant supervisory functions. Obilo v. City University of City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 715749, Unreported, opinion corrected and superseded 2003 WL 1809471. Federal Courts 269

Title VII and § 1983 claims against state university were barred by the Eleventh Amendment. O'Diah v. New York

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

City, S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31886622, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

3133. ---- Corrections departments, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

United States Parole Commission enjoyed sovereign immunity in District of Columbia inmate's §§ 1983 challenge to Commission's procedural rules; neither statute extending §§ 1983 to persons acting under color of laws of District, nor District of Columbia Revitalization Act, indicated Congressional intent to subject Commission to §§ 1983 liability. Settles v. U.S. Parole Com'n, C.A.D.C.2005, 429 F.3d 1098, 368 U.S.App.D.C. 297. United States 125(28.1)

Eleventh Amendment precluded former inmate's suit against Texas Department of Corrections for damages. Pete v. Metcalfe, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1993, 8 F.3d 214. Federal Courts 269

State parole officials had Eleventh Amendment immunity, in their official capacities, from § 1983 suit by former parole revokee for alleged violation of his Eighth and Fourteenth Amendment rights. Young v. McKune, D.Kan.2003, 280 F.Supp.2d 1250, affirmed 85 Fed.Appx. 723, 2004 WL 95875. Federal Courts 269

Arrestee's § 1983 official capacity claims for money damages against state prison officials, arising from detention and cavity search that he was subjected to while attempting to visit his son, were barred by the Eleventh Amendment. Lynn v. O'Leary, D.Md.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 306. Federal Courts 269

Alabama Board of Pardons and Paroles was immune, by virtue of U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 and the doctrine of official immunity, from suit under this section brought by father of girl allegedly murdered by parolee. Pate v. Alabama Bd. of Pardons and Paroles, M.D.Ala.1976, 409 F.Supp. 478, affirmed 548 F.2d 354.

Eleventh Amendment barred inmate's suit against state correctional institution, under §§ 1983; institution was instrumentality of State of Delaware, and neither United States Congress nor Delaware legislature had waived immunity. Green v. Howard R. Young Correctional Institution, D.Del.2005, 229 F.R.D. 99. Federal Courts 269

3134. ---- Education departments, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

New York State, New York Education Department, and New York Board of Regents, were not considered persons subject to suit under § 1983, and, thus, were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity. U.S. v. City of Yonkers, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 96 F.3d 600, on remand 1996 WL 696121, on remand 1997 WL 311943, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 2479, 521 U.S. 1104, 138 L.Ed.2d 988, on remand 984 F.Supp. 687, on remand 992 F.Supp. 672. Civil Rights 1346; Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment immunity barred § 1983 suit against State Review Officer of New York State Education Department in his official capacity. Board of Educ. of Pawling Cent. School Dist. v. Schutz, N.D.N.Y.2001, 137 F.Supp.2d 83, affirmed 290 F.3d 476, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 1284, 537 U.S. 1227, 154 L.Ed.2d 1088. Federal Courts 269

Minnesota Department of Children, Families and Learning (MDCFL), director of department, and Minnesota Board of Education were entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from disabled child's § 1983 action alleging he was entitled to due process hearing under IDEA and Minnesota Constitution. Thompson By and Through Buchanon v. Board of Special School Dist. No. 1, D.Minn.1996, 936 F.Supp. 644, affirmed 144 F.3d 574. Federal Courts 269

As state agency, state education department was immune from suit brought under § 1983. Grimes By and Through Grimes v. Sobol, S.D.N.Y.1993, 832 F.Supp. 704, affirmed 37 F.3d 857. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State Department of Education had immunity from civil rights suit brought by school; Department was agency of state. ICR Graduate School v. Honig, S.D.Cal.1991, 758 F.Supp. 1350. Civil Rights 1376(5)

3135. ---- Environment departments, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity barred state law claims of manufacturer in federal court against Commissioner of New York State Department of Environmental Conservation and Attorney General of State of New York that were related to Commissioner's creation and implementation of New York Architectural and Industrial Maintenance Coatings regulations, which were designed to reduce ozone emissions as required under Clean Air Act (CAA), since Commissioner acted as state official under state law and her creation and implementation of those regulations was well within scope of her authority. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend 11; 42 U.S.C.A. §§§§ 1983, 7401 et seq; N.Y. Envtl. Conserv. Sherwin-Williams Co. v. Crotty, N.D.N.Y.2004, 334 F.Supp.2d 187. Federal Courts 269

Owner of proposed residential subdivision was not precluded by Eleventh Amendment from seeking declaratory and injunctive relief against state officials in its § 1983 civil rights action against State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) officials, county, and county sewer district, arising from district's denial of Department sewer main line extension permit because of moratorium imposed by Department, under exception to general rule precluding actions against State, for actions involving acts of state officials that violate federal constitutional rights. HBP Associates v. Marsh, S.D.N.Y.1995, 893 F.Supp. 271. Federal Courts 269

Department of Environmental Management was an agency of state of Indiana, and as such, its Leaking Underground Storage Tank Division was immune from § 1983 suit brought by owners of former site of gasoline service station found to have required substantial cleanup. Rodenbeck v. State of Ind., Leaking Underground Storage Tank Div. of Dept. of Environmental Management, N.D.Ind.1990, 742 F.Supp. 1442. Federal Courts 269

State university officials in their personal capacities were qualifiedly immune from former employee's federal substantive due process claims, since the alleged rights at issue were not clearly established at the time of her termination from employment. Kay v. Likins, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 2005, 160 Fed.Appx. 605, 2005 WL 3525618, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3136. ---- Public defender systems, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

The state of Indiana and Indiana Public Defender System, as an arm of the state, were protected by immunity under U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 11 from civil rights action brought by prison inmates who contended that the Public Defender System functioned unfairly by discriminating against them on their requests for public defender assistance in prosecuting postconviction appeals. Hendrix v. Indiana State Public Defender System, N.D.Ind.1984, 581 F.Supp. 31. Federal Courts 268.1; Federal Courts 269

3137. ---- School boards, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Where, under Ohio law, 'state' did not include 'political subdivisions' and 'political subdivisions' did include local school district, school board was more like county or city than it was like arm of state, and it therefore was not entitled to assert any Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court. Mt. Healthy City School Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, U.S.Ohio 1977, 97 S.Ct. 568, 429 U.S. 274, 50 L.Ed.2d 471. Federal Courts 270

School districts and governing school boards were not arms of the state in New Mexico and thus were not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in district employee's § 1983 action against school district and board; overruling Martinez v. Board of Educ., 748 F.2d 1393. Duke v. Grady Mun. Schools, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1997, 127 F.3d 972. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

County school board was arm of state under Maryland law, and thus was entitled to sovereign immunity from suit for damages under § 1983, the Maryland Declaration of Rights, and civil rights conspiracy, breach of contract, promissory estoppel and wrongful discharge. Lewis v. Board of Educ. of Talbot County, D.Md.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 608. Federal Courts 270

Eleventh Amendment did not bar elementary school student's § 1983 claim against Commissioner of New Jersey Department of Education, alleging that Commissioner aided in local education officials' violation of student's First Amendment rights by failing to either exercise supervisory powers or implement policy to allow for expression of religious beliefs in classroom, where student sought only prospective injunctive relief with respect to that claim. C.H. v. Oliva, D.N.J.1997, 990 F.Supp. 341, affirmed 166 F.3d 1204, rehearing granted, opinion withdrawn, on rehearing 195 F.3d 167, rehearing granted, opinion vacated 197 F.3d 63, on rehearing 226 F.3d 198, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 2519, 533 U.S. 915, 150 L.Ed.2d 692. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Material issue of fact as to whether county board of education was entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from students' § 1983 claims against board for money damages precluded summary judgment for board. Orange v. County of Grundy, E.D.Tenn.1996, 950 F.Supp. 1365. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In action brought by former high school teachers alleging that their discharges were not in compliance with applicable standards and constituted deprivation of property without due process of law, immunity provided by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 11 was not shield for all defendants but extended only to defendant school board as agency and instrumentality of the state, which immunity was not waived by 70 O.S.1971, § 5-105, as to suit in federal court. Summers v. Civis, W.D.Okla.1976, 420 F.Supp. 993. Federal Courts 268.1; Federal Courts 319

3138. ---- School districts, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Eleventh Amendment did not bar assertion of federal §§ 1983 and Title VII claims in Mississippi state-court action against school district, brought under Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA) on behalf of developmentally disabled middle school student allegedly sexually assaulted by classmates, so long as school district was not arm of state; MTCA likely waived immunity for federal claims, MTCA notice requirement did not apply to §§ 1983 claims, and MTCA failed to insulate state and its subdivisions from liability for violations of constitutional rights. Black v. North Panola School Dist., C.A.5 (Miss.) 2006, 461 F.3d 584. Federal Courts 270

Utah school districts are not arms of the state for purposes of the Eleventh Amendment, and, therefore, they would not be entitled to immunity from liability in § 1983 suits in federal court; districts are considered political subdivisions under Utah law, local boards have significant authority over school district operations, and Utah school districts obtain funding at least in part through locally administered property taxes. Ambus v. Granite Bd. of Educ., C.A.10 (Utah) 1993, 995 F.2d 992. Federal Courts 270

Eleventh Amendment immunity barred parents' § 1983 action alleging IDEA violations against school district, district's board of trustees, state education department, state board of education, and state superintendent of public instruction; however, district officials sued in their individual capacities were not cloaked with sovereign immunity. Porter ex rel. Porter v. Board of Trustees of Manhattan Beach Unified School Dist., C.D.Cal.2000, 123 F.Supp.2d 1187, reversed 307 F.3d 1064, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 1303, 537 U.S. 1194, 154 L.Ed.2d 1029. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 270

Eleventh Amendment immunity barred parents' § 1983 action alleging IDEA violations against school district, district's board of trustees, state education department, state board of education, and state superintendent of public instruction; however, district officials sued in their individual capacities were not cloaked with sovereign immunity. Porter ex rel. Porter v. Board of Trustees of Manhattan Beach Unified School Dist., C.D.Cal.2000, 123 F.Supp.2d 1187, reversed 307 F.3d 1064, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 1303, 537 U.S. 1194, 154 L.Ed.2d 1029. Federal

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Courts 269; Federal Courts 270

3139. ---- Tax departments, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

North Carolina was entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from § 1983 suit challenging constitutionality of drug tax, absent any suggestion of waiver or consent. Lynn v. West, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1998, 134 F.3d 582, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 47, 525 U.S. 813, 142 L.Ed.2d 36. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 266.1; Federal Courts 267

State was entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from §§ 1983 action filed by its citizens, who were challenging their state court tax evasion convictions. Enyeart v. Minnesota, D.Minn.2006, 408 F.Supp.2d 797. Federal Courts 265

Eleventh Amendment barred award of damages in arrestee's §§1983 action against director and enforcement officers of North Carolina Department of Revenue Controlled Substance Tax Division in their official capacity arising out of assessment against arrestee of controlled substance tax, penalty, and interest following his arrest while in possession of crack cocaine and cash, but did not bar him from receiving injunction barring further enforcement of assessment. Williams v. Starling, M.D.N.C.2005, 353 F.Supp.2d 607. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred claims against State defendants, in Native American plaintiff's § 1983 action alleging conversion and unjust enrichment arising out of Nebraska's collection of sales taxes on sales of alcohol in an area of land allegedly unconstitutionally withdrawn from Indian reservation, and out of misappropriation and conversion of the value of that land; State had not waived its immunity from liability. Poor Bear v. Nesbitt, D.Neb.2004, 300 F.Supp.2d 904. Federal Courts 266.1; Federal Courts 269

State tax officials would not be carrying out state tax laws, and thus would not be immune from § 1983 liability, if they unlawfully obtained search warrant and conducted searches and seizures improperly. Mom's Inc. v. Weber, E.D.Va.1996, 951 F.Supp. 92, appeal dismissed 164 F.3d 625. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3140. ---- Utilities, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

New York Public Service Commission (PSC) and its employees acting in their official capacities were immune under Eleventh Amendment from business partner's § 1983 suit in federal court, alleging that Commission's failure to compel electric utility to extend electrical distribution lines to farm for free amounted to denial of equal protection and due process, absent Commission's consent to suit. Jemzura v. Public Service Com'n, N.D.N.Y.1997, 971 F.Supp. 702. Federal Courts 269

Public telephone company did not have privileges or immunities under Fourteenth Amendment which could be vindicated in § 1983 civil rights action, where company was subdivision of the state. Laborde-Garcia v. Puerto Rico Telephone Co., D.Puerto Rico 1990, 734 F.Supp. 46. Constitutional Law 206(1)

3141. ---- Miscellaneous agencies, states and state agencies, sovereign immunity

Section 1983 claim brought by terminated administrative law judge for state Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) against DMV was barred by the Eleventh Amendment, since DMV was state agency. Feingold v. New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 366 F.3d 138. Federal Courts 269

State statutory immunities for child abuse investigations could not protect city from federal constitutional claims asserted in § 1983 action. Wallis v. Spencer, C.A.9 (Cal.) 2000, 202 F.3d 1126. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Airman could not maintain § 1983 and state-law tort and civil rights claims against Massachusetts National Guard for injuries incurred in "hazing" incident at national guard base, regardless of whether Massachusetts National Guard was viewed as a federal or state entity, since, if it were viewed as federal entity, claims would be barred by Feres doctrine, and, if not, damage claims against it in federal court would be barred by Eleventh Amendment. Day v. Massachusetts Air Nat. Guard, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1999, 167 F.3d 678, on remand 37 F.Supp.2d 546. Federal Courts 269; United States 78(16)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

New York State Insurance Fund (SIF) was a "state agency" entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in civil rights action seeking damages for nonpayment of workers' compensation award, although SIF operated in manner of a private insurer, where SIF was created and controlled by the state; SIF's monies were not distinct from those of state but were controlled by, and could be commingled with other funds of, the state; its funds could be used to pay other state obligations; and if judgment against SIF could not be satisfied out of funds generated by SIF, it was payable out of other state funds. Lipofsky v. Steingut, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 86 F.3d 15, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 401, 519 U.S. 971, 136 L.Ed.2d 316. Federal Courts 265

Eleventh Amendment barred § 1983 action against state department of public welfare, notwithstanding plaintiffs' contention that exception existed where state agency participated in federally funded program or when it engaged in activity regulated by Congress; plaintiffs could point to no statutory waiver of sovereign immunity on part of department. Baxter by Baxter v. Vigo County School Corp., C.A.7 (Ind.) 1994, 26 F.3d 728. Federal Courts 266.1; Federal Courts 269

Florida Governor's Council on Indian Affairs, created by executive order for purpose of carrying out governmental function of advising the Governor with respect to Indian affairs, was a "state agency" and, as such, was immune from liability under this section to discharged Council employee. Tuveson v. Florida Governor's Council on Indian Affairs, Inc., C.A.11 (Fla.) 1984, 734 F.2d 730. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Even if Tax Injunction Act, section 1341 of Title 28, did not bar civil rights action alleging that enforcement of Washington liquor and cigarette tax laws on Indian trust land was illegal and that state agents and local police had made unconstitutional arrests and searches and seizures, U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 11 required dismissal of action with respect to state and state agencies. Comenout v. State of Wash., C.A.9 (Wash.) 1983, 722 F.2d 574. Federal Courts 269

Eleventh Amendment barred attorney's claims under §§§§ 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, 1986 against states and state officials, alleging that defendants conspired to place him under surveillance in order to harass and intimidate him in retaliation for his role as counsel in certain legal proceedings, where Congress did not waive states' immunity in the civil rights statutes at issue, and states did not consent to be sued in federal court under those civil rights statutes. Jones v. National Communication and Surveillance Networks, S.D.N.Y.2006, 409 F.Supp.2d 456. Federal Courts 266.1

New York State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) was an agency acting on behalf of the state and thus was entitled to sovereign immunity, under the Eleventh Amendment, in motorist's action under §§§§ 1981 and 1983 seeking declaratory and injunctive relief from DMV's failure to provide a Spanish speaking interpreter during an administrative proceeding to determine whether motorist's driver's license should be revoked for failure to take a breathalyzer test following his arrest for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Sandoval v. Department of Motor Vehicles State of New York, E.D.N.Y.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 40. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

Housing Department of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico (HDCPR) was an arm of the Commonwealth, and therefore enjoyed sovereign immunity as to the monetary damages claims brought under § 1983 by public employees who claimed they were victims of political reprisals, but remained vulnerable to suit for injunctive relief claims. Marrero Gutierez v. Molina, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 330 F.Supp.2d 45. Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Debtor was barred from maintaining civil rights action against state guaranty agency and its employee in his official capacity, in connection with collection of federal student loan debt and garnishment of his wages, pursuant to Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity. Savage v. Scales, D.D.C.2004, 310 F.Supp.2d 122. Federal Courts 269

Veterinarian's § 1983 action against state racing commission, as state agency, was barred by commission's Eleventh Amendment immunity. VanHorn v. Nebraska State Racing Com'n, D.Neb.2004, 304 F.Supp.2d 1151. Federal Courts 269

Louisiana State Mineral Board was arm of state for Eleventh Amendment immunity purposes, barring unsuccessful bidder's § 1983 due process action against Board seeking to annul mineral lease, even though statutes that created Board referred to it as a corporation, Board could sue and be sued and hold and use property, and Board sometimes administered leases on behalf of other agencies and local districts; courts considered Board an arm of state, state appropriated general fund money directly to Office of Mineral Resources which constituted staff of Board, state would be source of refund of bonus paid for lease in question if it was voided, and Board was executive department with little if any of its control and management functions relating to local autonomy. Dunhill Resources I, L.L.C. v. Louisiana ex rel. Louisiana State Mineral Bd., M.D.La.2003, 298 F.Supp.2d 404. Federal Courts 269

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the Pennsylvania State Police (PSP) were entitled to sovereign immunity on female state trooper's claims under § 1983, civil rights conspiracy statute, and the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act (PHRA). Zelinski v. Pennsylvania State Police, M.D.Pa.2003, 282 F.Supp.2d 251, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 108 Fed.Appx. 700, 2004 WL 1799234. Federal Courts 269

Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare (DPW), as a state agency, was immune under Eleventh Amendment from § 1983 suit brought by DPW employee for discrimination based on his blindness. Nelson v. Com. of Pennsylvania Dept. of Public Welfare, E.D.Pa.2002, 244 F.Supp.2d 382. Federal Courts 269

Delaware Division of Family Services (DFS) was state agency, and thus was entitled to immunity, under the Eleventh Amendment, from § 1983 claims, arising from its determination that father had abused his sons, where state did not waive its immunity, and Congress did not abrogate states' immunity for claims under § 1983. Rodriguez v. Stevenson, D.Del.2002, 243 F.Supp.2d 58. Federal Courts 269

Though a state agency, Baltimore City Police Department was connected with city government to such an extent as to prevent assertion of Eleventh Amendment immunity, and therefore Department was a "person" subject to suit under § 1983. Chin v. City of Baltimore, D.Md.2003, 241 F.Supp.2d 546. Civil Rights 1348; Federal Courts 270

Section 1983 claims seeking monetary damages from state psychiatric center and individual center officials in their official capacities, in which former patient alleged that he was subjected to illegal strip search and body cavity search upon his voluntary admission to center in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights, were barred by Eleventh Amendment. Aiken v. Nixon, N.D.N.Y.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 211, affirmed 80 Fed.Appx. 146, 2003 WL 22595837. Federal Courts 48

Eleventh Amendment, barring suits against a state or its agency where there is no express consent, barred § 1983 claims arising from allegedly improper actions of bar association disciplinary committee's chief counsel and law clerk that purportedly led to suspension of plaintiffs from practice; since committee was part of the judicial arm of state, real party in interest was the state. Thaler v. Casella, S.D.N.Y.1997, 960 F.Supp. 691. Federal Courts 271

Claim in federal court by school district against state agencies under civil rights statute, § 1983, seeking monetary compensation from the state agencies for damages that district allegedly incurred as result of those agencies' failure to draft an interagency agreement as required by the IDEA was precluded by the Eleventh Amendment. Board of Educ. of Community High School Dist. No. 218, Cook County, Ill. v. Illinois State Bd. of Educ., N.D.Ill.1996, 940 F.Supp. 1321, vacated in part 979 F.Supp. 1203. Federal Courts 269

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Doctor's § 1983 action which sought damages against members of state Board of Medical Examiners in their official capacities was barred, because action was, in effect, suit against state in violation of Eleventh Amendment. Howard v. Miller, N.D.Ga.1994, 870 F.Supp. 340. Federal Courts 269

Georgia Department of Transportation, as an arm of the state, was entitled to same sovereign immunity as state itself, and thus was entitled to immunity on former employee's discrimination claims under §§ 1983, the ADA, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA). Stephens v. Georgia Dept. of Transp., C.A.11 (Ga.) 2005, 134 Fed.Appx. 320, 2005 WL 1274481, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1128, 163 L.Ed.2d 862, rehearing denied 126 S.Ct. 1609, 164 L.Ed.2d 329. Federal Courts 269

Accepting parties' concession that the Utah Labor Commission was an arm of the State of Utah, plaintiff's § 1983, ADA, and state civil rights claims against the Commission were barred by the Commission's Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity. Buck v. Utah Labor Com'n., C.A.10 (Utah) 2003, 73 Fed.Appx. 345, 2003 WL 21916992, Unreported. Federal Courts 269

Claims under § 1983 against state and its instrumentalities or alter egos, arising from state court domestic proceedings, fell within Eleventh Amendment's bar of actions for damages against state in federal court. Collins v. Johnson County, KS, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2002, 56 Fed.Appx. 852, 2003 WL 42164, Unreported. Federal Courts 265; Federal Courts 269

New York State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) and Workers' Compensation Board were protected by sovereign immunity from § 1983 claims arising from DMV's alleged conspiracy to issue traffic tickets to plaintiff and alleged denial of plaintiff's right to equal access to Workers' Compensation Board forum; DMV and the Board were state entities, for purposes of sovereign immunity, and the Civil Rights Act and § 1983 did not abrogate sovereign immunity. O'Diah v. New York City, S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 1941179, Unreported, reconsideration denied 2002 WL 31246508, reconsideration denied 2003 WL 223418. Federal Courts 269

3142. Municipalities and municipal agencies, sovereign immunity

New York City Police Department and New York City Department of Corrections are both agencies of the City of New York, and cannot be sued independently in civil rights action under § 1983. Bailey v. New York City Police Dept., E.D.N.Y.1996, 910 F.Supp. 116. Civil Rights 1389

City corporation was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from § 1983 civil rights action. Snyder v. Murray City Corp., D.Utah 1995, 902 F.Supp. 1444, amended on denial of reconsideration 902 F.Supp. 1455, affirmed in part, reversed in part 124 F.3d 1349, opinion vacated in part on rehearing en banc 159 F.3d 1227, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 1334, 526 U.S. 1039, 143 L.Ed.2d 499. Federal Courts 270

Under the Eleventh Amendment, the City University of New York was immune from a suit for damages under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 for alleged reverse discrimination. Silver v. City University of New York, S.D.N.Y.1991, 767 F.Supp. 494, affirmed 947 F.2d 1021. Federal Courts 268.1

Public officials, including officials of city and county, acted under state law, not local laws, in destroying monkey that had bitten child, to enforce state Rabies Control Act, and thus Eleventh Amendment prohibited actions for monetary relief against county and city inasmuch as county and city were merely acting in place of state. Keeble v. Cisneros, S.D.Tex.1987, 664 F.Supp. 1076. Federal Courts 270

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3143. Puerto Rico, sovereign immunity

Regardless of whether Puerto Rico's sovereign immunity was constitutional or common-law in nature, Congress did not abrogate that immunity when it granted federal district court sitting in Puerto Rico jurisdiction to enforce provisions of § 1983 on basis equal to that conferred on district courts in the states. Maysonet-Robles v. Cabrero, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2003, 323 F.3d 43. Federal Courts 265

The Eleventh Amendment barred a § 1983 action against Puerto Rico officials in their official capacities for monetary damages that would have to be paid from the Puerto Rico treasury. Lugo Rodriguez v. Puerto Rico Institute of Culture, D.Puerto Rico 2002, 221 F.Supp.2d 229, affirmed 98 Fed.Appx. 15, 2004 WL 964272, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 416, 543 U.S. 958, 160 L.Ed.2d 321. Federal Courts 269

Under Eleventh Amendment, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico was immune from liability in action under § 1983 brought by father who was subjected to judicial proceedings arising out of his failure to pay child support. Font v. Dapena Yordan, D.Puerto Rico 1991, 763 F.Supp. 680, affirmed 946 F.2d 880. Federal Courts 265

Commonwealth of Puerto Rico enjoys sovereign immunity and cannot be sued in federal courts without its consent. Toa Baja Development Corp. v. Garcia Santiago, D.C.Puerto Rico 1970, 312 F.Supp. 899. Federal Courts 265

3144. Regional planning agencies and members, sovereign immunity

Tahoe Regional Planning Agency was not immune from liability under Eleventh Amendment, in light of states' intention in creating Authority, terms of Interstate Compact, and Authority's actual operation. Lake Country Estates, Inc. v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, U.S.Nev.1979, 99 S.Ct. 1171, 440 U.S. 391, 59 L.Ed.2d 401, on remand 474 F.Supp. 901.

3145. Tribal agencies, sovereign immunity

Agency created pursuant to the tribal-state agreements was a tribal agency, and therefore enjoyed sovereign immunity from civil rights suit based on removal of Indian child from her mother's custody and placement in a psychological care facility as a suicide risk and the filing and investigation of charges that mother abused and/or neglected her daughter. E.F.W. v. St. Stephen's Mission Indian High School, D.Wyo.1999, 51 F.Supp.2d 1217, affirmed 264 F.3d 1297. Indians 32(6)

XXVII. ABSOLUTE IMMUNITY

<Subdivision Index>

Absolute immunity generally 3171
Affirmative defense 3174
County social workers 3185b
Court order 3175
Declaratory judgments, equitable relief 3180
Equitable relief 3179-3181
Equitable relief - Generally 3179
Equitable relief - Declaratory judgments 3180
Equitable relief - Injunctions 3181
Federal marshals 3186
Injunctions, equitable relief 3181
Judicial immunity, summary judgment 3177

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Municipalities or cities 3182, 3183
Municipalities or cities - Generally 3182
Municipalities or cities - Policy or custom 3183
Parole board 3185a
Policy or custom, municipalities or cities 3183
Presidential immunity 3184
Prosecutorial immunity, summary judgment 3178
Prosecutors 3185

Public policy 3172
Qualified immunity distinguished 3173
Summary judgment 3176-3178
Summary judgment - Generally 3176
Summary judgment - Judicial immunity 3177
Summary judgment - Prosecutorial immunity 3178
3171. Absolute immunity generally

Level of immunity afforded in § 1983 action flows not from official's rank or title or location within government, but from nature of official's responsibilities. Scotto v. Almenas, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1998, 143 F.3d 105. Civil Rights 1376(1)

In order to determine whether government official is absolutely immune from suit, proper focus is on official's role in the context of the case, not identity of the party claiming the immunity, an immunity attaches to particular official functions, not to particular officers. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62 . Officers And Public Employees 114

Absolute immunity from liability under this section should be accorded only in exceptional cases. Walden v. Wishengrad, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1984, 745 F.2d 149. Civil Rights 1373

Absolute immunity immunizes government officials from liability completely and is accorded to public officials only in limited circumstances. Borzych v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2004, 340 F.Supp.2d 955, reconsideration denied in part 2004 WL 2491597. Officers And Public Employees 114

Insurance Commissioner of Puerto Rico and his Office were not entitled to absolute judicial immunity from civil rights suit challenging revocation of insurance licenses on due process grounds, where revocations were issued unilaterally, without prior administrative hearing at which licensees had opportunity to be heard before neutral fact-finder. Guillemard Gionorio v. Contreras Gomez, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 301 F.Supp.2d 122, appeal dismissed 161 Fed.Appx. 24, 2005 WL 3382638. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Critical inquiry in assessing claim of absolute judicial immunity against liability under § 1983 focuses on nature of act being performed and not on status of individual performing it. Clynch v. Chapman, D.Conn.2003, 285 F.Supp.2d 213. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Absolute immunity should be given sparingly and only under circumstances where it is imperative to protect a public official's discretion in making crucial decisions. Marty's Adult World of New Britain, Inc. v. Guida, D.C.Conn.1978, 453 F.Supp. 810. Officers And Public Employees 114

Federal district court properly dismissed prisoner's civil rights claims on the ground of absolute immunity, where claims were brought against two New York assistant attorneys general who represented the defendants in prisoner's civil state court action. Jacobs v. Stornelli, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 115 Fed.Appx. 480, 2004 WL 2428748, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3172. Public policy, absolute immunity

Absolute immunity is proper, in § 1983 action, only in those rare circumstances where official is able to demonstrate that application of absolute immunity to circumstances presented is required by public policy. Scotto v. Almenas, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1998, 143 F.3d 105. Civil Rights 1376(1)

As a matter of public policy, certain public officials are absolutely immune from liability for acts committed within the scope of their office, even if acts are corrupt or malicious. Jones v. Perrigan, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1972, 459 F.2d 81. Officers And Public Employees 114

Administrative hearing officer and administrative prosecutor for New Mexico Board of Medical Examiners were entitled to absolute immunity from liability under §§ 1983 for their roles in revoking physician's state medical license, where state provided sufficient safeguards in regulatory framework, including appeal of Board's decision in state court, to control any potential unconstitutional conduct by officials. Guttman v. Khalsa, D.N.M.2003, 320 F.Supp.2d 1164, affirmed 401 F.3d 1170, vacated 126 S.Ct. 321, 163 L.Ed.2d 29, on remand 446 F.3d 1027. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Public policy dictates that certain types of public officials, such as legislators, prosecutors, and judges, be granted an absolute immunity to insure a certain unintimated independence of action. Morales v. Vega, D.C.Puerto Rico 1979, 483 F.Supp. 1057. Officers And Public Employees 114

3173. Qualified immunity distinguished, absolute immunity

Although qualified immunity is generally sufficient to protect officials who are required to exercise their discretion from § 1983 liability, some officials perform "special functions" which, because of their similarity to functions that would have been immune when Congress enacted § 1983, deserve absolute protection from damages liability. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(1)

In light of preexisting law, purported unlawfulness of retaining records of unsubstantiated child abuse charges should not have been apparent to state officials at time of charges in 1989, and thus those officials were entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action. Hodge v. Jones, C.A.4 (Md.) 1994, 31 F.3d 157, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 581, 513 U.S. 1018, 130 L.Ed.2d 496. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3174. Affirmative defense, absolute immunity

Judicial immunity was an affirmative defense in suit under this section involving individual who sat as municipal court "judge" in prosecution of plaintiff for violating city ordinance and failure to plead such defense rendered irrelevant the "judge's" contentions that in view of pleading that he was a judge of municipal court, plaintiff was estopped to assert that he was not acting as a judge, that if the "judge" was not acting as judge plaintiff failed to prove requisite state action, and that plaintiff had burden, which she allegedly failed to carry, of proving that the "judge" was not a "judge" and that charges of disqualification were not valid defenses to judicial immunity. Boyd v. Carroll, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1980, 624 F.2d 730. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Question whether a defendant is immune, either qualifiedly or absolutely, is not a jurisdictional issue in a federal civil rights suit but, rather, immunity is affirmative defense which may defeat claim once subject-matter jurisdiction has been established. Robinson v. Bergstrom, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1978, 579 F.2d 401. Civil Rights 1373

Judges may invoke doctrine of judicial immunity not merely in their defense at trial but rather as a plea to bar the trial itself. Gregory v. Thompson, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1974, 500 F.2d 59. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Absolute immunity is affirmative defense that serves to protect government officials, when performing discretionary acts, from personal liability under § 1983. Spear v. Town of West Hartford, D.Conn.1991, 771 F.Supp. 521, affirmed 954 F.2d 63, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 66, 506 U.S. 819, 121 L.Ed.2d 33. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3175. Court order, absolute immunity

Police officers were not entitled to absolute immunity from suit under for removing minor daughter from mother's custody pursuant to custody order, in violation of mother's and daughter's constitutional rights, since custody order was facially invalid under Illinois law; order was issued by court in another state, and there was no indication on face of order that it had been filed with court in Illinois. Dunn v. City of Elgin, Illinois, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 347 F.3d 641, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Superior court orders directing that inmate be maintained at state prison in protective custody to allow inmate to prosecute civil lawsuits effectively did not prohibit moving inmate or providing inmate with effective protection, and thus prison officials were not entitled to absolute immunity from inmate's Eighth Amendment claim alleging deliberate indifference to inmate's safety in violation of his Eighth Amendment right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment; the orders did not direct the prison officials, expressly or otherwise, to confine inmate in conditions that they knew posed a substantial risk of serious harm. Hamilton v. Leavy, C.A.3 (Del.) 2003, 322 F.3d 776, on remand 2004 WL 609334. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3176. Summary judgment, absolute immunity--Generally

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether state highway patrol investigator who participated in presenting gambling charges to grand jury subsequent to decision of building owner to file § 1983 suit in federal court, when investigator in his deposition conceded that he failed to see owner or his daughter perform any gambling activities on night of raid, violated First Amendment, precluding summary judgment on issue of whether investigator was entitled to absolute immunity from liability in § 1983 action. Enlow v. Tishomingo County, Miss., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1992, 962 F.2d 501, rehearing denied 971 F.2d 750. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

State prison officials involved in formulating prison grooming policy, but who were not involved in enforcing policy, were absolutely immune to § 1983 civil rights claim by inmate whose hair was cut. Abordo v. State of Hawai'i, D.Hawai'i 1995, 902 F.Supp. 1220. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3177. ---- Judicial immunity, summary judgment, absolute immunity

In action alleging that state court judge and others were responsible for instigation, prosecution and continuation of proceedings against plaintiff and that those wrongful acts caused him to be deprived of federally protected rights, genuine issue of material fact existed with respect to whether judge had conspired with others to jail plaintiff for taking his children outside of the county in violation of temporary restraining order and whether judge thus enjoyed judicial immunity, precluding summary judgment. Beard v. Udall, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1981, 648 F.2d 1264. Federal Civil Procedure 2515

Genuine issues of material fact existed in inmate's civil rights action arising from injuries inflicted by another inmate, precluding summary judgement, on whether prison officials had custom or policy of permitting dangerous inmates to mingle with general prison population, whether officials knew or should have known that inmate presented danger to other inmates, whether management of prison was official, legislative or quasi-judicial function for purposes of invoking immunity, and whether management of prison violated inmate's clearly established constitutional rights. Schwartz v. County of Montgomery, E.D.Pa.1993, 823 F.Supp. 296. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

A municipal court judge not being liable in civil action for acts done by him in exercise of his judicial functions, no genuine fact issues were presented for trial in action against him for damages under this section because of his alleged willful and unlawful requirement of excessive bail from plaintiff on two misdemeanor complaints, so that defendant was entitled to summary judgment. Oppenheimer v. Stillwell, S.D.Cal.1955, 132 F.Supp. 761. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3178. ---- Prosecutorial immunity, summary judgment, absolute immunity

In civil rights action, district court correctly granted summary judgment in favor of district attorney whose only participation in the events of which plaintiff complained was his presentation of evidence at contested state hearing, as district attorney was clothed with absolute quasi-judicial immunity because his challenged activities were an integral part of the judicial process. Morrison v. Jones, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1979, 607 F.2d 1269, certiorari denied 100 S.Ct. 1648, 445 U.S. 962, 64 L.Ed.2d 237. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Genuine issue of material fact, as to whether prosecutor performed investigative functions in questioning illegally arrested and detained criminal suspect, precluded summary judgment in prosecutor's favor, based upon his prosecutorial immunity, in civil rights suit by former defendant. Thomas v. Riddle, N.D.Ill.1987, 673 F.Supp. 262. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Unresolved issues of material fact prevented entry of summary judgment in defendants' favor on question whether, as state-employed attorneys involved in investigation of insurance company, some of their actions exceeded their authority, were investigative rather than prosecutorial in nature, and extent of their official immunity from liability for damages in civil rights suit. Safeguard Mut. Ins. Co. v. Miller, E.D.Pa.1978, 456 F.Supp. 682. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In action in which it was alleged, with regard to plaintiffs' arrests, that city prosecutor participated in and directed investigation of gathering at residence prior to arrests and prosecutions and that his activities were conducted under color of state law to deprive plaintiffs of their constitutional rights, motions for dismissal of action against prosecutor or for summary judgment for prosecutor on basis of prosecutorial immunity would be denied, in that determination of issue as to such immunity would require impermissible ruling on ultimate factual questions. Ames v. Vavreck, D.C.Minn.1973, 356 F.Supp. 931. Federal Civil Procedure 1741; Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Because arrestee, a civil rights plaintiff, challenged assistant attorney general's conduct with respect to prosecutorial actions taken within the judicial phase of the criminal process, arrestee's claims were properly dismissed as barred by absolute immunity. Taylor v. Windsor Locks Police Dept., C.A.2 (Conn.) 2003, 71 Fed.Appx. 877, 2003 WL 21697441, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3179. Equitable relief, absolute immunity--Generally

Immunity from damages does not ordinarily bar equitable relief as well, and individual justices of Nevada Supreme Court could be ordered to permit plaintiff to sit for bar examination if she was able to prove her claim for constitutional relief. Louis v. Supreme Court of Nevada, D.C.Nev.1980, 490 F.Supp. 1174. Attorney And Client 7

3180. ---- Declaratory judgments, equitable relief, absolute immunity

Judge was not shielded by absolute immunity from declaratory or injunctive relief. Schepp v. Fremont County, Wyo., C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1990, 900 F.2d 1448. Judges 36

Magistrate for county of Richland, South Carolina, was immune from liability for money damages in state prisoners' action under this section; however, he was not immune from equitable and declaratory relief. Timmerman v. Brown, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1975, 528 F.2d 811. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Judicial officer was not immune from suit for declaratory relief for judicial actions allegedly in violation of this section. Guerin v. Riley, D.C.N.J.1983, 573 F.Supp. 110. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges defending against actions brought under this section enjoy absolute immunity from damages liability for acts performed in their judicial capacities, but judge enjoyed no immunity with respect to prayer for declaratory judgment. Africa v. Anderson, E.D.Pa.1980, 510 F.Supp. 28, affirmed 707 F.2d 1399. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3181. ---- Injunctions, equitable relief, absolute immunity

Judicial immunity is not a bar to prospective injunctive relief against judicial officer acting in her judicial capacity. Pulliam v. Allen, U.S.Va.1984, 104 S.Ct. 1970, 466 U.S. 522, 80 L.Ed.2d 565. Judges 36

Section 1983 action seeking prospective injunctive relief based on federal constitutional violations may be brought against state officials in their official capacities. Harris v. Angelina County, Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1994, 31 F.3d 331, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Federal Courts 272

Traditionally, judges have enjoyed broad immunity from suit for judicial acts; judicial immunity does not preclude suit for prospective relief such as injunction. Berger v. Cuyahoga County Bar Ass'n, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 983 F.2d 718, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 2416, 508 U.S. 940, 124 L.Ed.2d 639. Judges 36

Court clerks have absolute immunity from actions for damages arising from acts they are specifically required to do under court order or at judge's direction, and only qualified immunity from all other actions for damages, and clerks enjoy no immunity whatsoever from claims for equitable relief. Tarter v. Hury, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1981, 646 F.2d 1010. Clerks Of Courts 72

Judicial immunity does not extend to injunctive relief. McCrum v. Elkhart County Dept. of Public Welfare, N.D.Ind.1992, 806 F.Supp. 203. See, also, Harris v. Harvey, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1979, 605 F.2d 330, certiorari denied 100 S.Ct. 1331, 445 U.S. 938, 63 L.Ed.2d 772.

Although village justice of the peace may have acted maliciously in signing criminal arrest warrant against plaintiff in furtherance of alleged illegal scheme to evict low-income people from their homes and buildings so that village could redevelop area for business and commercial interests, justice was immune from suit for damages for actions, but not immune from suit for injunctive relief. Heimbach v. Village of Lyons (Wayne County, N. Y.), C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1979, 597 F.2d 344. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Quasi-judicial immunity enjoyed by clerk of state court was limited to actions for damages and did not extend to suit for injunctive relief which sought to require the clerk to expunge the judgment of conviction from the court records in his custody. Shipp v. Todd, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1978, 568 F.2d 133. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Local law enforcement personnel and prosecutors were not entitled to immunity in civil rights action brought challenging antiobscenity ordinance and statute and seeking injunctive relief; prosecutors and law enforcement personnel had primary responsibility for enforcing the ordinance. West Virginia Pride, Inc. v. Wood County, W.Va., S.D.W.Va.1993, 811 F.Supp. 1142. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Doctrine of judicial immunity does not shield judge from injunctive relief in civil rights suit under § 1983. Holeman v. Elliott, S.D.Tex.1990, 732 F.Supp. 726, affirmed 927 F.2d 601, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 59, 502 U.S. 812, 116 L.Ed.2d 35. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3182. Municipalities or cities, absolute immunity--Generally

Protection of municipality from being held liable under s 1983 on respondeat superior theory does not encompass 'immunity from suit'; unlike various government officials, municipalities do not enjoy immunity from suit, either absolute or qualified, under s 1983, and they can be sued under that section, but merely cannot be held liable unless policy or custom caused constitutional injury. Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence and Coordination Unit, U.S.Tex.1993, 113 S.Ct. 1160, 507 U.S. 163, 122 L.Ed.2d 517, on remand 993 F.2d 1177. Civil Rights 1351(1); Civil Rights 1376(4)

Application and rationale underlying both the doctrine whereby a municipality was held immune from tort liability with respect to its 'governmental' functions but not for its 'proprietary' functions, and a doctrine whereby a municipality was immunized for its 'discretionary' or 'legislative' activities but not for those which were 'ministerial' in nature, demonstrate that neither of these common-law doctrines could have been intended to limit a municipality's liability under the Civil Rights Act. Owen v. City of Independence, Mo., U.S.Mo.1980, 100 S.Ct. 1398, 445 U.S. 622, 63 L.Ed.2d 673, rehearing denied 100 S.Ct. 2979, 446 U.S. 993, 64 L.Ed.2d 850, on remand 623 F.2d 550. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Municipal body sued under this section cannot be entitled to an absolute immunity. Monell v. Department of Social Services of City of New York, U.S.N.Y.1978, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 436 U.S. 658, 56 L.Ed.2d 611. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City was not absolutely immune from a suit by dismissed police officer for monetary relief under this section. Cale v. City of Covington, Va., C.A.4 (Va.) 1978, 586 F.2d 311. Civil Rights 1376(10)

City official was entitled to absolute immunity from suit under §§ 1983 for her actions in introducing and voting for farm animal ordinance, which allegedly violated property owners' constitutional rights. Moran v. City of New Rochelle, S.D.N.Y.2004, 346 F.Supp.2d 507. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City manager was entitled to absolute immunity from §§ 1983 liability for his decision to initiate administrative disciplinary proceedings against firefighters, allegedly in retaliation for their political affiliation, in violation of the First Amendment, where he had acted with colorable claim of authority. Contes v. Porr, S.D.N.Y.2004, 345 F.Supp.2d 372. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Town Board of Police Commissioners had absolute immunity from suit under §§ 1983, brought by police officers claiming that issuance of report stating that police department was "out of control" violated their right to liberty and substantive due process; report was valid exercise of police power rights delegated to commissioners by town, which received powers through delegation by state. Algarin v. Town of Wallkill, S.D.N.Y.2004, 313 F.Supp.2d 257, affirmed 421 F.3d 137. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Municipal entities do not enjoy absolute immunity under the Eleventh Amendment, and thus may be sued under § 1983. Gedrich v. Fairfax County Dept. of Family Services, E.D.Va.2003, 282 F.Supp.2d 439. Federal Courts 270

Municipalities such as a city may only be held liable under § 1983 when the city itself deprives an individual of a constitutional right, and thus, for an individual deprived of a constitutional right to have recourse against a municipality under § 1983, she must show that she was harmed by a municipal "policy" or "custom." Davis v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2002, 228 F.Supp.2d 327, affirmed 75 Fed.Appx. 827, 2003 WL 22173046. Civil Rights 1351(1)

City officials were not entitled to absolute immunity with respect to former employee's § 1983 First Amendment claim; firing of employee did not arise because of any action by city council, but, rather, arose from actions of city administrator as head of public works department, and it was doubtful that absolute immunity applied to individual administrator's decision to reorganize her department without approval from governing body. Butler v. City of Prairie Village, D.Kan.1997, 974 F.Supp. 1386, affirmed in part, reversed in part 172 F.3d 736. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Town was not entitled to immunity, either qualified or absolute, in arrestee's § 1983 action arising out of his arrest and arraignment for aggravated unlicensed operation of motor vehicle in third degree. Estes-El v. Town of Indian Lake, N.D.N.Y.1997, 954 F.Supp. 527. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City's hearing masters who made determinations related to alleged violations by property owner of city building code and imposition of fines and subsequent filing of lien against property were not protected, as matter of law, by doctrine of absolute immunity; hearing masters were agents of the city and thus, there was no Eleventh Amendment issue to afford immunity. Doty v. City of Tampa, M.D.Fla.1996, 947 F.Supp. 468. Federal Courts 270

Municipality was not immune from liability arising from allegedly politically motivated discharge of assistant city attorney. Finkelstein v. Barthelemy, E.D.La.1988, 678 F.Supp. 1255. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3183. ---- Policy or custom, municipalities or cities, absolute immunity

For purposes of imposition of municipal liability under § 1983, an act performed pursuant to a custom that has not been formally approved by an appropriate decisionmaker may fairly subject a municipality to liability on the theory that the relevant practice is so widespread as to have the force of law; to succeed on this theory, a plaintiff must prove the existence of a practice that is permanent. Davis v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2002, 228 F.Supp.2d 327, affirmed 75 Fed.Appx. 827, 2003 WL 22173046. Civil Rights 1351(1)

3184. Presidential immunity, absolute immunity

Sitting President of the United States was not entitled to absolute immunity with respect to sexual harassment action brought against him for alleged conduct occurring when President was governor of Arkansas. Jones v. Clinton, E.D.Ark.1994, 869 F.Supp. 690, stay granted 879 F.Supp. 86, affirmed in part, reversed in part 72 F.3d 1354, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 81 F.3d 78, certiorari granted 116 S.Ct. 2545, 518 U.S. 1016, 135 L.Ed.2d 1066, motion granted 117 S.Ct. 291, 519 U.S. 925, 136 L.Ed.2d 210, affirmed 117 S.Ct. 1636, 520 U.S. 681, 137 L.Ed.2d 945, on remand 974 F.Supp. 712, on remand 990 F.Supp. 657. United States 26; United States 50.5(5); United States 50.10(1)

3185. Prosecutors, absolute immunity

City's corporate counsel was not entitled to absolute immunity from §§ 1983 liability in firefighters' action alleging that their First Amendment rights were violated when disciplinary charges were initiated against them in retaliation for their political affiliation, where counsel's actions in conducting an investigation after receiving female fire dispatcher's letter complaining of harassment by firefighters, and then writing a memorandum to city manager recommending that charges should be brought against firefighters, were merely investigatory and advisory in nature, and counsel did not initiate disciplinary proceedings herself. Contes v. Porr, S.D.N.Y.2004, 345 F.Supp.2d 372. Civil Rights 1376(10)

State prosecuting attorneys are entitled to absolute immunity from §§ 1983 actions for conduct intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Insurance Commissioner and his office were not entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability for performing functions analogous to those of prosecutor in seeking to revoke insurance licenses, where their conduct went beyond filing charges to deciding merits and unilaterally imposing severe sanctions. Guillemard Gionorio v. Contreras Gomez, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 301 F.Supp.2d 122, appeal dismissed 161 Fed.Appx. 24, 2005 WL 3382638. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecutors are absolutely immune in § 1983 actions for their decisions to prosecute, and withholding exculpatory evidence is quasi-judicial act protected by absolute immunity. Douris v. Schweiker, E.D.Pa.2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 391, reconsideration denied, affirmed 100 Fed.Appx. 126, 2004 WL 1396209. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney was entitled to absolute immunity from liability in his individual capacity arising from his failure to notify courts of notarized recantation by victim in state sexual assault prosecution following sentencing. Romero v. Boulder County DA's Office, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2004, 87 Fed.Appx. 696, 2004 WL 100523, Unreported. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Special prosecutor was not entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 for allegedly falsely attesting, in two motions and affidavits, to facts he had purportedly learned while investigating suspect in considering whether to charge him with numerous criminal law violations. Stinnett v. Fallon County, Montana, C.A.9 (Mont.) 2003, 72 Fed.Appx. 642, 2003 WL 21801546, Unreported. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

State prosecutor was not entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 liability arising from his sworn statements made in an affidavit supporting application for an arrest warrant. Coburn v. Nordeen, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2003, 72 Fed.Appx. 744, 2003 WL 21662064, Unreported. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(9)

3185A. Parole board

Parole board official was entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 and District of Columbia common law for her alleged failure to timely schedule parolee's parole revocation hearing; duty to schedule and hold such a hearing in a timely manner was a purely administrative function. Pate v. U.S., D.D.C.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 1. Civil Rights 1376(7); Pardon And Parole 56

3185B. County social workers

Employees of county youth services department had absolute immunity from §§ 1983 suit, challenging their seizure of minor child; under Pennsylvania law seizures were beginning of child dependency judicial procedure, protected by absolute immunity. Bowser v. Blair County Children and Youth Services, W.D.Pa.2004, 346 F.Supp.2d 788. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Child protective services caseworkers' recommendations to family court and investigation leading up to those recommendations related to initiation of judicial proceedings and thus fell within scope of absolute immunity, but their activities relating to carrying out removal of children from home were not judicial or prosecutorial functions and thus did not fall within scope of absolute immunity. O'Donnell v. Brown, W.D.Mich.2004, 335 F.Supp.2d 787 . Infants 17

County social workers were not entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 liability for their alleged actions in removing minor nephews from aunt's custody, making false promises to aunt for temporary "respite care," and placing nephews in alternate housing situations, without returning them to aunt, even after she secured new housing; at most, such actions were subject to protection of qualified immunity. Santos v. County of Los Angeles Department of Children and Family Services, C.D.Cal.2004, 299 F.Supp.2d 1070. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3186. Federal marshals, absolute immunity

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Defendant federal deputy marshals were not entitled to absolute immunity from claims of false testimony in civil rights action alleging that marshals violated plaintiff's Fourth Amendment rights by conspiring to misrepresent and misrepresenting plaintiff's role in incident involving exchange of gunfire with marshals and that such conduct led to plaintiff's subsequent illegal arrest, as no immunity attached if false testimony played role in initiating prosecution, and complaint could fairly be read to allege that marshals did initiate prosecution. Harris v. Roderick, D.Idaho 1996, 933 F.Supp. 977, affirmed 126 F.3d 1189, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1051, 522 U.S. 1115, 140 L.Ed.2d 114 . United States Marshals 32

XXVIII. JUDICIAL IMMUNITY GENERALLY

<Subdivision Index>

Acquittals or convictions, judicial acts 3257
Administrative acts, judicial acts 3247
Amendments 3213
Appointment or dismissal, judicial acts 3259

Arrest warrants, judicial acts 3264
Arrests generally, judicial acts 3263
Assistance of counsel, judicial acts 3260
Attorney appearances before judge, judicial acts 3261
Attorney discipline, judicial acts 3262
Bad faith acts, judicial acts 3248
Bail or bond, judicial acts 3265
Bankruptcy judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3236
Bankruptcy judges, judges within section 3216
Bar admissions and examinations, judicial acts 3266
Bond, judicial acts 3265
Chambers conferences, judicial acts 3267
Chief judges, judges within section 3217
Child custody, judicial acts 3268
Child protection, judicial acts 3269
Child support, judicial acts 3270
Clear absence of jurisdiction 3229-3244
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Generally 3229
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Bankruptcy judges 3236
Clear absence of jurisdiction - County court judges 3237
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Erroneous acts 3232

Clear absence of jurisdiction - Excess of jurisdiction distinguished 3233
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Justices of the peace 3238
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Juvenile court judges 3239
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Knowledge 3234
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Magistrates 3240
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Malicious acts 3235
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Municipal court judges 3241
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Personal jurisdiction 3230
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Probate judges 3242
Clear absence of jurisdiction - State court judges 3243
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Subject matter jurisdiction 3231
Clear absence of jurisdiction - Surrogate court judges 3244

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Comments of judge, judicial acts 3271
Common law 3212
Considerations governing generally 3228
Contempt, judicial acts 3272
County court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3237
County court judges, judges within section 3218
Detention center supervision, judicial acts 3273
Discretionary acts, judicial acts 3249
Dismissal of claims, judicial acts 3274

Erroneous acts, clear absence of jurisdiction 3232
Erroneous acts, judicial acts 3250
Evidence and witnesses, judicial acts 3275
Ex parte communications, judicial acts 3276
Excess of jurisdiction distinguished, clear absence of jurisdiction 3233
Executive acts distinguished, judicial acts 3246
Extradition, judicial acts 3277
Federal district court judges, judges within section 3219
Forfeiture, judicial acts 3278
Garnishments, judicial acts 3279
Guardianship, judicial acts 3282
Immigration judges, judges within section 3220
Indictment or information, judicial acts 3280
Injunctions 3301
Injunctions, judicial acts 3281
Judges within section 3215-3226
Judges within section - Generally 3215
Judges within section - Bankruptcy judges 3216
Judges within section - Chief judges 3217
Judges within section - County court judges 3218
Judges within section - Federal district court judges 3219

Judges within section - Immigration judges 3220
Judges within section - Justices of the peace 3221
Judges within section - Magistrates 3222
Judges within section - Municipal court judges 3223
Judges within section - State court judges generally 3224
Judges within section - State superior court judges 3225
Judges within section - State supreme court judges 3226
Judgments, judicial acts 3283
Judicial acts 3245-3300
Judicial acts - Generally 3245
Judicial acts - Acquittals or convictions 3257
Judicial acts - Appointment or dismissal 3259
Judicial acts - Arrest warrants 3264
Judicial acts - Arrests generally 3263
Judicial acts - Assistance of counsel 3260
Judicial acts - Attorney appearances before judge 3261
Judicial acts - Attorney discipline 3262
Judicial acts - Bad faith acts 3248
Judicial acts - Bail or bond 3265

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Judicial acts - Bar admissions and examinations 3266
Judicial acts - Chambers conferences 3267

Judicial acts - Child custody 3268
Judicial acts - Child protection 3269
Judicial acts - Child support 3270
Judicial acts - Comments of judge 3271
Judicial acts - Contempt 3272
Judicial acts - Detention center supervision 3273
Judicial acts - Discretionary acts 3249
Judicial acts - Dismissal of claims 3274
Judicial acts - Erroneous acts 3250
Judicial acts - Evidence and witnesses 3275
Judicial acts - Ex parte communications 3276
Judicial acts - Executive acts distinguished 3246
Judicial acts - Extradition 3277
Judicial acts - Forfeiture 3278
Judicial acts - Garnishments 3279
Judicial acts - Guardianship 3282
Judicial acts - Indictment or information 3280
Judicial acts - Injunctions 3281
Judicial acts - Judgments 3283
Judicial acts - Jury matters 3284
Judicial acts - Juvenile delinquents 3285

Judicial acts - Malicious acts 3251
Judicial acts - Mandamus 3286
Judicial acts - Mental commitment and competency 3287
Judicial acts - Ministerial or administrative acts 3247
Judicial acts - Miscellaneous acts 3300
Judicial acts - Parole 3288
Judicial acts - Place of performance of act 3255
Judicial acts - Plea bargains 3289
Judicial acts - Post-conviction relief 3290
Judicial acts - Presentence reports 3252
Judicial acts - Prisoner transfers 3291
Judicial acts - Probable cause 3292
Judicial acts - Probation 3293
Judicial acts - Prosecutorial acts 3253
Judicial acts - Receivership 3295
Judicial acts - Records or transcripts 3294
Judicial acts - Replevin 3296
Judicial acts - Reversals 3258
Judicial acts - Rights violations 3254
Judicial acts - Rulings or decisions generally 3256
Judicial acts - Sentence and punishment 3297

Judicial acts - Subpoena enforcement 3298
Judicial acts - Supersedeas bonds 3299
Judicial immunity generally 3211
Jury matters, judicial acts 3284

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Justices of the peace, clear absence of jurisdiction 3238
Justices of the peace, judges within section 3221
Juvenile court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3239
Juvenile delinquents, judicial acts 3285
Knowledge, clear absence of jurisdiction 3234
Magistrates, clear absence of jurisdiction 3240
Magistrates, judges within section 3222
Malicious acts, clear absence of jurisdiction 3235
Malicious acts, judicial acts 3251
Mandamus, judicial acts 3286
Mental commitment and competency, judicial acts 3287
Ministerial or administrative acts, judicial acts 3247
Miscellaneous acts, judicial acts 3300
Municipal court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3241
Municipal court judges, judges within section 3223
Parole, judicial acts 3288
Personal jurisdiction, clear absence of jurisdiction 3230

Place of performance of act, judicial acts 3255
Plea bargains, judicial acts 3289
Post-conviction relief, judicial acts 3290
Presentence reports, judicial acts 3252
Prisoner transfers, judicial acts 3291
Probable cause, judicial acts 3292
Probate judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3242
Probation, judicial acts 3293
Prosecutorial acts, judicial acts 3253
Public policy 3214
Quasi-judicial officials 3227
Receivership, judicial acts 3295
Records or transcripts, judicial acts 3294
Replevin, judicial acts 3296
Reversals, judicial acts 3258
Rights violations, judicial acts 3254
Rulings or decisions generally, judicial acts 3256
Sentence and punishment, judicial acts 3297
State court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3243
State court judges generally, judges within section 3224
State superior court judges, judges within section 3225

State supreme court judges, judges within section 3226
Subject matter jurisdiction, clear absence of jurisdiction 3231
Subpoena enforcement, judicial acts 3298
Supersedeas bonds, judicial acts 3299
Surrogate court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction 3244

3211. Judicial immunity generally

Judges are generally absolutely immune from civil suit for money damages, including § 1983 actions. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Government officials whose duties require a full exemption from liability, and so are entitled to "absolute immunity," include judges performing judicial acts within their jurisdiction, prosecutors in the performance of their official functions, and certain "quasi-judicial" agency officials who, irrespective of their title, perform functions essentially similar to those of judges or prosecutors in a setting similar to that of a court. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10; Judges 36; Officers And Public Employees 114

Judicial or quasi-judicial immunity available to federal officers is not limited to immunity from damages, but extends to actions for declaratory, injunctive and other equitable relief. Moore v. Brewster, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 96 F.3d 1240, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 963, 519 U.S. 1118, 136 L.Ed.2d 848. Judges 36

Individual judges are immune from civil suit when acting within their judicial capacity, even in § 1983 civil rights actions. Harris v. Missouri Court of Appeals, Western Dist., C.A.8 (Mo.) 1986, 787 F.2d 427, certiorari denied 107 S.Ct. 179, 479 U.S. 851, 93 L.Ed.2d 114, rehearing denied 107 S.Ct. 681, 479 U.S. 1022, 93 L.Ed.2d 731. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges are immune from liability under this section for their acts within the judicial role. Keeton v. Guedry, C.A.5 (La.) 1976, 544 F.2d 199. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial officers are immune from suit under this section. Andrews v. Murphy, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1965, 349 F.2d 114, certiorari denied 86 S.Ct. 589, 382 U.S. 999, 15 L.Ed.2d 486. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Absolute immunity is generally reserved for judges performing judicial acts within their jurisdiction, prosecutors performing acts intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process, and quasi-judicial agency officials whose duties are comparable to those of judges or prosecutors when adequate procedural safeguards exist. Braswell v. Haywood Regional Medical Center, W.D.N.C.2005, 352 F.Supp.2d 639. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10; Judges 36; Officers And Public Employees 114

Judges had absolute judicial immunity from claim of monetary damages under § 1983 and statutes prohibiting conspiracies to restrict civil rights and penalizing neglect of rights, by defendant convicted in state court of delivering controlled substance, who alleged violation of his federal rights as result of conspiracy of court officials, including judges, to deny him access to transcript of proceedings. Travis v. Miller, E.D.Pa.2002, 226 F.Supp.2d 663. Civil Rights 1376(8); Conspiracy 13

Judicial immunity is overcome only where actions were not taken in judicial capacity or where actions, though judicial in nature, were taken in complete absence of all jurisdiction. Ippolito v. Meisel, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 155. Judges 36

Judge was immune from civil liability to handicapped member of criminal defendant's family who was barred from using court personnel door to enter or leave courtroom; even if judge violated Americans with Disabilities Act, he acted well within his judicial power to control courtroom. Livingston v. Guice, W.D.N.C.1994, 855 F.Supp. 834, reversed 68 F.3d 460. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges, acting within the scope of their authority, are absolutely immune from liability. International Molders and Allied Workers, AFL-CIO v. Buchanan Lumber Birmingham, N.D.Ala.1978, 459 F.Supp. 950, affirmed 618 F.2d 782. Judges 36

Under this section, no claims are created which may be asserted against judges acting within the scope of their judicial functions. Martinez v. Com. of Puerto Rico, D.C.Puerto Rico 1977, 435 F.Supp. 1204. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

A judge is absolutely immune from liability for damages for acts done in the performance of his judicial duties. Trivett v. Bank of Delaware, D.C.Del.1976, 421 F.Supp. 827. Judges 36

Judges acting within scope of their official duties are absolutely immune from liability for damages under this section. Scarrella v. Spannaus, D.C.Minn.1974, 376 F.Supp. 857. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3212. Common law, judicial immunity generally

Passage of this section did not result in abrogation of immunity of a judge from liability for damages. Wiggins v. Hess, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1976, 531 F.2d 920. Civil Rights 1376(8)

The common law immunity of a judge from liability for any injuries resulting from acts within his jurisdiction is fully applicable in suits under this section which alleged deprivations of constitutional rights. Apton v. Wilson, C.A.D.C.1974, 506 F.2d 83, 165 U.S.App.D.C. 22. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Common law of judicial immunity protects judge from monetary damages under this section. Blouin v. Dembitz, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1973, 489 F.2d 488. Civil Rights 1376(8)

This section did not abolish or in anywise affect doctrine of judicial immunity. Davis v. McAteer, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1970, 431 F.2d 81. See, also, Dacey v. New York County Lawyers' Ass'n, C.A. 2 (N.Y.) 1969, 423 F.2d 188, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 1819, 398 U.S. 929, 26 L.Ed.2d 92; Louis v. Supreme Court of Nevada, D.C.Nev.1980, 490 F.Supp. 1174; Schwartz v. Weinstein, D.C.Mo.1971, 333 F.Supp. 1031, affirmed 459 F.2d 882; Kristein v. Rector and Visitors of University of Virginia, D.C.Va.1970, 309 F.Supp. 184. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Common law immunity of judicial officers applies in actions for damages under this section. Beard v. Stephens, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1967, 372 F.2d 685.

Legislative history of this section does not abrogate or impair traditional common law doctrine of judicial immunity. Byrne v. Kysar, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1965, 347 F.2d 734, certiorari denied 86 S.Ct. 902, 383 U.S. 913, 15 L.Ed.2d 668, rehearing denied 86 S.Ct. 1348, 384 U.S. 914, 16 L.Ed.2d 367, rehearing denied 86 S.Ct. 1891, 384 U.S. 994, 16 L.Ed.2d 1011. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges who perform judicial functions within their jurisdiction are granted absolute immunity concerning actions seeking monetary damages which arise out of these actions. Neville v. Dearie, N.D.N.Y.1990, 745 F.Supp. 99. Judges 36

Judicial officers are and must be immune from damage actions based on claimed violations of the federal civil rights laws arising out of their exercise of judicial power. Kane v. Graubard, Moskovitz, McGoldrick, Dannett & Horowitz, S.D.N.Y.1977, 442 F.Supp. 733. Civil Rights 1376(8)

The judicial immunity doctrine applies in action under this section. Weaver v. Haworth, D.C.Okl.1975, 410 F.Supp. 1032. See, also, Shore v. Howard, D.C.Tex.1976, 414 F.Supp. 379; Doe v. Lake County, Indiana, N.D.Ind.1975, 399 F.Supp. 553.

The common law immunity of judges was not abrogated by this section. Cameron v. Montgomery County Child Welfare Service, D.C.Pa.1979, 471 F.Supp. 761. See, also, Tate v. Arnold, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1955, 223 F.2d 782; Staelens v. Yake, D.C.Ill.1977, 432 F.Supp. 834; Jemzura v. Belden, N.D.N.Y.1968, 281 F.Supp. 200.

3213. Amendments, judicial immunity generally

Amendment to § 1983, limiting availability of injunctive relief against judges to circumstances in which declaratory relief was unavailable or inadequate, was not intended to alter availability of declaratory relief against judicial officers. Brandon E. ex rel. Listenbee v. Reynolds, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2000, 201 F.3d 194. Declaratory Judgment 111

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3214. Public policy, judicial immunity generally

Doctrine of judicial immunity from civil rights actions for damages is not a clannish effort to protect one's own brood nor is it for the protection or benefit of a malicious or corrupt judge, but, rather, it is for the benefit of the public so that judges, state or federal, may feel at liberty to exercise their functions with independence and without fear of consequences. Torres Irizarry v. Toro Goyco, D.C.Puerto Rico 1976, 425 F.Supp. 366. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3215. Judges within section, judicial immunity generally--Generally

A judge, of whatever status in judicial hierarchy, is immune from suit for damages resulting from any act performed in judicial role. Brewer v. Blackwell, C.A.5 (La.) 1982, 692 F.2d 387. See, also, Briscoe v. LaHue, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1981, 663 F.2d 713, certiorari granted 102 S.Ct. 1708, 455 U.S. 1016, 72 L.Ed.2d 132, affirmed 103 S.Ct. 1108, 460 U.S. 325, 75 L.Ed.2d 96, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 1426, 460 U.S. 1037, 75 L.Ed.2d 787; Coleman v. Court of Appeals, Div. No. Two of State of Okl., W.D.Okl.1980, 550 F.Supp. 681. Judges 36

Judges who presided over case in which civil rights claimant was defendant were entitled to absolute judicial immunity from claims of unconstitutional prosecution, conviction, and/or detention. Hunter v. City of Beaumont, E.D.Tex.1994, 867 F.Supp. 496. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges of courts of general jurisdiction are not liable in civil damages for their judicial acts, even when such acts are in excess of their jurisdiction and they are alleged to have been done maliciously or corruptly; the doctrine is fully applicable to actions maintained under this section and extends to judges of every status in the judicial hierarchy, from magistrates to justices of the peace, to family court commissioners. Ross v. Arnold, E.D.Wis.1983, 575 F.Supp. 1494. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3216. ---- Bankruptcy judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

Federal district judges and bankruptcy judge were immune from liability under § 1983 for any action within the sphere of their offices. Yocum v. Dixon, C.D.Ill.1990, 729 F.Supp. 616. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3217. ---- Chief judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

Chief judge of eleventh judicial circuit in and for Dade county and chief judge of crimes division of county court for Dade county enjoyed cloak of official immunity and were not actionable for damages under this section. Smyl, Inc. v. Gerstein, S.D.Fla.1973, 364 F.Supp. 1302. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3218. ---- County court judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

County judge who served as principal executive officer overseeing county roads pursuant to Arkansas law was entitled to qualified immunity for his conduct of ordering county sheriff to arrest motorist who drove truck over bridge without a weight limit posting causing bridge to collapse, in motorist's §§ 1983 unlawful arrest claim; although titled a judge, he lacked any judicial duties, he had no authority to order the arrest, and his conduct did not rise to the level of conscience-shocking or egregious behavior. Robinson v. White County, AR, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 452 F.3d 706. Civil Rights 1376(8)

County judge was immune from suit which alleged that acts done and performed by him in his capacity as county judge denied plaintiff his civil rights. Godwin v. Williams, N.D.Tex.1968, 293 F.Supp. 770.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3219. ---- Federal district court judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

Federal district judge and magistrate judge were entitled to absolute judicial immunity with regard to former defendant's claims under § 1983 and Bivens that judges conspired to prosecute him; while complaint alleged that judges acted in absence of jurisdiction, as evidenced by court order vacating his conviction on grounds that defendant's conduct was not criminal at the time, such allegation did not establish clear absence of jurisdiction, which district court clearly had in view of charges against defendant under federal law. Santini v. Gierbolini, D.Puerto Rico 1996, 937 F.Supp. 130, affirmed 114 F.3d 1169. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

Federal district court judges and United States magistrate were entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 for acts carried out within scope of their judicial duties. Hanner v. U.S. Government, S.D.Miss.1986, 660 F.Supp. 77. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3220. ---- Immigration judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

Absolute immunity from monetary relief stemming from judicial actions of immigration judge bars suit at onset and frees judge of any obligation to justify his action. Lartey v. U.S. Dept. of Justice, W.D.La.1992, 790 F.Supp. 130. Judges 36

3221. ---- Justices of the peace, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

A justice of the peace exercises judicial functions and is immune from liability under this section. Stift v. Lynch, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1959, 267 F.2d 237. Justices Of The Peace 27

Though, as general proposition of law, judges and justices of peace are immune from damages under this section, such is not a universal proposition. Cross v. Byrum, S.D.Fla.1972, 348 F.Supp. 196. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Justices of the peace are judicial officers and are immune from liability for damages under this section if acting within the scope of their authority or in discharge of their duties. Danner v. Moore, W.D.Pa.1969, 306 F.Supp. 433 . Civil Rights 1376(8)

3222. ---- Magistrates, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

Neutral and detached magistrate is absolutely immune from suit under civil rights statute. McKenna v. Clayton County, State of Ga., N.D.Ga.1987, 657 F.Supp. 221. Civil Rights 1376(8)

County magistrate and prosecuting attorney were immune from liability for damages for acts performed by them in the exercise of their judicial or quasi-judicial discretion. Davis v. Hudson, D.C.S.C.1977, 436 F.Supp. 1210. Officers And Public Employees 114

County magistrate enjoyed judicial immunity from civil rights action seeking money damages for action taken in his official capacity. Dennis v. Hein, D.C.S.C.1976, 413 F.Supp. 1137. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3223. ---- Municipal court judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

That seating of special city judge was procedurally defective did not render his judicial actions invalid or deprive him of absolute judicial immunity in connection with discharge of his judicial duties. White by Swafford v. Gerbitz, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1989, 892 F.2d 457. Judges 26; Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Where, at no time during prosecution of plaintiff in state court for violation of state statute prohibiting harassing phone calls did defendants act other than in their capacity as city judge and assistant district attorney, both defendants were entitled to protection of judicial immunity afforded judicial officers acting within scope of their jurisdiction, in suit under this section alleging a conspiracy to deprive plaintiff of his constitutionally protected rights. Guedry v. Ford, C.A.5 (La.) 1970, 431 F.2d 660. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges of municipal court were absolutely immune from liability for damages for acts done in the course of their judicial doctrines; this subchapter did not abrogate that common law doctrine. Tucker v. City of Montgomery Bd. of Com'rs, M.D.Ala.1976, 410 F.Supp. 494. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3224. ---- State court judges generally, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

State circuit court judge was entitled to absolute immunity in his individual capacity from damages in § 1983 suit based upon judge's order that spectator leave courtroom; incident occurred while judge was hearing a domestic relations case, judge excluded spectator from courtroom during a proceeding that was properly before judge, judge was acting in his official capacity, and judge had jurisdiction over hearing. Simmons v. Conger, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1996, 86 F.3d 1080. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge who ordered plaintiff's arrest for contempt of court in underlying action was immune from liability in plaintiff's § 1983 action, where judge had subject-matter jurisdiction over underlying action and played judicial role in ordering plaintiff's arrest for contempt. Homola v. McNamara, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1995, 59 F.3d 647. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State trial judge had absolute immunity from inmate's pro se and in forma pauperis civil rights claim alleging that he was not guilty of murder and that judge should have prevented allegedly wrongful conviction, but not complaining of any nonjudicial actions taken by judge, and thus claim could be dismissed with prejudice as frivolous. Boyd v. Biggers, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1994, 31 F.3d 279. Federal Civil Procedure 2734; Judges 36

South Carolina judges were absolutely immune from damage liability with respect to cases before them; thus no claim against them under this section for deprivation of rights under color of state law could be maintained. Wilkins v. Rogers, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1978, 581 F.2d 399. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

Judge of state court is immune from liability for damages under this section. Wartman v. Branch 7, Civil Division, County Court, Milwaukee County, State of Wis., C.A.7 (Wis.) 1975, 510 F.2d 130. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity applied to bar unsuccessful state litigant's § 1983 claims for monetary damages that were asserted against state judges in their individual capacities. Tsabbar v. Booth, S.D.N.Y.2003, 293 F.Supp.2d 328, affirmed 115 Fed.Appx. 513, 2004 WL 2931117. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges of state court acting within apparent scope of their judicial duties are immune from civil rights actions for money damages. Blouin v. Dembitz, S.D.N.Y.1973, 367 F.Supp. 415, affirmed 489 F.2d 488. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges of a general court of justice of a state were clothed with judicial immunity from suit for damages. Fowler v. Alexander, M.D.N.C.1972, 340 F.Supp. 168, affirmed 478 F.2d 694. Judges 36

Only federal court authorized to inquire into correctness of decision of state court in civil litigation is the Supreme Court of the United States, and suit naming the state judge is not a way around the principle that federal courts do not entertain collateral attacks on state judgments; the state judge is entitled to judicial immunity. Sato v. Plunkett, N.D.Ill.1994, 154 F.R.D. 189. Federal Courts 1142; Judges 36; Judgment 828.5(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State trial court judge who presided over medical malpractice action enjoyed absolute immunity from liability in civil rights action brought by patient as all of actions patient alleged that judge took were performed within scope of his jurisdiction as trial judge presiding over the medical malpractice action. Finch v. Buechel, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 188 Fed.Appx. 139, 2006 WL 2092440, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court trial judge who presided over civil action in which physician brought legal malpractice claim against physician's attorney enjoyed absolute immunity from liability in §§ 1983 action brought by physician relating to his rulings in action. Guttman v. Silverberg, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2005, 167 Fed.Appx. 1, 2005 WL 3462805, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity barred county inmate's § 1983 claims against California state judges who allegedly started and continued process of having him committed under statute relating to treatment of criminal defendants thought not competent to stand trial; judges' actions clearly were taken in judicial capacity and were of general nature of actions which judges had jurisdiction to take. Jernigan v. Superior Court of State of California for County of Santa Clara, N.D.Cal.2003, 2003 WL 21640489, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3225. ---- State superior court judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

The People of the State of California and the Superior Court of California are immune from suit under this section. Serrano v. People of State of Cal., C.A.9 (Cal.) 1966, 361 F.2d 474. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3226. ---- State supreme court judges, judges within section, judicial immunity generally

Justices of state Supreme Courts are immune to suit for damages for acts performed in course of their official duties and such immunity is not altered by this section. Larsen v. Gibson, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1959, 267 F.2d 386, certiorari denied 80 S.Ct. 106, 361 U.S. 848, 4 L.Ed.2d 87. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

Dismissal of state prisoner's § 1983 action against prison officials was warranted, absent allegations of officials' personal involvement in the alleged constitutional violation. Williams v. Kansas, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2003, 76 Fed.Appx. 278, 2003 WL 22255965, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

3227. Quasi-judicial officials, judicial immunity generally

Physician conducting peer review at behest of Maryland Board of Physician Quality Assurance was entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from reviewed physician's § 1983 claim alleging due process violations; reviewing physician was performing function analogous to prosecutor reviewing evidence to determine if charges should be brought, and absolute immunity was necessary to foster atmosphere in which reviewing physician could exercise professional judgment without fear of retaliation. Ostrzenski v. Seigel, C.A.4 (Md.) 1999, 177 F.3d 245. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State nursing board was functioning as adjudicatory body, and board director and its members were acting in their "quasi-judicial" capacity, in revoking nursing licenses; in revocation proceedings board and its members administer oaths, compel attendance of witnesses, allow presentation of witness testimony and cross-examination of witnesses, permit parties to be represented by counsel, and make findings of fact and assess punishments or accolades in accordance with those findings. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62. States 78

Where defendants were judicial officers and quasi-judicial officers, they would be immune from claim for damages by plaintiffs under this section. Kinney v. Lenon, C.A.9 (Or.) 1971, 447 F.2d 596. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Title of office, quasi-judicial or even judicial, does not of itself immunize officer from responsibility for unlawful acts which cannot be said to constitute integral part of judicial process. Robichaud v. Ronan, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1965, 351 F.2d 533. Officers And Public Employees 116

Absolute quasi-judicial immunity from suit applied to executive secretary for state racing commission and commission members, in their individual capacities, for actions taken in direct connection with adjudication of formal disciplinary complaint filed against veterinarian who held special license to treat racehorses, given that commission was state agency with established procedures for deciding disciplinary proceedings involving its licensees and those procedures closely resembled judicial procedures and provided adequate constitutional safeguards, notwithstanding veterinarian's contention that commission exceeded its authority and failed to adhere to its own procedures for judging his alleged rule violations. VanHorn v. Nebraska State Racing Com'n, D.Neb.2004, 304 F.Supp.2d 1151. States 78

Absolute quasi-judicial immunity barred § 1983 claims against members of state chiropractic board who revoked chiropractor's license; state law provided procedural safeguards resembling those available in judicial process, and board members were sufficiently independent and free of political influence. Mason v. Arizona, D.Ariz.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 807. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Members of Mississippi Board of Nursing were entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from liability in civil rights action, even though Board did not exist in 1871 and did not meet common-law or traditional test of immunity, where Board engaged in actions comparable to adjudicatory or judicial role; Board was imbued with powers comparable to those of judges and engaged in many adjudicatory functions, among them determination of fact questions, following procedural trappings logically associated with common-law finder of fact and subject to judicial review. Duncan v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, S.D.Miss.1997, 982 F.Supp. 425, affirmed 129 F.3d 611. Civil Rights 1376(8)

In determining scope of immunity, courts are to follow "functional" approach, based on analysis of factors characteristic of judicial process; official is entitled to absolute immunity if official's judgments are functionally comparable to those of judge, if nature of controversy in which official is forced to become participant is sufficiently intense that there is realistic prospect of continuing harassment or intimidation by disappointed litigants, and if system in which official operates contains safeguards adequate to reduce need for private damage actions as means of controlling unconstitutional conduct. Eisenberg v. Sternberg, W.D.Wis.1986, 641 F.Supp. 620 . Officers And Public Employees 114

Claim of judicial or quasi-judicial immunity depends not on title of officer, but on whether alleged conduct, which gives rise to the complaint, involved performance of judicial or quasi-judicial function and it is not limited to judicial officers of the court, such as judges, prosecutors and grand jurors. Hoke v. Board of Medical Examiners of State of N. C., W.D.N.C.1978, 445 F.Supp. 1313. Judges 36

Quasi-judicial immunity is more limited than the immunity afforded judges and extends only to those acts committed within the scope of the actor's jurisdiction and with the authorization of law. Turner v. American Bar Ass'n, N.D.Tex.1975, 407 F.Supp. 451, affirmed 539 F.2d 715, affirmed 542 F.2d 56. Officers And Public Employees 114

3228. Considerations governing generally, judicial immunity generally

In determining whether government officials should be afforded absolute immunity, factors characteristic of judicial process that are to be considered in determining absolute immunity, as opposed to qualified immunity, include need to assure that official can perform his functions without harassment or intimidation, presence of safeguards that reduce need for private damages actions as a means of controlling unconstitutional conduct, insulation from political influence, importance of precedent, adversary nature of process, and correctability of error on appeal; no one factor is controlling and list of considerations is not exclusive. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62. Officers And Public Employees 114

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Civil rights damages claim against judicial defendants was barred by doctrine of judicial immunity where there was no clear absence of jurisdiction shown, and acts complained of were judicial acts. Martin v. Aubuchon, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1980, 623 F.2d 1282. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Two considerations govern whether judge is entitled to absolute immunity: judge must have dealt with plaintiff in judicial capacity, and, if judge dealt in judicial capacity, judge is entitled to immunity unless judge acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Howard v. Miller, N.D.Ga.1994, 870 F.Supp. 340. Judges 36

To determine if state court judge is entitled to judicial immunity in civil rights action, district court must apply two-part test inquiring as to whether judge's actions were made while acting in his judicial capacity, and, if so, whether or not judge's actions fall clearly outside judge's jurisdiction as Florida circuit court judge; if both parts of test are met, judge is absolutely immune from liability under Civil Rights Acts. Clark v. Sierra, M.D.Fla.1993, 837 F.Supp. 1179. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3229. Clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally--Generally

Act is done in "clear absence of all jurisdiction," for judicial immunity purposes, if matter upon which judge acts is clearly outside subject matter jurisdiction of court over which judge presides. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. Judges 36

Judge will be subject to liability despite doctrine of judicial immunity, where he has acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Moore v. Brewster, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 96 F.3d 1240, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 963, 519 U.S. 1118, 136 L.Ed.2d 848. Judges 36

Judges are absolutely immune from civil liability in § 1983 suits for acts performed in their judicial capacity, provided that such acts are not done in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Roland v. Phillips, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1994, 19 F.3d 552. Civil Rights 1376(8)

The "absence of jurisdiction" exception to rule that a judge is absolutely immune from civil rights damage liability for acts within his judicial capacity, except when he acts in absence of all jurisdiction, refers to situations in which a judge acts purely in a private and nonjudicial capacity. Henzel v. Gerstein, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1979, 608 F.2d 654. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Rule of judicial immunity from damages, with its single bright-line exception, viz., a judge is not protected if he acts in "clear absence of all jurisdiction," is as broad as, but no broader than, necessary. Sparks v. Duval County Ranch Co., Inc., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1979, 604 F.2d 976, certiorari granted 100 S.Ct. 1336, 445 U.S. 942, 63 L.Ed.2d 775, certiorari denied 100 S.Ct. 1339, 445 U.S. 943, 63 L.Ed.2d 777, affirmed 101 S.Ct. 183, 449 U.S. 24, 66 L.Ed.2d 185, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 588, 449 U.S. 1021, 66 L.Ed.2d 483. Judges 36

Judges acting within their jurisdiction and authority are immune from suit under this subchapter. Hill v. McClellan, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1974, 490 F.2d 859. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Justices of village court had judicial immunity from damages sought in putative class action suit alleging they participated in scheme to illegally ticket and fine motorists after police authority was transferred from village to county; however wrongful, justice's acts were not in clear absence of any jurisdiction. Wood v. Incorporated Village of Patchogue of New York, E.D.N.Y.2004, 311 F.Supp.2d 344. Justices Of The Peace 24

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Judicial immunity from damages under civil rights statute functions to immunize its beneficiaries for all discretionary judicial acts, except for acts done in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Sullivan v. Ford, E.D.Mich.1993, 828 F.Supp. 480. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges are entitled to absolute immunity in exercise of their judicial function unless they act in clear absence of jurisdiction. Boston v. Lafayette County, Miss., N.D.Miss.1990, 744 F.Supp. 746, affirmed 933 F.2d 1003. Judges 36

Judicial immunity is quite broad, but the immunity pertains only to those acts "judicial" in nature, and judge will not benefit from judicial immunity and will be exposed to liability for actions in the clear absence of all jurisdiction. Cintron Rodriguez v. Pagan Nieves, D.Puerto Rico 1990, 736 F.Supp. 411. Judges 36

Judges and magistrates are absolutely immune from liability for damages for acts performed within their judicial jurisdiction, in damage actions under civil rights statute [42 U.S.C.A. § 1983], statute proscribing conspiracy to interfere with civil rights [42 U.S.C.A. § 1985], and statute providing action for neglect to prevent conspiracy to interfere with civil rights proscribed by § 1985 [42 U.S.C.A. § 1986], and also for other civil rights litigation. Lundt v. Hodges, N.D.Iowa 1985, 627 F.Supp. 373. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge is absolutely immune from liability for damages under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 for actions arising out of performance of his judicial functions unless he acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Stafford v. Goff, D.C.Colo.1985, 609 F.Supp. 820. See, also, Whiteside v. State of Wash., E.D.Wash.1982, 534 F.Supp. 774. Civil Rights 1376(8)

The doctrine of judicial immunity protects judge from being held liable under this section for any actions taken while he is acting within his jurisdiction. Schorle v. City of Greenhills, S.D.Ohio 1981, 524 F.Supp. 821. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Only exception to absolute immunity of judges from liability under § 1983 is if judge acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction. In re Chapman, Bkrtcy.N.D.Ill.1993, 154 B.R. 258, affirmed 159 B.R. 812, affirmed 46 F.3d 1133, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 153, 516 U.S. 853, 133 L.Ed.2d 97. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3230. ---- Personal jurisdiction, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

State juvenile court judge who had subject matter jurisdiction over dependency petition was immune from liability in civil rights suit by mother seeking damages in connection with the judge's granting of petition with respect to mother's child, even though judge, in ruling on petition, had acted without personal jurisdiction over mother, who had not been served with summons accompanied by copy of petition as required by statute. Dykes v. Hosemann, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1985, 776 F.2d 942, on remand 783 F.2d 1000. Civil Rights 1376(8)

While trial judge, once claimant under this section was sentenced in criminal case no longer had personal jurisdiction over claimant and the case, he did possess subject-matter jurisdiction; therefore, even if true, judge's actions in ordering court reporter to alter trial transcript to indicate that juror designated as "foreman" acted as such rather than another juror, were not in clear absence of all jurisdiction so as to deprive him of use of defense of judicial immunity. Green v. Maraio, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1983, 722 F.2d 1013. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where plaintiff complained only of acts of judges in exercise of their respective judicial functions at a time when such judges had jurisdiction over parties involved and subject matter of litigation, judges would be immune from action under this section insofar as plaintiff's claim for monetary damages was concerned. Willett v. Wells, E.D.Tenn.1977, 469 F.Supp. 748, affirmed 595 F.2d 1227. Civil Rights 1376(8)

A judge is immune from an action under this section, where his acts were done in the exercise of his judicial function at a time when he had jurisdiction over both the parties and subject matter of the litigation. Christian v. Garrett, E.D.Tenn.1976, 432 F.Supp. 240. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

It is only when a Tennessee judge has jurisdiction over both the parties and the subject matter that he is immune from a suit for money damages under this section. Smithson v. Ray, E.D.Tenn.1976, 427 F.Supp. 11. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3231. ---- Subject matter jurisdiction, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Justices of Minnesota Supreme Court were absolutely immune from claim for damages allegedly resulting from Supreme Court's denial of his petition challenging constitutionality of Minnesota Supreme Court rule requiring bar applicant to graduate from accredited law school; justices were acting judicially and within their subject matter jurisdiction in denying petition. LaNave v. Minnesota Supreme Court, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1990, 915 F.2d 386, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 2028, 500 U.S. 923, 114 L.Ed.2d 113.

A judge having subject-matter jurisdiction is absolutely immune, even though his judicial action is in excess of his vested jurisdiction or is otherwise erroneous. Ross v. Arnold, E.D.Wis.1983, 575 F.Supp. 1494. Judges 36

Proper inquiry in determining whether defendant judge is immune from suit is whether at time he took challenged action he had jurisdiction over subject matter before him. People ex rel. Snead v. Kirkland, E.D.Pa.1978, 462 F.Supp. 914. Judges 36

Judicial immunity is forfeited only for actions performed in the clear absence of all jurisdiction over the subject matter. Raitport v. Provident Nat. Bank, E.D.Pa.1978, 451 F.Supp. 522. Judges 36

3232. ---- Erroneous acts, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Because Indiana circuit court is court of general jurisdiction, neither procedural errors circuit court judge may have committed in considering sterilization petition, nor lack of specific statute authorizing his approval of petition, rendered him liable in damages for consequences of his actions. Stump v. Sparkman, U.S.Ind.1978, 98 S.Ct. 1099, 435 U.S. 349, 55 L.Ed.2d 331, rehearing denied 98 S.Ct. 2862, 436 U.S. 951, 56 L.Ed.2d 795, on remand 601 F.2d 261. Judges 36

Judge with jurisdiction to supervise grand jury was absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for preventing grand juror from discussing certain matters with fellow jurors and for ordering confiscation of grand juror's information packets. Fields v. Soloff, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1990, 920 F.2d 1114. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Superior court judge and Chief Judge of state Court of Appeals were entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights suit based upon judges' alleged actions in impeding and delaying criminal defendant's appeal; any error by judges in their belief that they had authority to act as they did was at most a "grave procedural error," not act undertaking a clear absence of jurisdiction, and supervising preparation of record of trial is clearly within general responsibility of court. Dellenbach v. Letsinger, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1989, 889 F.2d 755, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1821, 494 U.S. 1085, 108 L.Ed.2d 950. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Defect in procedure employed by judge in attempting to investigate report that plaintiff had misrepresented himself as the judge's law clerk without giving plaintiff written notice of the criminal contempt charge as required by 33 F.S.A.Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 3.840, would not support conclusion that there was a clear absence of all jurisdiction so as to result in abrogation of judicial immunity from action under this section. Williams v. Sepe, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1973, 487 F.2d 913. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3233. ---- Excess of jurisdiction distinguished, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Judge's alleged actions in directing police officers to bring before judge attorney who was in courthouse were not taken in complete 'absence of all jurisdiction,' so as to deprive judge of judicial immunity from § 1983 suit, even though judge allegedly directed officers to carry out order with excessive force; if judge had authorized and ratified officer's use of excessive force, he had acted in excess of his authority, but such action, taken in aid of judge's jurisdiction over matter before him, could not be said to have been taken in absence of jurisdiction. Mireles v. Waco, U.S.Cal.1991, 112 S.Ct. 286, 502 U.S. 9, 116 L.Ed.2d 9, on remand 962 F.2d 865. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even assuming that municipal court commissioner reactivated bench warrant for traffic violator only after agreeing to transfer case to another judge, commissioner merely acted in excess of his jurisdiction, rather than in clear absence of jurisdiction, and thus, commissioner was entitled to judicial immunity in traffic violator's § 1983 action. Franceschi v. Schwartz, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1995, 57 F.3d 828. Civil Rights 1376(8); Court Commissioners 3

Even if municipal judge in Arkansas lacked authority to enforce circuit court's judgment of conviction, municipal judge was entitled to absolute immunity in civil rights action by driver who was arrested after municipal judge issued warrant for failure to pay fines and court costs imposed upon circuit court conviction for speeding and driving with suspended license; municipal judge had authority to issue arrest warrant and thus acted, at most, in excess of jurisdiction, not in absence of jurisdiction. Duty v. City of Springdale, Ark., C.A.8 (Ark.) 1994, 42 F.3d 460, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even if Chief Justice of California Supreme Court acted in excess of his jurisdiction by signing order, such signing was manifestly a judicial act, and thus Chief Justice was entitled to immunity from suit under federal civil rights statute. Rosenthal v. Justices of the Supreme Court of California, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1990, 910 F.2d 561, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 963, 498 U.S. 1087, 112 L.Ed.2d 1050. Civil Rights 1376(8)

There is no absolute immunity from claim for damages arising out of judicial actions if judge undertakes to act in area in which he has no subject-matter jurisdiction, but if he exceeds his authority, his action is subject to correction on appeal or other authorized review, but it does not expose him to claim for damages in private action, or put him to trouble and expense of defending such action. Chu v. Griffith, C.A.4 (Va.) 1985, 771 F.2d 79. Judges 36

A criminal court judge who convicts a defendant of a nonexistent crime acts in excess of jurisdiction and is absolutely immune from suit for damages. Brewer v. Blackwell, C.A.5 (La.) 1982, 692 F.2d 387. Judges 36

Pro tem municipal judge's action in convicting defendant of contempt, an offense generally within his court's jurisdiction, without requisite papers to confer jurisdiction over particular alleged commission of offense, constituted act in excess of jurisdiction, but not act in clear absence of all jurisdiction, and thus judge was immune from liability. O'Neil v. City of Lake Oswego, C.A.9 (Or.) 1981, 642 F.2d 367. Judges 36

Although Kentucky state court judge may have erroneously taken jurisdiction over 15-year-old's traffic offense, he was not so clearly without jurisdiction as to deprive him of immunity from suit by juvenile. Allsup v. Knox, E.D.Ky.1980, 508 F.Supp. 57. Judges 36

Acts of county court judge who considered other charges when criminal defendant was brought before him, who felt that defendant was not setting a good example for students which he taught in the public school, and who bargained with defendant to dismiss proceedings against him if he would pay his debts and leave county, constituted at worst no more than acts in excess of jurisdiction rather than acts done without jurisdiction, and thus doctrine of judicial immunity applied to bar such defendant's suit against judge under this section. McGlasker v. Calton, M.D.Ala.1975, 397 F.Supp. 525, affirmed 524 F.2d 1230. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3234. ---- Knowledge, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Under New York law, town justice did not have judicial immunity in civil rights suit for issuing arrest warrants in neighboring town over which he knew he had no jurisdiction. Maestri v. Jutkofsky, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 860 F.2d 50, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 1132, 489 U.S. 1016, 103 L.Ed.2d 193. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge's misinterpretation of jurisdictional statute, which allowed him to exercise jurisdiction over civil rights plaintiff, show cause defendant in divorce proceeding giving rise to § 1983 complaint, was not done "in the clear absence of jurisdiction"; judge retained his absolute immunity for his civil contempt ruling in show cause hearing. Schucker v. Rockwood, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1988, 846 F.2d 1202, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 561, 488 U.S. 995, 102 L.Ed.2d 587. Civil Rights 1376(8)

When judge knows he lacks jurisdiction, or acts in face of clearly balanced statutes or case law expressly depriving him of jurisdiction, judicial immunity is lost. Schorle v. City of Greenhills, S.D.Ohio 1981, 524 F.Supp. 821. Judges 36

3235. ---- Malicious acts, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Judge will not be deprived of immunity because action he took was in error, was done maliciously, or was in excess of his authority; rather, he will be subject to liability only when he has acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Stump v. Sparkman, U.S.Ind.1978, 98 S.Ct. 1099, 435 U.S. 349, 55 L.Ed.2d 331, rehearing denied 98 S.Ct. 2862, 436 U.S. 951, 56 L.Ed.2d 795, on remand 601 F.2d 261. See, also, Chalk v. Elliott, D.C.Tex.1978, 449 F.Supp. 65. Judges 36

A judge cannot be deprived of immunity because the action or inaction he took or did not take was in error, was done maliciously, or was in excess of his authority; rather, he will be subject to liability only when he has acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction, and this doctrine of immunity extends to suits under this section. Rheuark v. Shaw, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1980, 628 F.2d 297, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1392, 450 U.S. 931, 67 L.Ed.2d 365. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

Judges of courts of superior or general jurisdiction are not liable in civil action for their judicial acts even when such acts are in excess of their jurisdiction and are alleged to have been done maliciously. Coleman v. Court of Appeals, Div. No. Two of State of Okl., W.D.Okla.1980, 550 F.Supp. 681. Judges 36

Judges of courts of general jurisdiction are not liable to civil actions for their judicial acts, even when such acts are in excess of their jurisdiction, and are alleged to have been done maliciously or corruptly, and this doctrine of judicial immunity is applicable to suits maintained under this section governing civil action for deprivation of rights, and immunity conferred by this rule is only forfeited when judge in question acts in clear absence of any jurisdiction. Gutierrez v. Vergari, S.D.N.Y.1980, 499 F.Supp. 1040. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge is immune from civil suit for actions arising from his judicial acts; such doctrine of judicial immunity is absolute and extends to acts which are in excess of judge's jurisdiction, even if done maliciously or corruptly, and only exception to the doctrine is for acts taken by judge where there is clearly no jurisdiction over subject matter involved. People ex rel. Snead v. Kirkland, E.D.Pa.1978, 462 F.Supp. 914. Judges 36

County judge was not without jurisdiction to reset bail and judge who allegedly ordered portion of bail refunded so that it might be used to reimburse court-appointed attorney, with result that bail was insufficient, and who was sued under this section on ground that he had acted with malice to deprive plaintiff of his constitutional right to bail, was protected by doctrine of judicial immunity. Jacobson v. Schaefer, E.D.Wis.1969, 307 F.Supp. 690, affirmed 441 F.2d 127. Bail 53; Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3236. ---- Bankruptcy judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Bankruptcy judge was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from liability based on his issuance of warrant for debtor's arrest and related actions; all of the allegations against judge related to activities performed as part of his official duties in matters clearly within his jurisdiction. Winslow v. Romer, D.Colo.1991, 759 F.Supp. 670. Judges 36

3237. ---- County court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Where county judge had jurisdiction to impose some conditions to bail and jurisdiction to control substitution of attorneys in his court, possibility that he abused his jurisdiction when he ordered portion of defendant's bail refunded so that it might be used to reimburse court-appointed attorney did not destroy the original jurisdiction and county judge was protected by doctrine of judicial immunity from liability in suit under this section for alleged deprivation of plaintiff's constitutional right to bail. Jacobson v. Schaefer, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1971, 441 F.2d 127. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where county court had jurisdiction of complaint filed in court, county judge was immune with respect to liability under this section with respect to its determination of whether defendant motorist had been charged under the proper statute. Gabbard v. Rose, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1966, 359 F.2d 182. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Whether county court judge was immune from suit for acts associated with disposition of case or cases of plaintiff in county court depended upon whether judge was acting within his jurisdiction at the time of such acts. McGlasker v. Calton, M.D.Ala.1975, 397 F.Supp. 525, affirmed 524 F.2d 1230. Judges 36

3238. ---- Justices of the peace, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Judicial immunity extends to justices of the peace as well as those who sit on the Supreme Court, and shields judges unless they act either in the clear absence of all jurisdiction over the subject matter or in a nonjudicial capacity. Brewer v. Blackwell, C.A.5 (La.) 1982, 692 F.2d 387. Justices Of The Peace 24

Except where judges or justices of the peace act completely without jurisdiction, they are protected by doctrine of judicial immunity from liability under this section. Slotnick v. Garfinkle, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1980, 632 F.2d 163. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even if justice of peace was in error in resolving questions of jurisdiction concerning assault prosecution, he was immune from liability under this section for allegedly signing a defective information, where jurisdiction depended on resolution of factual issues and involved debatable questions of law. Fanale v. Sheehy, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1967, 385 F.2d 866. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even if decision of district justice of peace that plaintiff was guilty of charged offenses lacked a valid testimonial and procedural basis, and even though plaintiff was put to unnecessary inconvenience, humiliation and expense by failure to observe requirements of due process, doctrine of judicial immunity insulated district justice from liability for damages, where plaintiff did not claim that district justice improperly took jurisdiction over his case. Schmidt v. Degen, E.D.Pa.1974, 376 F.Supp. 664. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3239. ---- Juvenile court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Prison inmate's claim for damages against county juvenile judge for allegedly erroneous entry of decree permitting adoption of plaintiff's children would fail where plaintiff failed to make showing that court's decree was entered in clear absence of all jurisdiction; as juvenile judge, defendant had jurisdiction to enter decrees of adoption. Williams v. Williams, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1976, 532 F.2d 120. Adoption 10; Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

County juvenile court judge was absolutely immune from suit under section 1983 for any alleged constitutional violations arising from his dispositional orders regarding juvenile's custody; judge had subject matter jurisdiction over juvenile's case and over disposition of delinquency, even though failure to make requisite findings in dispositional orders or fact that disposition might not have been necessary or in juvenile's best interest and, during hearings regarding juvenile's custody and upon issuance of dispositional orders, parties dealt with judge in his judicial capacity. Weseman v. Meeker County, D.Minn.1987, 659 F.Supp. 1571. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3240. ---- Magistrates, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

State magistrate was entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability under § 1983 for directing police officer to effect warrantless arrest; magistrate's actions were judicial in that, although she may have exceeded her authority in manner in which she ordered arrest, she performed function only performed by judge and did not act in clear absence of all jurisdiction. King v. Myers, C.A.4 (Va.) 1992, 973 F.2d 354. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where, under Iowa law, magistrate of judicial district had jurisdiction over nonindictable misdemeanors and could punish contempt, magistrate who was presiding over trial of misdemeanor charges had authority to adjudge witness in contempt of court for his refusal to testify; therefore, the Iowa magistrate was immune from liability to witness for judicial action holding the witness in contempt. McClain v. Brown, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1978, 587 F.2d 389. Judges 36

State magistrate judge did not act in clear absence of jurisdiction by setting bail for intravenous drug user, after user was arrested for criminally possessing hypodermic instrument, in § 1983 action under Fourth Amendment, even though arrest was later determined to be false on basis that user was enrolled in needle exchange program, where judge was informed that user was arrested outside of program area; judge was entitled to absolute immunity because he was acting in judicial capacity and there was not clear absence of jurisdiction. L.B. v. Town of Chester, S.D.N.Y.2002, 232 F.Supp.2d 227. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Magistrate, having some authority to deal with possible contempt of court, did not act in clear absence of all jurisdiction in ordering arrest of attorney who failed to appear on behalf of client in case before magistrate, even though magistrate may have acted in excess of his jurisdiction in ordering arrest; therefore, chief deputy marshal was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity in civil rights action for his carrying out magistrate's order to arrest attorney for failing to arrange for his law partner or an associate to appear in his stead at scheduled hearing. King v. Thornburg, S.D.Ga.1991, 762 F.Supp. 336. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Local magistrate who issued arrest warrant based upon citizen's complaint was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from arrestee's civil rights claims; magistrate was acting within his jurisdiction, under Georgia law, when he issued warrant. Penaranda v. Cato, S.D.Ga.1990, 740 F.Supp. 1578. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Magistrates are immune from liability for damages under this section unless their alleged actions are clearly outside the scope of their respective jurisdiction; the only exception to judicial and prosecutorial immunity are acts of a judge or prosecution attorney which are clearly outside their jurisdiction, as distinguished from acts which are merely in excess of their jurisdiction, the latter not being actionable. Clark v. Zimmerman, M.D.Pa.1975, 394 F.Supp. 1166. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

3241. ---- Municipal court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

Municipal judge was entitled to absolute immunity from a claim for damages brought under § 1983 by pretrial detainee who alleged that judge issued arrest warrant in violation of state law, since the judge did not act in the clear absence of all jurisdiction. Ledbetter v. City of Topeka, Kan., C.A.10 (Kan.) 2003, 318 F.3d 1183. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Georgia municipal court judge was immune from § 1983 liability for ordering arrest, on robbery charge, of complainant in rape prosecution, for ordering or permitting her to be detained with defendant in the rape prosecution, for ordering detention of the complainant for transfer of custody to juvenile authorities after charges were dismissed on ground that complainant was a juvenile, and for refusing to allow complainant's counsel to take her to the juvenile authorities; the arrest and incarceration of complainant were normal judicial functions, the judge had subject-matter jurisdiction over the charges against the complainant, the events occurred in the courtroom, the controversy centered around case pending before the judge brought before him by independent parties, and the events arose directly and immediately out of testimony before the judge in that case. Harris v. Deveaux, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1986, 780 F.2d 911. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where municipal judge had jurisdiction over the subject matter and acts complained of were judicial acts, he was immune from liability under doctrine of judicial immunity for any violation of civil rights resulting from his acceptance of a guilty plea to charge of driving under the influence of alcohol, even though he appointed attorney and directed entry of guilty plea against plaintiff at request of friend of plaintiff's brother without notice to or direct contact with the plaintiff. Birch v. Mazander, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1982, 678 F.2d 754. Judges 36

Where municipal court judge, who had power under Code 1962 § 43-134 to impose contempt sanctions, retained subject-matter jurisdiction over criminal action for five-day period following judgment, judge in detaining attorney against his will and directing certain comments at attorney after attorney made derogatory remarks to crowd outside courtroom concerning quality of justice obtainable in municipal court performed judicial act in relation to matters over which there was not clear absence of subject-matter jurisdiction and thus was clothed with judicial immunity for purposes of attorney's subsequent civil rights suit. Dean v. Shirer, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1976, 547 F.2d 227. Civil Rights 1376(8)

In absence of claim that municipal court judges acted in absence of all jurisdiction, the judges were immune from civil rights action. Azar v. Conley, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1972, 456 F.2d 1382. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Failure of judge of Municipal Court to respond to accused's statement of bias and prejudice did not deprive judge of jurisdiction over subject matter and doctrine of immunity from suit under this section for conduct in performance of his official duties applied even if accused's statement of bias and prejudice was legally sufficient and judge erred in striking it. Agnew v. Moody, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1964, 330 F.2d 868, certiorari denied 85 S.Ct. 137, 379 U.S. 867, 13 L.Ed.2d 70. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 51(4)

In action to recover damages against a municipal court judge who had issued felony complaint against plaintiff upon the complaint of a private citizen, thereby instituting prosecution in the name of the State of California, there was no showing that the act of the judge complained of was done in the clear absence of jurisdiction so that judge was therefore protected from suit by his judicial immunity. Johnson v. MacCoy, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1960, 278 F.2d 37. Judges 36

Where plaintiff infant had been arrested for and pleaded guilty to petty larceny, even though there was no written judgment of transfer by youth court at time of city court trial, inasmuch as youth court judge had validly consented to plaintiff's prosecution, defendant city court judge had at least limited jurisdiction and entry of any erroneous judgment would not destroy his judicial immunity. Roberts v. Williams, D.C.Miss.1969, 302 F.Supp. 972, judgment affirmed in part, remanded in part on other grounds 456 F.2d 819, certiorari denied 92 S.Ct. 83, 404 U.S. 866, 30 L.Ed.2d 110. Judges 36

3242. ---- Probate judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

A probate judge who tries and convicts a defendant of a crime acts in clear absence of jurisdiction and enjoys no immunity from suit for damages. Brewer v. Blackwell, C.A.5 (La.) 1982, 692 F.2d 387. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

No clear absence of jurisdiction was shown as to probate judge who entered order temporarily denying divorced mother custody of her minor son, and doctrine of judicial immunity was applicable with respect to mother's claim for damages for emotional distress. Harley v. Oliver, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1976, 539 F.2d 1143. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Probate judge who ordered sterilization of plaintiff acted wholly without jurisdiction in the matter and hence was not protected by doctrine of judicial immunity, where there was no set of conditions or circumstances under Ohio law which would permit probate judge to order plaintiff to submit to sterilization, and where proceeding which resulted in plaintiff's sterilization commenced on affidavit filed by county child welfare board alleging that plaintiff was a feeble minded person within meaning of statute, which statute had been repealed, so that the term "feeble minded" was no longer defined in Ohio law and did not appear in statute under which proceedings conducted by defendant probate judge were purportedly authorized. Wade v. Bethesda Hospital, S.D.Ohio 1971, 337 F.Supp. 671, 61 O.O.2d 147, motion denied 356 F.Supp. 380, 70 O.O.2d 218. Judges 36

3243. ---- State court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

State judges, in waiving juvenile court jurisdiction and sentencing civil rights plaintiff as adult, acted within their judicial capacities and did not clearly lack jurisdiction and, thus, judges had absolute immunity from § 1983 liability. Myers v. Vogal, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1992, 960 F.2d 750. Civil Rights 1376(8)

For purposes of judge's immunity from damages in federal civil rights liability, state court judge did not act in the clear absence of all jurisdictions in issuing an order clarifying an earlier order and disqualifying an attorney from acting pro se on grounds that the attorney had already filed a notice of interlocutory appeal where attorney had failed to first obtain certification for interlocutory appeal. Rolleston v. Eldridge, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1988, 848 F.2d 163. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State trial judge who, in presiding over divorce case, found husband in contempt for violating several orders as to visitation, custody and support payments, had subject-matter jurisdiction over divorce proceeding and his act of finding husband in contempt was a judicial act; therefore, judge was immune from liability under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 for his acts during divorce proceeding which allegedly violated husband's constitutional rights. Patten v. Glaser, C.A.8 (N.D.) 1985, 771 F.2d 1178. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge was immune from civil rights suits for judicial acts not taken in the absence of all jurisdiction. O'Connor v. State of Nev., C.A.9 (Nev.) 1982, 686 F.2d 749, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 491, 459 U.S. 1071, 74 L.Ed.2d 633. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge was immune to suit for damages under this section based on allegations that he had ordered husband in divorce action to pay the sum awarded the wife or face arrest and had subsequently ordered the arrest and imprisonment of husband for failure to comply, where the judge had jurisdiction to enter the orders under Wisconsin law. Hansen v. Ahlgrimm, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1975, 520 F.2d 768. Civil Rights 1376(8)

District of Columbia superior court judge did not lose protection of judicial immunity, for purposes of personal representative's civil rights action, when judge allegedly lost jurisdiction in case involving estate. Burt v. Barry, D.D.C.1997, 962 F.Supp. 185, appeal dismissed 1997 WL 573477. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge was immune from liability to habeas petitioner for alleged due process violations in reimposing life sentence after defendant violated terms of his probation following illegal suspension of life sentence to 15 years in prison, where there was no dispute that judge acted within his jurisdiction in resentencing petitioner. DeWitt v. Ventetoulo, D.R.I.1992, 803 F.Supp. 580, affirmed 6 F.3d 32, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1542, 511 U.S. 1032, 128 L.Ed.2d 193. Judges 36

State court judge was immune from damages claim in civil rights suit alleging that judge presided over ex parte hearings which resulted in restriction of plaintiff's child visitation rights and thereby infringed his due process rights; even if judge held ex parte hearings in course of family law proceedings, his actions would not have occurred in absence of all jurisdiction, so judge was entitled to judicial immunity. Holeman v. Elliott, S.D.Tex.1990, 732 F.Supp. 726, affirmed 927 F.2d 601, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 59, 502 U.S. 812, 116 L.Ed.2d 35. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State court judge had jurisdiction over probate matters before him, including decedent's estate, and had broad power to review attorney fees and to ensure that his jurisdictional mandate was carried out, and therefore, such judge was immune from civil rights suit brought by attorney who alleged that he was arrested and ordered to deposit $15,000 with county clerk of court as a result of his refusal to attend a hearing to determine the propriety of fees that attorney had charged the decedent. Cairo v. Skow, E.D.Wis.1981, 510 F.Supp. 201. Civil Rights 1376(8)

A judge of a state court from which a case has been removed to federal district court will not always necessarily have absolute immunity to civil liability in damages for any action he may purport to take in case after it has been removed to federal court, as it could be argued, for example, that after timely and procedurally proper removal of case over which federal district court has removal jurisdiction and denial of motion for remand, there is a "clear absence of all jurisdiction" in state court, since thereafter it would be clear that case must proceed in federal court. Antelman v. Lewis, D.C.Mass.1979, 480 F.Supp. 180. Judges 36

Where state court judges acted within their jurisdiction in increasing support award in favor of child of former marriage and in entering payroll deduction order, they were entitled to absolute immunity with respect to second wife's and infant's claim for damages on theory that New York family court proceedings in which support order was increased was unconstitutional. Wiesenfeld v. State of N. Y., S.D.N.Y.1979, 474 F.Supp. 1141. Judges 36

3244. ---- Surrogate court judges, clear absence of jurisdiction, judicial immunity generally

State surrogate was acting entirely within his jurisdiction when he revoked plaintiff's letters testamentary and subsequently held plaintiff in civil contempt and ordered him incarcerated for disobeying order to render an accounting of estate, and also acted entirely within his jurisdiction when he solicited input from attorney for law firm which was retained to obtain revocation of plaintiff's letters testamentary; thus, surrogate had judicial immunity in regard to claims that he had been involved in conspiracy to violate plaintiff's Fifth Amendment rights and conspiracy to force plaintiff to make restitution in related criminal matter. Bertucci v. Brown, E.D.N.Y.1987, 663 F.Supp. 447. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

3245. Judicial acts, judicial immunity generally--Generally

While judges enjoy absolute immunity from liability in damages for their judicial or adjudicatory acts, judges are not absolutely immune from liability and damages for administrative, legislative, or executive functions that judges may occasionally be assigned by law to perform; it is nature of function performed adjudication--rather than identity of actor who performed it-- judge--that determines whether absolute immunity attaches to act. Forrester v. White, U.S.Ill.1988, 108 S.Ct. 538, 484 U.S. 219, 98 L.Ed.2d 555, on remand 846 F.2d 29. Judges 36

Judicial immunity in § 1983 cases is extended to officials other than judges when their duties are functionally comparable to those of judges--that is, because they, too, exercise discretionary judgment as part of their function. Whisman Through Whisman v. Rinehart, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1997, 119 F.3d 1303. Civil Rights 1376(8)

To determine whether action is judicial, for immunity purposes, courts should look to particular act's relation to general function normally performed by judge, rather than rigidly scrutinize only the particular act in question. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

If a defendant government official's functions are of a judicial nature, Court of Appeals then must weigh costs and benefits of denying or affording absolute immunity to official. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62. Officers And Public Employees 114

State trial judge was immune from civil rights liability where plaintiff made no allegations of fact which would support finding that he acted outside scope of his judicial duties. Martinez v. Chavez, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1978, 574 F.2d 1043. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Where action complained of had been taken by state district court judge when he was serving in his official capacity as state judge, doctrine of judicial immunity was applicable and protective against suit in nature of civil rights action. Serbus v. Hoffman, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1971, 450 F.2d 296. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Civil rights action against justice of the peace was properly dismissed since justice was immune from such suit for actions connected with discharge of his judicial duties. Pennebaker v. Chamber, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1971, 437 F.2d 66. Federal Civil Procedure 1741

Judges are absolutely immune from liability for damages for acts committed within their judicial discretion, and judge will not be deprived of this immunity even when action was taken in error, done maliciously, or was in excess of authority. Johnson v. State of N.J., D.N.J.1994, 869 F.Supp. 289, reconsideration denied 1995 WL 46367. Judges 36

Whether act is a judicial act, for which judge is absolutely immune from liability, depends upon whether it is a function normally performed by judge and whether parties dealt with judge in his judicial capacity. Rumfola v. Murovich, W.D.Pa.1992, 812 F.Supp. 569. Judges 36

"Nonjudicial" act, for which no judicial immunity is available, is one which is not normally performed by judicial officer, or which is performed outside judge's official capacity. Boston v. Lafayette County, Miss., N.D.Miss.1990, 744 F.Supp. 746, affirmed 933 F.2d 1003. Judges 36

Absolute judicial immunity shields judge from money damages in civil rights suit; that immunity applies if the judge has subject matter jurisdiction over the case and the acts allegedly causing the constitutional violation are judicial; act is judicial if it is one normally performed by judge and the parties deal with the judge in his or her judicial capacity. Edwards v. Hare, D.Utah 1988, 682 F.Supp. 1528. Civil Rights 1376(8)

In determining whether official is engaged in judicial conduct that is entitled to absolute rather than qualified immunity, inquiry must focus on nature of function involved rather than official's position. Copus v. City of Edgerton, W.D.Wis.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1047, affirmed in part, reversed in part 151 F.3d 646. Judges 36

Judges and justices are absolutely immune from suits for damages under this section for acts performed in their judicial capacities. Michaelis v. Krivosha, D.C.Neb.1983, 566 F.Supp. 94, affirmed 717 F.2d 437. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where acts complained of in civil rights action were carried out by judge in his judicial capacity in trial of civil action, judge was absolutely immune from liability. Cleveland v. Noland, N.D.Ga.1981, 510 F.Supp. 37. Judges 36

Where plaintiff made no claim that judge was without jurisdiction to preside over his case and judge's acts were judicial in nature in that they were functions normally performed by a judge, judge was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from liability in case under this section. Rucker v. Martin, W.D.Okla.1980, 505 F.Supp. 20. Civil

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Rights 1376(8)

3246. ---- Executive acts distinguished, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Members of Hawaii Judicial Selection Commission were acting in an executive, not judicial, capacity when performing their duties of appointing state court judges and thus were not absolutely immune in action under this section. Richardson v. Koshiba, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 1982, 693 F.2d 911. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3247. ---- Ministerial or administrative acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Alleged actions of municipal court judges, in voting to terminate court commissioner and thereby force him to retire, were administrative rather than judicial in nature, and thus judges were not entitled to absolute judicial immunity from commissioner's civil rights action, alleging that he was terminated in retaliation for exercising his First Amendment right to campaign for judicial office. Meek v. County of Riverside, C.D.Cal.1997, 982 F.Supp. 1410, affirmed in part, dismissed in part 183 F.3d 962, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 499, 528 U.S. 1005, 145 L.Ed.2d 386. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Judicial officer is not immune from civil action that complains of acts that are properly characterized as ministerial or administrative as opposed to judicial. Shore v. Howard, N.D.Tex.1976, 414 F.Supp. 379. Judges 36

Application of the doctrine of judicial immunity is restricted to the following areas: (1) immunity applies only when judges are faced with suits involving their judicial as opposed to their ministerial or administrative duties, and (2) immunity applies only when officials are sued for damages. Doe v. Lake County, Indiana, N.D.Ind.1975, 399 F.Supp. 553. Judges 36

3248. ---- Bad faith acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State court judge had judicial immunity for entering a temporary restraining order prohibiting father from removing children from the county, even if entry of temporary restraining order was done maliciously or in bad faith, in light of fact that father failed to support with specific facts the claim that an agreement existed between the judge and a county prosecutor that a temporary restraining order would be entered. Beard v. Udall, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1981, 648 F.2d 1264. Judges 36

Family court litigant, bringing §§ 1983 action against family court judge and court officials, would not be allowed to amend complaint to add second family court judge alleged to have taken abusive actions in hearing; as judge would have absolute judicial immunity for actions, amendment would be futile. Hom v. Brennan, E.D.N.Y.2004, 304 F.Supp.2d 374. Federal Civil Procedure 392

3249. ---- Discretionary acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judicial immunity of judge to damages suit under this section, though judge is accused of acting maliciously and corruptly, is limited to acts committed within judicial discretion of judge. Franklin v. Meredith, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1967, 386 F.2d 958. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Doctrine of judicial immunity protects judges from liability for damages in civil rights suits for acts committed within their judicial discretion. Padgett v. Stein, M.D.Pa.1975, 406 F.Supp. 287. See, also, Clark v. Zimmerman, D.C.Pa.1975, 394 F.Supp. 1166. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3250. ---- Erroneous acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Judge was not entitled to qualified immunity from disgruntled litigant's claim that judge, by speaking to media and accusing litigant of "stalking" her, retaliated against litigant for engaging in protected conduct of criticizing judge and exposing alleged wrongdoing; charged conduct violated clearly established First Amendment rights of which reasonable person in judge's position would have been cognizant. Barrett v. Harrington, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1997, 130 F.3d 246, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1517, 523 U.S. 1075, 140 L.Ed.2d 670. Civil Rights 1376(8)

However erroneous municipal court judge may have been in thinking that he had the power to hold defendant in a traffic violation case to answer incriminating questions under threat of contempt, and hold him in contempt, he was nevertheless in performance of his judicial duties, and he was protected by judicial immunity and not liable for damages in civil rights action. Berg v. Cwiklinski, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1969, 416 F.2d 929. Civil Rights 1376(8)

A judge is entitled to absolute immunity from liability for damages under § 1983 for actions performed in her judicial capacity, even if the action she took was in error, was done maliciously, or was in excess of her authority. D'Amato v. Rattoballi, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 83 Fed.Appx. 359, 2003 WL 22955858, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3251. ---- Malicious acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

In circumstances in which judge reasonably perceives threat to himself or herself arising out of judge's adjudicatory conduct, judge's response, be it a letter to prosecutor or call to marshall's office for security, is judicial act within scope of judicial immunity. Barrett v. Harrington, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1997, 130 F.3d 246, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1517, 523 U.S. 1075, 140 L.Ed.2d 670. Judges 36

State court judge was entitled to absolute immunity for its judicial acts, including acts which were malicious or in excess of his authority. Schepp v. Fremont County, Wyo., C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1990, 900 F.2d 1448. Judges 36

Signing an arrest warrant was a judicial act for which a justice of the peace is protected by absolute immunity even if justice knew affidavit to be false and acted maliciously in signing warrant. Brewer v. Blackwell, C.A.5 (La.) 1982, 692 F.2d 387. Justices Of The Peace 25

Town justice was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from any liability under § 1983 arising from his failure to provide deaf criminal defendant with sign language interpreter. DuQuin v. Kolbert, W.D.N.Y.2004, 320 F.Supp.2d 39. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Probate judge was immune from liability in suit brought by mother alleging that he and others maliciously conspired to remove minor child from her custody for purpose of treating child by means of surgery with attendant blood transfusions which conspiring parties knew violated mother's religious belief. Harley v. Oliver, W.D.Ark.1975, 404 F.Supp. 450, affirmed 539 F.2d 1143. Judges 36

Judicial immunity under this section applies even when judge is accused of acting maliciously and corruptly. Smith v. Smith, D.C.Or.1973, 396 F.Supp. 367, affirmed 519 F.2d 1376. Judges 36

Judges are immune from liability under this section for acts committed within their judicial capacity even if judge is accused of acting maliciously, and like immunity extends to other governmental officers whose duties are related to the judicial process. Cross v. Board of Sup'rs of San Mateo County, N.D.Cal.1968, 326 F.Supp. 634, affirmed 442 F.2d 362. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3252. ---- Presentence reports, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

On prisoner's § 1983 claim that his constitutional rights were violated by the filing of inaccurate presentence report (PSR), director of county department of probation and probation officer were entitled to absolute immunity in connection with their participation in preparing and filing of PSR, as probation officer acts at specific request of court and typically serves as arm of sentencing judge. Hili v. Sciarotta, E.D.N.Y.1997, 955 F.Supp. 177, affirmed 140 F.3d 210. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3253. ---- Prosecutorial acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

For judicial immunity purposes judge's prosecutorial acts in determining offense to be charged, preparing guilty plea and waiver of jury and causing plaintiff's alleged signature to be placed thereon, and in presenting charge and plea form to himself with expectation that they would be basis for unconstitutional conviction and sentence, were taken in clear absence of all jurisdiction since acting as prosecutor is not within Illinois circuit judge's jurisdiction over justiciable matters. Lopez v. Vanderwater, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1980, 620 F.2d 1229, certiorari dismissed 101 S.Ct. 601, 449 U.S. 1028, 66 L.Ed.2d 491. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3254. ---- Rights violations, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

That judges allegedly violated litigant's legal rights did establish that judges, for purposes of judicial immunity, were not acting in judicial capacity. Aldabe v. Aldabe, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1980, 616 F.2d 1089. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judges were protected from civil rights suit for damages by absolute judicial immunity for their alleged actions in requiring prisoner to plead and stand trial when the mandatory probable cause hearing had not been held and when there was insufficient cause to support the charges against him and improperly ordering the information amended after trial; actions were taken in judge's judicial capacities and were within judges' jurisdiction. Nicholson v. Lenczewski, D.Conn.2005, 356 F.Supp.2d 157. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3255. ---- Place of performance of act, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Fact that many of Texas judge's acts in allegedly seizing control of oil company through abuse of judicial office pursuant to bribe and conspiracy to deprive oil company's owners of their property without due process of law were performed outside the courtroom did not render the acts nonjudicial in nature and did not affect the judge's immunity from liability for alleged resulting harms. Holloway v. Walker, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1985, 765 F.2d 517, rehearing denied 773 F.2d 1236, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 605, 474 U.S. 1037, 88 L.Ed.2d 583. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Wisconsin county judge was not entitled to judicial immunity under this section for acts allegedly perpetrated outside his courtroom and not a part of his judicial function, which acts involved allegedly repeated communications to the press and city officials over course of a year and which were critical of city police lieutenant and called for action to be taken against him, with many such communications being made while lieutenant was awaiting trial on criminal charges stemming from "John Doe" proceedings allegedly improperly instigated by the judge as part of a racial campaign to discredit the lieutenant; although damages could not be assessed against judge for the "John Doe" proceedings, he could be liable for his extrajudicial acts. Harris v. Harvey, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1979, 605 F.2d 330, certiorari denied 100 S.Ct. 1331, 445 U.S. 938, 63 L.Ed.2d 772. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3256. ---- Rulings or decisions generally, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State probate court judge's not taking probate court employee's recommendations on disposition of juvenile cases and barring employee's admittance to courtroom were judicial acts for which judge enjoyed judicial immunity from liability in action brought by employee alleging that judge made his decisions out of hostility arising from employee's engagement and subsequent marriage to judge's secretary. Cameron v. Seitz, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 38 F.3d 264. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Chief judge of United States District court was immune from liability for allegedly improper rulings in an action over which he had presided. Foster v. MacBride, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1975, 521 F.2d 1304. Judges 36

Even if district court judge, who made adverse rulings against terminated federal employee in employee's discrimination and retaliation action against employer, and judges on panel of Court of Appeals, who affirmed district judge's rulings, were not exempt from employee's § 1983 claims, judges were entitled to absolute immunity from such claims; judges were performing their judicial functions when they ruled against employee, and judges were acting within their jurisdiction. Rockefeller v. U.S. Court of Appeals Office, for Tenth Circuit Judges, D.D.C.2003, 248 F.Supp.2d 17. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Absolute judicial immunity protected judges from §§ 1983 liability to husband for permitting domestic abuse prosecution to advance and failing to act when informed of wife's alleged extortion of money from husband; the husband did not charge judges with acting outside their jurisdiction. Greene v. Wright, D.Conn.2005, 389 F.Supp.2d 416. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge, who presided over criminal proceeding against defendant, was judicially immune from civil liability for alleged violations of prisoner's civil rights during course of the criminal proceedings where prisoner sought to hold the judge liable for denial of various motions and writs submitted by the prisoner during course of the criminal proceedings. Neely v. Eshelman, E.D.Pa.1981, 507 F.Supp. 78. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity afforded protection to federal judges who had previously participated in decisions adverse to plaintiff from liability to plaintiff for damages. Conrad v. Wangelin, E.D.Mo.1977, 441 F.Supp. 345, appeal dismissed, certiorari denied 99 S.Ct. 63, 439 U.S. 806, 58 L.Ed.2d 99. Judges 36

This section is not designed as an alternative vehicle to attack judicial rulings; and immunity of judges from civil liability arising out of exercise of their judicial functions applies in civil rights actions challenging their disposition of a particular case. Moity v. Louisiana State Bar Ass'n, E.D.La.1976, 414 F.Supp. 180, affirmed 537 F.2d 1141, rehearing denied 540 F.2d 1085. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Doctrine of judicial immunity barred civil rights action against state court judge based on decisions he made in pretrial and trial proceedings. Meyer v. Lavelle, E.D.Pa.1974, 64 F.R.D. 533. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3257. ---- Acquittals or convictions, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

This section making liable "any person" who under color of law deprives another person of his civil rights did not abolish immunity of judges for acts within their judicial role, and therefore a local judge could not be held liable for damages under this section for an unconstitutional conviction. Pierson v. Ray, U.S.Miss.1967, 87 S.Ct. 1213, 386 U.S. 547, 18 L.Ed.2d 288.

County judge, who acquitted persons charged with trespassing for interfering with patients attempting to obtain abortions at medical center on ground that they believed their trespasses were necessary to save lives, and county judge, who acquitted such persons of such charges on ground that Code Va. 1950, § 18.2-72 permitting first trimester abortions was unconstitutional, were immune from liability under this section and § 1985 of this title in action brought by center and patient. Northern Virginia Women's Medical Center v. Balch, C.A.4 (Va.) 1980, 617 F.2d 1045. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Texas justice of peace was absolutely immune from civil rights action brought on claim that justice of peace had convicted civil rights plaintiff of a nonexistent crime after which plaintiff had been briefly incarcerated before obtaining release by means of a state writ of habeas corpus. Turner v. Raynes, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1980, 611 F.2d 92, rehearing denied 614 F.2d 1298, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 269, 449 U.S. 900, 66 L.Ed.2d 129. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3258. ---- Reversals, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State appellate judges who reversed judgment for plaintiff in personal injury action were immune from suit under this section. Cheramie v. Tucker, C.A.5 (La.) 1974, 493 F.2d 586, certiorari denied 95 S.Ct. 126, 419 U.S. 868, 42 L.Ed.2d 107. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3259. ---- Appointment or dismissal, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State court judge was acting in administrative capacity when he demoted and dismissed probation officer, and thus state court judge was not absolutely immune from damages suit under § 1983; threat of vexatious lawsuits by disgruntled ex-employees did not serve to distinguish judge from other public officials who hire and fire subordinates. Forrester v. White, U.S.Ill.1988, 108 S.Ct. 538, 484 U.S. 219, 98 L.Ed.2d 555, on remand 846 F.2d 29. Civil Rights 1376(10)

State court judge's act of firing a court reporter did not implicate judicial decision-making process so as to afford judge absolute judicial immunity from claim for damages asserted in civil rights action based on court reporter's claim that she was discharged because of her race and political affiliation. McMillan v. Svetanoff, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1986, 793 F.2d 149, certiorari denied 107 S.Ct. 574, 479 U.S. 985, 93 L.Ed.2d 577. Civil Rights 1376(10)

State court judge's failure to appoint a sufficient number of substitute court reporters to alleviate the backlog of statements of facts in his court was a "judicial act" for which he enjoyed absolute immunity; he was vested with jurisdictional authority to appoint and supervise court reporters, and the parties dealt with him as a judge when they requested that he order statements of facts prepared and when they made subsequent inquiries about the status of their appeals. Rheuark v. Shaw, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1980, 628 F.2d 297, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1392, 450 U.S. 931, 67 L.Ed.2d 365. Judges 36

Probate judge was not entitled to absolute immunity in § 1983 and Age Discrimination in Employment Act action brought by discharged probate court juvenile register/volunteer coordinator. Bridges v. Senger, W.D.Mich.1990, 730 F.Supp. 1401. Civil Rights 1376(10); Civil Rights 1527

Probation officer was closely allied with exercise of court's discretion in handling of individual probation cases, had dealt with court in its capacity as judge and had aided it in performance of judicial acts; thus, in terminating probation officer's employment as family counselor in county probation department, judge acted in his official capacity as judge, and was shielded by doctrine of judicial immunity for any damages arising from termination. Blackwell v. Cook, N.D.Ind.1983, 570 F.Supp. 474. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County judge, in hiring or firing county employees, is not exercising a judicial function but, rather, is performing administrative and ministerial duties and thus cannot claim judicial immunity with respect to a civil rights action arising out of those activities. Clark v. Campbell, W.D.Ark.1981, 514 F.Supp. 1300. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3260. ---- Assistance of counsel, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Civil rights claim against judge based on alleged violation of right of self-representation was barred by absolute judicial immunity. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Judges were absolutely immune from § 1983 claim based on their denial of inmate's request for pro se appearance; denial of that request was routine judicial act that fell within confines of judges' adjudicative role, and jurisdiction. Concepcion v. Cintron, D.Puerto Rico 1995, 905 F.Supp. 57. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Federal and state judges against whom plaintiffs claimed damages for denial of alleged right to have unlicensed lay counsel assist them in court proceedings were immune from suit for acts in their judicial capacity. Turner v. American Bar Ass'n, N.D.Tex.1975, 407 F.Supp. 451, affirmed 539 F.2d 715, affirmed 542 F.2d 56. Judges 36

Private counsel retained to represent attorney in disciplinary proceeding was not state actor, and thus could not be held liable to attorney under § 1983. Brooks v. New York State Supreme Court, Appellate Div. First Dept., E.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31528632, Unreported, affirmed 76 Fed.Appx. 356, 2003 WL 21961174. Civil Rights 1326(10)

3261. ---- Attorney appearances before judge, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judge's alleged actions in directing police officers to bring before judge attorney who was in courthouse were taken in judge's 'judicial capacity' and, thus, judge was judicially immune from section 1983 suit, even though judge allegedly directed officers to carry out order with excessive force. Mireles v. Waco, U.S.Cal.1991, 112 S.Ct. 286, 502 U.S. 9, 116 L.Ed.2d 9, on remand 962 F.2d 865. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3262. ---- Attorney discipline, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Supreme Court of Ohio and its justices were immune from suit for money damages brought by attorneys whom Supreme Court sought to discipline. Berger v. Cuyahoga County Bar Ass'n, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 983 F.2d 718, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 2416, 508 U.S. 940, 124 L.Ed.2d 639. Judges 36

State court and disciplinary committee were absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for their conduct in disciplinary proceeding, absent allegation that any non-judicial actions were taken, or that there was complete absence of all jurisdiction. Brooks v. New York State Supreme Court, Appellate Div. First Dept., E.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31528632, Unreported, affirmed 76 Fed.Appx. 356, 2003 WL 21961174. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3263. ---- Arrests generally, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judge's actions in stopping motorist on highway, using police officer to summon motorist unofficially, and charging motorist with various crimes were not judicial acts for purposes of claiming absolute judicial immunity. Malina v. Gonzales, C.A.5 (La.) 1993, 994 F.2d 1121, rehearing denied 1 F.3d 304, on remand 1993 WL 534163. Judges 36

Absolute quasi-judicial immunity did not apply to shield executive secretary of state racing commission from suit for violations of veterinarian's free association rights that allegedly occurred when executive secretary had veterinarian who was subject of commission's disciplinary proceedings arrested and forcibly removed from public areas of racetracks. VanHorn v. Nebraska State Racing Com'n, D.Neb.2004, 304 F.Supp.2d 1151. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8)

3264. ---- Arrest warrants, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Issuance of arrest warrant was "judicial act," for which state circuit judge was absolutely immune under § 1983, unless judge acted in complete absence of all jurisdiction in issuing warrant. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Where state district judge learned that plaintiff had been using firearms two days after he had suspended plaintiff's sentence on a charge of aggravated assault for similar conduct and also learned that there was some question as to plaintiff's mental condition, judge was performing judicial function in issuing arrest warrant for plaintiff and conducting commitment hearing and was thus immune from liability in civil rights action to recover damages arising from arrest, incarceration and commitment. Watson v. Interstate Fire & Cas. Co., C.A.5 (La.) 1980, 611 F.2d 120. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where Louisiana justice of the peace thought that buyer's conduct in stopping payment on check for purchase of vehicle could give rise to criminal theft charge, and his statements that stop payment disputes were exclusively civil matters were really expressions of doubt as to eventual prosecution by district attorney on charges involving stop payment orders, his issuance of arrest warrant upon seller's insistence was in his capacity as justice of the peace and consequently he was entitled to protection of judicial immunity in buyer's subsequent civil rights action. Keeton v. Guedry, C.A.5 (La.) 1976, 544 F.2d 199. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where speeding tickets were issued to motorist in geographical area over which judge presided, he was within his jurisdiction to issue warrant for her arrest when she failed to appear to answer tickets and to arraign her, and he was thus entitled to immunity. Ippolito v. Meisel, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 155. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge acted outside scope of his judicial authority by permitting use of his rubber stamp signature on mental health warrant outside his presence, and was not protected by judicial immunity in subsequent civil rights action brought by person incarcerated on basis of the warrant. Daniels v. Stovall, S.D.Tex.1987, 660 F.Supp. 301. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where defendant judges were acting in their judicial capacities and within the scope of their authority when issuing a warrant for the arrest of plaintiff and upon the trial of plaintiff for the criminal offense charged, the judges were immune from civil liability to the plaintiff under this section. Crawford v. Lydick, W.D.Mich.1959, 179 F.Supp. 211, 83 Ohio Law Abs. 410, 11 O.O.2d 274, affirmed 280 F.2d 426, certiorari denied 81 S.Ct. 93, 364 U.S. 849, 5 L.Ed.2d 72. Civil Rights 1376(8)

West Virginia justice of the peace who issued warrant for arrest of party on charge of issuing a check with insufficient funds in bank to pay same was acting judicially under authority of Code 61-3-39, and an action would not lie against him for violation of party's civil rights. Williamson v. Waugh, S.D.W.Va.1958, 160 F.Supp. 72. Justices Of The Peace 25

State court judge had absolute immunity from liability arising from his conduct in signing and approving alias arrest warrant and bond forfeiture order, in arrestee's §§ 1983 suit alleging that the judge conspired with state prosecutor to have him arrested on false charges; arrestee's claims against the judge arose out of actions that he took in his judicial capacity, and as a result, the judge was entitled to absolute immunity unless he acted in the absence of all jurisdiction, which the arrestee failed to establish. Lyghtle v. Breitenbach, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 139 Fed.Appx. 17, 2005 WL 1178090, Unreported. Conspiracy 13

Doctrine of judicial immunity barred § 1983 action asserted against judge based on his actions in issuing an arrest warrant. Denoyer v. Dobberpuhl, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2000, 208 F.3d 217, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3265. ---- Bail or bond, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Justice of the peace, who allegedly interfered with plaintiff's right to bail prior to trial, was clothed with immunity from suit for damages under this section. Grundstrom v. Darnell, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 531 F.2d 272. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Officer in the Connecticut State Police was protected by absolute judicial immunity from a personal-capacity suit for monetary damages under § 1983 for actions related to his performing the bail setting function assigned to police officers under a statute, even though the officer set a cash only bond and sought advice from a state's attorney prior to setting bail; the governing statute did not preclude officers from setting cash only bonds, and although the statute did not contemplate or require an officer to contact a state's attorney prior to a bail commissioner's determination, nowhere did it preclude an officer from doing so. Sanchez v. Doyle, D.Conn.2003, 254 F.Supp.2d 266. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police officers' roles in setting arrestee's bail were functionally comparable to that of judge, and thus officers were entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 in arrestee's action alleging violation of Eighth Amendment's excessive bail clause, even if officer did not consider individualized circumstances, where officers were required under state statute to attempt to conduct interview with arrestee to obtain information relevant to terms and conditions of his release from custody before setting bail, officers' determination was not reviewed after arrestee posted bail, and police department retained discretion to advise state's attorney of its objection to bail commissioner's redetermination. Clynch v. Chapman, D.Conn.2003, 285 F.Supp.2d 213. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(8)

State magistrate judge did not act in clear absence of jurisdiction by setting bail for intravenous drug user, after user was arrested for criminally possessing hypodermic instrument, in § 1983 action under Fourth Amendment, even though arrest was later determined to be false on basis that user was enrolled in needle exchange program, where judge was informed that user was arrested outside of program area; judge was entitled to absolute immunity because he was acting in judicial capacity and there was not clear absence of jurisdiction. L.B. v. Town of Chester, S.D.N.Y.2002, 232 F.Supp.2d 227. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge who set $40,000 bond on defendant charged with assaulting his wife was acting within her jurisdictional authority when she set bond and was therefore absolutely immune from liability for damages under § 1983. Miner v. Baker, E.D.Mo.1986, 638 F.Supp. 239. Civil Rights 1376(8)

As to actions of justice of the peace in issuing arrest warrants and fixing amount of bail, justice of the peace was immune from liability for alleged deprivation of constitutional rights under color of law. Krueger v. Miller, E.D.Tenn.1977, 489 F.Supp. 321, affirmed 617 F.2d 603. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Justice of the peace was immune from suit for his actions in setting bail and making probable cause determination at preliminary hearing. Fox v. Castle, M.D.Pa.1977, 441 F.Supp. 411. Justices Of The Peace 25

Where it was claimed that judge had ordered plaintiff's bail money to be given to some unauthorized person or organization but judge's action was not clearly illegal under Illinois law, S.H.A.Ill. Ch. 38, § 1-1 et seq., his action was within his judicial function and he enjoyed judicial immunity. Barksdale v. Ryan, N.D.Ill.1974, 398 F.Supp. 700, affirmed 511 F.2d 1405, certiorari denied 95 S.Ct. 2637, 422 U.S. 1011, 45 L.Ed.2d 676. Judges 36

If, as alleged, police magistrate who allegedly issued warrant charging employer with violation of municipal ordinance had directed that employee be arrested and, after his arrest, had used abusive language toward him, denied him opportunity to consult counsel and compelled him to post bond to obtain his release, doctrine of judicial immunity would not preclude findings of civil liability. Yates v. Village of Hoffman Estates, Ill., N.D.Ill.1962, 209 F.Supp. 757. Judges 36

3266. ---- Bar admissions and examinations, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Actions taken by State Supreme Court, and Committee on Character and Fitness and its members, in denying application for admission to state bar, were "judicial acts" to which absolute immunity attached. Sparks v. Character and Fitness Committee of Kentucky, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1988, 859 F.2d 428, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 1120, 489 U.S. 1011, 103 L.Ed.2d 183. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Justices of State Supreme Court and members of State Board of Bar Examiners were entitled to immunity for actions they could not have known would be violation of bar examinees' constitutional rights. Garcia v. Colorado State Bd. of Law Examiners, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1985, 760 F.2d 239, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 163, 474 U.S. 856, 88 L.Ed.2d 135. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Members of committee on character and fitness for admission to the New York state bar in the First Department of the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division were entitled to absolute judicial immunity from §§ 1983 claims brought against them by bar applicant arising out of hearing on application; Appellate Division's designation of authority required members of committee to act in a quasi-prosecutorial, and an adjudicatory, or quasi-judicial, capacity. Roe v. Johnson, S.D.N.Y.2004, 334 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(8)

By reason of judicial immunity, plaintiff could not recover damages from justices of Nevada Supreme Court for refusal to approve admission to bar. Louis v. Supreme Court of Nevada, D.C.Nev.1980, 490 F.Supp. 1174. Judges 36

3267. ---- Chambers conferences, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Civil action for deprivation of rights that was instituted against state judge on alleged ground that judge had bailiff forcibly return plaintiff to judge's chambers and that judge addressed plaintiff in offensive and slanderous language could not be maintained where meeting and alleged slanderous utterances were addressed to subject of improperly influencing juries and judge's impression that plaintiff was involved, so that judge was acting within his authority to protect sanctity and dignity of courtroom proceedings. Mullins v. Oakley, C.A.4 (W.Va.) 1971, 437 F.2d 1217. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3268. ---- Child custody, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Juvenile officers and social workers who took temporary protective custody of minor were not entitled to judicial immunity in § 1983 action with respect to claims based upon their alleged failure to investigate, their detaining minor, and claimed inordinate delay in filing state court proceedings; such alleged actions were not functionally comparable to those of judges. Whisman Through Whisman v. Rinehart, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1997, 119 F.3d 1303. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges and other public officials enjoy judicial immunity to federal civil rights action claim for money damages in action arising out of custody dispute. DiRuggiero v. Rodgers, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1984, 743 F.2d 1009. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial and court employees executing judicial orders were immune, under § 1985 of this title and this section, from liability for acts which were committed within their judicial discretion, relating to commitment of plaintiffs' daughter to a private orphanage. Henig v. Odorioso, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1967, 385 F.2d 491, certiorari denied 88 S.Ct. 1269, 390 U.S. 1016, 20 L.Ed.2d 166, rehearing denied 88 S.Ct. 1814, 391 U.S. 929, 20 L.Ed.2d 671. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges were absolutely immune from civil rights liability based on allegations that they signed orders of detention for children without giving parents notice, or opportunity for hearing, and that they filed orders terminating jurisdiction the cases without providing parents notice or opportunity for a hearing. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Assuming that state trial judge acted pursuant to state law when he required father but not mother to file affidavit during custody proceeding, father could not challenge constitutionality of such law by seeking injunctive relief against the state judge in civil rights action; civil rights statute does not provide relief against judges acting purely in their judicial capacity. Johnson v. State of N.J., D.N.J.1994, 869 F.Supp. 289, reconsideration denied 1995 WL

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

46367. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1456

Michigan judge was absolutely immune from damage liability under federal civil rights statute, in action alleging that judge refused to give full faith and credit to Kansas court's order that minor children's natural father have no contact with children; both Kansas and Michigan were in disagreement over which state should determine custody of minor children, thus both states had acted. Sipka v. Soet, D.Kan.1991, 761 F.Supp. 761, appeal dismissed 940 F.2d 1539. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3269. ---- Child protection, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Social workers and police officers whose actions in removing children from their parents are not integral to judicial process are entitled only to qualified immunity in § 1983 action, and not to absolute immunity. Malik v. Arapahoe County Dept. of Social Services, D.Colo.1997, 987 F.Supp. 868, affirmed in part, dismissed in part 191 F.3d 1306. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(6)

In presiding over proceeding to determine whether child was in need of protection or services, judge was acting in his official capacity and was protected by absolute judicial immunity from mother's § 1983 claim that judge and other defendants were depriving her of her right to enroll child in private school. Mason v. Waukesha County, E.D.Wis.1994, 855 F.Supp. 282, affirmed 48 F.3d 1222. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Plaintiff's civil rights claims against state Supreme Court judge, state family court judge, state district judge, county, Department of Social Services, Office of Child Protective Services, county attorney, and county Jewish Community Services would be dismissed; doctrine of absolute immunity shields judges from liability related to their judicial or adjudicatory acts, prosecutors from liability related to their prosecutorial functions, and witnesses from liability related to their testimony in court proceedings. Levine v. County of Westchester, S.D.N.Y.1993, 828 F.Supp. 238, affirmed 22 F.3d 1090. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

County social workers had absolute immunity from suit by boyfriend of children's mother, challenging removal of children from household; when workers investigated situation and assisted in preparation of legal case leading to removal, they were acting in protected "quasi-prosecutorial" capacity. Wittman v. California Dept. of Social Services, N.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 31398711, Unreported, affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded 108 Fed.Appx. 548, 2004 WL 1987357. Counties 93

3270. ---- Child support, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judges who ruled against father in proceedings arising out of his failure to pay child support, who denied father's appeal of decision against recusal, or who denied further appeal were entitled to absolute immunity in father's § 1983 action. Font v. Dapena Yordan, D.Puerto Rico 1991, 763 F.Supp. 680, affirmed 946 F.2d 880. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge and assistant corporation counsel for city were both immune from liability in action under this section charging that they violated plaintiffs' privacy rights by requiring them to produce joint income tax returns in connection with proceeding to enforce judgment for child support. O'Sullivan v. Saperston, S.D.N.Y.1984, 587 F.Supp. 1041. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(8)

3271. ---- Comments of judge, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Public officials are entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 if their actions violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights then known to reasonable officer; under two-step analysis, court must first assess whether state actor's conduct violated a constitutional right when viewed in light most favorable to party

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

asserting injury and, if so, must determine whether right violated was clearly established. Baird v. Board of Educ. for Warren Community Unit School Dist. No. 205, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 389 F.3d 685, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 332, 163 L.Ed.2d 45. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

Judge of Mississippi State Justice Court was immune from damages for issuing arrest warrant and requiring plaintiff to pay court costs for himself and others involved in the events leading up to his court appearance and for allegedly verbally abusing and humiliating plaintiff; however, plaintiff's claim that judge threatened to abuse him physically charged conduct that was not protected by judicial immunity but did not entitle plaintiff to any relief under this section since plaintiff, who did not allege that he was placed in fear of imminent harm or that judge took any actions indicating an immediate intent to carry out his alleged threats, failed to allege an injury which rose to minimum level required to invoke federal jurisdiction. Ammons v. Baldwin, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1983, 705 F.2d 1445, certiorari denied 104 S.Ct. 999, 465 U.S. 1006, 79 L.Ed.2d 232. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge's comment, when sentencing defendant, that he regretted that he was legally barred from imposing the death sentence, was within the scope of judicial immunity enjoyed by the judge and could not serve as basis for civil rights suit against judge. Careaga v. James, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1980, 616 F.2d 1062, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 140, 449 U.S. 851, 66 L.Ed.2d 62. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity did not bar attorney's claims for prospective relief against judge who presided over state court case brought by attorney, including claims seeking declaration that judge violated attorney's constitutional rights and that state court dismissal of attorney's actions was invalid, and injunction preventing judge from acting further in state case, or in the very least, from continuing to use "vicious" language and to challenge judge's refusal to allow him representation. Davidson v. Garry, E.D.N.Y.1996, 956 F.Supp. 265, affirmed 112 F.3d 503. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3272. ---- Contempt, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State judge was absolutely immune from any liability for holding clerk of court and deputy clerk in contempt for violating judge's administrative order against performing any duties connected with operation of courts and interfering with deputy clerks' performance of their duties, even if judge did not have contempt power as administrative judge, and even though judge was not in chambers and clerks were not involved in adversary proceeding; imposition of contempt was "judicial act"; and judge had colorable authority to hold clerks in contempt. Crooks v. Maynard, C.A.9 (Idaho) 1990, 913 F.2d 699. Judges 36

Issuance of show cause order and citing plaintiff for contempt following letter she sent judge intimating that he had dealt harshly with her sons in criminal proceedings before him because they could not afford to bribe him were "judicial acts" for purposes of judicial immunity, and therefore judge was immune from liability in plaintiff's suit under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983. Adams v. McIlhany, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1985, 764 F.2d 294, rehearing denied 770 F.2d 164, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 883, 474 U.S. 1101, 88 L.Ed.2d 918. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Although county judge's asking plaintiff to raise his right hand to be sworn in and subsequently finding plaintiff in contempt occurred in judge's chambers, judge's ordering plaintiff apprehended, holding contempt proceeding and ordering plaintiff incarcerated were not "judicial acts" for purpose of immunity under this section since controversy that led to incarceration did not center around any matter pending before the judge but around domestic problems of plaintiff's former wife, who worked in courthouse and who plaintiff was attempting to locate and problems, including judge's apparently mistaken belief that divorce filed contained outstanding contempt violation, were brought to judge's attention in a social forum and plaintiff did not visit the judge in his official capacity. Harper v. Merckle, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1981, 638 F.2d 848, certiorari denied 102 S.Ct. 93, 454 U.S. 816, 70 L.Ed.2d 85. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Judicial immunity protected judges and justices of the peace from liability under this section in action alleging that their participation in civil contempt proceeding resulted in plaintiff's unlawful commitment to a state hospital. Slotnick v. Garfinkle, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1980, 632 F.2d 163. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even assuming that defense of former jeopardy was raised in Iowa misdemeanor prosecution and that the Iowa magistrate erred in refusing to dismiss the charges or to direct a verdict of acquittal, the magistrate was not acting outside his jurisdiction, for purposes of judicial immunity, when he thereafter held a witness in contempt for refusing to testify at the misdemeanor trial. McClain v. Brown, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1978, 587 F.2d 389. Judges 36

Doctrine of judicial immunity protects judge from civil suit for acts performed in course of his official duties, and civil rights suit prejudicated upon order entered in contempt proceeding in divorce case was properly dismissed as to judge who entered order. Glasspoole v. Albertson, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1974, 491 F.2d 1090. Civil Rights 1376(8)

County judge who convened court of inquiry to inquire into actions of hospital administrator, who refused to relinquish control of county hospital following termination of his position by county fiscal court, and punished administrator for contemptuous conduct committed in his presence was immune from civil action under this section and § 1985 of this title. Ray v. Huddleston, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1964, 327 F.2d 61. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge was entitled to judicial immunity from money damages in relation to issuing a contempt order and sentencing plaintiff pursuant to that order, regardless of alleged procedural irregularities, where the judge was a judge of a court of general jurisdiction and was empowered to punish for contempt. Cintron Rodriguez v. Pagan Nieves, D.Puerto Rico 1990, 736 F.Supp. 411. Judges 36

State magistrate judge possessed jurisdiction to issue a contempt order against court interpreter who refused to return to courtroom and perform interpretive services for a Spanish-speaking client, at a proceeding over which magistrate was presiding before counsel in open court, for purposes of defense of absolute immunity in interpreter's §§ 1983 action. Giron v. Chaparro, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2006, 167 Fed.Appx. 716, 2006 WL 165015, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity barred former attorney from bringing civil rights action against state court justice for initiating criminal contempt proceedings against him, since judge initiated contempt proceedings after attorney failed to comply with discovery rules and orders regarding filing of frivolous motions, and New York Judiciary Law provided that State Supreme Court justice could institute criminal contempt proceedings against party who disobeyed its mandate. Abrahams v. DiBlasi, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1846305, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3273. ---- Detention center supervision, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

In civil rights action challenging the adequacy of juvenile detention center and the "treatment" which juveniles detained there purportedly receive, the chief judge and a juvenile judge of the Lake County Superior Court, both of whom were named defendants, did not have judicial immunity, since the suit was directed solely at their administrative and ministerial duties and only requested such equitable relief as necessary to safeguard plaintiffs' constitutional rights. Doe v. Lake County, Indiana, N.D.Ind.1975, 399 F.Supp. 553. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3274. ---- Dismissal of claims, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Federal judges, who were acting in their official capacities as federal government officials when they adversely ruled on terminated federal employee's discrimination and retaliation action against employer, were exempt from § 1983 claims, arising from their adverse rulings. Rockefeller v. U.S. Court of Appeals Office, for Tenth Circuit Judges, D.D.C.2003, 248 F.Supp.2d 17. Civil Rights 1363

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Arrestee could not continue to pursue claims against state court judge, in amended pro se complaint alleging constitutional violations under §§ 1983, after his original pro se complaint seeking monetary damages was dismissed, where his allegations in amended complaint were based on same acts specified in original complaint, all claims in original complaint were clearly disposed of by federal court judge's earlier determination that they were barred by absolute judicial immunity, and federal court judge did not grant arrestee leave to amend his claims against state court judge. Velez v. Hayes, S.D.N.Y.2004, 346 F.Supp.2d 557. Federal Civil Procedure 1837.1

Illinois Court of Claims judges had judicial immunity from § 1983 claims arising from their dismissal of inmate's claim to recover money for property allegedly lost by State Department of Corrections, despite judges' lack of membership in judicial branch of state government; dismissal was act of judicial nature, and claimants in Court of Claims were accorded most of essential procedural protections accorded a plaintiff in court of law, and had right to appeal to court of law in exceptional circumstances. Williams v. Rath, N.D.Ill.1991, 756 F.Supp. 1103. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Absolute judicial immunity barred civil rights action against federal district judge who dismissed inmate's prior action; if inmate had felt seriously wronged by dismissal of his prior action, he should have taken and perfected appeal. Blake v. Costantino, E.D.N.Y.1989, 710 F.Supp. 450. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Defendants enjoyed absolute immunity in their judicial capacities for their actions in dismissing a complaint filed by plaintiff and in making certain statements in course of a settlement of case. Peragine v. Maimone, S.D.N.Y.1980, 504 F.Supp. 136, affirmed 742 F.2d 1436. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3275. ---- Evidence and witnesses, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State-court judge's alleged acts during hearing on motion for summary judgment, challenged under §§1983 as violative of plaintiff's due process rights, and consisting of "conspiring to prevent" subpoenaed witnesses from testifying and scheduling hearing at end of day's docket to insure an empty courtroom, were judicial actions for which judge was entitled to absolute immunity; scheduling of pretrial proceedings and decision whether to exclude witnesses' testimony were both within judge's discretion. Tatum v. Giarruso, E.D.La.2004, 347 F.Supp.2d 324. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Justice of the peace who presided over tax sale purchasers' forcible entry and detainer action was absolutely immune from liability to taxpayers under § 1983 for his decision to admit or exclude certain evidence and testimony, entry of judgment in favor of tax sale purchasers, and requiring taxpayers to post substantial appeal bond. Hirsch v. Copenhaver, D.Wyo.1993, 839 F.Supp. 1524, affirmed 46 F.3d 1151. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State judge was absolutely immune from civil rights action where the judge's actions complained of were evidentiary rulings and orders granting restitution or fines, and thus were within the scope of judicial authority, despite contention that judge's actions benefited parties who had initiated complaint, charging plaintiff with being an unlicensed contractor, rather than benefitting the state. Bennett v. Batchik, E.D.Mich.1990, 743 F.Supp. 1245, affirmed 936 F.2d 572. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3276. ---- Ex parte communications, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Because Indiana circuit court judge, in approving mother's ex parte petition to have her "somewhat retarded" 15-year-old daughter sterilized, acted in his capacity as circuit court judge, and performed type of act normally performed only by judges, lack of formality with which he proceeded did not render his action "nonjudicial" for purposes of depriving him of absolute immunity from damages liability. Stump v. Sparkman, U.S.Ind.1978, 98 S.Ct. 1099, 435 U.S. 349, 55 L.Ed.2d 331, rehearing denied 98 S.Ct. 2862, 436 U.S. 951, 56 L.Ed.2d 795, on remand 601 F.2d 261. Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3277. ---- Extradition, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Georgia judges who allegedly participated in extraditing Florida prisoner to Florida were immune from liability for damages for acts in the performance of judicial duty. Collins v. Moore, C.A.5 (Ga.) 1971, 441 F.2d 550. Judges 36

3278. ---- Forfeiture, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Municipal court judge was acting in judicial capacity, entitling him to absolute judicial immunity from suit alleging deprivation of federally protected rights, when judge ruled that claimant had violated ordinances and then imposed civil forfeitures. Haas v. Wisconsin, E.D.Wis.2003, 241 F.Supp.2d 922, affirmed 109 Fed.Appx. 107, 2004 WL 1799360, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 908, 543 U.S. 1053, 160 L.Ed.2d 776. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3279. ---- Garnishments, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State court judge who had played no meaningful role in initiation or execution of garnishment procedure, which was under attack, until defendant in state court action sought dissolution of the writ of garnishment in the state court and who asserted judicial immunity as a defense was entitled to prevail against state court defendant who brought civil rights action against the judge and others challenging constitutionality of state garnishment procedure. Douglas Research & Chemical, Inc. v. Solomon, E.D.Mich.1975, 388 F.Supp. 433. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Justice of the peace, being protected by judicial immunity rule, was not liable under this section for damages resulting from issuance of writ of garnishment before judgment, regardless of whether writ was issued without compliance with state law or whether alleged debtor was denied due process of law. Thompson v. Baker, W.D.Ark.1955, 133 F.Supp. 247. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3280. ---- Indictment or information, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Two state judges who refused to act on pending indictments were cloaked with judicial immunity and could not be subjected to a demand for damages for judicial action or inaction whether the right to damages was asserted to arise under this section or under any other theory of liability. Carter v. Duggan, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1972, 455 F.2d 1156. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

3281. ---- Injunctions, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State court judge was unqualifiedly immune from suit for damages occasioned by his judicial act of entering a temporary injunction, allegedly induced by a bribe given by a party to the suit as part of a conspiracy. Sparks v. Duval County Ranch Co., Inc., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1979, 604 F.2d 976, certiorari granted 100 S.Ct. 1336, 445 U.S. 942, 63 L.Ed.2d 775, certiorari denied 100 S.Ct. 1339, 445 U.S. 943, 63 L.Ed.2d 777, affirmed 101 S.Ct. 183, 449 U.S. 24, 66 L.Ed.2d 185, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 588, 449 U.S. 1021, 66 L.Ed.2d 483. Judges 36

Where federal judge acted within his judicial discretion in denying request for injunctive relief against tax sale of property for failure to pay real estate taxes, federal judge was immune from liability in civil rights action brought by taxpayer. McCann v. Silva, D.C.N.H.1978, 455 F.Supp. 540. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3282. ---- Guardianship, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judge in Puerto Rico trial court enjoyed absolute judicial immunity from civil rights action based upon acts taken during guardianship proceedings, in failing to stop or reverse supposed fiduciary breaches by legal guardian, in sanctioning allegedly unethical arrangement between appointed guardian and guardian's appointed legal representative, and in reprimanding party challenging guardianship; challenged acts were judicial in nature.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Perkins-Leverock v. Ramirez-Ramirez, D.Puerto Rico 1991, 762 F.Supp. 19. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3283. ---- Judgments, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Defendant justice of peace who issued judgment removing tenant for failure to pay rent, sheriff who evicted tenant and their employees were immune from suit under this section by tenant as judicial officers. People of State of Miss. ex rel. Giles v. Thomas, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1972, 464 F.2d 156. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Illinois Supreme Court judges and Illinois circuit court judges who were merely performing their official duties were immune from civil rights action to enjoin enforcement of Supreme Court final judgment remanding action for damages to circuit court with instructions to dismiss. Adkins v. Underwood, N.D.Ill.1974, 370 F.Supp. 510, affirmed 520 F.2d 890, certiorari denied 96 S.Ct. 452, 423 U.S. 1017, 46 L.Ed.2d 389. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Alleged failure of associate justice of Superior Court of Massachusetts to enter defaults against a defendant and to render judgments for plaintiff involved official acts of judge in litigation pending in that court and he was not liable to answer to plaintiff for alleged violation of plaintiff's civil rights under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14. Rudnicki v. Sullivan, D.C.Mass.1960, 189 F.Supp. 714. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

Absolute immunity protected state court trial judge from liability under § 1983 in suit brought by plaintiff in state suit asserting that judge failed to comply with technical requirements of Illinois procedural law in voiding judgment obtained by plaintiff. In re Chapman, Bkrtcy.N.D.Ill.1993, 154 B.R. 258, affirmed 159 B.R. 812, affirmed 46 F.3d 1133, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 153, 516 U.S. 853, 133 L.Ed.2d 97. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3284. ---- Jury matters, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Doctrine of judicial immunity barred juror from recovering under civil rights statute for state court judge's in-court conduct in singling juror out in open court, after jury had returned its verdict in murder trial, as only juror to vote against death penalty. Emory v. Peeler, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1985, 756 F.2d 1547. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Missouri circuit court judge who presided over black inmate's criminal trial was immune from liability in inmate's subsequent civil rights suit in which it was alleged that judge, by permitting inmate to be absent during jury impanelment and refusing to dismiss his counsel and move the trial, was involved in a conspiracy with prosecutor and court-appointed defense counsel to impanel an all-white jury. White v. Bloom, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1980, 621 F.2d 276, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 533, 449 U.S. 995, 66 L.Ed.2d 292, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 882, 449 U.S. 1089, 66 L.Ed.2d 816. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judges were immune from suits charging that they conspired to adopt illegal local rules relating to voir dire of jurors by court and providing for decisions on motions to be made without hearing and charging that rulings violated § 242 of Title 18 relating to civil rights. Hanson v. Goodwin, W.D.Wash.1977, 432 F.Supp. 853, appeal dismissed 566 F.2d 1181. Judges 36

3285. ---- Juvenile delinquents, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Juvenile officers and social workers who took temporary protective custody of minor were not entitled to absolute quasi-prosecutorial immunity in § 1983 action with respect to claims based upon their alleged failure to investigate, their detaining minor, and claimed inordinate delay in filing state court proceedings; alleged actions did not aid in presentation of case to juvenile court, but rather, they were intentionally designed to avoid or unreasonably delay judicial process. Whisman Through Whisman v. Rinehart, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1997, 119 F.3d 1303. Civil Rights 1376(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Judge of family division of court of common pleas was immune from liability with respect to civil rights complaint which alleged that judge and director of youth study center actively engaged in efforts to conceal true facts surrounding alleged improper treatment of juvenile confined at the center, that judge had refused to investigate openly, impartially and thoroughly the charges, and that, in hearing held concerning those incidents, the judge neglected to summon certain witnesses. Thompson v. Montemuro, E.D.Pa.1974, 383 F.Supp. 1200. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Both Juvenile Court (and any particular judge thereof) and the Superintendent of State Correctional Institution were immune from the suit under this section, brought by petitioner who claimed that he had been illegally confined for 5 years past the age of 21 in the State Correctional Institution. Fox v. Juvenile Court, E.D.Pa.1970, 321 F.Supp. 67. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3286. ---- Mandamus, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State judge who presided over mandamus action brought by motorist challenging the revocation of her driver's license was entitled to judicial immunity with respect to motorist's subsequent civil rights action against judge. Schuman v. State of Cal., C.A.9 (Cal.) 1978, 584 F.2d 868. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3287. ---- Mental commitment and competency, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judge was immune from suit for any civil rights deprivations arising out of his ordering person committed to mental hospital. Sebastian v. U. S., C.A.8 (Ark.) 1976, 531 F.2d 900, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 153, 429 U.S. 856, 50 L.Ed.2d 133. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even if plaintiff had been committed under a repealed statute providing for summary commitments, such judicial miscue did not remove shield of Judicial immunity. Robinson v. McCorkle, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1972, 462 F.2d 111, certiorari denied 93 S.Ct. 529, 409 U.S. 1042, 34 L.Ed.2d 492. Judges 36

Judge who was hearing divorce action and initiated steps for husband's detention under West's Ann.Cal.Welfare & Inst.Code §§ 5047 et seq., for observation as to mental health and judge who granted authority for the detention and observation under court supervision were immune from any alleged liability to husband under this section in husband's suit, as was court bailiff who had acted at direction of judge in preparing and signing necessary petition. Haldane v. Chagnon, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1965, 345 F.2d 601. Civil Rights 1376(8)

The common law rule of immunity of a judicial officer for acts done in exercise of his judicial function, where he has jurisdiction over both parties and subject matter, has not been abrogated by this section, and judge and prosecuting attorney who acted in committing person to state mental institution were not subject to liability for alleged wrongful actions in this respect. Kenney v. Fox, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1956, 232 F.2d 288, certiorari denied 77 S.Ct. 84, 352 U.S. 855, 1 L.Ed.2d 66, certiorari denied 77 S.Ct. 84, 352 U.S. 856, 1 L.Ed.2d 66. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Since state judge was acting in course of his duties when he signed order for temporary detention of plaintiff for examination into her mental condition, the judge was entitled to absolute immunity with regards to plaintiff's claims against him. Martens v. Tremble, E.D.Wis.1979, 481 F.Supp. 831. Judges 36

Judge who conducted civil commitment hearings of allegedly mentally ill persons was cloaked with judicial immunity while acting pursuant to KRS 202.060 and 202.100 and procedures established by court of which he was a member and no claim for damages could be maintained against him for his activities in connection therewith. Kendall v. True, W.D.Ky.1975, 391 F.Supp. 413. Judges 36

3288. ---- Parole, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Judge and prosecutor who allegedly filed with Texas Board of Pardons and Parole letter or instrument urging or recommending that Board deny prisoner parole were absolutely immune from liability in civil rights action alleging judge and prosecutor filed documents in retaliation for civil rights suits which prisoner had prosecuted and alleging that prosecutor further acted with intent of extending prisoner's period of incarceration on basis of unadjudicated offenses. Johnson v. Kegans, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1989, 870 F.2d 992, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 3250, 492 U.S. 921, 106 L.Ed.2d 596. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3289. ---- Plea bargains, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

If California trial judge arguably had some common law or statutory basis for ordering plaintiff to submit to castration had he been convicted on child molestation charge, the trial judge, who allegedly accepted plea bargain whereby plaintiff was allowed to plead guilty to a lesser charge provided he consent to castration, would be immune from civil damages action under this section, likewise, district attorneys and physician, acting in capacity as medical examiner for county jail and advising at "plea bargaining" sessions, would also be immune from liability under this section for alleged misrepresentations about the side effects of the castration. Briley v. State of Cal., C.A.9 (Cal.) 1977, 564 F.2d 849. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Trial judge and district attorney were absolutely immune from damage liability under this section for allegedly breaching plea bargain with plaintiff. Miller v. Barilla, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1977, 549 F.2d 648. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

District justice's actions regarding preliminary hearing and plea agreement were protected by absolute immunity, where actions were entirely appropriate and within ambit of justice's duties in course of presiding over criminal cases. Rumfola v. Murovich, W.D.Pa.1992, 812 F.Supp. 569. Justices Of The Peace 25

State court judge acting within his jurisdiction in criminal case was immune from civil rights action brought against him on basis that he and another had conspired to coerce and trick plaintiff into entering guilty plea. Griffin v. Nangle, E.D.Mo.1974, 413 F.Supp. 913. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3290. ---- Post-conviction relief, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State trial judge's alleged interference with giving criminal defendant notice of order vacating defendant's conviction entered pursuant to defendant's postconviction petition was protected by judicial immunity. Lowe v. Letsinger, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1985, 772 F.2d 308. Judges 36

President Judge of Court of Common Pleas and of Court of Oyer and Terminer and Court of Quarter Sessions in Pennsylvania could not be sued under this section by inmate of prison to recover damages because President Judge allegedly failed to hear and determine a habeas corpus proceeding of inmate. Cohen v. Norris, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1962, 300 F.2d 24.

State-court magistrate and judges, who had presided over criminal trial, considered postconviction relief motion, and presided over defendant's surrender to sheriff following affirmation of conviction on appeal, respectively, enjoyed judicial immunity in defendant's §§1983 action alleging that magistrate's and judges' comments in connection with those proceedings violated his constitutional rights; acts complained of were "judicial acts," and magistrate and judges did not act in clear absence of jurisdiction, regardless of alleged inappropriateness of their comments. Phillips v. Wood, M.D.N.C.2004, 341 F.Supp.2d 576. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Prison inmate bringing pro se § 1983 action against state court judge for alleged violation of his due process rights in connection with his postconviction relief proceedings was not entitled to appointment of counsel on ground that the issues presented in his case were too complex for him to litigate without the assistance of counsel, where the district court already attempted to procure an attorney to assist inmate, but discontinued those efforts after two attorneys reviewed his claims and concluded they had no merit, and where the district court agreed that inmate's claims had no merit. Quarles v. Lineberger, E.D.Pa.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 208, affirmed 100 Fed.Appx. 127, 2004 WL 1396362, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 874, 543 U.S. 1060, 160 L.Ed.2d 787. Civil Rights 1445

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Even if state judge improperly denied parolee's petition for writ of habeas corpus, doctrine of judicial immunity exempted him from liability for damages under federal civil rights law. Conner v. Alston, E.D.N.Y.1988, 701 F.Supp. 376. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Action of district judge in denying application of convicted defendant for post-conviction relief was within exercise of the judicial function and, as such, entitled him to absolute judicial immunity. Anderson v. Byars, W.D.Okla.1980, 505 F.Supp. 32. Judges 36

3291. ---- Prisoner transfers, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

State trial judge had judicial immunity to suit under this section, on ground that judge conspired with superintendent of state mental hospital and psychiatrist to have individual, who had been adjudged insane in criminal prosecution in state court, transferred to state penitentiary. Franklin v. Meredith, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1967, 386 F.2d 958. Conspiracy 13

Alabama judge was immune from liability under this section for actions within scope of Code of Ala. Tit. 45, § 129, authorizing removal of sick prisoners to prison hospital. Beard v. Stephens, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1967, 372 F.2d 685. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Hearing officer in connection with classification of inmate to administrative segregation was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from § 1983 liability; it was not alleged that she was acting beyond scope of her authority. Loukas v. Hofbauer, E.D.Mich.1991, 784 F.Supp. 377. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Any action taken by judge to transfer to different jail the leader of a concerted effort by pretrial detainees to boycott court proceedings was "judicial act" for which he was immune from suit. Figueroa v. Kapelman, S.D.N.Y.1981, 526 F.Supp. 681. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3292. ---- Probable cause, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Justice of the peace was entitled to absolute immunity from liability in civil rights action in which it was alleged that the justice failed to inform arrestee during probable cause hearing which led to his release that he would still be given an examining trial before indictment if he was indicted. Dayse v. Schuldt, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1990, 894 F.2d 170. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge was entitled to judicial immunity as to an arrestee's civil rights claim that the judge issued search warrants that lacked probable cause; the issuance of search warrants was an action taken in the judge's judicial capacity. Fernandez v. Alexander, D.Conn.2006, 419 F.Supp.2d 128. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Constitutional claims against Probate Court judge in his individual capacity arising from his appointment of a conservator for plaintiff's mother, removal of plaintiff's power of attorney, placement of a lis pendens on plaintiff's home, taking possession of mother's bank account, and selling mother's home were barred by absolute judicial immunity; judge's actions fell within the scope of his authority as a Probate Court Judge, over which he had jurisdiction under Connecticut statutes and judicial precedent. Collins v. West Hartford Police Dept., D.Conn.2005, 380 F.Supp.2d 83. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3293. ---- Probation, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Action by hearing magistrate at preliminary probation revocation hearing was not quasi-judicial act entitling magistrate to quasi-judicial immunity in probationer's action contending that magistrate deprived him of right under U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14 to have preliminary hearing concerning charges conducted at or reasonably near place of alleged probation violation where, although decision was made in context of adversarial proceeding, it was made in absence of formal structure preserving magistrate's independence and hearing magistrate testified that he believed his decision denying probationer's motion for change of hearing site was mandated in accordance with direct legal authority. Harris v. Powers, W.D.Wis.1981, 520 F.Supp. 111. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3294. ---- Records or transcripts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judicial acts concerning preparation and ultimate transfer of papers and transcripts to appellate court qualify as "judicial acts" for which grant of absolute immunity is functionally appropriate. Dellenbach v. Letsinger, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1989, 889 F.2d 755, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1821, 494 U.S. 1085, 108 L.Ed.2d 950. Judges 36

Alleged acts of state circuit court judge in connection with criminal action, in dictating false certificate misrepresenting occurrence of instruction and special verdict which was never held and causing alteration to trial transcript and docket sheet record to indicate false certificate was filed, were judicial acts and, thus, judge was cloaked with absolute judicial immunity from resulting civil rights action brought by defendant in criminal action, regardless of reprehensibility of conduct; actions were kind normally performed by judge and criminal defendant was dealing with judge in his judicial capacity. Eades v. Sterlinske, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1987, 810 F.2d 723, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 143, 484 U.S. 847, 98 L.Ed.2d 99. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State trial judge did not act outside scope of official duties in failing to direct court reporter to furnish prisoner with free transcript in order to prepare postconviction motion, and judge was therefore immune from liability in prisoner's § 1983 action. Boone v. Weizel, N.D.Ohio 1996, 917 F.Supp. 518, affirmed 108 F.3d 1376. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Alleged order of state court judge denying plaintiff access to trial records was a judicial act and shielded by absolute immunity from civil rights claims asserted by plaintiff. Ortiz v. Morgenthau, S.D.N.Y.1991, 772 F.Supp. 1430, affirmed 962 F.2d 4. Civil Rights 1376(8)

In spite of sweeping "every person" language of this section which creates federal cause of action against persons whose misconduct under color of state law violates constitutional rights of another, judges retain their traditional common-law immunity regardless of allegations of corruption or maliciousness; therefore, judge who allegedly accepted bribe and falsified court records to prevent plaintiff from presenting his case to court was entitled to judicial immunity. Kane v. Yung Won Han, E.D.N.Y.1982, 550 F.Supp. 120. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3295. ---- Receivership, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Contention of judgment creditors' attorney that she was acting as agent of and on behalf of court-appointed receiver for judgment debtor's assets, rather than as coconspirator, when attorney searched home of debtor's girlfriend did not entitle attorney to share in receiver's derivative judicial immunity from girlfriend's civil rights conspiracy claims; attorney's first duty was to her client, the judgment creditors, and to satisfaction of judgment against debtor, and, even assuming that attorney was receiver's agent, girlfriend's complaint alleged that attorney seized women's underwear, which would clearly have exceeded scope of receiver's authority to take possession of property of male judgment debtor. Davis v. Bayless, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1995, 70 F.3d 367. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Complaint that Texas judge, through abuse of judicial office, seized control of oil company by, inter alia, arranging to have receivership action against the oil company brought before his court contrary to usual procedure for assigning cases and by appointing incompetent receiver and dismissing many key employees of oil company, all pursuant to bribe and conspiracy to deprive oil company's owners of their property without due process of law, alleged that harm was inflicted by "judicial acts" to which absolute immunity would apply, and thus, was insufficient to avoid judicial immunity; declining to follow Rankin v. Howard, 633 F.2d 844. Holloway v. Walker, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1985, 765 F.2d 517, rehearing denied 773 F.2d 1236, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 605, 474 U.S. 1037, 88 L.Ed.2d 583. Civil Rights 1395(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3296. ---- Replevin, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

A judge of Illinois county court could not be sued in action for damages for alleged violation of civil rights, because of his acts as a judge in replevin suit. Skinner v. Nehrt, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1957, 242 F.2d 573. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

3297. ---- Sentence and punishment, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Trial judge was absolutely immune from civil liability for sentence imposed following guilty plea entered after plea bargaining. Humble v. Foreman, C.A.5 (La.) 1977, 563 F.2d 780, rehearing denied 566 F.2d 106. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State trial judge, who sentenced plaintiff to prison, was immune from suit under this section. Ford v. Byrd, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 544 F.2d 194.

Justices of state Supreme Court were immune from liability in civil rights action brought by prisoners who claimed that California Adult Authority had failed to grant parole or sentence determination in violation of principles and ideas of the state indeterminate sentence law. West's Ann.Cal.Pen.Code, § 1168, and that the legislators and justices had violated oaths of office by permitting the Authority it so act. Johnson v. Reagan, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1975, 524 F.2d 1123. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Allegations that unlawful sentencing of civil rights plaintiff involved mental cruelty did not take the conduct out of the realm of a state court judge's jurisdiction to impose sentences and did not remove the immunity which he enjoyed from suit under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983. Freeman v. Fuller, S.D.Fla.1985, 623 F.Supp. 1224. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3298. ---- Subpoena enforcement, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Where federal judges were acting within the scope of their judicial duties in connection with enforcing Internal Revenue Service summonses directed to plaintiffs, they were immune from civil suit. Zimmerman v. Spears, W.D.Tex.1977, 428 F.Supp. 759, affirmed 565 F.2d 310. Judges 36

3299. ---- Supersedeas bonds, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judge enjoyed absolute judicial immunity from action in which it was alleged that his conduct with regard to supersedeas bond constituted a due process violation, civil conspiracy, fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, despite plaintiff's allegations of legal error and conspiracy between judge and litigant, as judge was acting within his jurisdiction, and challenged actions were judicial acts. Moore v. Brewster, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 96 F.3d 1240, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 963, 519 U.S. 1118, 136 L.Ed.2d 848. Judges 36

3300. ---- Miscellaneous acts, judicial acts, judicial immunity generally

Judge who presided over state libel suit brought by county hospital against husband of patient, who sent out letters asking whether others had been sexually assaulted while patients at the hospital, was entitled to absolute judicial immunity in §§ 1983 claim brought by husband claiming that because the state supreme court ultimately held the hospital barred from bringing an action for libel, the judge acted without authority. Beedle v. Wilson, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 422 F.3d 1059. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Probate judge was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from civil rights liability for swearing out criminal complaint against person who had falsified information about his legal gender on his marriage license application in probate court office; judge's initiation of proceedings constituted judicial act, as judge had obligation to report that crime had been committed in his court, and his efforts to stop person's repeated attempts to fraudulently obtain marriage licenses protected integrity of judicial system, judge's action arose directly from information provided to him in his judicial capacity, and action was not performed without any jurisdiction to do so. Brookings v. Clunk, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2004, 389 F.3d 614. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judge's alleged conduct in stalking and sexually assaulting prospective employee, subordinate, and litigant did not, irrespective of the circumstances, involve "judicial acts," such that judge would enjoy judicial immunity from resulting civil rights claims. Archie v. Lanier, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1996, 95 F.3d 438. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Circuit court judge was acting in his judicial capacity and was entitled to immunity for his acts of setting dates for hearings and of collecting attorney fees that he had previously adjudged due. Mann v. Conlin, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 22 F.3d 100, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 193, 513 U.S. 870, 130 L.Ed.2d 126. Judges 36

State court judge was not entitled to judicial immunity in connection with order declaring moratorium on issuance of writs of restitution from December 15 through January 2, as judge was acting in his administrative and not judicial capacity in issuing such order. Morrison v. Lipscomb, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 877 F.2d 463. Judges 36

State court judges' refusal to grant defendant's request to appear in his own clothing, rather than jail clothing mandated by policy of county sheriff's department requiring that person in custody wear jail clothing when appearing in nonjury proceeding, unless trial judge ordered prisoners not to appear in jail clothing, was within each judges' official capacity, so that judges were absolutely immune from damage liability under § 1983. Houghton v. Osborne, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1987, 834 F.2d 745. Civil Rights 1376(8)

A judge's private, prior agreement to decide in favor of one party is not a "judicial act" for purpose of judicial immunity. Rankin v. Howard, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1980, 633 F.2d 844, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 2020, 451 U.S. 939, 68 L.Ed.2d 326. Judges 36

Where each of defendant judges in civil rights action performed judicial functions in matters involving the various suits involving plaintiff husband and wife, judges were immune where such actions were in the regular performance of their official duties. Jones v. Jones, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1969, 410 F.2d 365, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 547, 396 U.S. 1013, 24 L.Ed.2d 505. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Action brought by attorney against state court judges, stemming from alleged reduction in attorney's pay as public defender, was properly dismissed as frivolous on immunity grounds, where there was no allegation that judges were acting outside their judicial capacities. Bliven v. Hunt, E.D.N.Y.2005, 418 F.Supp.2d 135. Judges 36

Two state judges were not absolutely immune from § 1983 suit alleging that they violated plaintiff's First Amendment rights by executing trespass notices prohibiting plaintiff from entering any state court grounds or courthouses in State of Vermont, after he refused to remove his van displaying posters conveying unflattering opinions of one of the judges from courthouse parking lot, since judges failed to demonstrate they were authorized to issue such notices under Vermont law. Huminski v. Rutland County, D.Vt.2001, 148 F.Supp.2d 373. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Absolute judicial immunity protected town judge from liability in arrestee's §§ 1983 and 1985 action arising out of arrest and arraignment for aggravated unlicensed operation of vehicle in third degree; arrestee did not claim that judge acted in other than a judicial capacity, judge had jurisdiction over arrestee in that incident which formed basis of complaint occurred within town over which judge had jurisdiction, town court had jurisdiction over misdemeanor offense charged, and declaratory and injunctive relief sought by arrestee had no bearing on arrestee's claims against judge. Estes-El v. Town of Indian Lake, N.D.N.Y.1997, 954 F.Supp. 527. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

State trial judge enjoyed absolute immunity from § 1983 claim seeking relief concerning actions taken by judge in issuing certain orders in divorce proceedings affecting litigant and funds in court registry. Cok v. Forte, D.R.I.1995, 877 F.Supp. 797, affirmed 69 F.3d 531. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity applied to state trial judge in § 1983 civil rights damages suit based on failure to return jewelry used as evidence in criminal matter to prisoner given that judge acted in judicial capacity when authorizing return of jewelry from district attorney to clerk of court in then-pending criminal case and judge acted within jurisdiction in ordering release of exhibits from codefendant's trial for use in plaintiff's trial. Couch v. Cobb County Superior Court, N.D.Ga.1995, 874 F.Supp. 1378. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judge was entitled to absolute judicial immunity in civil rights action based on allegations that he referred matter to his law clerk, in view of uncontroverted affidavit that the judge reviewed the matter with his law clerk and authorized law clerk to send a letter to the litigant. DeFerro v. Coco, E.D.Pa.1989, 719 F.Supp. 379. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State judges' decision to deny litigant's petition for allowance of appeal was action in their judicial capacity, for which they were entitled to absolute judicial immunity from damages under §§ 1983. Span v. Flaherty, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 135 Fed.Appx. 525, 2005 WL 1367215, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1031, 163 L.Ed.2d 870. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State court judges were entitled to absolute immunity from state prisoner's civil rights lawsuit, in which he alleged that judges had a duty to hear his state habeas application because it was filed under a state law exception to the limitations period for applications asserting newly discovered evidence. Nathan v. Smith, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2003, 73 Fed.Appx. 58, 2003 WL 21976334, Unreported, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 828, 540 U.S. 1057, 157 L.Ed.2d 712. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Summary judgment was warranted in favor of judge, in § 1983 action, on basis of absolute judicial immunity. Stringer v. Herbert, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2003, 71 Fed.Appx. 341, 2003 WL 21805916, Unreported, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1088, 540 U.S. 1124, 157 L.Ed.2d 923. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3301. Injunctions, judicial immunity generally

Though judicial immunity is not bar to injunctive relief against judicial officer acting in judicial capacity, policies underlying judicial immunity indicate that immunity should be granted in case where dissatisfied litigant seeks injunction compelling judge to alter former decision. Johnson v. State of N.J., D.N.J.1994, 869 F.Supp. 289, reconsideration denied 1995 WL 46367. Judges 36

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, 42 USCA § 1983

Current through P.L. 110-11 approved 03-07-07

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Copr. © 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Effective: October 19, 1996

United States Code Annotated Currentness
Title 42. The Public Health and Welfare
Chapter 21. Civil Rights (Refs & Annos)
Subchapter I. Generally

§ 1983. Civil action for deprivation of rights

<Notes of Decisions for 42 USCA § 1983 are displayed in four separate documents. Notes of Decisions for subdivisions XXIX to XXXVIII are contained in this document. For text of section, historical notes, references, and Notes of Decisions for subdivisions I to IX, see first document for 42 USCA § 1983. For Notes of Decisions for subdivisions X to XXVIII, see the second ranked document for 42 USCA § 1983. For Notes of Decisions for subdivisions XXXIX to end, see 42 § 1983, post.>

NOTES OF DECISIONS

I. GENERALLY 1-40
II. CONSTRUCTION WITH OTHER LAWS 41-100
III. LAW GOVERNING 101-160
IV. LIMITATIONS LAW GOVERNING 161-220
V. PERSONS WITHIN SECTION 221-350
VI. LIABILITY GENERALLY 351-520
VII. COLOR OF LAW GENERALLY 521-630
VIII. ATTRIBUTION OF PRIVATE ACTIONS TO STATE 631-750
IX. CUSTOM OR USAGE 751-920
X. PARTICULAR PERSONS UNDER COLOR OF LAW 921-1160
XI. DEPRIVATION OF CONSTITUTIONAL OR STATUTORY RIGHTS GENERALLY 1161-1640
XII. DEPRIVATION OF EDUCATION RIGHTS 1641-1740
XIII. DEPRIVATION OF EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS 1741-1910
XIV. DEPRIVATION OF TEACHERS' RIGHTS 1911-2040
XV. POLICE ACTIVITIES 2041-2220
XVI. PRISONS AND PRISONERS GENERALLY 2221-2470
XVII. PRETRIAL DETAINEES 2471-2530
XVIII. PRISONERS' ACCESS TO COURTS 2531-2640
XIX. PRISONERS' ACCESS TO MAILS 2641-2720

XX. MEDICAL CARE OF PRISONERS 2721-2840
XXI. TRANSFER OF PRISONERS 2841-2890
XXII. DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS IN PRISON 2891-2940
XXIII. SOLITARY CONFINEMENT OR SEGREGATION OF PRISONERS 2941-3010
XXIV. VOTING AND ELECTIONS 3011-3070

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

XXV. IMMUNITY GENERALLY 3071-3110
XXVI. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY 3111-3170
XXVII. ABSOLUTE IMMUNITY 3171-3210
XXVIII. JUDICIAL IMMUNITY GENERALLY 3211-3330
XXIX. IMMUNITY OF MISCELLANEOUS JUDICIAL AND QUASI JUDICIAL OFFICIALS 3331-3440
XXX. PROSECUTORIAL IMMUNITY 3441-3550
XXXI. LEGISLATIVE IMMUNITY 3551-3620
XXXII. QUALIFIED IMMUNITY GENERALLY 3621-3770
XXXIII. CLEARLY ESTABLISHED RIGHT 3771-3980
XXXIV. OBJECTIVE REASONABLENESS REQUIREMENT 3981-4110
XXXV. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE GENERALLY 4111-4210
XXXVI. JURISDICTION GENERALLY 4211-4250
XXXVII. ABSTENTION 4251-4300
XXXVIII. EXHAUSTION OF REMEDIES 4301-4380

XXXIX. PERSONS ENTITLED TO MAINTAIN ACTION 4381-4500
XL. PARTIES GENERALLY 4501-4550
XLI. PROPER PARTIES 4551-4600
XLII. CLASS ACTIONS 4601-4660
XLIII. COMPLAINT 4661-4720
XLIV. NECESSARY AND REQUISITE ALLEGATIONS 4721-4760
XLV. COLOR OF LAW ALLEGATIONS 4761-4860
XLVI. PERSONAL PARTICIPATION ALLEGATIONS 4861-4900
XLVII. DEFENSES 4901-4940
XLVIII. LIMITATIONS 4941-5010
XLIX. MOOT QUESTIONS 5011-5060
L. RES JUDICATA 5061-5160
LI. COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL 5161-5240
LII. EVIDENCE AND WITNESSES 5241-5310
LIII. INSTRUCTIONS 5311-5370
LIV. QUESTIONS FOR JURY 5371-5410
LV. JUDICIAL REMEDIES OR RELIEF GENERALLY 5411-5440
LVI. DAMAGES GENERALLY 5441-5510
LVII. PUNITIVE DAMAGES 5511-5560
LVIII. EQUITABLE RELIEF GENERALLY 5561-5620
LIX. INJUNCTIVE RELIEF 5621-5670

LX. HABEAS CORPUS 5671-5720
LXI. REVIEW 5721-5780

XXIX. IMMUNITY OF MISCELLANEOUS JUDICIAL AND QUASI JUDICIAL OFFICIALS

<Subdivision Index>

Administrative hearing officers 3332
Administrators 3333
Aldermen 3334
Applications for search warrants, police officers 3385
Arbitrators 3335
Arrest warrants, clerks of court 3348

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Attorney disciplinary officials 3336, 3337
Attorney disciplinary officials - Generally 3336
Attorney disciplinary officials - Bar associations and members 3337
Attorneys, education and school officials 3367
Attorneys general 3338
Bail, clerks of court 3350
Bail officials 3340
Bailiffs 3341

Bankruptcy trustees 3342
Bar associations and members 3343
Bar associations and members, attorney disciplinary officials 3337
Bench warrants, clerks of court 3349
Boards and board members 3344
Bond, clerks of court 3350
Bond officials 3340
Child welfare workers 3345
Child welfare workers, witnesses 3407
Clerks of court 3346-3358
Clerks of court - Generally 3346
Clerks of court - Arrest warrants 3348
Clerks of court - Bail 3350
Clerks of court - Bench warrants 3349
Clerks of court - Commitments 3351
Clerks of court - Discretionary or ministerial duties 3347
Clerks of court - Entry of default judgment 3352
Clerks of court - Filing of papers 3353
Clerks of court - Miscellaneous clerks of court acts 3358
Clerks of court - Postconviction relief 3354
Clerks of court - Referees 3355

Clerks of court - Summons 3356
Clerks of court - Transcripts 3357
Commissions and commissioners 3359
Commitments, clerks of court 3351
Common law, witnesses 3405
Conciliation court officials 3360
Conservators 3361
Contempt proceeding officials 3362
Court reporters 3363
Deposition officers 3364
Directors 3365
Disciplinary hearing officials, prison officials 3389
Discretionary or ministerial duties, clerks of court 3347
Education and school officials 3366, 3367
Education and school officials - Generally 3366
Education and school officials - Attorneys 3367
Employment officials 3368
Entry of default judgment, clerks of court 3352
Execution of court orders, police officers 3386
Factors considered 3331

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

False testimony, witnesses 3415

Federal immunity compared, probation officers 3396
Filing of papers, clerks of court 3353
Fire marshals, witnesses 3408
Friends of the court 3369
General court of justice officials 3370
Governors 3371
Grand jury witnesses 3409
Grievance proceeding officials, prison officials 3390
Guardians ad litem 3372
Hospital review boards 3372a
Investigators 3373
Jurors 3374
Jury officials 3375
Law clerks, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials 3418
Malicious prosecutions, witnesses 3416
Marshals 3376
Mayors 3377
Medical boards 3378
Mental hospital officials 3379
Miscellaneous clerks of court acts 3358

Miscellaneous judicial and quasi-judicial officials 3417
Miscellaneous officials, prison officials 3393
Municipal officials, witnesses 3410
Nurses, prison officials 3391a
Parole boards and members 3380
Parole officers 3381
Parole officials, witnesses 3411
Physicians 3382
Physicians, prison officials 3391
Police officers 3383-3386, 3412
- Police officers - Generally 3383
- Police officers - Applications for search warrants 3385
- Police officers - Execution of court orders 3386
- Police officers - Sheriffs 3384
- Police officers - Witnesses 3412

Postconviction relief, clerks of court 3354
Pretrial service officers 3387
Prison officials 3388-3393, 3413
- Prison officials - Generally 3388
- Prison officials - Disciplinary hearing officials 3389
- Prison officials - Grievance proceeding officials 3390

Prison officials - Miscellaneous officials 3393
- Prison officials - Nurses 3391a
- Prison officials - Physicians 3391
- Prison officials - Wardens 3392
- Prison officials - Witnesses 3413

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Private attorneys 3339
Private citizens, witnesses 3406
Probate proceeding officials 3394
Probation officers 3395, 3396
Probation officers - Generally 3395
Probation officers - Federal immunity compared 3396
Psychiatrists 3397
Psychologists 3398
Public defenders 3399
Public defenders, witnesses 3414
Receivers 3400
Referees 3401
Referees, clerks of court 3355
School officials 3366, 3367
Sheriffs, police officers 3384
Special counsel 3402

Special masters 3403
Summons, clerks of court 3356
Transcripts, clerks of court 3357
Wardens, prison officials 3392
Witnesses 3404-3416
Witnesses - Generally 3404
Witnesses - Child welfare workers 3407
Witnesses - Common law 3405
Witnesses - False testimony 3415
Witnesses - Fire marshals 3408
Witnesses - Grand jury witnesses 3409
Witnesses - Malicious prosecutions 3416
Witnesses - Municipal officials 3410
Witnesses - Parole officials 3411
Witnesses - Police officers 3412
Witnesses - Prison officials 3413
Witnesses - Private citizens 3406
Witnesses - Public defenders 3414

3331. Factors considered, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Whether nonjudicial officers merit quasi-judicial absolute immunity depends on consideration of characteristics of judicial process such as need to assure that individual can perform functions without harassment or intimidation, presence of safeguards that reduce need for private damages actions as means of controlling unconstitutional conduct, insulation from political influence, importance of precedent, adversary nature of process, and correctability of error on appeal. Young v. Selsky, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 41 F.3d 47, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1837, 514 U.S. 1102, 131 L.Ed.2d 756. Judges 36

3332. Administrative hearing officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Administrative hearing officer and administrative prosecutor for New Mexico Board of Medical Examiners were entitled to absolute immunity from liability under §§ 1983 for their roles in revoking physician's state medical license, where state provided sufficient safeguards in regulatory framework, including appeal of Board's decision in state court, to control any potential unconstitutional conduct by officials. Guttman v. Khalsa, D.N.M.2003, 320 F.Supp.2d 1164, affirmed 401 F.3d 1170, vacated 126 S.Ct. 321, 163 L.Ed.2d 29, on remand 446 F.3d 1027. Civil

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Administrative hearing officer, who presided over appeal of determination by Delaware Division of Family Services (DFS) that father had abused his son, and deputy attorney general, who was assigned to serve as counsel to DFS during appeal, were entitled to absolute immunity from father's § 1983 claims; defendants' functions in DFS administrative appeal process were analogous to functions of judges and prosecutors in criminal proceedings. Rodriguez v. Stevenson, D.Del.2002, 243 F.Supp.2d 58. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

3333. Administrators, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Actions of chief administrator of Connecticut courts in supervising superior court judges in connection with state child welfare proceedings fell within his judicial jurisdiction, and thus administrator was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from liability in parents' §§ 1983 suit. Inkel v. Connecticut Dept. of Children and Families, D.Conn.2006, 421 F.Supp.2d 513. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Complaint filed by writers of insufficient funds checks failed to allege cause of action against administrator of county check clearing house under this section, since administrator was acting as a magistrate at all times and thus had judicial immunity. Gary v. Spires, D.C.S.C.1979, 473 F.Supp. 878. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State Supreme Court justices, state attorney general, solicitor general, secretary of state and administrator director of state board of professional responsibility were immune from suit by disbarred attorney under this section alleging that state Supreme Court's decision refusing to place attorney's name on ballot for position of justice of state Supreme Court violated his federal constitutional rights. Peterson v. Knutson, D.C.Minn.1973, 367 F.Supp. 515, affirmed 505 F.2d 736. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Even though defendant, a deputy court administrator, did not deny claim that he set new bail requirements for plaintiff in bench warrant proceeding, defendant, while acting in a judicial capacity in setting bail, was immune from suit under this section charging restraint of liberty and invidious discrimination. Jackson v. Hammock, E.D.Pa.1971, 330 F.Supp. 1124. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Administrator of state division of hearings and appeals was entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 arising from his refusal to overturn ALJ's decision to revoke parolee's parole; administrator made discretionary decision based upon record presented to him from parole revocation hearing, acting similarly to judge ruling on appeal based upon underlying record. Smith v. Schwarz, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2002, 46 Fed.Appx. 374, 2002 WL 31050123, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3334. Aldermen, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

City aldermen acted in judicial capacity in voting to impeach mayor and their function as board of impeachment was sufficiently comparable to "classic" adjudication so as to justify their absolute immunity from personal liability for § 1983 damages; although aldermen were elected officials, and to that extent were not insulated from political influence, impeachment proceedings were essentially judicial or adjudicatory in nature, municipal impeachment proceedings were subject to extensive procedural safeguards under Missouri law and as adjudicators in impeachment proceedings, aldermen had to be fair and impartial. Brown v. Griesenauer, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1992, 970 F.2d 431. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Neither California State Board of Pharmacy nor its executive director was entitled to absolute prosecutorial or judicial immunity in §§ 1983 action brought by licensed pharmacist and wholesaler of pharmaceuticals, which did not seek any monetary damages, but only declaratory and injunctive relief to enjoin a violation of federal law allegedly arising from attempt revoke or suspend pharmacist's pharmaceutical license and wholesaler's permit. Adibi v. California State Bd. of Pharmacy, N.D.Cal.2005, 393 F.Supp.2d 999. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Neither city nor alderpersons were entitled to quasi-judicial immunity from liability in § 1983 action brought by tavern license applicant who claimed that denial of his application violated equal protection; fairly unbounded nature of inquiry in granting license distinguished it from anything that could properly be termed judicial. Herro v. City of Milwaukee, E.D.Wis.1993, 817 F.Supp. 768. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3335. Arbitrators, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Arbitrator by breaking deadlock at issue had no interest in outcome of employees' benefit plan and, his purpose being "functionally comparable" to that of judge, he was protected by arbitral immunity from liability for acts committed while serving in his official capacity to break deadlock between trustees. International Union, United Auto., Aerospace, and Agr. Implement Workers of America and its Locals 656 and 985 v. Greyhound Lines, Inc., C.A.6 (Mich.) 1983, 701 F.2d 1181. Arbitration 47

Arbitrators who found against property owner in assumpsit proceeding were entitled to absolute judicial immunity with respect to property owner's claim for damages arising out of events leading to sheriff's sale of property owner's land, which claim was brought under this section. Raitport v. Provident Nat. Bank, E.D.Pa.1978, 451 F.Supp. 522. Conspiracy 13

3336. Attorney disciplinary officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

Individual who acted solely in the performance of his duties as executive secretary under the state rules for admission to the bar and discipline of attorneys was entitled to the same quasi-judicial immunity as prosecutors enjoy and persons who were represented by an attorney who is the subject of a disciplinary proceeding thus could not recover from the executive secretary for his alleged interference with their right to be represented by the attorney and their right to court access. Kissell v. Breskow, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1978, 579 F.2d 425. Civil Rights 1376(8)

The state Circuit Court, the judges thereof and members of the grievance committee of the State Bar of Michigan were acting within their statutory powers in disbarment proceedings and were immune from liability for damages for any alleged violation in proceedings under this section. Ginger v. Circuit Court for Wayne County, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1967, 372 F.2d 621, certiorari denied 87 S.Ct. 2061, 387 U.S. 935, 18 L.Ed.2d 998. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Chair of Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers, and special hearing officer who conducted disciplinary investigation and proceedings against attorney, were entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from liability, in attorney's §§ 1983 claim, alleging that administrative disciplinary proceedings violated attorney's civil rights; the chair and the hearing officer performed traditional adjudicatory function by determining whether to recommend attorney for disciplinary sanctions after making factual and legal determinations, the act of recommending disciplinary sanctions would likely stimulate a litigious reaction from the attorney, multiple levels of review of their decisions existed, and attorney made no allegations concerning their conduct outside their roles as adjudicators. Johnson v. Board of Bar Overseers of Mass., D.Mass.2004, 324 F.Supp.2d 276. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Judicial immunity precluded any claim for damages in civil rights action brought by attorney against Georgia judges, and the State Bar, arising from disciplinary action, as state bar disciplinary proceedings are judicial in nature; State Bar was agent of the Georgia Supreme Court and punishment imposed by State Bar was a judicial act; moreover, it was Georgia Supreme Court, and not the State Bar, that ordered suspension of attorney. Cohran v. State Bar of Georgia, N.D.Ga.1992, 790 F.Supp. 1568. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Members of Michigan Attorney Discipline Board were performing quasi-judicial functions when they prepared and distributed notices in disciplinary proceedings and, thus, members were entitled to absolute immunity from liability for alleged civil rights violations in action by attorney who claimed that he did not receive notice of his suspension.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Eston v. Van Bolt, E.D.Mich.1990, 728 F.Supp. 1336. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Even if federal court had jurisdiction over attorney's § 1983 claim against members of attorney grievance commission, attorney could not maintain § 1983 action; members of staff were performing quasi-judicial function delegated by state Supreme Court and legislature and thus, were entitled to same immunity from suit available to Supreme Court. Lepley v. Dresser, W.D.Mich.1988, 681 F.Supp. 418. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Attorney General of the United States and his assistants, various United States attorneys and their assistants, state Attorneys General and their assistants, state district attorneys, and their assistants, supporting court personnel and law enforcement officials enjoyed quasi-judicial immunity with respect to actions which were alleged to have deprived plaintiff of right to have unlicensed lay counsel assist them in court proceedings. Turner v. American Bar Ass'n, N.D.Tex.1975, 407 F.Supp. 451, affirmed 539 F.2d 715, affirmed 542 F.2d 56. Attorney General 8; District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10; Officers And Public Employees 114

3337. ---- Bar associations and members, attorney disciplinary officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Members of Florida State Bar acting as agents of Supreme Court in connection with disciplinary proceeding were entitled to absolute immunity in § 1983 action. Carroll v. Gross, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1993, 984 F.2d 392, rehearing denied 996 F.2d 316, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 254, 510 U.S. 893, 126 L.Ed.2d 206. Civil Rights 1376(8)

County bar association, its committees and members were immune from suit for money damages brought by attorneys whom bar association sought to discipline; bar association and its committees acted as arms of Supreme Court of Ohio in performing function for which court and its justices were immune. Berger v. Cuyahoga County Bar Ass'n, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 983 F.2d 718, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 2416, 508 U.S. 940, 124 L.Ed.2d 639. Judges 36

As an arm of the Washington Supreme Court in connection with the disciplinary proceedings against attorney, the Washington Bar Association was an integral part of the judicial process and therefore entitled to the same immunity from suit under this section which is afforded to prosecuting attorneys in the state. Clark v. State of Wash., C.A.9 (Wash.) 1966, 366 F.2d 678. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3338. Attorneys general, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

State attorney general (AG) was absolutely immune from liability on state correctional officer's §§ 1983 claim against him alleging that AG violated his rights under Equal Protection Clause by deciding not to represent him and provide for his defense in a §§ 1983 excessive-force action brought against him by an inmate; in deciding not to represent officer, AG was serving as an advocate of the state, his decision directly affected application of state legal resources, it was not in the public interest for AG to be constrained in making such decisions by potential liability in suits for damages, and officer could recover post-litigation reimbursement under Connecticut state statute if he was found in inmate's action to have acted within scope of his employment and not to have acted wantonly, maliciously, or recklessly. Mangiafico v. Blumenthal, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2006, 471 F.3d 391.

Indiana Attorney General, when reviewing contracts pursuant to IC 4-13-2-14, was acting in a quasi-judicial capacity and therefore entitled to absolute immunity from liability for damages; thus, the Indiana Attorney General enjoyed absolute immunity with respect to Section 1983 claim based on his refusal to approve a proposed contract between the state and a day-care nursery. Mother Goose Nursery Schools, Inc. v. Sendak, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1985, 770 F.2d 668, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 884, 474 U.S. 1102, 88 L.Ed.2d 919. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State attorney general was entitled to absolute immunity from a §§ 1983 claim that was based upon attorney general's decision not to defend state correctional officer in prisoner's pending civil lawsuit involving correctional officer's conduct. Mangiafico v. Blumenthal, D.Conn.2005, 358 F.Supp.2d 6. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3339. Private attorneys, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Private attorney who was informally sworn in as "special" assistant district attorney was not acting as public official under Tennessee law when he allegedly engaged in unconstitutional conduct against owners and employees of nightclubs offering nude dancing, and thus was not entitled to absolute prosecutorial or quasi-judicial immunity against § 1983 liability for his acts. Cooper v. Parrish, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 2000, 203 F.3d 937, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 185, 531 U.S. 877, 148 L.Ed.2d 128. Civil Rights 1375

3340. Bail officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Police officers had absolute judicial immunity when they set bail for suspect arrested for threatening, precluding § 1983 suit against officers for charging excessive bail. Walczyk v. Rio, D.Conn.2004, 339 F.Supp.2d 385. Civil Rights 1376(6)

There was evidence that town bail commissioner, in setting bail for offense charged against plaintiff, was following what apparently was judge's instructions in setting bail; therefore, even though plaintiff's offense, being a civil matter, was not a bailable offense, bail commissioner was entitled to immunity from plaintiff's suit under this section, because it would be manifestly unfair to subject bail commissioner to suit in matter over which she had no discretion, notwithstanding her quasi-judicial immunity. Thompson v. Sanborn, D.C.N.H.1983, 568 F.Supp. 385. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3341. Bailiffs, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Remand was required in civil rights action where record did not show whether all of bailiff's challenged conduct in communicating with jury and handling evidence was done under trial judge's authority and direction, so as to be subject to absolute quasi-judicial immunity. Robinson v. Freeze, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1994, 15 F.3d 107. Federal Courts 942

3342. Bankruptcy trustees, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Person acting as trustee in bankruptcy and official acting under authority of bankruptcy judge, was entitled to derived judicial immunity from liability to debtor because person was performing integral part of judicial process, absent evidence person acted outside limits of derived judicial immunity. Lonneker Farms, Inc. v. Klobucher, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1986, 804 F.2d 1096. Bankruptcy 3011

3343. Bar associations and members, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Commissioners of the State Bar of Alabama were not entitled to total, absolute immunity in civil rights case. Foley v. Alabama State Bar, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1981, 648 F.2d 355. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Members of committee on character and fitness for admission to the New York state bar in the First Department of the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division were entitled to absolute judicial immunity from §§ 1983 claims brought against them by bar applicant arising out of hearing on application; Appellate Division's designation of authority required members of committee to act in a quasi-prosecutorial, and an adjudicatory, or quasi-judicial, capacity. Roe v. Johnson, S.D.N.Y.2004, 334 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State bar officials were entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity in § 1983 action accusing them of accepting fraudulent documents, failing to record proceedings, failing to render timely decision, conducting fraudulent appeal hearing, and inhibiting plaintiffs from talking about proceedings. Samuel v. Michaud, D.Idaho 1996, 980 F.Supp. 1381, affirmed 129 F.3d 127. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

In federal civil rights action challenging Alabama's bar examination and admission process, past and present presidents of Alabama State Bar, State Bar's executive director, State Bar's past and present admissions secretaries, and president of Alabama State Board of Bar Examiners, were entitled to absolute judicial immunity as to those claims for damages against them in their individual capacities. McFarland v. Folsom, M.D.Ala.1994, 854 F.Supp. 862. Civil Rights 1376(8)

President of Michigan Bar Association, as chief executive officer of an arm of the Michigan Supreme Court, was entitled to judicial and quasi-judicial immunity from damages in § 1983 suit. Moralez v. Thiede, E.D.Mich.1993, 828 F.Supp. 492. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Members of State Board of Bar Examiners were entitled to absolute immunity in applicant's suit for damages alleging that, notwithstanding that Board acted within statutorily prescribed time limit, total time taken by chairman and full Board in determining on applicant's appeal that he had passed the exam violated due process because of urgency of applicant's situation, as a decision's timing is functionally intertwined with decision-making process itself, which enjoys protection of absolute immunity. Rosenfeld v. Clark, D.C.Vt.1984, 586 F.Supp. 1332, affirmed 760 F.2d 253. Civil Rights 1376(3)

A state bar association is integral part of judicial process and is therefore immune from suit under this section. Louis v. Supreme Court of Nevada, D.C.Nev.1980, 490 F.Supp. 1174. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Federal court had jurisdiction to hear law school graduates' claim of racial discrimination on part of state bar examiners; examiners were not immune from suit on ground that they were officials of the judiciary. Newsome v. Dominique, E.D.Mo.1978, 455 F.Supp. 1373. Civil Rights 1376(8); Federal Courts 225

Since admission of individual to practice of law is regarded as judicial function, the doctrine of quasi-judicial immunity bars claim under this section against Louisiana State Bar Association. Moity v. Louisiana State Bar Ass'n, E.D.La.1976, 414 F.Supp. 180, affirmed 537 F.2d 1141, rehearing denied 540 F.2d 1085.

Bar association, having instituted summary proceeding to adjudge author of book pertaining to estate planning in contempt for the unauthorized practice of law, was immune from suit by author seeking damages on theory that contempt proceeding was illegal and unconstitutional restraint on freedom of speech and the press guaranteed by U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1 and by this section. Dacey v. New York County Lawyers' Ass'n, S.D.N.Y.1968, 290 F.Supp. 835, affirmed 423 F.2d 188, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 1819, 398 U.S. 929, 26 L.Ed.2d 92.

3344. Boards and board members, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Members of township's board of supervisors were entitled to quasi-judicial absolute immunity, in their individual capacities, in §§ 1983 suit alleging due process violations arising out of denial of permit application; there was need to assure that function performed by members could be performed without harassment or intimidation, there were many procedural safeguards against members' improper conduct, members were removable only for cause, board was required by statute to consider land-use standards in governing zoning ordinance, board's cases were adversarial as matter of law, and board's decisions were appealable as of right. Dotzel v. Ashbridge, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 438 F.3d 320. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Members of Arkansas Veterinary Medical Examining Board were protected by absolute quasi-judicial immunity from § 1983 claim of veterinarian found to have practiced without license, even if veterinarian had liberty interest in practicing veterinary medicine; Board performed functions comparable to duties of courts in weighing evidence, making factual determinations, setting sanctions and issuing written decisions, Board's actions were likely to result in lawsuits for damages by disappointed parties, and sufficient safeguards existed in Arkansas regulatory framework to control unconstitutional conduct. Dunham v. Wadley, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1999, 195 F.3d 1007, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 60, 531 U.S. 819, 148 L.Ed.2d 26. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State Personnel Board of Review (SPBR) members were absolutely immune from suit for money damages in their individual capacities based on alleged violation of due process rights of state employee, as they performed adjudicatory function within administrative agency. Collyer v. Darling, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1996, 98 F.3d 211, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 2439, 520 U.S. 1267, 138 L.Ed.2d 199. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Individual members of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (ABCB) were entitled to absolute judicial immunity in § 1983 claim brought by liquor licensee alleging that suspension of his license by board violated his civil rights. Brossette v. City of Baton Rouge, M.D.La.1993, 837 F.Supp. 759, affirmed 29 F.3d 623, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 443, 513 U.S. 971, 130 L.Ed.2d 353. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Chairman of county construction board of appeals had absolute judicial immunity from § 1983 action brought by landowners claiming that chairman had caused board to not consider landowners' appeal from county construction officer's decision, so as to allow officer time to bring criminal action against landowners; board was quasi-judicial body, whose members had immunity for acts other than those in clear absence of all jurisdiction. Akins v. Deptford Tp., D.N.J.1993, 813 F.Supp. 1098, affirmed 995 F.2d 215, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 478, 510 U.S. 981, 126 L.Ed.2d 429, affirmed 17 F.3d 1428. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Executive director and board of managers of youth study center, who were not involved in adjudicatory process associated with juvenile delinquency proceeding but were responsible for determining conditions of confinement and care that would be provided to youth study center residents, were not sufficiently involved in judicial process of the family court to warrant absolute immunity for their conduct on theory of absolute "quasi-judicial" immunity in juveniles' civil rights action challenging conditions of confinement and treatment at youth study center. Santiago v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1977, 435 F.Supp. 136. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Zoning officials in their individual capacities were not entitled to absolute immunity, in landowner's §§ 1983 lawsuit under Fourteenth Amendment alleging violation of its procedural and substantive due process rights, to extent that officials were not actually performing quasi-judicial functions. Lonzetta Trucking and Excavating Co. v. Schan, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 144 Fed.Appx. 206, 2005 WL 730363, Unreported, on remand 2005 WL 3277996. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3345. Child welfare workers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Supervisor's acts of supervising and managing social worker's case involving placement of child in foster home required exercise of reason and professional judgment, and thus were discretionary acts entitled to official immunity in §§ 1983 action brought against supervisor after child died from abuse after being placed in foster home. Porter v. Williams, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 436 F.3d 917, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Social worker was entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability for his testimony as witness in child custody dispute, which involved acting within scope of his role within judicial process. Dornheim v. Sholes, C.A.8 (N.D.) 2005, 430 F.3d 919, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2031. Civil Rights 1375

State social workers were entitled to absolute immunity from §§ 1983 liability for initiating and maintaining termination of parental rights proceedings against mother in which infant child was removed from mother's home after discovering that child had seventeen broken bones. Abdouch v. Burger, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2005, 426 F.3d 982, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Court-appointed child custody evaluator enjoyed judicial rather than prosecutorial immunity from federal civil rights liability in acting as "arm of the court" in fulfilling quasi-judicial role similar to that of guardian ad litem in interviewing parties, administering tests, and making recommendation at court's request; evaluator functioned more like witness than prosecutor, did not initiate proceedings, and was not forced to make "snap judgments," as is often the case with prosecutors. Hughes v. Long, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2001, 242 F.3d 121. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

State caseworkers who placed two dependent children in home where they were sexually abused had absolute immunity under § 1983 from liability to children and their father, despite claim that caseworkers' involvement was not immune because it occurred during "post-adjudication reunification phase of the dependency" proceedings. Babcock v. Tyler, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1989, 884 F.2d 497, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1118, 493 U.S. 1072, 107 L.Ed.2d 1025. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State family service workers were performing in quasi-judicial function in filing child abuse petition, and as such, were entitled to absolute immunity from liability in civil rights action brought by child's parents alleging that workers had failed to adequately investigate report that child had been sexually abused and that workers' acts resulted in defamation, invasion of privacy, abuse of process and malicious prosecution. Salyer v. Patrick, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1989, 874 F.2d 374. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Social workers' removal of foster child without giving prior agency hearing to preadoptive foster parents was not integral to judicial process and was not related to advocacy before judicial body, and, thus, social worker was not entitled to absolute immunity in § 1983 action; social workers' removal of child was based upon their perceived authority to do so under preadoption agreement with foster parent. Spielman v. Hildebrand, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1989, 873 F.2d 1377. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Child protective services worker was entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from liability for damages stemming from worker's apprehension of newborn child at hospital pursuant to valid court order. Coverdell v. Department of Social and Health Services, State of Wash., C.A.9 (Wash.) 1987, 834 F.2d 758. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(3)

Juvenile officer was absolutely immune from liability for his role in initiating juvenile court proceedings, as his action was functionally comparable to that of prosecutor. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Child welfare worker was not entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability under § 1983, where his alleged tortious conduct took place during investigative, not prosecutorial, phase of child custody proceeding; he contacted city attorney for purpose of having her obtain custody order to remove children from plaintiff's custody. Miller v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1997, 954 F.Supp. 1056, affirmed 174 F.3d 368. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Social service worker performing duties related to the filing of child custody and abuse proceedings has absolute prosecutorial immunity, caseworkers are protected by prosecutorial immunity in the context of child welfare proceedings, such as seeking and obtaining court order for the seizure and placement of a child, and caseworker who executes the court order is protected by absolute quasi-judicial immunity. Kruse v. State of Hawai'i, D.Hawai'i 1994, 857 F.Supp. 741, affirmed 68 F.3d 331. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10; Judges 36

State child care workers did not have absolute immunity from liability in § 1983 action in connection with their emergency removal of child from parents for 96 hours under Connecticut statute authorizing removal without court order when there exists probable cause to believe child is in immediate physical danger from his surroundings; officials' function was not so intimately associated with adjudicative process as to be similarly immunized. Doe v. Connecticut Dept. of Children and Youth Services, D.Conn.1989, 712 F.Supp. 277, affirmed 911 F.2d 868. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Social caseworker was absolutely immune from liability for allegedly making insufficient investigation prior to his initiation of child dependency proceedings. Fanning v. Montgomery County Children and Youth Services, E.D.Pa.1988, 702 F.Supp. 1184. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Social worker was entitled to absolute immunity from parents' federal civil rights action arising from social worker's substantiating child abuse report without any evidence of misconduct by parents; determination that there was reasonable cause to believe child abuse had occurred was step in process of possibly initiating formal proceedings against parents and, as such, was intimately associated with judicial phase of legal process and, therefore, protected by absolute immunity. Donald M v. Matava, D.Mass.1987, 668 F.Supp. 703. Civil Rights 1376(2)

County social workers who removed children from their parents' homes and custody and placed children in foster care pursuant to child abuse statutes of Colorado were entitled only to good-faith immunity, not absolute immunity, in civil rights action brought against them by parents; declining to follow Kurzawa v. Mueller, 732 F.2d 1456 (6th Cir.); Whelehan v. County of Monroe, 558 F.Supp. 1093 (W.D.N.Y.). Czikalla v. Malloy, D.Colo.1986, 649 F.Supp. 1212. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3346. Clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

Inmate's § 1983 claims against court clerks for refusing inmate's request for records on direct appeal and for alleged delay in scheduling appeal related to judicial functions, and thus, clerks were entitled to absolute judicial immunity from claims. Rodriguez v. Weprin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 116 F.3d 62. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Both state court judge and his clerk enjoyed absolute immunity from suit under this section. Slotnick v. Staviskey, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1977, 560 F.2d 31, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 1268, 434 U.S. 1077, 55 L.Ed.2d 783. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerks of court are entitled to immunity from suit the same as judges. Davis v. McAteer, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1970, 431 F.2d 81. See, also, Zimmerman v. Spears, D.C.Tex.1977, 428 F.Supp. 759, affirmed 565 F.2d 310. Clerks Of Courts 72

Judge's law clerk was entitled to absolute immunity under the quasi-judicial immunity doctrine for actions taken pursuant to judge's directive and instructions. DeFerro v. Coco, E.D.Pa.1989, 719 F.Supp. 379. Courts 55

Judicial immunity protects not only judges but other officers of the court from damages claims under this section for acts committed in their official capacity. Glucksman v. Birns, S.D.N.Y.1975, 398 F.Supp. 1343. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of county court was immune under judicial immunity doctrine from liability in civil rights action for acts performed in his official capacity. Pritt v. Johnson, M.D.Pa.1967, 264 F.Supp. 167. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3347. ---- Discretionary or ministerial duties, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

A clerk of a federal court may receive immunity in his own right for the performance of a discretionary act or he may be covered by the immunity of the judge because he is performing a ministerial function at the discretion of the judge. Williams v. Wood, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1980, 612 F.2d 982. Clerks Of Courts 72

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Although judicial immunity might have extended to court clerk in exercise of her discretionary duties, where it was alleged that clerk did not take action in question in performance of her duties, but rather acted contrary to explicit statutory provisions, there was no basis for extending judicial immunity. McGhee v. Moyer, W.D.Va.1973, 60 F.R.D. 578. Clerks Of Courts 72

3348. ---- Arrest warrants, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Deputy clerk of court was entitled to absolute immunity for signing and issuing invalid arrest warrant regardless of whether judge instructed her to do so; those acts were integral parts of criminal justice process and, although clerks were not authorized to issue arrest warrants, they were permitted to sign such warrants. Boyer v. County of Washington, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1992, 971 F.2d 100, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 2966, 508 U.S. 974, 125 L.Ed.2d 666, leave to file for rehearing denied 114 S.Ct. 1344, 510 U.S. 1216, 127 L.Ed.2d 691. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3349. ---- Bench warrants, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Clerk of municipal court who issued erroneous bench warrant on judge's order was absolutely immune from liability; issuance of warrant was a judicial function. Foster v. Walsh, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1988, 864 F.2d 416. Clerks Of Courts 72

3350. ---- Bail, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Even if deputy city court clerk's setting of homeless man's bail somehow proximately caused homeless man's alleged unconstitutional detention, clerk would be entitled to absolute immunity because setting bail was quasi-judicial activity. White by Swafford v. Gerbitz, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1989, 892 F.2d 457. Clerks Of Courts 72

Plaintiffs' charge that clerk of municipal court of Wooster, Ohio improperly failed to fix bail for one of plaintiffs related to an act performed by clerk within scope of his official quasi-judicial duties, and hence clerk, who was named as a defendant in suit brought under this section, was entitled to immunity. Denman v. Leedy, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1973, 479 F.2d 1097, 66 O.O.2d 368. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of court who performed duties required by statute in connection with issuance of bail piece had judicial immunity and could not be sued under this section by accused whose bail had been revoked without notice. Smith v. Rosenbaum, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1972, 460 F.2d 1019. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3351. ---- Commitments, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Court clerk who filled out plaintiff's commitment papers, state hospital superintendent responsible for plaintiff during his commitment, and sheriff, who had plaintiff delivered to the hospital, acted under official directives of judge and thus were immune for liability for the alleged deprivation of plaintiff's civil rights. Slotnick v. Garfinkle, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1980, 632 F.2d 163. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of court who acted pursuant to his official position in issuing writ to take woman into custody pending involuntary commitment proceedings was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity from any civil rights liability to woman's estate when woman died in cell. Boston v. Lafayette County, Miss., N.D.Miss.1990, 744 F.Supp. 746, affirmed 933 F.2d 1003. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3352. ---- Entry of default judgment, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Prothonotary was entitled to absolute immunity with regard to mortgagors' suit for damages for entering default judgment in mortgage foreclosure proceeding when service of writ on which judgment was entered was constitutionally defective, since under Delaware Superior Court Civil Rule 55(b)(1) prothonotary is given authority to enter default judgment in scire facias sur mortgage proceedings, and thus prothonotary was functioning in a judicial capacity when she entered default judgment against mortgagors. Shipley v. First Federal Sav. and Loan Ass'n of Delaware, D.C.Del.1985, 619 F.Supp. 421. Clerks Of Courts 72

3353. ---- Filing of papers, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Court clerks were entitled to absolute immunity against § 1983 action brought by two inmates, who alleged that clerks had deprived them of their constitutional right to access to courts by refusing to file inmates' civil suit in Indiana Superior Court; clerks' acts were done at judicial direction, and were nonmechanical functions integral to judicial process. Kincaid v. Vail, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1992, 969 F.2d 594, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1002, 506 U.S. 1062, 122 L.Ed.2d 152. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of state court who was alleged to have impeded the filing of papers by plaintiff was entitled to no more protection in action under this section than any other state ministerial functionary who failed to discharge a mandatory duty. McCray v. State of Md., C.A.4 (Md.) 1972, 456 F.2d 1. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Assuming clerks of court deliberately violated litigant's constitutional rights to due process and access to the courts by failing respond to motions and inquiries about documents filed with town court, litigant's §§ 1983 claims were barred by absolute immunity; clerks were assisting judges in performing essential judicial functions when they allegedly refused to acknowledge the litigant's motions or to schedule his court proceedings. Argentieri v. Clerk of Court for Judge Kmiotek, W.D.N.Y.2006, 420 F.Supp.2d 162. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of county construction board of appeals had absolute judicial immunity in connection with civil rights suit alleging that she had intentionally failed to file landowners' appeal from county construction officer's decision, so as to give officer time to commence criminal proceedings against landowners; board of appeals was quasi-judicial body whose clerks were entitled to such immunity for activities integrally related to judicial process. Akins v. Deptford Tp., D.N.J.1993, 813 F.Supp. 1098, affirmed 995 F.2d 215, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 478, 510 U.S. 981, 126 L.Ed.2d 429, affirmed 17 F.3d 1428. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Assistant deputy court clerk was entitled to derivative absolute judicial immunity for conduct taken in response to judicial order in performing or refusing to perform ministerial acts of filing pleadings or responding to requests for information sought by inmate. Clay v. Yates, E.D.Va.1992, 809 F.Supp. 417, affirmed 36 F.3d 1091. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of court, who was compelled by state law to require plaintiff to pay a fee before accepting any motions in connection with pending criminal action, was absolutely immune from civil suit for damages under § 1983. Pokrandt v. Shields, E.D.Pa.1991, 773 F.Supp. 758. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Although absolute immunity may be available to protect discretionary actions of a court clerk, such as setting bail amounts, only qualified immunity should be accorded clerks performing ministerial duties, such as filing papers and preparing records. Marty's Adult World of New Britain, Inc. v. Guida, D.C.Conn.1978, 453 F.Supp. 810. Clerks Of Courts 72

Since the action complained of was ministerial, clerk of court was not immune from suit for damages under this section on ground that he was a judicial officer, with respect to alleged failure to transmit supplemental pleading to appellate court in a criminal case. Norwood v. Solomon, E.D.Mo.1977, 431 F.Supp. 380. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Even if alleged failure to file petition was patently violative of complainant's civil rights, Supreme Court prothonotary allegedly acting pursuant to court order and direction in allegedly failing so to file, could not be held civilly liable therefor. Ginsburg v. Stern, W.D.Pa.1954, 125 F.Supp. 596, affirmed 225 F.2d 245. Clerks Of Courts 72

State court clerk was entitled to judicial immunity from liability for her conduct in failing to file state prisoner's court documents, in prisoner's §§ 1983 in forma pauperis action, seeking damages for alleged deprivation of right of access to courts, and violation of due process and equal protection, where clerk acted pursuant to specific instruction of state court judge, and complaint did not give any indication that prisoner sought injunctive relief or an order requiring clerk to file his court documents. Guiden v. Morrow, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2004, 92 Fed.Appx. 663, 2004 WL 296983, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3354. ---- Postconviction relief, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Clerk of state court was not entitled to immunity for his alleged concealment of order vacating defendant's conviction entered pursuant to defendant's postconviction petition. Lowe v. Letsinger, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1985, 772 F.2d 308. Clerks Of Courts 72

3355. ---- Referees, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

N.Y. McKinney's Judiciary Law § 251-a which provides that no person holding office of confidential clerk of law secretary to justice of supreme court shall be appointed referee in any action or proceeding instituted in supreme court is not jurisdictional, and therefore, confidential clerk of judge who served as referee in action challenging election nominating petition did not act without jurisdiction, but, at most, in excess of it; thus, since acting in excess of jurisdiction does not deprive one of judicial immunity, law clerk was immune from suit based upon her actions in connection with election petition suit. Weiss v. Feigenbaum, E.D.N.Y.1982, 558 F.Supp. 265. Judges 36

3356. ---- Summons, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Court clerks in issuing writs of summons which brought plaintiff tenants into court for distraint of rent cases, were performing their duties under rules of court having effect of law and were therefore immune from action by tenants for such acts. Steinpreis v. Shook, C.A.4 (Md.) 1967, 377 F.2d 282, certiorari denied 88 S.Ct. 811, 389 U.S. 1057, 19 L.Ed.2d 858. Clerks Of Courts 72

3357. ---- Transcripts, clerks of court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Clerk of state circuit court did not have absolute immunity from equitable relief in inmate's suit against clerk for failure to provide inmate with transcript of his criminal trial for use on appeal. McCullough v. Horton, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1995, 69 F.3d 918. Clerks Of Courts 72

Where, in state proceeding, circuit judge, directing verdict for defendant at conclusion of evidence, court reporter, refusing to give plaintiff transcript of trial, and court clerk, refusing to give plaintiff transcript of record, were all acting in discharge of their official duties, they were protected by doctrine of judicial immunity. Dieu v. Norton, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1969, 411 F.2d 761. Clerks Of Courts 72; Courts 57(.5); Judges 36

Acts charged to individual defendants, a court reporter and a court clerk, alleging that they refused to furnish plaintiff with portion of state criminal trial transcript, were acts performed in their capacity as quasijudicial officers which clothed them with judicial immunity. Stewart v. Minnick, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1969, 409 F.2d 826. Clerks Of Courts 72; Courts 57(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3358. ---- Miscellaneous clerks of court acts, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

State-court clerk who, on his own initiative, refused to file prison inmate's pro se marital dissolution pleadings, under mistaken belief that counsel was required to prosecute action, was not entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity in inmate's §§1983 action alleging denial of his constitutional right of access to the courts; clerk was not acting in functionally comparable way to a judge, since his duty under state law was purely ministerial one of maintaining official record, and secondly there was no evidence that clerk had acted at direction of any judicial officer. Snyder v. Nolen, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 380 F.3d 279, rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Clerk of federal district court was protected by absolute immunity for actions he performed in connection with allegedly improper handling of supersedeas bond, as those acts were within his quasi-judicial duties, even if he deceived litigant regarding status of bond and improperly conducted hearing to assess costs, in coordination with judge. Moore v. Brewster, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 96 F.3d 1240, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 963, 519 U.S. 1118, 136 L.Ed.2d 848. Judges 36

Defendant was immune from § 1983 suit based upon his conduct as county circuit court clerk in executing garnishments against plaintiff. Ortman v. Thomas, E.D.Mich.1995, 894 F.Supp. 1104, affirmed 99 F.3d 807. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Law clerks who were performing their judicial functions of assisting judges and hearing examiners in New York Family Court had absolute immunity, pursuant to judicial immunity doctrine, from § 1983 suit. Fariello v. Campbell, E.D.N.Y.1994, 860 F.Supp. 54. Civil Rights 1376(8)

County prothonotary did not have absolute immunity from suit by state court litigant seeking to recover interest on funds paid into court; prothonotary's action had not been taken at direction of judgment or under court order, as required for absolute immunity. Rivkin v. County of Montgomery, E.D.Pa.1993, 838 F.Supp. 1009. Clerks Of Courts 72

Judges and court clerk who were named as defendants in civil rights suit, which was brought by citizen who had been prosecuted for littering and dumping, were entitled to judicial immunity and quasi-judicial immunity. Cochran v. Municipal Court of City of Barberton, Summit County, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2003, 91 Fed.Appx. 365, 2003 WL 23095546, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3359. Commissions and commissioners, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Village mayor did not act in the absence of all jurisdiction by suspending bar owner's liquor license, temporarily closing bar, and imposing a fine, and thus, mayor was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity for those actions, in bar owner's §§ 1983 action alleging equal protection and due process violations; although Illinois Liquor Control Act required mayor, as local liquor control commissioner, to comply with certain procedures, such as reducing his decision to writing, and mayor failed to do so, the Act gave the mayor authority to suspend the license, close the bar, and impose the fine. Killinger v. Johnson, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 389 F.3d 765. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Municipal fire and police civil service board and its board members were not entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity in their official capacities, in § 1983 action brought by firefighter alleging violations of his due process and equal protection rights, even if board members were absolutely immune as sued in their individual capacities. Turner v. Houma Mun. Fire and Police Civil Service Bd., C.A.5 (La.) 2000, 229 F.3d 478, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Members of Indiana Civil Rights Commission, which was quasi-judicial adjudicatory body, acted in functionally adjudicatory capacity when they determined that they lacked jurisdiction to review and consider discrimination complaint that attorney had filed against state court judge, and thus were entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from attorney's § 1983 action alleging that Commission members violated due process by dismissing her complaint. Crenshaw v. Baynerd, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1999, 180 F.3d 866, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 374, 528 U.S. 952, 145 L.Ed.2d 292. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Combined function of Oregon Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) of promulgating goals of agency and monitoring compliance was inconsistent with judicial role and supported finding that commissioners performed executive functions for purposes of determining whether they were entitled to absolute immunity from action by property owner. Zamsky v. Hansell, C.A.9 (Or.) 1991, 933 F.2d 677. Zoning And Planning 353.1

Oregon PUC assistant commissioner and deputy commissioner were not entitled to absolute immunity from federal civil rights claims of owner of intrastate trucking company, who maintained that commissioners, during administrative hearing on intrastate trucking applications, interfered in evidence-producing process, had repeated ex parte contacts with hearing officer for purpose of influencing outcome of hearing, and continued irregular and discriminatory actions after hearing was over in attempt to harass owner; although commissioners were acting within scope of their authority, they were not acting in quasi-judicial capacity. Schlegel v. Bebout, C.A.9 (Or.) 1988, 841 F.2d 937. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Actions of the Mississippi State Tax Commission in rescinding previous classification of motel and restaurant property as resort area and in deciding not to renew liquor license were performing actions essentially judicial in nature and were entitled to quasi-judicial immunity from suit. Chiz's Motel and Restaurant, Inc. v. Mississippi State Tax Com'n, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1985, 750 F.2d 1305. Intoxicating Liquors 61(1)

Commissioners appointed by the court to conduct a partition sale of the divorced plaintiffs' property were sufficiently related to the judicial process to entitle them to quasi-judicial absolute immunity from federal suit for damages arising from their conduct in handling sale and in distributing proceeds of sale where the alleged acts of wrongdoing, namely, the improper appointment, the defective advertisement, the illegal participation in the bidding, the unlawful cover-up, and the untruthful reporting to the court, were acts in furtherance of the commissioners' official duties in aid of the court. Ashbrook v. Hoffman, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1980, 617 F.2d 474. Judges 36

County planning commissioners and hearings officer who denied religious organization's request for special use permit were protected by quasi-judicial immunity from organization's § 1983 speech, assembly, religious freedom, due process, and equal protection claims and Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) individual capacity claims; defendants were adjudicating land use dispute and functioning as quasi-judicial body, proceedings were adversarial, parties had right of judicial review, and grant of immunity would prevent impairment of independent and impartial exercise of judgment. Hale O Kaula Church v. Maui Planning Com'n, D.Hawai'i 2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 1056.

Decision of officials of Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities (CHRO) reversing and abandoning first finding of reasonable cause which had been in favor of employee alleging employment discrimination, and its subsequent dismissal of employee's charge for no reasonable cause were quasi-judicial functions, entitled to absolute immunity from employee's § 1983 suit; as part of coordinated state-federal administrative scheme for enforcing the anti-discrimination laws, officials had to be permitted to perform their duties without threat of individual liability for damages. White v. Martin, D.Conn.1998, 26 F.Supp.2d 385, affirmed 198 F.3d 235. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Actions of village official, who was both mayor and liquor commissioner, in suspending restaurant-lounge's liquor license for seven days and imposing $1,000 fine were judicial, and absolutely immune from due process claim asserted under § 1983; moreover, licensee's allegation that official operated pursuant to personal agenda and not in her judicial capacity did not affect her immunity. R & V Pine Tree, Inc. v. Village of Forest Park, N.D.Ill.1996, 947 F.Supp. 342. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Commissioners in Chancery were protected from liability under § 1983 based upon litigation over ownership of certain real estate by doctrine of judicial immunity. Davis v. Hudgins, E.D.Va.1995, 896 F.Supp. 561, affirmed 87 F.3d 1308, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 1440, 520 U.S. 1172, 137 L.Ed.2d 546. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Maine Public Utilities Commission chairman was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from civil rights liability for his alleged usurpation of powers of power company's board of directors in quest to punish former power company executive after he had been prosecuted criminally; regardless of propriety of his actions in that regard, they were sufficiently related to chairman's role as presiding commissioner in adjudicatory proceeding. Scott v. Central Maine Power Co., D.Me.1989, 709 F.Supp. 1176. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State Commissioner of Merit System was not entitled to absolute immunity from public employee's suit under this section on ground that Commissioner's action in denying employee's request for reclassification was quasi-judicial function where Commissioner had no authority to reverse decisions of hearing officer and Commissioner's only duties were to administer rules and regulations of State Personnel Board. Brown v. Ledbetter, N.D.Ga.1983, 569 F.Supp. 170. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Members of Peoria Housing Authority Board of Commissioners, who were named as defendants in action by former employee who alleged that her termination violated due process, were not entitled to absolute, quasi-judicial immunity. Young v. Peoria Housing Authority, C.D.Ill.1979, 479 F.Supp. 1093. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Commissioners conducting hearing of South Carolina Beverage Control Commission were absolutely immune from suit under this section alleging conspiracy to deny plaintiffs a sale and consumption license to sell alcoholic beverages as nonprofit corporation, where commissioners conducted hearing according to state law and denied license after fair and impartial hearing, in which both viewpoints were considered, so that the acts were judicial in nature and were not performed in abuse of discretion. Brown v. DeBruhl, D.C.S.C.1979, 468 F.Supp. 513. Conspiracy 13

Discretionary inaction on part of public service commissioners in failing to grant hearing to customer whose electric service was terminated for nonpayment of a bill was protected under the doctrine of quasi-judicial immunity. Condosta v. Vermont Elec. Co-op., Inc., D.C.Vt.1975, 400 F.Supp. 358. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3360. Conciliation court officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Employees of conciliation court who allegedly refused to allow father visitation rights and attempted to bias foster parents were entitled to quasi-judicial immunity; employees were performing judicial function at direction of court, controversy involved pending case to which they had been assigned, and events at issue arose directly and immediately out of confrontation between employees and parties in that case. Meyers v. Contra Costa County Dept. of Social Services, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1987, 812 F.2d 1154, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 98, 484 U.S. 829, 98 L.Ed.2d 59. Courts 55

3361. Conservators, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Trust officer employed by Department of Veterans' Affairs was immune from liability in civil rights action to recover damages arising out of trust officer's forcible entry into plaintiff's home and the removal of certain personal property, since trust officer was conservator of estate of plaintiff's husband who requested officer to retrieve certain items from the house, officer was informed that house was unoccupied, and officer was told by the State Attorney

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

General that he could remove items requested by plaintiff's husband, and therefore, trust officer was acting pursuant to his court-appointed authority in the performance of his statutory duties. Mosher v. Saalfeld, C.A.9 (Or.) 1978, 589 F.2d 438, certiorari denied 99 S.Ct. 2883, 442 U.S. 941, 61 L.Ed.2d 311. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Where person appointed as conservator under Illinois law was not appointed as general conservator or as an estate conservator but was specifically appointed for sole purpose of consenting to surgery and blood transfusions, he had no discretion, and his liability for blood transfusion which violated ward's religious principles was no greater or less than that of judge who appointed, him, and he enjoyed judicial immunity from suit under this section. Holmes v. Silver Cross Hospital of Joliet, Ill., N.D.Ill.1972, 340 F.Supp. 125. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3362. Contempt proceeding officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

State Supreme Court Justices, state district judges, prosecuting attorneys, clerks of court, sheriffs, law enforcement officers, prison officials and members of state integrated bar were immune from suit under this section for damages allegedly resulting from their performance of official tasks in connection with prosecution of plaintiff for contempt. Rhodes v. Meyer, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1964, 334 F.2d 709, certiorari denied 85 S.Ct. 263, 379 U.S. 915, 13 L.Ed.2d 186. Civil Rights 1376(1)

State court magistrate was performing judicial rather than administrative function when he initiated contempt proceeding against plaintiff, and issued arrest warrant, upon her failure to appear in court or to pay fine on citation for failure to wear seatbelt, for purpose of determining his immunity from § 1983 liability. Howell v. Hofbauer, N.D.Iowa 2000, 123 F.Supp.2d 1178. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3363. Court reporters, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Court reporter was not entitled to absolute immunity from damages liability under § 1983 for failing to produce criminal trial transcript. Hargrove v. Riley, E.D.Wash.2000, 100 F.Supp.2d 1271. Civil Rights 1376(8)

When court reporter transcribed plaintiff's criminal trial, she was performing one of her statutory duties, and so alleged alteration of transcript of trial was within her general subject matter jurisdiction as court reporter; therefore, she was entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity in federal civil rights action. Cook v. Smith, E.D.Pa.1993, 812 F.Supp. 561. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Individual stenographers were entitled to qualified immunity on inmates' claim that delay in filing appellate transcripts violated due process; at time appeals were filed, there was case law suggesting that denial of speedy appeal would not be denial of due process. Mathis v. Bess, S.D.N.Y.1991, 763 F.Supp. 58, reconsideration denied 767 F.Supp. 558. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Court reporters acting in their capacity as quasi-judicial officers are clothed with judicial immunity from liability for money damages in suit under Civil Rights Act and court reporter could not be held liable in damages for refusal to deliver a transcript of child custody hearing to mother where record had been ordered sealed by the court. Thurston v. Robison, D.C.Nev.1985, 603 F.Supp. 336. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Because of judicial immunity, defendant who was denied complete transcript of earlier trial on murder charge could not maintain action against judge and court reporter under this section conferring right of action for deprivation of constitutional right, privilege or immunity. Brown v. Charles, E.D.Wis.1970, 309 F.Supp. 817. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Court reporter was entitled to immunity against §§ 1983 claim by plaintiff arising from her alleged failure to provide plaintiff with copy of grand jury minutes in plaintiff's state court criminal proceeding; reporter's actions were carried out within scope of judge's instructions, and did not involve exercise of discretion. Rolle v. Berkowitz, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 287678, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3364. Deposition officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Court-appointed deposition officer was acting as quasi-judicial officer in taking depositions and was entitled to judicial immunity from subsequent complaint under this section for damage for allegedly acting contrary to his duties. Sarelas v. Sheehan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1965, 353 F.2d 5. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3365. Directors, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Director of Division of Medical Assistance and Health Services of New Jersey Department of Human Services was exercising quasi-judicial function when he limited application of state appellate court decision to specific years encompassed therein and was thus entitled to judicial immunity from civil rights liability stemming from his exercise of that function, and reversal of departmental interpretation on appeal did not render his conduct objectively unreasonable or in violation of subject nursing home's rights and did not deprive him of judicial immunity. Stratford Nursing and Convalescent Center, Inc. v. Kilstein, D.N.J.1991, 802 F.Supp. 1158, affirmed 972 F.2d 1332. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Director of Virginia Department of Welfare was absolutely immune from liability in his individual capacity as result of actions taken in connection with prospective adoptive mother's attempt to adopt child, since director was acting pursuant to valid court directive in preparing and submitting his recommendation to state court. Wooldridge v. Com. of Va., E.D.Va.1978, 453 F.Supp. 1333. States 79

3366. Education and school officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

State technological university's faculty grievance procedure fell short of requirements for quasi-judicial absolute immunity, and thus dean of graduate studies and university president were not entitled to such immunity from professor's claim that handling of his tenure denial grievance violated his right to procedural due process and equal protection; although grievance committee performed some traditional adjudicatory functions, it did not possess independence required for quasi-judicial immunity, grievance process did not provide safeguards for grievants as required for immunity, and grievance policy was not subject to requirements of Tennessee Administrative Procedures Act, and provided only for appeal to university chancellor, not to courts. Purisch v. Tennessee Technological University, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1996, 76 F.3d 1414. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3367. ---- Attorneys, education and school officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Absent evidence that his acts were inextricably involved in the judicial process, school district attorney was not entitled to absolute immunity in civil rights suit of tenured teacher, who alleged that school district and school officials deprived him of due process rights by dismissing him without prior notice and pretermination hearing. Gilbert v. School Dist. No. 50, Adams County, D.C.Colo.1980, 485 F.Supp. 505. Civil Rights 1375

3368. Employment officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Members of county career service council (CSC) which rejected physician's claim of retaliatory discharge were entitled to quasi-judicial immunity from physician's § 1983 claim, as CSC's duties were functionally comparable to those of state judge. Atiya v. Salt Lake County, C.A.10 (Utah) 1993, 988 F.2d 1013. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Members of grievance committee set up under bargaining agreement named as defendants in civil rights action for alleged violation of rights to due process and to freedom of speech and association, were vested with quasi-judicial characteristics so as to be functionally comparable to judges and, hence were absolutely immune from liability when they affirmed plaintiff's dismissal on ground that he neglected his duty by refusing to use his personal automobile in accordance with bargaining agreement to carry out a field study for a project to be undertaken by employer. Morales v. Vega, D.C.Puerto Rico 1979, 483 F.Supp. 1057. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3369. Friends of the court, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Under Michigan statutes prescribing duties and responsibility of friends of the court, acts of friends of the court which formed basis of plaintiff's claims under this section were performed by such defendants within scope of their official quasi-judicial duties, and they were entitled to immunity. Johnson v. Granholm, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1981, 662 F.2d 449, certiorari denied 102 S.Ct. 2933, 457 U.S. 1120, 73 L.Ed.2d 1332. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3370. General court of justice officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

An officer of general court of justice of a state assisting chief justice of a state and serving at his pleasure held a position entitling him to judicial immunity from suit by damages to the same extent as other judicial personnel of a state. Fowler v. Alexander, M.D.N.C.1972, 340 F.Supp. 168, affirmed 478 F.2d 694. Courts 55

3371. Governors, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Governor's failure to appoint replacements on Wyoming Personnel Review Board was made in an adjudicative capacity which absolutely immunized him from liability under this section. Johnston v. Herschler, C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1982, 669 F.2d 617. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Former governor had quasi-judicial immunity from parolee's civil rights suit under §§ 1983 alleging that he was deprived of certain constitutional and civil rights by governor's reversals of parole board's decision to grant parole, where governor's statutory duties upon review of parole board's decision were functionally comparable to those of judges. Miller v. Davis, C.D.Cal.2006, 420 F.Supp.2d 1108. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3372. Guardians ad litem, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Guardian ad litem for child was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from civil rights liability for performing her role in child custody and related proceedings. Dornheim v. Sholes, C.A.8 (N.D.) 2005, 430 F.3d 919, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2031. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Guardian ad litem was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity on all civil rights claims arising from guardian's actions during child custody dispute, even if guardian lied to judge in open court. Fleming v. Asbill, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1994, 42 F.3d 886. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Guardian ad litem of child who was allegedly sexually abused was entitled to absolute immunity in connection with her role in helping to prepare and signing motion for order to stay referee's decision returning child to her home; guardian's actions were for child's protection, and no evidence indicated that those actions were unreasonable in light of information of which guardian was aware. McCuen v. Polk County, Iowa, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1990, 893 F.2d 172. Civil Rights 1373

Guardian ad litem should be absolutely immune from liability for civil rights violations when acting as integral part of judicial process. Gardner by Gardner v. Parson, C.A.3 (Del.) 1989, 874 F.2d 131. Civil Rights 1373

Law guardians in state court child custody proceeding were not "state actors," and thus were entitled to immunity for liability under § 1983 for their actions as judicial officers in proceeding, even though guardians were appointed by state court and paid by state funds, as guardians were bound to exercise independent judgment on behalf of their clients. Storck v. Suffolk County Dept. of Social Services, E.D.N.Y.1999, 62 F.Supp.2d 927. Civil Rights 1326(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Guardian ad litem is not automatically assumed to be acting as direct adversary of state, and, thus, creation of blanket rule insulating guardian ad litem from § 1983 liability is not justified; determination of whether guardian is entitled to immunity in § 1983 action has to be decided case by case, based on whether interests of clients conflict with interests of state. Kohl v. Murphy, N.D.Ill.1991, 767 F.Supp. 895. Civil Rights 1326(1); Civil Rights 1350

A volunteer appointed to serve as guardian ad litem was entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity for her actions in state dependency proceeding; all investigative work conducted by guardian ad litem was done pursuant to order of juvenile court judge while guardian ad litem was functioning as an extension of the court. Ward v. San Diego County Dept. of Social Services, S.D.Cal.1988, 691 F.Supp. 238. Infants 205

3372A. Hospital review boards

Members of local public hospital disciplinary and peer review boards were not entitled to absolute judicial immunity from §§1983 liability in action arising out of boards' suspension of surgeon's medical privileges at hospital; peer review process provided by hospital lacked important characteristics found in judicial bodies, including insulation from political influences, adequate procedural safeguards, and adversarial characteristics. Braswell v. Haywood Regional Medical Center, W.D.N.C.2005, 352 F.Supp.2d 639. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3373. Investigators, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

State tax officials were not entitled to absolute immunity in §§ 1983 action brought by members of Indian tribe whose property had allegedly been subjected to tax liens in retaliation for their business association with a non-tribal gasoline distributor; officials were acting in an investigatory, rather than a judicial, capacity. Perez v. Ellington, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2005, 421 F.3d 1128. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Non-appointed staff-investigator for state board of dental examiners, who conducted warrantless search of dentist's office, but neither initiated disciplinary proceedings against dentist nor pursued prosecution of disciplinary complaint, was not entitled to absolute immunity in dentist's § 1983 and Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) action; staff member's role as investigator was not at heart of board's adjudicative function. Beck v. Texas State Bd. of Dental Examiners, C.A.5 (Tex.) 2000, 204 F.3d 629, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 171, 531 U.S. 871, 148 L.Ed.2d 117. Civil Rights 1376(8); States 79

Investigator who vouched for truth of contents of criminal complaint offered in support of warrant for mayor's arrest, on theory that mayor had made unauthorized payments to deputy sheriff contrary to terms of Michigan law requiring deputy sheriffs to be paid by counties for which they worked, was immune from liability for his actions under § 1983, even though district court judge ultimately determined that criminal complaint was constitutionally deficient in factual support; complaint was not so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render official belief in its existence unreasonable. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Under Illinois law, investigator employed by state's attorney was entitled to absolute witness immunity from malicious prosecution liability arising from his grand jury testimony. Mutual Medical Plans, Inc. v. County of Peoria, C.D.Ill.2004, 309 F.Supp.2d 1067. Malicious Prosecution 40

Caseworker for Delaware Division of Family Services (DFS), who investigated allegations of child abuse by father and after consulting supervisor, placed father's name on central registry of abusers, and supervisor were not entitled to absolute immunity from father's § 1983 claims; defendants' investigative or administrative' actions were taken outside context of judicial proceeding. Rodriguez v. Stevenson, D.Del.2002, 243 F.Supp.2d 58. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Investigator performed "discretionary function" when, pursuant to court commission, he prepared and submitted report regarding criminal defendant's background, and investigator thus was immune from § 1983 action alleging violation of criminal defendant's rights, absent violation of clearly established law. Malloy v. Coleman, M.D.Fla.1997, 961 F.Supp. 1568. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3374. Jurors, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Members of state grand jury had absolute immunity against § 1983 claims against them by attorney, whose memorandum to newspaper reporter had led to grand jury's formation, arising from grand jurors' "co-authoring" of report issued following investigation of child abuse and other charges; grand jurors' comments in report involved exercise of discretionary, quasi judicial function. DeCamp v. Douglas County Franklin Grand Jury, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1992, 978 F.2d 1047, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 3036, 509 U.S. 923, 125 L.Ed.2d 723. Civil Rights 1375

Juror was immune from civil liability for damages arising out of criminal prosecution under this section. White v. Hegerhorst, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1969, 418 F.2d 894, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 1710, 398 U.S. 912, 26 L.Ed.2d 74. Jury 1

State court jurors were entitled to absolute immunity from subsequent action for damages under this subchapter; thus, plaintiff's complaint alleging that the jurors participated in a conspiracy to deprive him of his civil rights and his right of access to the courts based upon his race, his interracial marriage and fact that he was not a county resident failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Sunn v. Dean, N.D.Ga.1984, 597 F.Supp. 79. Civil Rights 1375; Conspiracy 18

Juror in civil action is immune from later suit, based on his conduct as juror, for damages under this section. McIntosh v. Garofalo, W.D.Pa.1973, 367 F.Supp. 501.

The members of the jury which convicted defendant in a criminal case have immunity from liability for damages under this section. Roberts v. Barbosa, S.D.Cal.1964, 227 F.Supp. 20. Civil Rights 1375

3375. Jury officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Jury commissioners were not entitled to quasi-judicial immunity respecting § 1983 plaintiffs' claim that commissioners had attempted to remove minority groups from county jury pool; commissioners did not make judgments functionally comparable to those of judges and compiling jury pool did not involve exercise of discretionary judgment. Ryan v. DuPage County Jury Com'n, N.D.Ill.1993, 837 F.Supp. 898. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3376. Marshals, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Marshal who was acting pursuant to judge's orders enjoyed a quasi-judicial immunity from liability for damages in civil rights suits. Martinez v. Com. of Puerto Rico, D.C.Puerto Rico 1977, 435 F.Supp. 1204. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3377. Mayors, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Village mayor's actions, as local liquor control commissioner, in suspending bar owner's liquor license, temporarily

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

closing bar, and imposing a fine, were judicial functions, as would support mayor's entitlement to judicial immunity for those actions, in bar owner's §§ 1983 action alleging equal protection and due process violations. Killinger v. Johnson, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 389 F.3d 765. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(8)

City mayor's actions in investigating allegedly criminal incident involving university president and in swearing out complaint without probable cause and with malice did not constitute "judicial acts," cloaked in absolute immunity, in that those actions were not part of normal judicial function, but were plainly executive in nature, did not center around any pending case, but instead initiated the case, did not occur in judge's chambers, mayor being, ex officio under Texas law, city's municipal judge and magistrate, and did not involve mayor's official capacity as a judge. Thomas v. Sams, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1984, 734 F.2d 185, rehearing denied 741 F.2d 783, certiorari denied 105 S.Ct. 3476, 472 U.S. 1017, 87 L.Ed.2d 612. Judges 36

Where mayor, without jurisdiction to hear case due to plaintiff's refusal to waive right to jury trial, found plaintiff guilty and imposed penalty in excess of maximum allowed by ordinance, mayor lost his cloak of judicial immunity. Schorle v. City of Greenhills, S.D.Ohio 1981, 524 F.Supp. 821. Judges 36

3378. Medical boards, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Hearing officer for New Mexico Board of Medical Examiners was entitled to absolute immunity to physician's due process civil rights claim which alleged that officer should have recused himself from hearing to determine whether to revoke physician's medical license, since officer was acting in quasi-judicial function. Guttman v. Khalsa, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2006, 446 F.3d 1027. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Idaho's medical board, its disciplinary subsidiary, its members, professional staff and counsel functioned in a sufficiently judicial and prosecutorial capacity to entitle them to absolute immunity for their quasi-judicial and quasi-prosecutorial acts; thus, they were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 liability for acts which were directly related to their adjudicatory function and the ultimate resolution of physician assistant's disciplinary dispute. Olsen v. Idaho State Bd. of Medicine, C.A.9 (Idaho) 2004, 363 F.3d 916. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8); Health 195

Members of state board of dental examiners, who allegedly targeted dentist for investigation and revoked his license in retaliation for his successfully challenging board's regulations against advertising, were performing quasi-judicial functions and were entitled to absolute immunity in dentist's § 1983 and Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) lawsuit; adequate safeguards existed in disciplinary process to reduce need for private damages action as means of controlling unconstitutional conduct on part of board members, it was important for board members to be able to render disciplinary decisions free from threat of incurring personal liability, board members were insulated from political influence, since they were appointed to staggered, six-year terms with terms of one-third of members expiring every two years, disciplinary proceedings were adversarial in nature, and board's orders were appealable to state court. Beck v. Texas State Bd. of Dental Examiners, C.A.5 (Tex.) 2000, 204 F.3d 629, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 171, 531 U.S. 871, 148 L.Ed.2d 117. Civil Rights 1376(8); States 79

While members of Nevada Board of Medical Examiners did not have all attributes of federal hearing officer, they were functionally comparable to judges and prosecutors, and, thus, board members were entitled to absolute immunity for their quasi-judicial acts; public interest of ensuring quality health care provided strong need to ensure that board members could perform disciplinary functions without threat of harassment or intimidation, Nevada statutory scheme presented adequate safeguards reducing need for private damages actions to control unconstitutional conduct, board members were sufficiently insulated from political influence, disciplinary process was adversary in nature, and Board errors were correctable on appeal. Mishler v. Clift, C.A.9 (Nev.) 1999, 191 F.3d 998. Health 195

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Because members of Colorado State Board of Medical Examiners performed functions comparable to those of a court of law when they ordered suspension of podiatrist's license to practice medicine, they were entitled to absolute immunity from damages for alleged deprivation of his civil rights. Horwitz v. State Bd. of Medical Examiners of State of Colo., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1987, 822 F.2d 1508, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 453, 484 U.S. 964, 98 L.Ed.2d 394. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Kansas Board of Healing Arts was immune from damages in civil rights action in connection with disciplinary proceeding against physician where facial review of applicable statutes indicated that investigations and decisions whether to commence disciplinary proceedings were within quasi-judicial jurisdiction of Board and there was no evidence that hearings conducted by Board went beyond their jurisdiction. Vakas v. Rodriquez, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1984, 728 F.2d 1293, certiorari denied 105 S.Ct. 384, 469 U.S. 981, 83 L.Ed.2d 319. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State Board of Nursing members and Board's counsel were not absolutely immune from liability in § 1983 action by nurse, who had been convicted of importation of obscene materials, claiming that his civil rights were violated when Board required him to take penile plethysmograph test as condition of his continued professional licensure as nurse; decision to require nurse to undergo test, made by Board members after full board had adjourned, was separate and apart from Board's quasi-judicial function, and Board members were acting in investigatory role, rather than prosecutorial, at time decision was made. Berthiaume v. Caron, D.Me.1997, 973 F.Supp. 29, reversed 142 F.3d 12. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Executive director and medical director of state Board of Medical Examiners were entitled to share absolute immunity of Board as de jure staff members, in doctor's § 1983 action alleging that summary suspension of doctor's license to prescribe controlled substances violated due process. Howard v. Miller, N.D.Ga.1994, 870 F.Supp. 340. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Members of State Board of Healing Arts are entitled to absolute immunity from damages in § 1983 suit inasmuch as Board serves quasi-judicial role by statute and its members perform judicial functions. Kutilek v. Gannon, D.Kan.1991, 766 F.Supp. 967. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Decision of state Board of Medical Examiners, agency of state of North Carolina, to prefer charges against physician involved performance of judicial or quasi-judicial function; thus individual Board members were not answerable in damages for their decision to bring the charges. Hoke v. Board of Medical Examiners of State of N. C., W.D.N.C.1978, 445 F.Supp. 1313. States 78

3379. Mental hospital officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Absolute quasi-judicial immunity afforded superintendent and psychologist at public mental health facility for complying with state court order that juvenile be confined at facility did not extend to any liability arising from placement of juvenile in maximum security ward; superintendent and psychologist were only qualifiedly immune for any liability arising from placement. Turney v. O'Toole, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1990, 898 F.2d 1470. Civil Rights 1376(8)

In light of immunity for acts under authorization of state court order, director of state mental hospital and county treasurer were shielded from civil rights liability for their action subsequent to court order requiring payment from patient's deposit fund and disability benefits of cost of patient's involuntary confinement in state mental hospital. Fayle v. Stapley, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1979, 607 F.2d 858. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

To extent that director of state mental institution was merely exercising order of state supreme court justice in confining person duly committed to mental institution by order of justice, he was immune from liability under this section. Miller v. Director, Middletown State Hospital, Middletown, N. Y., S.D.N.Y.1956, 146 F.Supp. 674, affirmed 243 F.2d 527. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3380. Parole boards and members, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Parole board members in South Dakota were entitled to absolute immunity, in prisoner's §§ 1983 claim alleging that the board's decision to reinstate her suspended sentence violated due process, where board members had authority under South Dakota law to make such decisions based on prisoner's signed parole agreement. Figg v. Russell, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2006, 433 F.3d 593. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Members of prisoner review board were absolutely immune from defendant's claims alleging that defendant was denied due process by board's alleged failure to provide adequate notice of supervised release revocation hearing, provide defendant with opportunity to present evidence and witnesses, adequately explain that hearing was final revocation hearing, or provide defendant adequate written notice of reasons for revocation, as board members' conduct was integral to decision-making process and was thus quasi-judicial in nature. Wilson v. Kelkhoff, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1996, 86 F.3d 1438. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Utah Board of Pardons and Parole officials were immune from damages liability to parolee based on their entitlement to absolute or qualified immunity, in parolee's § 1983 action alleging that he was denied opportunity to appeal parole board's decisions, that he was denied access to parole board's standards and criteria, and that parole board failed to credit his sentence. Malek v. Haun, C.A.10 (Utah) 1994, 26 F.3d 1013. Civil Rights 1376(7); Pardon And Parole 56

Absolute immunity barred former prisoner's civil rights claim against parole board members based on their decision not to grant him parole, despite his claim that decision was based on unlawful considerations. Patterson v. Von Riesen, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1993, 999 F.2d 1235. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State officials' duty to schedule and conduct timely parole violation hearing was quasi-judicial function for which they were entitled to absolute immunity, in suit by inmate who was injured between time hearing was scheduled but not held and time it was eventually held. Thompson v. Duke, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1989, 882 F.2d 1180, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 2167, 495 U.S. 929, 109 L.Ed.2d 496. Civil Rights 1376(7)

In connection with civil rights complaint brought by in forma pauperis parolee alleging that various federal probation officers and parole examiners conspired to cause his arrest, to make improper investigations and probable cause findings and conduct unfair parole revocation hearing in order to have him returned to prison, trial court improperly held that parole examiners were entitled to absolute immunity since complaint alleged that parole examiners performed executive and investigative functions in addition to their adjudicatory duties. Wilson v. Rackmill, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1989, 878 F.2d 772, on remand. Pardon And Parole 56

Member of Utah Board of Pardons was absolutely immune from damages liability for actions taken in performance of Board's official duties regarding grant or denying of parole. Knoll v. Webster, C.A.10 (Utah) 1988, 838 F.2d 450. Civil Rights 1376(7)

An official who, because of organization of government in particular state, performs parole board's quasi-judicial duties enjoys absolute immunity in suit for damages by parolee alleging that revocation procedures violated right to due process. Farrish v. Mississippi State Parole Bd., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1988, 836 F.2d 969. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Members of Louisiana State Board of Pardons had absolute immunity from § 1983 damages sought by prisoner on ground that he was denied parole, at least in substantial part, because he had previously filed lawsuits against prison officials. Serio v. Members of Louisiana State Bd. of Pardons, C.A.5 (La.) 1987, 821 F.2d 1112. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Parole board official was immune from Section 1983 action for damages resulting from allegedly wrongful imprisonment of state prisoner, as official's sole role in incarceration of prisoner was that he served as hearing examiner at detention proceeding, and such duty was plainly adjudicatory function. Harper v. Jeffries, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1986, 808 F.2d 281. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Members of Missouri Board of Probation and Parole were entitled to absolute immunity from liability for damages claimed by prisoner who alleged that Board violated his constitutional rights by denying him parole because he was a sexual offender. Gale v. Moore, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1985, 763 F.2d 341. Pardon And Parole 56

Texas state parole board members were absolutely immune from liability for damages in section 1983 action brought by state prisoner. Hilliard v. Board of Pardons and Paroles, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1985, 759 F.2d 1190. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Corrections department officers who were responsible for decision not to conduct second preliminary parole revocation hearing were entitled to absolute immunity from parolee's claim for damages relief pursuant to this section, because decision not to provide another hearing was adjudicatory in nature. Trotter v. Klincar, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1984, 748 F.2d 1177. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Chairman of state parole board was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity from suit for damages under § 1983; board members performed quasi-judicial function in considering inmates for parole. Parisie v. Morris, N.D.Ga.1995, 873 F.Supp. 1560. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State parole officer, her supervisor, and Missouri Board of Probation and Parole were entitled to absolute immunity from liability for damages in suit alleging unlawful detention of parolee pursuant to detainer that was subsequently quashed. Coats v. Nance, E.D.Mo.1990, 738 F.Supp. 1276. Pardon And Parole 56

Parole board officials, like judges, were entitled to absolute immunity from state inmate's § 1983 suit for damages, as they served quasi-adjudicative function in deciding whether to grant, deny or revoke parole. Faison v. Travis, N.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31640541, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7); Civil Rights 1376(8)

3381. Parole officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Parole board members in Missouri were entitled to absolute immunity in prisoner's §§ 1983 action alleging violation of his due process and equal protection rights by mandating participation in sex-offender treatment program as condition of parole, even if prisoner was improperly classified as sex-offender, where board members had authority under Missouri law to condition release on anything it deemed reasonable to assist offender in leading law-abiding life. Mayorga v. Missouri, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 442 F.3d 1128. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Parole agent in South Dakota was entitled to absolute immunity, in prisoner's §§ 1983 claim alleging that the agent's failure to notify her that, pursuant to her parole agreement, the conditions applicable to her parole likewise applied to her suspended sentence violated due process; agent acted as representative of parole board, so that his actions were quasi-judicial. Figg v. Russell, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2006, 433 F.3d 593. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Individual members of state parole board were entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from §§ 1983 suit for damages brought by parolee who had successfully defended parole violation charges. Holmes v. Crosby, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2005, 418 F.3d 1256. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State parole officer was not entitled to absolute immunity in § 1983 action arising from officer's alleged acts of falsely preparing parole violation report and recommending to supervisor that warrant be issued for parolee's arrest, as officer made no adjudicative decision, officer's actions were not integrally related to judicial process, and officer did not have authority to initiate charges. Scotto v. Almenas, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1998, 143 F.3d 105. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Probation officers and parole officers are entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from liability under § 1983 for actions taken in their adjudicatory capacities, but not for actions taken in officers' executive or administrative capacities. Williams v. Consovoy, D.N.J.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 297. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State parole board was not entitled to absolute judicial immunity from liability in inmate's § 1983 action, where inmate alleged that board ordered parole without statutory authority to retard his good-time release date. Bollinger v. Oregon State Bd. of Parole & Post-Prison Supervision, C.A.9 (Or.) 2003, 86 Fed.Appx. 259, 2003 WL 23019018, Unreported, on remand 2005 WL 563742. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3382. Physicians, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Physician whose report that bite marks found in murder victim's body undoubtedly came from defendant had contributed to defendant's arrest and conviction of murder was not protected by absolute immunity from liability under § 1983, after defendant's murder conviction was set aside on appeal, for his pre-testimonial activities in examining victim's body, obtaining and examining defendant's dental impressions, and writing report. Keko v. Hingle, C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 318 F.3d 639, rehearing en banc denied 61 Fed.Appx. 123, 2003 WL 342359. Civil Rights 1375

Psychiatrist appointed by court to conduct competency examination performed functions essential to judicial process and had a function analogous to that of a witness, and thus enjoyed absolute immunity, despite claim that he had not been appointed in accordance with state law and that he was involved in a conspiracy which began before his appointment to examine one particular defendant. Moses v. Parwatikar, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1987, 813 F.2d 891, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 108, 484 U.S. 832, 98 L.Ed.2d 67. Civil Rights 1375

Medical examiner for superior court was acting in a quasi-judicial capacity when he allegedly falsely certified to superior court that he had examined plaintiff and, therefore, he was immune from liability under this section. Mills v. Small, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1971, 446 F.2d 249, certiorari denied 92 S.Ct. 535, 404 U.S. 991, 30 L.Ed.2d 543. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Court-appointed psychiatrists who prepared and submitted medical reports to state court were immune from liability under this section pertaining to civil action for deprivation of rights on ground that they had made false statements of fact and omitted material facts in their reports to state court in criminal case. Burkes v. Callion, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1970, 433 F.2d 318, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 2217, 403 U.S. 908, 29 L.Ed.2d 685. Civil Rights 1373

Where defendant doctor, at time he gave his opinion that plaintiff was mentally incompetent, had been appointed and was acting as an officer of Ohio probate court in giving opinion as to mental health of plaintiff, defendant doctor was protected by same immunity extended to judges and other judicial officers, and therefore plaintiff could not maintain an action under this section in a federal district court against defendant doctor for damages. Bartlett v. Weimer, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1959, 268 F.2d 860, certiorari denied 80 S.Ct. 380, 361 U.S. 938, 4 L.Ed.2d 358. Health 770

Court-appointed psychiatrist and psychologist who evaluated former husband, former wife, and daughter to assist judge in deciding custody issues were absolutely immune from liability in civil rights action. Williams v. Rappeport, D.Md.1988, 699 F.Supp. 501, affirmed 879 F.2d 863, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 243, 493 U.S. 894, 107 L.Ed.2d 193. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1375

Where duly licensed psychiatrist was summoned by county court to testify in judicial proceeding for purposes of determining whether plaintiff should be committed to hospital for observation, statements made and submitted by psychiatrist in that proceeding were absolutely privileged and immune, both from state court claims and from

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

claims brought under this section. Williams v. Westbrook Psychiatric Hospital, E.D.Va.1976, 420 F.Supp. 322. Civil Rights 1375; Libel And Slander 38(4)

Coroner who allegedly acted contrary to terms of statute in signing certificate committing person to mental hospital stating that he had observed and examined subject when he had not done so was performing ministerial rather than judicial function was not entitled to judicial immunity and was liable for damages under this section. Delatte v. Genovese, E.D.La.1967, 273 F.Supp. 654. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Private physicians, who were appointed by probate court to examine plaintiff, who was placed in mental hospital by order of probate court, enjoyed same immunity from a claim under this section as physicians at the hospital and, in discharge of their duties, they also acted as an arm of the court and were entitled to enjoy the immunity afforded to the court. Bartlett v. Duty, N.D.Ohio 1959, 174 F.Supp. 94, 84 Ohio Law Abs. 555, 12 O.O.2d 237. Civil Rights 1373

3383. Police officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

Police officer's absolute immunity from § 1983 liability for testimony given at trial extended to liability for allegedly perjured testimony given during preliminary hearing to determine whether probable cause existed to support warrantless arrest, and during hearing on motion to quash arrest and suppress evidence; policy consideration that witness might shade testimony in order to avoid liability applied with equal force to witness testimony in trial and adversarial pretrial settings, and plaintiff's argument that officer was akin to complaining witness and thus was not immune was inapplicable where plaintiff failed to state claim for malicious prosecution. Curtis v. Bembenek, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1995, 48 F.3d 281. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police department employees were not acting as quasi-judicial or quasi-prosecutorial officers when disciplining police officer for refusing to submit to administrative search of his garage in violation of his constitutional rights, and thus employees were not entitled to absolute immunity for their acts. Los Angeles Police Protective League v. Gates, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1990, 907 F.2d 879, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity for any violation of equal protection rights of divorcing husband, as member of class of persons involved in domestic disputes, in allegedly refusing to treat his complaint that his wife had stolen his personal property the same as a similar complaint by other complainants, as right was not clearly established in 1999 and it was objectively reasonable for officer to believe in lawfulness of not further investigating and arresting wife or searching her home of pieces of silverware set. Fedor v. Kudrak, D.Conn.2006, 421 F.Supp.2d 473. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Social workers are not entitled to absolute immunity, in § 1983 actions alleging violations of substantive due process rights, for their conduct in investigating the possibility that a removal petition should be filed. Gedrich v. Fairfax County Dept. of Family Services, E.D.Va.2003, 282 F.Supp.2d 439. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

Police detective who conducted investigation into suspected sexual abuse of child did not have absolute immunity from § 1983 action brought by child's mother, which alleged that detective contacted mother knowing that mother was represented by counsel and then conspired with social worker to circumvent counsel by misleading magistrate judge into issuing ex parte order for seizure of child, knowing that child was in no imminent danger; alleged actions were neither integral to judicial process nor ministerial. Malik v. Arapahoe County Dept. of Social Services, D.Colo.1997, 987 F.Supp. 868, affirmed in part, dismissed in part 191 F.3d 1306. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police constable was not absolutely immune from § 1983 claim based on allegation that constable, acting as arm of the court in carrying out order of execution, altered order so as to thwart intention of district justice and pervert judicial process. Miniscalco v. Gordon, E.D.Pa.1996, 916 F.Supp. 478. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3384. ---- Sheriffs, police officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Sheriff's department was not entitled to quasi-judicial immunity in arrestee's §§ 1983 action alleging that sheriff's deputies violated his due process rights by refusing to entertain his claim that he was being held in custody due to mistaken identity following his arraignment on warrant that was issued for someone else; units of government were not entitled to immunity in §§ 1983 actions, and judge who arraigned arrestee did not forbid sheriff's department from conducting further inquiries into arrestee's identity. Hernandez v. Sheahan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2006, 455 F.3d 772. Civil Rights 1376(6)

County sheriff and deputy sheriffs had absolute quasi-judicial immunity from § 1983 action arising from their actions in enforcing facially valid judicial order; deputy sheriffs charged company president with obstructing officer for her failure to comply with written restraining order and, subsequently, incarcerated her overnight pursuant to judge's verbal order. Roland v. Phillips, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1994, 19 F.3d 552. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Federal prisoner failed to show that sheriff actually participated in acts that allegedly deprived prisoner of his constitutional rights, formulated a policy of tolerating such violations, or was deliberately indifferent, and, thus, sheriff had qualified immunity from prisoner's civil rights action under §§ 1983. Felton v. Lincoln, D.Mass.2006, 429 F.Supp.2d 226. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Under New York law, city sheriff was required to execute marital residence transfer documents pursuant to facially valid judgment of divorce, and, thus, sheriff had absolute quasi-judicial immunity from husband's action under §§ 1983, alleging that wife effected sale of marital residence by submitting allegedly perjurious affidavits to sheriff, thereby inducing sheriff to participate in sale of residence. Tornheim v. Eason, S.D.N.Y.2005, 363 F.Supp.2d 674, affirmed 2006 WL 897865. Civil Rights 1376(6); Sheriffs And Constables 88

Sheriff was not entitled to quasi-judicial immunity for detaining arrestee for eight days without judicial probable cause determination, notwithstanding initial appearance at which bond was set, absent evidence as to substance and circumstances of judge's order. Lingenfelter v. Board of County Com'rs of Reno County, Kan., D.Kan.2005, 359 F.Supp.2d 1163. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Sheriff is immune from damage suits alleging violation of civil rights by sheriff's actions while acting as an arm of the court. State of La. ex rel. Purkey v. Ciolino, E.D.La.1975, 393 F.Supp. 102. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Sheriff is immune from suit alleging violation of plaintiff's civil rights by the actions of the sheriff while he is acting as the arm of the county court in carrying out judicial functions of the court in his capacity as sheriff. Salvati v. Dale, W.D.Pa.1973, 364 F.Supp. 691. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3385. ---- Applications for search warrants, police officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Judicial approval of a warrant affidavit cannot serve as an absolute bar to Section 1983 liability of officer who submitted it; where judicial finding of probable cause is based solely on information officer knew to be false or would have known was false had he not recklessly disregarded the truth, not only does the arrest violate Fourth Amendment, but officer will not be entitled to good-faith immunity. Olson v. Tyler, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1985, 771 F.2d 277. Civil Rights 1088(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

3386. ---- Execution of court orders, police officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

officials

Sheriff had absolute immunity from § 1983 civil rights action brought by arrestee alleging illegal arrest, since sheriff's conduct in arresting and detaining arrestee was in compliance with facially valid court order compelling him to do so; sheriff's alleged knowledge that there was no legal cause for order did not erode sheriff's immunity. Mays v. Sudderth, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1996, 97 F.3d 107. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Law enforcement personnel are entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from suit in § 1983 action if they were acting in furtherance of official duties and relying on facially valid court order. Roland v. Phillips, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1994, 19 F.3d 552. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Sheriff's deputies who arrested spectator after he was held in contempt for his conduct in courtroom and incarcerated him pursuant to judge's order were entitled to absolute immunity from liability for damages in suit alleging false arrest and imprisonment in violation of Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments. Valdez v. City and County of Denver, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1989, 878 F.2d 1285, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Law enforcement officers were immune from suit under § 1983, alleging violation of claimant's federally protected rights in connection with his arrest and incarceration for failing to pay forfeitures imposed after entry of default judgments, when claimant alleged no conduct other than enforcement of state court judgments. Haas v. Wisconsin, E.D.Wis.2003, 241 F.Supp.2d 922, affirmed 109 Fed.Appx. 107, 2004 WL 1799360, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 908, 543 U.S. 1053, 160 L.Ed.2d 776. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Sheriff acting pursuant to writ of assistance specifically provided for in decree of foreclosure was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity with respect to civil rights arising out of alleged loss of and damage to personal property. Roach v. Madden, E.D.Ark.1989, 728 F.Supp. 537. Civil Rights 1376(6)

To the extent a law enforcement officer acts pursuant to direct order of court, he may be entitled to quasi-judicial immunity, by which he would be absolutely immune from conduct intimately related to judicial process. Coggins v. Carpenter, E.D.Pa.1979, 468 F.Supp. 270. Officers And Public Employees 114

Law enforcement personnel who act under a judge's order are entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. International Molders and Allied Workers, AFL-CIO v. Buchanan Lumber Birmingham, N.D.Ala.1978, 459 F.Supp. 950, affirmed 618 F.2d 782. Officers And Public Employees 114

Where sheriff, in evicting occupier from property, acted under court order, he was absolutely immune from damage claims under this section. Hevelone v. Thomas, D.C.Neb.1976, 423 F.Supp. 7, affirmed 546 F.2d 797. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3387. Pretrial service officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

State court pretrial services officers were entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity for their actions of issuing temporary restraining order against plaintiff prior to hearing before judge, even though order was ultimately found to be defective; officers were designated by state judges to act as bond commissioners, officers acted within general subject matter of their jurisdiction, and officers were acting pursuant to judicial directives. Whitesel v. Sengenberger, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2000, 222 F.3d 861. Courts 55

3388. Prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

Prison officials are entitled to immunity for acts that are functionally equivalent to those of judges. Borzych v. Frank, W.D.Wis.2004, 340 F.Supp.2d 955, reconsideration denied in part 2004 WL 2491597. Prisons 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Correctional officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from damages under §§ 1983 for allegedly violating inmate's Fourteenth Amendment right to procedural due process in the calculation of his prison sentence, after he was allegedly confined for 65 days beyond mandatory release date due to miscalculation of sentence; even though prisoners' right to formal review procedures addressing requests for recalculation of sentences was not clearly established at time in Seventh Circuit, cases in Seventh Circuit and other circuits clearly recognized that prisoners had protected liberty interest in timely release and in being afforded some process when they alleged that sentences had been miscalculated. Russell v. Lazar, E.D.Wis.2004, 300 F.Supp.2d 716. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Private operator of county jail was not entitled to judicial immunity in civil rights action brought by arrestee who claimed he was incarcerated for 30 days following his warrantless arrest, where arrestee alleged that no judicial officer ever determined whether there was probable cause to detain him. Blumel v. Mylander, M.D.Fla.1996, 919 F.Supp. 423. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Prison officials were not qualifiedly immune from § 1983 liability for allegedly engaging in retaliatory conduct (transfers, segregated confinement, and cell search) in response to inmate's exercise of rights; that retaliatory segregated confinement was unconstitutional had been settled law in circuit since 1979. Lowrance v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1994, 862 F.Supp. 1090. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Officer who undertook review of proceeding resulting in inmate's involuntary administrative confinement acted as quasi-judicial officer and, therefore, was absolutely immune from § 1983 liability. Sealey v. Coughlin, N.D.N.Y.1994, 857 F.Supp. 214, affirmed in part, reversed in part 116 F.3d 47, on remand 997 F.Supp. 316. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Members of prison appeals board located outside prison, who had no regular contact with employees of correctional facility, were entitled to absolute immunity for actions in upholding prison sanction imposed on prisoner for violating alleged unconstitutional right. Shaddy v. Gunter, D.Neb.1988, 690 F.Supp. 860. Prisons 10

Work release termination hearing chairperson who was responsible for terminating prisoner from work release program exercised adjudicatory function which was functionally comparable to that of judge, and thus, chairperson, and other members of committee responsible for decision, were immune from prisoner's subsequent suit for damages on basis that his work release was terminated in violation of regulations. Barada v. Pioneer Fellowship House, W.D.Wash.1983, 568 F.Supp. 102. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials did not enjoy absolute judicial immunity from prisoner's civil rights action, although officials contended that since they reviewed facts, weighed evidence and exercised discretion in reaching a disposition, they should be insulated from liability for damages so that they could perform their duties freely, independently and without fear of personal consequences, in light of fact that prison officials could not have been said to be insulated from outside influence, proceeding was not of adversarial nature, and inmates were severely limited in presentation of their cases. Hilliard v. Scully, S.D.N.Y.1982, 537 F.Supp. 1084. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Detention center official, who was required by state law to accept principal and keep him in detention, did not enjoy judicial immunity from liability for beating and robbery of principal after principal was arrested by agents of surety on bail bond and transported to the center. Hill v. Toll, E.D.Pa.1970, 320 F.Supp. 185. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3389. ---- Disciplinary hearing officials, prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Director of Office of Special Housing and Inmate Disciplinary Programs for New York State Department of Correctional Services was not entitled to absolute immunity from inmate's civil rights action, in light of lack of sufficient guarantee of director's independence and insulation from communication with hearing officers about specific cases. Young v. Selsky, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 41 F.3d 47, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1837, 514 U.S. 1102, 131 L.Ed.2d 756. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Officials at state prison were absolutely immune from civil damages, in suit under this section, based on allegation that inmates' rights under U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14 were violated in disciplinary proceeding in state prison, in view of fact that the proceedings were adversary in nature, that the officials were insulated from improper supervision, that balanced and impartial tribunal was required, that record had to be kept in the proceedings, that an automatic review, followed by an appeal on record, was provided for and that there was danger of retaliatory response by disappointed inmates. Segarra v. McDade, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1983, 706 F.2d 1301. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Adjustment committee's chairman, who presided at Virginia correctional facility's inmate's disciplinary hearing involving an alleged major violation, enjoyed absolute immunity from damages liability in ruling that inmate would not be permitted to call three witnesses after chairman determined that their testimony would be irrelevant or cumulative, in view of fact that such ruling had typical characteristics of a "formal" adjudicatory decision, including the right to appeal. Ward v. Johnson, C.A.4 (Va.) 1982, 690 F.2d 1098. Prisons 10

Prison official who conducts an informal disciplinary hearing is not in one of those exceptional situations where it is demonstrated that absolute immunity is essential for conduct of public business; rather, such official is covered by general rule that, in suit for damages arising from unconstitutional action, federal executive officials exercising discretion are entitled only to qualified immunity. Jihaad v. O'Brien, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1981, 645 F.2d 556. Prisons 10

Prison official hearing appeal from inmate disciplinary proceeding was not entitled to absolute judicial immunity from inmate's § 1983 suit; officer served at pleasure of superiors within Department of Correctional Services. Moye v. Selsky, S.D.N.Y.1993, 826 F.Supp. 712. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Michigan Department of Corrections hearing officer was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from liability in inmate's § 1983 action challenging acts of officer in conducting administrative hearing which was a quasi-judicial act within hearing officer's jurisdiction. Banks v. Klapish, W.D.Mich.1989, 717 F.Supp. 520. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Hearing officer in the Michigan Department of Corrections is protected from liability for damages under the doctrine of absolute immunity. Shelly v. Johnson, W.D.Mich.1987, 684 F.Supp. 941, affirmed 849 F.2d 228. Civil Rights 1376(8)

State prison disciplinary hearing officer, whose actions were taken in course of official judicial and quasi-judicial duties, was entitled, as far as pecuniary liability was concerned in state inmate's action against officer under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, to judicial immunity accorded to inferior judicial and quasi-judicial officers. Chambers v. Koehler, W.D.Mich.1984, 635 F.Supp. 884. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Inspector for Michigan Department of Corrections, whose duties were akin to a judicial official, and who determined that inmate was to be held in administrative segregation pending a ruling on misconduct citation, was absolutely immune from suit under this section brought by present inmate seeking damages for the days spent in administrative segregation awaiting hearing on misconduct charge on which he was exonerated. Riley v. Smith, E.D.Mich.1983, 570 F.Supp. 522. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were entitled to absolute immunity from damages in prisoner's suit challenging disciplinary action taken against prisoner, since defendant officials were acting in judicial capacities at the time the challenged disciplinary decisions were made. Breedlove v. Cripe, N.D.Tex.1981, 511 F.Supp. 467. Prisons 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3390. ---- Grievance proceeding officials, prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Inmate complaint examiner who reviewed Wisconsin prisoner's complaint about nondelivery of prisoner's letter, and prison officials who affirmed examiner's recommendation that prisoner's complaint be dismissed, were absolutely immune from prisoner's §§ 1983 action alleging due process and free speech violations in connection with such actions. Koutnik v. Brown, W.D.Wis.2004, 351 F.Supp.2d 871. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Inmate grievance procedure established in Virginia is adversarial in nature, wardens and regional administrators are not subject to supervision of other employees engaged in investigative or prosecutorial duties, proceedings are preserved by record and structured so as to assure exercise of independent judgment by warden and regional administrator, inmate has right to appeal decision, and denial of absolute immunity would subject correctional officers to real threat of burdensome and expensive litigation and deter prison officials from participating in grievance procedures; thus, warden and regional administrator were entitled to absolute immunity to civil suit for damages brought by inmate who alleged he was denied due process in denial of his grievances. Burt v. Mitchell, E.D.Va.1984, 589 F.Supp. 186, affirmed 790 F.2d 83. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3391. ---- Physicians, prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Prison counselor and prison physician were immune from § 1983 liability with respect to claims of false diagnosis, false testimony and conspiracy, but were not immune from § 1983 liability with respect to filing of petition for involuntary commitment. McArdle v. Tronetti, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1992, 961 F.2d 1083. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3391A. ---- Nurses, prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Jail nurse was absolutely immune from liability in inmate's §§ 1983 action alleging that nurse took his blood without his consent, where she was acting pursuant to a facially valid warrant to withdraw blood. Boatner v. Hinds, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 137 Fed.Appx. 499, 2005 WL 1526322, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3392. ---- Wardens, prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Prison warden and correctional officer were entitled to absolute immunity, in prisoner's §§ 1983 claim challenging her incarceration as illegal, where prisoner's incarceration occurred pursuant to a facially valid court order. Figg v. Russell, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2006, 433 F.3d 593. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Warden is absolutely immune from damages flowing from fact of prisoner's incarceration, when that incarceration occurs pursuant to facially valid order of confinement. Patterson v. Von Riesen, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1993, 999 F.2d 1235 . Civil Rights 1376(7)

New Hampshire State Prison Warden was entitled to absolute immunity from inmate's § 1983 claim alleging that Warden violated his constitutional rights by refusing to transfer him to Massachusetts during pendency of his appeal from his conviction in New Hampshire state court, as inmate was claiming in essence that Warden should be held liable for following state court order. Stow v. Horan, D.N.H.1993, 829 F.Supp. 504, affirmed in part and remanded 36 F.3d 1089, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1705, 514 U.S. 1069, 131 L.Ed.2d 566, rehearing denied 115 S.Ct. 2570, 515 U.S. 1137, 132 L.Ed.2d 822. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison warden is immune from liability for damages under this section for his actions pursuant to his quasi-judicial function in Maryland adjustment process reviewing decisions of adjustment team at penitentiary, providing warden is exercising adjudicatory discretion pursuant to and in accordance with expressly established and specific prison adjustment procedures, but immunity is limited to suits for damages. Fitchette v. Collins, D.C.Md.1975, 402 F.Supp. 147. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

The Department of Corrections, the Adult Authority, and warden of state prison enjoyed judicial immunity from pecuniary liability in action brought against them by parolee for exemplary damages under this section. Williams v. Craven, C.D.Cal.1967, 273 F.Supp. 649, certiorari denied 89 S.Ct. 242, 393 U.S. 916, 21 L.Ed.2d 201. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3393. ---- Miscellaneous officials, prison officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Where prison censorship board acted pursuant to district court order establishing censorship guidelines and state regulations adopted in accord with that court order in banning receipt by prisoners of mail containing sexually explicit material, board members could not be held liable in damages for violation of prisoners' civil rights. Carpenter v. State of S. D., C.A.8 (S.D.) 1976, 536 F.2d 759, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 2636, 431 U.S. 931, 53 L.Ed.2d 246. Civil Rights 1358

3394. Probate proceeding officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Probate court administrator who prepared assessment for juvenile to be placed in nonsecure detention home was acting as "arm of the court" in carrying out court order of referee to prepare assessment, and thus both administrator and referee were performing actions which were basic and integral parts of judicial function and absolute quasi-judicial immunity applied to administrator in connection with § 1983 action brought by operators of detention home after they were injured by juvenile who was incorrectly labelled nonviolent by administrator. Bush v. Rauch, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 38 F.3d 842. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Since it appeared that judicial duties of register of wills in Pennsylvania were confined to matters relative to probate of wills, hiring and firing of employees was functionally not within purview of judicial duties and not within the ambit of those acts entitling him to judicial immunity. Retail Clerks Intern. Ass'n, Local 1357 v. Leonard, E.D.Pa.1978, 450 F.Supp. 663. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3395. Probation officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

District of Columbia probation officers were absolutely immune from liability in civil rights action under § 1983 for alleged errors in investigation and preparation of presentence reports. Turner v. Barry, C.A.D.C.1988, 856 F.2d 1539, 272 U.S.App.D.C. 377. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(7)

Any actions taken by probation officer pursuant to his state statutory duty to provide a presentencing report were covered by judicial immunity doctrine. Demoran v. Witt, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1985, 781 F.2d 155. Courts 55

Federal probation officers were immune from suit for damages based on their alleged misconduct in investigation and preparation of presentence report. Spaulding v. Nielsen, C.A.5 (La.) 1979, 599 F.2d 728. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Probation officers and Pennsylvania Parole Board members are entitled to quasi-judicial immunity when engaged in adjudicatory duties. Thompson v. Burke, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1977, 556 F.2d 231, on remand 544 F.Supp. 173. Civil Rights 1376(7); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Probation officer in preparing and submitting probation report on defendant was performing a "quasi-judicial" function and was immune from liability under this section creating civil action for deprivation of rights on ground that he had made false statements of fact and omitted material facts in making report to state court. Burkes v. Callion, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1970, 433 F.2d 318, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 2217, 403 U.S. 908, 29 L.Ed.2d 685. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Juvenile probation officer was not entitled to absolute judicial immunity from juvenile's § 1983 claim alleging that juvenile was harmed as result of his illegal detention in juvenile detention facility; case did not involve preparation and submission of presentence report, but rather, juvenile was detained as punishment for violation of school rules. A.M. By and Through Law v. Grant, M.D.Ala.1995, 889 F.Supp. 1495, affirmed 68 F.3d 486. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Probation officer who was acting pursuant to state statute and whose only motive in causing defendant's arrest was that of enforcing judge's sentence was absolutely immune from suit pursuant to civil rights statute, or was at least entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. Bennett v. Batchik, E.D.Mich.1990, 743 F.Supp. 1245, affirmed 936 F.2d 572. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Nature of function performed by state probation officers, impossibility of guaranteeing accuracy of information to be reported, and routine subjection of presentence report to advisory review made absolute immunity as appropriate for state probation officers as it was for federal probation officers, and thus, state probation officers were absolutely immune from liability in civil rights action for allegedly submitting presentence report that was false and inaccurate. Shelton v. McCarthy, W.D.N.Y.1988, 699 F.Supp. 412. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Actions taken by juvenile's probation officer relating to custody dispositions of juvenile, including his recommendation to court that juvenile remain in foster care and his subsequent recommendation that juvenile be placed at custodial state correctional facility for juvenile delinquents, were clearly adjudicatory in nature, thus making probation officer absolutely immune from civil rights suit. Weseman v. Meeker County, D.Minn.1987, 659 F.Supp. 1571. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Probation officer who allegedly filed detainer against probationer based on illegally seized evidence was entitled to absolute immunity in probationer's subsequent civil rights action; probationer did not allege that officer participated in improper gathering of evidence or that officer applied for detainer to third-party decision maker, but alleged only that officer relied on evidence gathered by police officers to reach discretionary and unilateral decision to order probationer's arrest. Copus v. City of Edgerton, W.D.Wis.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1047, affirmed in part, reversed in part 151 F.3d 646. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Although probation officer's status alone was insufficient basis for finding absolute immunity from civil rights suit claiming that false and erroneous information in presentence report on plaintiff persuaded judge to impose unduly harsh sentence, where probation officer was performing, by delegation, a judicial function which was integral part of judicial process, defendant was entitled to share judge's absolute immunity. Crosby-Bey v. Jansson, D.C.D.C.1984, 586 F.Supp. 96. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Probation officer and adult probation investigator did not abandon their quasi-judicial role in participating in preparation of probation report and thus were immune from liability under this section. Friedman v. Younger, C.D.Cal.1968, 282 F.Supp. 710. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3396. ---- Federal immunity compared, probation officers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

The immunity from liability under this section that is extended to federal probation officers when preparing and submitting a presentence report in a criminal case is equally applicable to a state probation officer. Hughes v. Chesser, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1984, 731 F.2d 1489. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3397. Psychiatrists, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Psychiatrist was absolutely immune from liability for damages under § 1983 based on allegation that she conspired to present her own and another witness's perjured testimony at plaintiff's criminal trial, since her alleged conspiratorial behavior was inextricably tied to her testimony, where plaintiff was tried for 20-year-old murder based, in part, on his daughter's recovered memory, and plaintiff alleged that psychiatrist conspired with daughter by incorporating information obtained from daughter into her own testimony, and by providing daughter with description of the sort of details that would make her testimony more persuasive. Franklin v. Terr, C.A.9 (Cal.) 2000, 201 F.3d 1098. Civil Rights 1375

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3398. Psychologists, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Private psychologist who contracted with state to perform evaluation and present his findings to adjudicative parole board, which then relied on his report and expertise in reaching its ultimate decision to deny inmate parole, acted as arm of court, and enjoyed absolute immunity from inmate's §§ 1983 action alleging wrongful denial of parole. Williams v. Consovoy, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2006, 453 F.3d 173. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Psychological assessment of parole candidate by private psychologist was adjudicative act, and thus psychologist was entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 as result of evaluation, where psychologist performed evaluation on order of state parole board to assist it in making its parole determination. Williams v. Consovoy, D.N.J.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 297. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1376(7)

Court-appointed child psychologist, who, in child visitation and custody dispute, had opined that parents' nonconforming lifestyle and religion might be harmful to their child, was entitled to absolute immunity from liability in parents' § 1983 suit, since psychologist was not state actor, as she was self-employed, rather than employee of state, and she had not deprived parents of any federal rights. Williams v. Bierman, M.D.Fla.1999, 46 F.Supp.2d 1262. Civil Rights 1375

Therapist which had been selected by parents from list of court-approved psychologists, as part of agreement whereby juvenile court dismissed dependency and neglect petition against parents and parents agreed to undergo regular counseling, had absolute immunity from civil rights liability for acts committed within scope of her appointment. Doe v. Hennepin County, D.C.Minn.1985, 623 F.Supp. 982. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3399. Public defenders, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Immunity from liability under this section for state public defenders was not warranted on asserted ground that public defenders had responsibilities similar to those of judge or prosecutor and should enjoy similar immunities in order, ultimately, not to impair state's attempt to meet its constitutional obligation to furnish criminal defendants with effective counsel and in order to prevent inundation of federal courts with frivolous lawsuits in that it is for Congress to determine whether civil rights litigation has become too burdensome to state and federal institutions and, if so, what remedial action is appropriate. Tower v. Glover, U.S.Or.1984, 104 S.Ct. 2820, 467 U.S. 914, 81 L.Ed.2d 758. Civil Rights 1375

Public defender who represented child in proceeding to determine whether child was in need of protection or services was entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 claim of mother based on deprivation of her right to enroll child in private school. Mason v. Waukesha County, E.D.Wis.1994, 855 F.Supp. 282, affirmed 48 F.3d 1222. Civil Rights 1375

3400. Receivers, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Court-appointed receiver of judgment debtor's assets was entitled to derivative judicial immunity from suit for damages on federal civil rights claims brought by judgment debtor's girlfriend, arising from search of girlfriend's home by judgment creditors' attorney; search of girlfriend's home, where judgment debtor temporarily resided, was supported by state court's general order appointing receiver, authorizing her to take possession of debtor's nonexempt assets and requiring debtor to cooperate with receiver's efforts, receiver was not personally present during search at home, and there was no allegation that receiver instructed attorney to seize girlfriend's property, that receiver converted any property for her personal use or that property had not been accounted for in receivership. Davis v. Bayless, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1995, 70 F.3d 367. Civil Rights 1376(8); Judges 36

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Receiver appointed by state court to manage business assets of marital estate during dissolution proceeding was entitled to absolute derivative judicial immunity in postdivorce action alleging that he had mismanaged estate's assets; receiver was not absolutely immune, however, from allegations that he stole estate assets or slandered parties, in that such alleged acts were not judicial acts. New Alaska Development Corp. v. Guetschow, C.A.9 (Alaska) 1989, 869 F.2d 1298. Receivers 104; Receivers 170

State court receiver was entitled to judicial immunity in civil rights action, despite allegation that receiver injured plaintiff's business property by releasing defamatory reports to the media and by aiding and abetting in the conversion and/or embezzlement of plaintiff's corporate assets, in that reports concerned financial activities of plaintiff that had led to state court lawsuit in establishment of receivership and, assuming conversion and embezzlement allegations to be true, they did not indicate that receiver engaged in activities prima facie beyond scope of official function of a state court receiver. Property Management & Investments, Inc. v. Lewis, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1985, 752 F.2d 599. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Corporate receiver was immune from suit under this section where every action objected to in suit was known to and approved by state court judge supervising receiver and corporate plaintiff had an opportunity to and did object throughout state court proceedings to the fact that it was not being treated as a separate entity entitled to creditor status with respect to related corporation. T & W Inv. Co., Inc. v. Kurtz, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1978, 588 F.2d 801. Civil Rights 1373

Court appointed receiver who faithfully and carefully carried out orders of appointing judge was immune from liability under this section authorizing civil action for deprivation of rights or immunities secured by Constitution and laws and thus could not be held liable in civil action charging conspiracy between bank, construction company and receiver to put corporation into receivership so as to avoid payment of corporate debt. Kermit Const. Corp. v. Banco Credito Y Ahorro Ponceno, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1976, 547 F.2d 1. Receivers 104

Receiver appointed by court to oversee and manage District of Columbia agency was acting in his judicial capacity when he terminated employee as part of reduction in force, and, thus, he was absolutely immune from civil liability in his individual capacity under § 1983 for acts taken within scope of his position as receiver. Murray v. Gilmore, D.D.C.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 82, affirmed in part, reversed in part 406 F.3d 708, 365 U.S.App.D.C. 372. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Defendant who had been appointed receiver upon an ex parte application in connection with foreclosure of plaintiff's leasehold interest was not immune from liability under this section proscribing a deprivation of rights, or under New York law, on claim that receiver had not confined himself to matters committed to him by the order but had undertaken to act with respect to property wholly outside both the mortgage and the order appointing him. City Partners, Ltd. v. Jamaica Sav. Bank, E.D.N.Y.1978, 454 F.Supp. 1269. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Where court-appointed receiver carried out terms of court order which was issued by court of competent jurisdiction and valid on its face, receiver was immune from civil rights suit. Brewer v. Hill, N.D.Tex.1978, 453 F.Supp. 67. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3401. Referees, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Referee and administrative officer of county juvenile court was entitled to full reach of doctrine of judicial or quasi judicial immunity. Lucarell v. McNair, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1972, 453 F.2d 836. Courts 55

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Appeals referee for state employment security commission (ESC), who denied terminated employee's application for unemployment compensation, had absolute quasi-judicial immunity from employee's § 1983 claims against him; referee performed adjudicative functions, strong need existed to insulate appeals referees from harassment and intimidation, and such referees operated within a web of procedural safeguards that mitigated need for private damages actions to curb unconstitutional conduct. Howard v. Food Lion, Inc., M.D.N.C.2002, 232 F.Supp.2d 585. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Juvenile referee was entitled to dismissal of § 1983 action against him on grounds of judicial immunity, where acts alleged in complaint were within referee's jurisdiction and were performed in its judicial capacity. McCrum v. Elkhart County Dept. of Public Welfare, N.D.Ind.1992, 806 F.Supp. 203, reconsideration granted. Civil Rights 1376(8)

In view of adjudicative nature of functions performed by hearing appeals referee for the Arkansas Employment Security Division, as well as statutory safeguards against unconstitutional or otherwise improper conduct built into structure of the Division's adjudicatory system, referee was absolutely immune from liability under this section and section 1981 of this title for damages based on actions taken in connection with his duties. Jones v. Singer Career Systems, E.D.Ark.1984, 584 F.Supp. 1253. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Judges, commissioners, and referees acting in judicial capacity are immune from suits for damages arising out of acts committed within their judicial jurisdiction. Miller v. Reddin, D.C.Cal.1968, 293 F.Supp. 216, remanded on other grounds 422 F.2d 1264. Court Commissioners 3; Judges 36; Reference 77

3402. Special counsel, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Where consent decree permanently enjoining violation of securities laws provided for selection of special counsel to review dissemination of information to public by corporation and to take reasonable steps to secure corporation's compliance with securities laws, such special counsel was not entitled to absolute immunity comparable to that granted judicial officers. Canadian Javelin, Ltd. v. Lawler, Kent & Eisenberg, D.C.D.C.1979, 478 F.Supp. 448. Attorney And Client 26

Special counsel, who acted under supervision of state court with regard to investigation of alleged improper solicitation by certain members of city bar, was immune from damages under this section. Kremer v. Stewart, E.D.Pa.1974, 378 F.Supp. 1195. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3403. Special masters, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Judicial immunity may be extended to officials other than judges when their judgments are functionally comparable to those of judges, that is, because they, too, exercise discretionary judgment as part of their function. Gabbert v. Conn, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1997, 131 F.3d 793, certiorari granted in part 119 S.Ct. 39, 525 U.S. 809, 142 L.Ed.2d 30, reversed 119 S.Ct. 1292, 526 U.S. 286, 143 L.Ed.2d 399. Officers And Public Employees 114

Special master who ordered that party be detained approximately 48 hours in county jail pending involuntary commitment proceedings was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from any civil rights liability for allegedly depriving detainee of constitutional rights. Boston v. Lafayette County, Miss., N.D.Miss.1990, 744 F.Supp. 746, affirmed 933 F.2d 1003. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Special master was performing judicial duty pursuant to Mississippi statutory authority when he ordered temporary detainment of mentally ill person in county jail and, therefore, was not county policymaker for purposes of § 1983, even if hospital was most appropriate place of confinement, and even if master negligently misapplied or misinterpreted statute permitting master to order temporary detention in jail that is only reasonable location for detention; statute substantially limited master's discretion. Boston v. Lafayette County, Miss., N.D.Miss.1990, 743

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

F.Supp. 462. Civil Rights 1351(6)

3404. Witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials--Generally

Section 1983 plaintiff may not circumvent witness's absolute immunity for testimony given in plaintiff's criminal trial by alleging that witness conspired with others to present false testimony. Franklin v. Terr, C.A.9 (Cal.) 2000, 201 F.3d 1098. Civil Rights 1375

Witnesses enjoy immunity for § 1983 liability only for their actions in testifying and are not immune for extra-judicial actions such as alleged conspiracy to present false testimony. Dory v. Ryan, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 25 F.3d 81. Civil Rights 1375

Witness in state judicial proceeding and state prosecutor were both absolutely immune from civil rights suit. O'Connor v. State of Nev., C.A.9 (Nev.) 1982, 686 F.2d 749, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 491, 459 U.S. 1071, 74 L.Ed.2d 633. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(9)

Witnesses who testified at former criminal defendants' trials were absolutely immune from liability under this section, and were therefore properly dismissed from civil rights actions. Briscoe v. LaHue, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1981, 663 F.2d 713, certiorari granted 102 S.Ct. 1708, 455 U.S. 1016, 72 L.Ed.2d 132, affirmed 103 S.Ct. 1108, 460 U.S. 325, 75 L.Ed.2d 96, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 1426, 460 U.S. 1037, 75 L.Ed.2d 787.

Witnesses are absolutely immune under this section from liability actions arising from their testimony in judicial proceeding. Conley v. Office of Public Defender, Sixth Judicial Dist. of Arkansas, Pulaski and Perry Counties, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1981, 653 F.2d 1241. See, also, Buchanan v. Ford, N.D.N.Y. 1986, 638 F.Supp. 168; Macko v. Byron, N.D. Ohio 1983, 576 F.Supp. 875, affirmed 760 F.2d 95. Civil Rights 1375

Firearms examiner did not have absolute immunity from liability on civil rights claims that he withheld exculpatory information and notes both before and after murder trial and wrongfully destroyed exculpatory evidence after trial. Bembenek v. Donohoo, E.D.Wis.2005, 355 F.Supp.2d 942. Civil Rights 1375

As witness in criminal matter regarding African-American civil rights claimant's alleged rape of co-worker, co-worker was entitled to witness immunity, and could not be sued for damages under federal civil rights laws. Boykin v. Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania, M.D.Pa.1995, 893 F.Supp. 409, affirmed 91 F.3d 122, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 739, 519 U.S. 1078, 136 L.Ed.2d 678. Civil Rights 1375

Witnesses who testified before Attorney Grievance Commission and Judicial Tenure Commission were entitled to absolute immunity from civil liability for statements given in course of proceedings. Lepley v. Dresser, W.D.Mich.1988, 681 F.Supp. 418. Torts 122

Witness in state judicial proceedings was entitled to absolute immunity from suit under this section or under Bivens type remedy. O'Connor v. State of Nev., D.C.Nev.1981, 507 F.Supp. 546, affirmed 686 F.2d 749, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 491, 459 U.S. 1071, 74 L.Ed.2d 633. Civil Rights 1375

3405. ---- Common law, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Civil Rights Act of 1871 did not abrogate the common-law absolute immunity of private witnesses from damages liability for their testimony in judicial proceedings. Briscoe v. LaHue, U.S.Ind.1983, 103 S.Ct. 1108, 460 U.S. 325, 75 L.Ed.2d 96. Libel And Slander 38(4)

Policies that underlie common-law rule of absolute witness immunity apply with equal force in civil action for deprivation of rights or its counterpart, Bivens-type claim. Dale v. Bartels, S.D.N.Y.1982, 552 F.Supp. 1253, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 732 F.2d 278. Libel And Slander 38(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3406. ---- Private citizens, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Witnesses, including public officials and private citizens, are immune from civil damages based upon their testimony. Snell v. Tunnell, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1990, 920 F.2d 673, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 1622, 499 U.S. 976, 113 L.Ed.2d 719, on remand 792 F.Supp. 718. Action 14

3407. ---- Child welfare workers, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

District of Columbia social worker was entitled to absolute immunity, in child custodian's § 1983 damages action, as to her statement under oath submitted to court in support of child neglect proceeding; social worker's role was as witness in judicial proceeding, and thus statement was intimately associated with judicial process, regardless of fact that it was in form of written petition rather than oral in-court testimony. Gray v. Poole, C.A.D.C.2002, 275 F.3d 1113, 348 U.S.App.D.C. 369. Civil Rights 1375

Juvenile officer was protected by the absolute immunity afforded to witnesses for his role in providing information to state court upon which it acted. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County welfare workers are absolutely immune from liability in their individual capacities for testimony in child custody case and for other steps taken to present case for decision by court. McCrum v. Elkhart County Dept. of Public Welfare, N.D.Ind.1992, 806 F.Supp. 203, reconsideration granted. Infants 17

Staff person of an advocacy center for children was not entitled to absolute witness immunity in a civil rights action alleging that activities of staff person leading to plaintiff's arrest occurred neither on witness stand nor during trial but rather violated plaintiff's rights; activities occurred before any legal proceedings were initiated. Fittanto v. Klein, N.D.Ill.1992, 788 F.Supp. 1451. Civil Rights 1375

3408. ---- Fire marshals, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Fire marshal, who had arrested parolee on charges underlying parole revocation proceeding and who had testified at proceeding, was absolutely immune from liability for actions in capacity of witness at revocation proceeding, so that parolee could not maintain civil rights suit against marshal for alleged improper conduct during course of revocation proceedings. Johnson v. Kelsh, S.D.N.Y.1987, 664 F.Supp. 162. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3409. ---- Grand jury witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Attorney, who brought § 1983 action against county prosecutors alleging that his right to practice his profession was violated when warrant to search him was executed while his client was testifying before grand jury, had no standing to raise infringement of his client's alleged right to have attorney present outside grand jury room. Conn v. Gabbert, U.S.Cal.1999, 119 S.Ct. 1292, 526 U.S. 286, 143 L.Ed.2d 399. Civil Rights 1332(4)

For purposes of complaining witness exception to immunity generally extended, in § 1983 actions, to grand jury witnesses, "complaining witness" is a person who actively instigated or encouraged the plaintiff's prosecution. Kulas v. Flores, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 2001, 255 F.3d 780, certiorari denied 122 S.Ct. 1557, 535 U.S. 995, 152 L.Ed.2d 480. Civil Rights 1375

Deputy sheriff, as defendant in federal civil rights suit for malicious prosecution, would be denied absolute immunity for his grand jury testimony only if he was found to be a complaining witness and only if the testimony was relevant to the manner in which he initiated or perpetrated the prosecution of the plaintiff. Anthony v. Baker,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

C.A.10 (Colo.) 1992, 955 F.2d 1395, on remand 808 F.Supp. 1523. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Investigator for Office of the Attorney General of the State of Alabama was entitled to absolute immunity from liability from § 1983 claim with regard to his testimony before grand jury. Strength v. Hubert, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1988, 854 F.2d 421, rehearing denied 860 F.2d 1092. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County deputy sheriff had absolute witness immunity from damages liability under §§ 1983 based on his testimony before grand jury, where deputy sheriff did not act maliciously by testifying truthfully as to what he had been told about drug deal by an informant. Caldwell v. Green, W.D.Va.2006, 451 F.Supp.2d 811. Civil Rights 1375

3410. ---- Municipal officials, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

City officials were entitled to absolute immunity in § 1983 with regards to testimony they gave at Civil Service Commission hearing involving discipline of city firefighter, although this immunity did not protect them from liability from firefighter's claim that their testimony was part of conspiracy consisting of testimony and other nontestimonial acts. Cignetti v. Healy, D.Mass.1997, 967 F.Supp. 10. Civil Rights 1375

City officials were not entitled to absolute immunity on civil rights claim that they engaged in conspiracy to conceal evidence and gave false testimony in action in state court in effort to deprive plaintiffs of their constitutional right of access to courts. Foster v. City of Lake Jackson, Tex., S.D.Tex.1993, 813 F.Supp. 1262, reversed 28 F.3d 425, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3411. ---- Parole officials, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Parole officer was entitled to absolute immunity, as witness in state habeas corpus proceeding, in parolee's § 1983 action alleging that officer submitted perjurious affidavit in opposition to parolee's petition for habeas relief, which resulted in delay of that relief; officer was not complaining witness as his affidavit did not serve to institute proceeding, functions of parole officer witness are same as those of any other witness, and, even though cross-examination was not available as to affidavit, parolee was afforded all other protection of judicial process. Sykes v. James, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 13 F.3d 515, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 2749, 512 U.S. 1240, 129 L.Ed.2d 867 . Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(7)

3412. ---- Police officers, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Parole officer, acting within scope of his duties when he testified at parole revocation hearing, was entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from §§ 1983 suit for damages brought by parolee who had successfully defended parole violation charges. Holmes v. Crosby, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2005, 418 F.3d 1256. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Deputy sheriff's testimony in criminal defendant's pretrial suppression hearing was absolutely immune from defendant's § 1983 claim, in which defendant claimed that deputy gave perjured testimony at hearing, since suppression hearing was adversarial in nature, and deputy's testimony at suppression hearing was subject to same procedural safeguards as trial testimony; deputy was under oath, appeared before judge on the record, was cross-examined by defendant, and was subject to penalty of criminal perjury. Moore v. McDonald, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1994, 30 F.3d 616. Civil Rights 1375

Police officer witness was not entitled to absolute immunity in defendant's § 1983 action alleging that witness conspired with prosecutor to convict defendant based on perjured testimony; witnesses enjoy absolute immunity only for their actions in testifying, not for extra-judicial conspiracies to give false testimony. Dory v. Ryan, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 25 F.3d 81. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police officer who testified before grand jury that indicted arrestee did not have absolute witness immunity in arrestee's subsequent civil rights action for false arrest; although immune testimony led to arrest, officer was not participating as witness in judicial proceeding when he executed arrest warrant. Juriss v. McGowan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 957 F.2d 345. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Law enforcement officers who testified at adversarial, pretrial proceedings were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 liability based on the testimony. Daloia v. Rose, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 849 F.2d 74, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 242, 488 U.S. 898, 102 L.Ed.2d 231. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(6)

Only officers acting outside of their legitimate role in the judicial process by withholding exculpatory information or acting in bad faith should not receive absolute witness immunity from liability on an arrestee's wrongful prosecution under §§ 1983, based on officer's testimony before grand jury; therefore, officers who are acting in good faith within the course of their duties are entitled to Briscoe immunity. Caldwell v. Green, W.D.Va.2006, 451 F.Supp.2d 811. Civil Rights 1375

Absolute immunity from liability under §§ 1983 attached to acting police chief's witness testimony at arbitration proceedings regarding matters underlying prior disciplinary proceedings against town police officer; both parties appeared by counsel and had full opportunity to adduce evidence, to cross-examine each other's witnesses and to make argument in support of their respective positions, and neither party raised any objections to fairness of arbitration proceedings. Rolon v. Henneman, S.D.N.Y.2005, 389 F.Supp.2d 517. Civil Rights 1375

Detective was not entitled to testimonial immunity from § 1983 suit for coercing informant to testify falsely; while informant was immune for giving false testimony at trial, detective was not vicariously immune for his alleged involvement in coercing informant to testify falsely. Spurlock v. Whitley, M.D.Tenn.1997, 971 F.Supp. 1166, affirmed 167 F.3d 995. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Absolute immunity sheltered deputies from § 1983 claim that deputies testified falsely in underlying criminal trial in which plaintiff was convicted. White v. Tamlyn, E.D.Mich.1997, 961 F.Supp. 1047. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police detective was not entitled to absolute witness immunity from liability for arrestee's § 1983 claim for wrongful prosecution, which was based on detective's allegedly withholding from grand jury evidence showing lack of probable cause for sole purpose of having arrestee prosecuted; defendant was not simply withholding evidence from grand jury, but rather acting to further prosecution that he knew lacked probable cause. Lewis v. McDorman, W.D.Va.1992, 820 F.Supp. 1001, affirmed 28 F.3d 1210. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer had absolute immunity from federal civil rights action based on claim that he testified falsely at the plaintiff's criminal trial. Dukes v. State of N.Y., S.D.N.Y.1990, 743 F.Supp. 1037. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Insofar as police detective might be considered "witness" for prosecution, he would be immune from suit under section 1983. Duncan v. State of W.Va., S.D.W.Va.1984, 597 F.Supp. 1195. Civil Rights 1375

3413. ---- Prison officials, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether daughter was a complaining witness in murder prosecution against her father, precluding summary judgment on issue whether she was entitled to absolute witness immunity in the father's § 1983 suit against her in which he alleged that she conspired with county officials to conceal that she recovered the memory while under hypnosis, and that she conspired with county officials to exclude from the father's criminal trial evidence that everything she knew about the murder could have been learned from information in the public domain. Franklin v. Terr, N.D.Cal.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 1145, affirmed 2006 WL 897705 . Federal Civil Procedure 2491.7

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Osteopath who conducted psychiatric evaluation of inmate and prison counselor who instituted commitment hearing were entitled to absolute immunity from liability for alleged civil rights violations under overlapping principles of witness immunity, quasi-judicial immunity, and prosecutorial immunity; osteopath and counselor did more than testify as routine witnesses and in fact participated in process of deciding issues. McArdle v. Tronetti, W.D.Pa.1991, 769 F.Supp. 188, affirmed 961 F.2d 1083. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

3414. ---- Public defenders, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Inmate had no cause of action against Office of Public Defender under this section based on actions of public defender who witnessed lineup and testified for state that procedures followed were consistent with procedures followed in other lineups, since public defender had witness immunity and Office of Public Defender could not be liable for actions of its employees without showing of direct responsibility. Conley v. Office of Public Defender, Sixth Judicial Dist. of Arkansas, Pulaski and Perry Counties, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1981, 653 F.2d 1241. Civil Rights 1326(10)

3415. ---- False testimony, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Supreme Court would not carve out an exception to general rule of witness immunity from damages liability for perjured testimony in cases of alleged perjury by police officer witnesses. Briscoe v. LaHue, U.S.Ind.1983, 103 S.Ct. 1108, 460 U.S. 325, 75 L.Ed.2d 96. Civil Rights 1375

Witnesses, including police officers, are shielded by absolute immunity from liability for their allegedly perjurious testimony. Enlow v. Tishomingo County, Miss., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1992, 962 F.2d 501, rehearing denied 971 F.2d 750 . Municipal Corporations 747(3); Torts 122

Deputy sheriffs and jail nurse were absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for allegedly giving false or contradictory testimony to procure battery conviction of inmate. Miller v. Glanz, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1991, 948 F.2d 1562. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(7)

State social worker who provided affidavit used in defendant's bail revocation hearing was entitled to absolute witness immunity in civil rights action based on defendant's claim that affidavit contained false information; affidavit was submitted under possible penalty of perjury and defendant was entitled to present affidavits and witnesses of his own to refute statements made by social worker. Burns v. County of King, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1989, 883 F.2d 819. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Witness who testified at preliminary criminal hearing in state court was entitled to absolute immunity from liability in subsequent civil rights suit for damages based on alleged perjured testimony given at proceedings. Williams v. Hepting, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1988, 844 F.2d 138, 94 A.L.R. Fed. 879, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 135, 488 U.S. 851, 102 L.Ed.2d 107. Civil Rights 1375

Mayor was not liable under § 1983 for conspiring to give false and incomplete testimony in grand jury proceedings, absent allegation that mayor was personally involved in alleged conspiracy, where city officials who allegedly were involved in conspiracy were entitled to absolute witness immunity. Alioto v. City of Shively, Ky., C.A.6 (Ky.) 1987, 835 F.2d 1173. Conspiracy 7.5(1)

Police officer who allegedly gave perjurious testimony during adversarial pretrial proceedings in criminal matter was entitled to absolute witness immunity from liability for damages flowing from his testimony. Holt v. Castaneda, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1987, 832 F.2d 123, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 1275, 485 U.S. 979, 99 L.Ed.2d 486. Civil Rights 1375

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Witnesses in judicial proceedings were absolutely immune from civil liability under Section 1983 based on their testimony, even if they knowingly gave perjured testimony; thus, plaintiffs' claim based on perjured testimony did not sufficiently state cause of action under Section 1983. Macko v. Byron, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1985, 760 F.2d 95. Civil Rights 1375

In action brought by developers against a municipality and its officials for conspiracy in adopting policy of discriminatory treatment of mobile home parks and apartment building developers, developers could not recover on perjury charge, in that witnesses were absolutely immune from any damages action under this section and municipality could not be held liable for actions of municipal officials. Cloutier v. Town of Epping, C.A.1 (N.H.) 1983, 714 F.2d 1184. Civil Rights 1347; Civil Rights 1375

Police department forensic criminalist, who allegedly conspired with prosecutor to violate plaintiff's civil rights, was not protected from conspiracy liability by the absolute immunity enjoyed by testifying witnesses; complaint adequately pled several extra-judicial instances of criminalist's participation in the alleged conspiracy by collecting physical evidence at the crime scene, preparing reports on the inculpatory conclusions that could be drawn from the evidence, and lying on the stand to cover up his defalcations or those of the prosecutor in prosecution of plaintiff, who was released after DNA testing on the physical evidence used against him exonerated him of the crimes for which he was convicted. Charles v. City of Boston, D.Mass.2005, 365 F.Supp.2d 82. Conspiracy 13

Lab analyst did not have absolute immunity from liability on civil rights claim that she falsified micro-serology report by omitting exculpatory evidence and, as result, led medical examiner to present misleading testimony at criminal trial. Bembenek v. Donohoo, E.D.Wis.2005, 355 F.Supp.2d 942. Civil Rights 1375

Witness is absolutely immune from liability under § 1983 as to claims based on testimony given at judicial or administrative proceeding, even if testimony is knowingly and intentionally perjurious. Cignetti v. Healy, D.Mass.1997, 967 F.Supp. 10. Civil Rights 1375

Police officers enjoy absolute immunity from subsequent civil liability under § 1983 for their testimony at criminal trial, even when officers lie under oath at trial. Green v. Saenz, N.D.Ill.1992, 812 F.Supp. 798. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Doctrine of witness immunity did not require dismissal of driver's civil rights claim against police officer who initiated license revocation process and allegedly gave false testimony at administrative hearing and on subsequent appeals; claim was most akin to action against complaining witness in malicious prosecution case, and shield of witness immunity was thus inapplicable. Owens v. Keazer, D.Kan.1992, 795 F.Supp. 372. Witnesses 304(1)

3416. ---- Malicious prosecutions, witnesses, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Immunity available to police officer in face of defamation claim is not available in malicious prosecution action under § 1983, arising out of officer's role as "complaining witness." White v. Frank, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 855 F.2d 956. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(6)

Witness immunity doctrine did not apply to civil rights claim of former prisoner under Fourth Amendment, that physician acted as "de facto coroner," tampered with evidence, and supplied false medical records to prosecution which led to prisoner's false arrest and prosecution. Marsh v. San Diego County, S.D.Cal.2006, 432 F.Supp.2d 1035. Civil Rights 1375

Police officers who did not merely testify at trial, but initiated criminal prosecution against accused, did not enjoy absolute immunity from malicious prosecution claim for their conduct as complaining, and not just testifying, witnesses. Green v. Saenz, N.D.Ill.1992, 812 F.Supp. 798. Malicious Prosecution 42

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3417. Miscellaneous judicial and quasi-judicial officials, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

Members of state court screening committee were not entitled to quasi-judicial absolute immunity on attorney's action under §§§§ 1981 and 1983 seeking damages arising from committee's decision to remove attorney from panel of attorneys certified to serve as court-appointed counsel for indigent defendants in criminal cases; attorney had no right to formal hearing, attorney had no right to be apprised of details of accusation against him or of identity of his accuser, there was no separation of committee's investigative and decisionmaking functions, committee's decision was not subject to judicial review, and committee's functions were not integrally related to any specific judicial proceeding. Mitchell v. Fishbein, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 377 F.3d 157. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Louisiana officials were not entitled to absolute immunity against crop duster's claim that officials violated his civil rights by encouraging perjured testimony to facilitate adjudicating crop duster guilty of violating Louisiana's Pesticide Control laws and singling crop duster out for prosecution and revocation of his license using illegally obtained evidence; officials' duties were not so sensitive as to require total shield from liability, and officials failed to show that sufficient safeguards existed in the regulatory framework to inhibit unconstitutional conduct. Johnson v. Odom, C.A.5 (La.) 1990, 910 F.2d 1273, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 1387, 499 U.S. 936, 113 L.Ed.2d 443. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Action brought by attorney against state court officials, stemming from alleged reduction in attorney's pay as public defender, was properly dismissed as frivolous on immunity grounds, since officials were assisting judges of court in performing judicial functions. Bliven v. Hunt, E.D.N.Y.2005, 418 F.Supp.2d 135. States 78

Under functional approach, New York Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) Inspector General was not entitled to absolute immunity from liability to former employee under §§ 1983, as his statutory responsibilities did not resemble those of judge or prosecutor. Anemone v. Metropolitan Transp. Authority, S.D.N.Y.2006, 410 F.Supp.2d 255. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Director of treatment facility for patients confined pursuant to sexually violent persons law could not be held liable for alleged violation of substantive due process rights of patient on basis of quasi-judicial act of denying patient's grievance regarding his removal from particular treatment program. Laxton v. Watters, W.D.Wis.2004, 348 F.Supp.2d 1024. Civil Rights 1360

Members of township zoning hearing board had quasi-judicial immunity from § 1983 suit, in their individual capacities, claiming that they selectively enforced ordinance requiring that medical clinics must be located on minimum three-acre plots, when only act alleged was review of order closing facility. Associates In Obstetrics & Gynecology v. Upper Merion Tp., E.D.Pa.2003, 270 F.Supp.2d 633. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Administrative law judge (ALJ) who issued finding that assault charge against restaurant owner was sustained by the evidence, as a result of which state liquor authority suspended owner's liquor license for 45 days, was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from restaurant owner's § 1983 civil rights suit, where restaurant and its owner were represented by counsel at the hearing from which the finding issued, where those parties had procedural safeguards against erroneous, unlawful, or unconstitutional decisions, and where there was no indication that the ALJ, though a deputy commissioner of the liquor authority, had acted in other than an independent capacity in his role as factfinder. D'Agostino v. New York State Liquor Authority, W.D.N.Y.1996, 913 F.Supp. 757, affirmed 104 F.3d 351. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Director of disciplinary program for state department of correctional services was not entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity, in inmate's § 1983 suit. Gilbert v. Selsky, S.D.N.Y.1994, 867 F.Supp. 159, as amended. Civil Rights 1376(8)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Personnel hearing officer (PHO) who conducted hearing at which city's decision to terminate firefighter was upheld, was absolutely immune from firefighter's § 1983 action alleging procedural and substantive irregularities in hearing; even though PHO was private independent contractor to city, functions he performed were those that government employees would have to carry out had city not contracted for their performance, and denying immunity could very well constitute disincentive for others to become PHOs in future. Saavedra v. City of Albuquerque, D.N.M.1994, 859 F.Supp. 526, affirmed 73 F.3d 1525. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Officials of Oregon's Mortuary and Cemetery Board enjoyed quasi-judicial immunity from liability in §§ 1983 action alleging that plaintiff's funeral establishment license was improperly revoked on basis of race, as claims were based on actions undertaken in Board's judicial capacity. Brown v. Mortuary and Cemetery Bd., C.A.9 (Or.) 2005, 144 Fed.Appx. 581, 2005 WL 1140012, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3418. Law clerks, immunity of miscellaneous judicial and quasi judicial officials

District court judge's law clerk was entitled to absolute judicial immunity from civil rights suit with respect to clerk's acts assisting judge in carrying out judge's judicial functions. Jackson v. Houck, C.A.4 (S.C.) 2006, 2006 WL 1344807, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

XXX. PROSECUTORIAL IMMUNITY

<Subdivision Index>

Administrative or investigative duties 3460
Admission of evidence, jurisdictional duties 3458
Advisor to county officials 3465
Advisor to police officers 3466
Advisor to prison officials 3467
Advisor to probation officers 3468
Application for search warrants, searches and seizures 3515
Arrest warrants 3491
Attorney disciplinary proceedings 3477
Attorneys general, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity, prosecutorial immunity 3448a
Bail 3492
Bar associations and committees, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3445
Bond or bail 3492
Building code enforcement 3471
Building inspections 3462
Child neglect and abuse proceedings, juvenile court proceedings 3481
Child welfare workers, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3450
City attorneys, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3446
Civil proceedings 3470
Commitment to mental hospital 3472
Condemnation proceedings, prosecutorial immunity 3523
Confessions 3493
Confiscation of property 3494, 3495
Confiscation of property - Generally 3494
Confiscation of property - Return of property 3495

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Considerations governing generally 3455
Contempt proceedings 3478
Convictions affirmed or reversed on appeal 3490
Cruel and unusual punishment 3496
Decisions against prosecution 3485
Delays in prosecution 3489

Dependency proceedings 3497
Destruction of evidence, evidence, prosecutorial immunity 3511a
District attorneys, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3447
Duties covered 3456
Employment duties 3469
Entrapment, jurisdictional duties 3459
Evidence 3511-3512
- Evidence - Generally 3511
- Evidence - Destruction of evidence 3511a
- Evidence - Exculpatory evidence withheld 3511b
- Evidence - False testimony 3512

Exculpatory evidence withheld, evidence, prosecutorial immunity 3511b
Execution of arrest warrants, searches and seizures 3517
Execution of search warrants, searches and seizures 3516
Expungement of records 3498
Extradition 3499
False testimony, evidence 3512
Federal prosecutorial immunity compared 3442
Forfeiture 3494, 3495
Grand jury proceedings 3500

Habeas corpus, post-conviction proceedings 3509
Imprisonment 3501
Indictment or information 3502
Initiation of prosecution 3483
Inquests 3503
Insurance proceedings 3473
Intent of prosecution 3486, 3487
- Intent of prosecution - Generally 3486
- Intent of prosecution - Malicious prosecutions 3487

Internal investigation division hearings 3479
Investigative duties 3460
Investigators, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3451
Judicial immunity compared 3443
Jurisdictional duties 3457-3459
- Jurisdictional duties - Generally 3457
- Jurisdictional duties - Admission of evidence 3458
- Jurisdictional duties - Entrapment 3459

Jury selection 3504
Juvenile court proceedings 3480, 3481
- Juvenile court proceedings - Generally 3480
- Juvenile court proceedings - Child neglect and abuse proceedings 3481

Licenses and permits 3474

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Malicious prosecutions, intent of prosecution 3487
Medical officials, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3452
Medical treatment 3489a
Motive 3488
Notices for trial 3505
Parole 3506
Permits 3474
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3444-3454
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Generally 3444
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Attorneys general 3448a
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Bar associations and committees 3445
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Child welfare workers 3450
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - City attorneys 3446
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - District attorneys 3447
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Investigators 3451
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Medical officials 3452
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - Police officers 3453
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - State attorneys 3448
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - State commission officials 3454
Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity - State prosecutors 3449
Pleas 3507
Police duties distinguished 3464
Police officers, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3453
Post-conviction proceedings 3508, 3509
Post-conviction proceedings - Generally 3508
Post-conviction proceedings - Habeas corpus 3509
Press statements 3463
Prison and prisoner proceedings 3482
Private complaints 3510
Probable cause 3484
Promulgation of policies and procedures 3461

Prosecutorial immunity generally 3441
Return of property, confiscation of property 3495
Scene of crime evidence 3513
Searches and seizures 3514-3517
Searches and seizures - Generally 3514
Searches and seizures - Application for search warrants 3515
Searches and seizures - Execution of arrest warrants 3517
Searches and seizures - Execution of search warrants 3516
Speedy trial 3518
State attorneys, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3448
State commission officials, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3454
State prosecutors, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity 3449
Suppression of evidence 3519
Tax proceedings 3475
Transcripts 3520

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Victim impact statements 3521
Witnesses 3522
Zoning ordinance enforcement 3476

3441. Prosecutorial immunity generally

Prosecutors are absolutely immune from suits for monetary damages under § 1983 for conduct that is intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process. Smith v. Power, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 346 F.3d 740. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Once court determines that official was functioning in core judicial or prosecutorial capacity, absolute immunity from § 1983 suit applies however erroneous act may have been, and however injurious in its consequences it may have proved to plaintiff. DiBlasio v. Novello, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 344 F.3d 292, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 2018, 541 U.S. 988, 158 L.Ed.2d 492. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor enjoys absolute immunity from personal liability for damages under § 1983 for actions in initiating prosecution and presenting state's case and those intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Esteves v. Brock, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 106 F.3d 674, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 114 F.3d 1185, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 91, 522 U.S. 828, 139 L.Ed.2d 47. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutors are entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability for conduct intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was shielded from personal liability by absolute immunity for acts within the scope of his prosecutorial duties. Schepp v. Fremont County, Wyo., C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1990, 900 F.2d 1448. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutors are cloaked with immunity from civil rights liability while pursuing their prosecutorial activities. Humble v. Foreman, C.A.5 (La.) 1977, 563 F.2d 780, rehearing denied 566 F.2d 106. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting attorney was immune from suit under this section. Ford v. Byrd, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 544 F.2d 194.

A prosecutor asserting absolute immunity under § 1983 from individual liability for conduct in initiating and presenting a criminal prosecution is also immune from § 1983 claim for conduct in preparing for those functions, such as evaluating and organizing evidence for presentation at trial or to a grand jury or determining which offenses are to be charged. Carbajal v. County of Nassau, E.D.N.Y.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Criminal prosecutors enjoy absolute immunity from claims arising out of their presentation of state's case. Hunter v. City of Beaumont, E.D.Tex.1994, 867 F.Supp. 496. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor is absolutely immune from civil rights suits for activities allegedly committed while in course and scope of his employment and duties as prosecuting attorney. O'Connor v. State of Nev., D.C.Nev.1981, 507 F.Supp. 546, affirmed 686 F.2d 749, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 491, 459 U.S. 1071, 74 L.Ed.2d 633. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor enjoys absolute immunity from suits based on alleged deprivation of civil rights when he acts within scope of his prosecutorial duties. Tyler v. Ryan, E.D.Mo.1976, 419 F.Supp. 905. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecutor, who was named individually and in his capacity as prosecutor of county, enjoyed absolute immunity from liability for damages under this section resulting from his official prosecutorial responsibility. Clark v. Brandom, W.D.Mo.1976, 415 F.Supp. 883. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3442. Federal prosecutorial immunity compared

An assistant United States attorney is clothed with judicial immunity, unless there is some reason to distinguish between liability of state prosecutors under this section and liability of federal prosecutors under federal common law. Bethea v. Reid, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1971, 445 F.2d 1163, certiorari denied 92 S.Ct. 747, 404 U.S. 1061, 30 L.Ed.2d 749. Civil Rights 1376(9); District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Absolute immunity of United States Attorney and assistant United States attorney in connection with official prosecution and other official responsibility was not abrogated by this section. Zimmerman v. Spears, W.D.Tex.1977, 428 F.Supp. 759, affirmed 565 F.2d 310. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3443. Judicial immunity compared, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity in defendant's § 1983 action alleging that prosecutor conspired to convict defendant based on perjured testimony; prosecutors enjoy immunity for all actions relating to advocacy. Dory v. Ryan, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 25 F.3d 81. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors are entitled to absolute immunity from suits for civil damages under § 1983 when those suits are predicated upon prosecutor's performance of functions intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Spielman v. Hildebrand, C.A.10 (Kan.) 1989, 873 F.2d 1377. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

In determining whether prosecutor enjoys absolute immunity from civil liability, federal courts must apply functional analysis to determine whether prosecutor's acts fall within bounds of "judicial," as opposed to "investigative or administrative" duties. Ross v. Meagan, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1981, 638 F.2d 646. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

A prosecutor whose activities are an integral part of judicial process is entitled to absolute immunity from suit under this section. Tigue v. Swaim, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1978, 585 F.2d 909. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutorial immunity from civil liability under this section is founded on the same considerations that underlie the common law immunities of judges and grand jurors acting within scope of their duties; its origin is often linked to judicial immunity. Briley v. State of Cal., C.A.9 (Cal.) 1977, 564 F.2d 849. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Key to immunity as a prosecutor is whether the acts alleged to have been wrongful were committed by the officer in the performance of an integral part of the judicial process, and as long as a district attorney is acting within that scope, or is authorized by law to do the act complained of, he is immune from civil liability for those acts. Sykes v. State of Cal. (Dept. of Motor Vehicles), C.A.9 (Cal.) 1974, 497 F.2d 197. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Immunity of quasi-judicial officers such as prosecuting attorneys and parole board members derives not from their formal association with judicial process but from fact that they exercise a discretion similar to that exercised by judges, and where an official is not called upon to exercise judicial or quasi-judicial discretion courts refuse to extend protection of absolute judicial immunity regardless of any apparent relationship of his role to the judicial system. McCray v. State of Md., C.A.4 (Md.) 1972, 456 F.2d 1. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Prosecuting attorney is quasi-judicial officer and enjoys immunity from civil action for damages and from liability under this section similar to that which protects a judge. Sires v. Cole, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1963, 320 F.2d 877. See, also, Madison v. Purdy, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1969, 410 F.2d 99; Clark v. State of Wash., C.A.9 (Wash.) 1966, 366 F.2d 678; Bauers v. Heisel, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1966, 361 F.2d 581, certiorari denied 87 S.Ct. 1367, 386 U.S. 1021, 18 L.Ed.2d 457; Gabbard v. Rose, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1966, 359 F.2d 182; Robichaud v. Ronan, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1965, 351 F.2d 533; Corsican Productions v. Pitchess, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1964, 338 F.2d 441; Kenney v. Fox, C.A.Mich.1956, 232 F.2d 288, certiorari denied 77 S.Ct. 84, 352 U.S. 855, 856, 1 L.Ed.2d 66; Jennings v. Nester, C.A.Ill.1955, 217 F.2d 153, certiorari denied 75 S.Ct. 888, 349 U.S. 958, 99 L.Ed. 1281; Boyd v. Huffman, D.C.Ohio 1972, 342 F.Supp. 787; Phipps v. Armour, D.C.Tenn.1971, 335 F.Supp. 768; Balistrieri v. Warren, D.C.Wis.1970, 314 F.Supp. 824; Ambrek v. Clark, D.C.Pa.1968, 287 F.Supp. 208; Friedman v. Younger, D.C.Cal.1968, 282 F.Supp. 710; Johnson v. Kreider, D.C.Pa.1967, 264 F.Supp. 188; Dixon v. State of Md. by Carter, D.C.Md.1966, 261 F.Supp. 746. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

A prosecuting attorney is afforded the same judicial immunity from civil rights damage claims as is afforded judges; a prosecuting attorney is afforded such immunity because his primary responsibility is essentially judicial, the prosecution of the guilty and the protection of the innocent, and because his office is vested with a vast quantum of discretion which is necessary for vindication of the public interest, it being imperative that he enjoy the same freedom and independence of action as judges in performing his duties. Clark v. Zimmerman, M.D.Pa.1975, 394 F.Supp. 1166. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Doctrine of judicial immunity has been extended to prosecutors who are considered part of the judicial process. Lundblade v. Doyle, N.D.Ill.1974, 376 F.Supp. 57. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3444. Persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity--Generally

Because it detracts from § 1983's broad remedial purpose, absolute immunity applies only to limited class of officials and functions such as prosecutors, executive officers initiating administrative proceedings, government attorneys defending civil suits, and government attorneys initiating civil suits. Spear v. Town of West Hartford, C.A.2 (Conn.) 1992, 954 F.2d 63, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 66, 506 U.S. 819, 121 L.Ed.2d 33. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(9)

3445. ---- Bar associations and committees, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Even if Rhode Island Bar Association and its former Committee on Unauthorized Practice of Law were state actors, if they had clear authority to bring civil claim or to take steps that lead to criminal prosecution, and if it was that threat of prosecution that chilled constitutional rights of psychologist offering divorce mediation service, allegedly in violation of law prohibiting practice of law by nonattorneys, Association and Committee were absolutely immune from damage liability under statute governing deprivation of civil rights; moreover, if role of Committee and Association was that of investigator, they would still be entitled to qualified immunity for no reasonable person would have known that their conduct in asking psychologist to cease offering service violated his civil rights. Werle v. Rhode Island Bar Ass'n, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1985, 755 F.2d 195. Civil Rights 1373

3446. ---- City attorneys, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

An assistant city attorney, while performing his duties as a prosecutor, is absolutely immune from liability under this section. Front Runner Messenger Service, Inc. v. Ghini, N.D.Ill.1979, 468 F.Supp. 305. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3447. ---- District attorneys, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Mere fact that successful candidate for office of district attorney had not yet assumed duties of his office, and thus did not have administration with which assistant district attorney, based on his open support of opposing candidate, could interfere did not affect qualified immunity to which district attorney was entitled for dismissing assistant district attorney based on his political affiliation; one who knows he is about to become district attorney must begin to assemble his staff before he actually assumes position. Aucoin v. Haney, C.A.5 (La.) 2002, 306 F.3d 268, on subsequent appeal 93 Fed.Appx. 638, 2004 WL 628886. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

District Attorney and Assistant District Attorney had absolute immunity on §§ 1983 claims against them in their individual capacities by criminal defendant, arising out of their actions in prosecuting her criminal case, including their decision to prosecute her on charges that had previously been dismissed. Puckett v. Carter, M.D.N.C.2006, 454 F.Supp.2d 448. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State statute providing prosecutors with immunity for performance of quasi-judicial duties could not, as state law, immunize deputy district attorney from §§ 1983 claim. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County district attorney was entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from arrestee's § 1983 claims against him in his official capacity, arising from attorney's actions in initiating and conducting prosecution against arrestee; attorney was acting in quasi-judicial capacity when he was prosecuting criminal matter against arrestee, and thus he was representing the State of New York and not the county. Houghton v. Cardone, W.D.N.Y.2003, 295 F.Supp.2d 268. Federal Courts 269

District attorney was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity with respect to claims for damages against him in his individual capacity with respect to § 1983 action involving alleged discrimination against plaintiff in connection with investigations by police and decision making of prosecutors because plaintiff was the second to complain rather than the first; there was no indication that district attorney directly and personally tilted investigation to come out in favor or against any particular party or engaged in falsification of evidence or other behavior justifying invocation of investigative function exception to such immunity. Myers v. County of Orange, S.D.N.Y.1994, 870 F.Supp. 555. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

District attorney enjoyed absolute immunity from § 1983 monetary liability for prosecuting petitioner. Cross v. Meisel, E.D.Pa.1989, 720 F.Supp. 486. Civil Rights 1375

Assistant district attorney, in her official capacity, was entitled to immunity under doctrine of absolute prosecutorial immunity from pre-trial detainee's § 1983 lawsuit seeking damages for attorney's alleged failure to prevent detainee's detention in a smoking facility; attorney represented the state. Reid v. Schuman, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 83 Fed.Appx. 376, 2003 WL 22965003, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3448. ---- State attorneys, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

State attorney general and assistant attorney general were not entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 suit in which it was alleged that attorneys intervened in medical care of never-competent patient, who was in state custody and suffered from gastrointestinal distress, by directing the administration of invasive procedures to sustain patient's life, in violation of patient's constitutional rights; there was no historical or common-law support for extending absolute immunity in such cases, given that challenged intervention was not prosecutorial or intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Blouin ex rel. Estate of Pouliot v. Spitzer, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 356 F.3d 348. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State attorneys were absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for investigation of charges against physician, which occurred after Colorado Board of Medical Examiners directed Attorney General's office to prepare formal disciplinary complaint based on physician's failure to treat indigent patient and alleged sexual misconduct incidents; there was no evidence that state attorneys' participation in any investigation of those incidents was unnecessary to their preparation of case against physician. Pfeiffer v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1991, 929 F.2d 1484. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County attorneys were entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity in arrestee's civil rights action, where complaint did not allege that county attorneys dealt with arrestee in any capacity other than as county prosecutors. Dees v. Vendel, D.Kan.1994, 856 F.Supp. 1531, reconsideration denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3448A. ---- Attorneys general, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Allegations of minor cancer patient and his parents, who were arrested for refusing to subject patient to chemotherapy, that assistant attorney general provided factual information to district attorney's office that led to criminal charges against parents precluded granting absolute prosecutorial immunity on claims asserted against assistant attorney general in her individual capacity in civil rights action. P.J. ex rel. Jensen v. Utah, D.Utah 2006, 2006 WL 1702585, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3449. ---- State prosecutors, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

State prosecutors are entitled to absolute immunity against suits brought pursuant to § 1983 for activities "intimately associated with judicial" process, such as initiating and pursing criminal prosecutions. Gagan v. Norton, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1994, 35 F.3d 1473, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1175, 513 U.S. 1183, 130 L.Ed.2d 1128. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Criminal prosecutors enjoy absolute immunity from claims for damages asserted under § 1983 for actions taken in presentation of state's case, including prosecutor's actions in initiating prosecution and in carrying case through judicial process. Boyd v. Biggers, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1994, 31 F.3d 279. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

State prosecutors were immune from civil rights liability where plaintiff made no allegations of fact which would support finding that they acted outside scope of their prosecutorial duties. Martinez v. Chavez, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1978, 574 F.2d 1043. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecuting attorneys are entitled to absolute immunity from §§ 1983 actions for conduct intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute immunity of criminal prosecutors to claims arising out of presentation of state's case extends from decision to initiate prosecution to all actions taken that move case through judicial process. Hunter v. City of Beaumont, E.D.Tex.1994, 867 F.Supp. 496. Civil Rights 1376(9)

A state prosecutor enjoys an absolute immunity from civil rights damage liability for those of his acts which relate to his role as advocate for the state and officer of the court. Goodrich v. Gonzalez, E.D.N.Y.1978, 451 F.Supp. 747 . Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutors enjoy an immunity from damages in civil rights suits. Maney v. Ratcliff, E.D.Wis.1975, 399 F.Supp. 760. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3450. ---- Child welfare workers, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Social worker and therapist, as employees of Division of Child and Family Services (DCFS), were entitled to absolute immunity for their alleged misconduct in placing minor child in foster care, where child allegedly sexually abused younger child, barring child's guardian ad litem's § 1983 claims against them in their individual capacities, where all alleged misconduct by DCFS employees, including their failure to disclose child's history as perpetrator of sexual abuse, was in connection with child's court-ordered placement and ongoing child dependency proceedings, and alleged abuse occurred only after court issued official placement order. Miller v. Gammie, C.A.9 (Nev.) 2002, 292 F.3d 982, rehearing granted, opinion vacated 309 F.3d 1209, on rehearing 335 F.3d 889. Infants

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

17

Child welfare department caseworkers were entitled to absolute immunity for their actions on behalf of state in preparing for, initiating, and prosecuting dependency proceedings, including formulation and presentation of recommendations to court in course of such proceedings, in grandmother's § 1983 action alleging that dependency decisions made with respect to granddaughter violated grandmother's substantive due process rights; caseworker's functions were prosecutorial in nature, public policy supported such immunity, and dependency proceedings incorporated safeguards that protected citizens from unconstitutional actions by child welfare workers. Ernst v. Child and Youth Services of Chester County, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1997, 108 F.3d 486, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 139, 522 U.S. 850, 139 L.Ed.2d 87. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(3)

Child welfare authorities were absolutely immune from liability in civil rights action for their initiation of ex parte proceedings in state court that led to award of temporary protective custody of child to the state after case worker received reports from treating physician indicating his suspicion that mother was engaging in life-threatening form of child abuse; case worker's role was functionally comparable to that of prosecutor. Thomason v. SCAN Volunteer Services, Inc., C.A.8 (Ark.) 1996, 85 F.3d 1365. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Absolute prosecutorial immunity did not apply to social worker's decision to "open a case" to investigate alleged child abuse, even though criminal prosecution could conceivably result from investigation; social worker did not initiate any court action in role of prosecutor. Achterhof v. Selvaggio, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 886 F.2d 826, on remand 757 F.Supp. 837. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Child protective services worker enjoyed absolute immunity from liability for seeking and obtaining an ex parte court order directing that plaintiff's newborn daughter be seized from hospital and placed in temporary shelter care; worker's actions in seeking and obtaining court order were within scope of her statutory role as a quasi-prosecutor. Coverdell v. Department of Social and Health Services, State of Wash., C.A.9 (Wash.) 1987, 834 F.2d 758. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(3)

Social worker was not entitled to absolute quasi-prosecutorial immunity under §§ 1983 for the actions alleged in mother's complaint since social worker was not acting in a quasi-prosecutorial capacity when she decided to investigate hospital staff's allegations concerning mother's disability, when she sought and obtained information from Alaska regarding child protection proceedings there, when she interviewed mother at the hospital with two armed police officers, when she took custody of mother's newborn baby on behalf of the State, or when she filed an affidavit in state court asserting the truth of various matters in a sworn statement; while social worker was entitled to absolute immunity for continuing the baby's legal custody with State after judge authorized such custody, judge's order could not retroactively impute judicial immunity to social worker's prior actions. Brown v. Montana, D.Mont.2006, 442 F.Supp.2d 982. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Social workers were entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity, in action under §§ 1983, for their actions in prosecuting child protection proceedings, where any alleged misrepresentations to dependency court and failure to disclose exculpatory evidence by social workers occurred during dependency proceedings. Parkes v. County of San Diego, S.D.Cal.2004, 345 F.Supp.2d 1071. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County child protective services workers were absolutely immune from suit by mother, daughter, and stepfather alleging substantive due process violations, insofar as claim was based on workers' decision to seek emergency removal of daughter, where Virginia law permitted emergency removal of child without prior judicial authorization, and workers were acting in prosecutorial, rather than investigative, capacity. Gedrich v. Fairfax County Dept. of Family Services, E.D.Va.2003, 282 F.Supp.2d 439. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Decision of social worker to file charges or petition for removal of child from parents is protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity even in face of accusations of reckless prosecution without adequate investigation. Fogle

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

v. Benton County SCAN, W.D.Ark.1987, 665 F.Supp. 729. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Employees of county department of social services were absolutely immune from liability under this section for alleged malicious prosecution of child protective proceedings since functions performed by employees under their child-protective duties were analogous to those of prosecutor. Whelehan v. Monroe County, W.D.N.Y.1983, 558 F.Supp. 1093. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3451. ---- Investigators, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Since investigating officer, who testified at grand jury proceeding, turned over to prosecutor all evidence, including any exculpatory evidence, he was absolutely immune from §§ 1983 liability on arrestee's malicious prosecution claim. Zamora v. City of Belen, D.N.M.2005, 383 F.Supp.2d 1315. Civil Rights 1375

Social workers are not entitled to absolute immunity, in § 1983 actions alleging violations of substantive due process rights, for their conduct in investigating the possibility that a removal petition should be filed. Gedrich v. Fairfax County Dept. of Family Services, E.D.Va.2003, 282 F.Supp.2d 439. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

Investigator who prepared felony complaint and arrest report for county jail inmate, who was accused of assaulting another inmate, was entitled to absolute immunity, even though investigator was not actually an employee of the District Attorney's office, but of the Sheriff's Department, and even though inmate's claim was for false arrest rather than malicious prosecution; decision to file criminal complaint and seek arrest warrant were quasi-judicial functions involved in initiation of a prosecution, and so were prosecutorial in nature, in that district attorney would be entitled to absolute immunity for performing same acts. Goncalves v. Reynolds, W.D.N.Y.2001, 198 F.Supp.2d 278. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

An arson investigator was entitled to immunity from a civil rights malicious prosecution claim relating to the manner in which he conducted an arson investigation, where the investigator had probable cause to submit all the information he accumulated to the prosecuting attorney, who in turn had prosecutorial discretion to determine that there was probable cause to prosecute the present plaintiff. Wolf v. Napier, N.D.Ind.1990, 742 F.Supp. 1014. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Criminal investigator employed by county district attorney's office who took child into custody in connection with juvenile court proceeding was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity in child's civil rights action based on claim that she was subsequently placed in custody of her father, who allegedly sexually abused her. M.K. through Hall v. Harter, E.D.Cal.1989, 716 F.Supp. 1333. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Investigator for district attorney enjoyed absolute immunity from liability for actions taken at direction of prosecutor for purpose of prosecuting misdemeanor case against accused, which consisted of interviewing complaining and alibi witnesses as well as conducting voice stress test of accused; actions were not merely investigatory, so as to entitle investigator to only qualified immunity, since they were taken after accused had been identified as suspect against whom case would be brought, nor could they be deemed independent activity, for which investigator would not enjoy absolute immunity, simply because prosecutor did not provide investigator with procedural manual instructing him how to perform his duties. Doe v. Smith, S.D.N.Y.1988, 704 F.Supp. 1177. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

In executing a valid arrest warrant, a state investigator had prosecutorial immunity from liability for violation of plaintiff's civil rights when plaintiff was mistakenly arrested because his name was the same as that of the suspect named in the warrant. Keller v. U.S., S.D.Cal.1987, 667 F.Supp. 1351, affirmed 930 F.2d 920. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Criminal law investigator in county district attorney's office was entitled to absolute immunity in connection with statements made in his affidavit before New York court, although he had not yet been admitted to state bar, since his statements were intimately related to presenting state's case in ongoing criminal prosecution. McGann v. Baranowicz, S.D.N.Y.1985, 617 F.Supp. 845. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3452. ---- Medical officials, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Administrative prosecutor for New Mexico Board of Medical Examiners was entitled to absolute immunity to physician's due process civil rights claim, which alleged that prosecutor did not turn over exculpatory evidence, offered erroneous opinion to hearing officer, and improperly threatened adverse action if physician did not comply with deadline, since prosecutor was acting within scope of his prosecutorial duties. Guttman v. Khalsa, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2006, 446 F.3d 1027. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Commissioner of Department of Health, director of Division of Medical Quality Assurance, and chairman of Medical Examining Board were absolutely immune from physician's damages suit against them in their individual capacities, arising from suspension of physician's license to practice medicine pending hearing, as officials' actions were prosecutorial in nature. Moran v. Connecticut Dept. of Public Health and Addition Services, D.Conn.1997, 954 F.Supp. 484. Health 195; States 78

3453. ---- Police officers, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

Police detective who allegedly assisted prosecutors with various investigative functions during prosecution had absolute immunity from indictee's § 1983 claim for detective's role in the prosecution. Davis v. Grusemeyer, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1993, 996 F.2d 617. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3454. ---- State commission officials, persons or entities entitled to prosecutorial immunity

For purposes of claim of absolute prosecutorial immunity under §§ 1983, counsel for Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) functioned as a prosecutor by filing actions in court to enforce compliance with DEP orders, and in bringing subsequent civil petitions for contempt. Light v. Haws, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2007, 472 F.3d 74. Civil Rights 1376(9)

New York medical officials were not entitled to absolute immunity from radiologist's due process claims, arising from summary suspension of his medical license; summary suspension process lacked sufficient similarity to judicial process to warrant absolute immunity from suit for involved officials, and neither officials' role in summary suspension was sufficiently analogous to that of judge or prosecutor, respectively, to warrant absolute immunity from suit. DiBlasio v. Novello, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 344 F.3d 292, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 2018, 541 U.S. 988, 158 L.Ed.2d 492. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Deputy Commissioner of Banks of State of Massachusetts was absolutely immune from liability for alleged wrongful actions pertaining to his participation in decision to initiate removal proceedings against bank directors and for his prosecutorial role at show cause hearing. Roslindale Co-op. Bank v. Greenwald, D.C.Mass.1979, 481 F.Supp. 749, affirmed 627 F.2d 1087, affirmed 638 F.2d 258, certiorari denied 102 S.Ct. 128, 454 U.S. 831, 70 L.Ed.2d 108. Officers And Public Employees 114

Chief counsel to the Pennsylvania Insurance Commissioner, against whom insurance company and others brought civil rights action based on alleged conspiracy involving the chief counsel to deprive insurance company of due process and equal protection by issuing an illegal suspension order which denied the insurance company the right to do business within the state, and who represented the department in various proceedings was entitled to assert immunity applicable to a prosecuting attorney. C. M. Clark Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Reed, S.D.Tex.1975, 390 F.Supp. 1056. Conspiracy 13

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3455. Considerations governing generally, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney's immunity from civil rights suit by criminal defendant is gauged by functional activities prosecutor engaged in, and not defendant's status; actions that are related to judicial process fulfill prosecutor's advocatory function and are considered absolutely immune. Brooks v. George County, Miss., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1996, 84 F.3d 157, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 359, 519 U.S. 948, 136 L.Ed.2d 251. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Three factors must be considered in determining whether prosecutor is absolutely immune from damages under § 1983: common law in 1871 when § 1983 was enacted, risk of vexatious litigation if immunity is unavailable, and role of judicial process in controlling prosecutor if damages are unavailable. Lucien v. Preiner, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 967 F.2d 1166, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 267, 506 U.S. 893, 121 L.Ed.2d 196. Civil Rights 1376(9)

In determining whether absolute immunity should attach to prosecutorial activities, court must direct its inquiry to the nature of the official behavior which is challenged and not to the identity or position of the official responsible therefor. Cribb v. Pelham, D.C.S.C.1982, 552 F.Supp. 1217. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assertions of quasi-judicial immunity by prosecutor sued for violations of constitutional rights cannot be rigidly accepted on their face, but rather an analysis of the activity being performed at the time the alleged misconduct occurred is required to determine the applicability of the doctrine. Briggs v. Goodwin, D.C.D.C.1974, 384 F.Supp. 1228, affirmed 569 F.2d 10, 186 U.S.App.D.C. 179, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 3089, 437 U.S. 904, 57 L.Ed.2d 1133. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3456. Duties covered, prosecutorial immunity

State prosecutor's conduct in unilaterally increasing the bond amount of an arrestee was not prosecutorial in nature, for the purpose of determining whether prosecutor was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity, in arrestee's §§ 1983 action alleging unreasonable seizure and the setting of unreasonable bond in violation of the Fourth, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Root v. Liston, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2006, 444 F.3d 127. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors, and persons working under their direction, are entitled to absolute immunity when they function as advocates for the state in circumstances intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process. Bernard v. County of Suffolk, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 356 F.3d 495. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Application of absolute immunity from § 1983 actions is not limited to duties prosecutor performs in courtroom. Dory v. Ryan, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 25 F.3d 81. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute immunity available to a prosecutor in defense to § 1983 claim in his or her individual capacity depends on the nature of the function performed by prosecutor asserting the defense, not on the identity of the actor who performed the function. Carbajal v. County of Nassau, E.D.N.Y.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute immunity from civil rights liability is not available when prosecutor undertakes conduct that is beyond scope of his or her litigation-related duties; if challenged conduct either is not traditional function or is not intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal system, prosecutor is not entitled to absolute immunity. Smith v. Gribetz, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 145. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3457. Jurisdictional duties, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

A state prosecuting attorney is immune from liability under this section unless his actions are clearly outside scope of his jurisdiction. Kauffman v. Moss, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1970, 420 F.2d 1270, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 93, 400 U.S. 846, 27 L.Ed.2d 84. See, also, U.S. ex rel. Birnbaum v. Dolan, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1971, 452 F.2d 1078; Moore v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Buck, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1971, 443 F.2d 25; Peek v. Mitchell, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1970, 419 F.2d 575; Lewis v. Brautigam, C.A.Fla.1955, 227 F.2d 124; Moyer v. McCann, D.C.Pa. 1976, 407 F.Supp. 518; Classic Distributors, Inc. v. Zimmerman, D.C.Pa.1974, 387 F.Supp. 829; Manfredonia v. Barry, D.C.N.Y.1971, 336 F.Supp. 765. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Arrestee's § 1983 claim against county attorney was barred by absolute prosecutorial immunity, which was accorded to actions that were intimately associated with judicial process; acts complained of, receiving correspondence from another county attorney, filing charges that were later dismissed by judge, and filing appeal, were actions quintessentially within scope of prosecutorial functions. Schroeder v. Kochanowski, D.Kan.2004, 311 F.Supp.2d 1241. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was not acting in absence of all jurisdiction when he filed misdemeanor complaint against defendant for adultery, based on defendant's own admission, and thus prosecutor was absolutely immune from § 1983 suit. Thomas v. County of Putnam, S.D.N.Y.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 711. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3458. ---- Admission of evidence, jurisdictional duties, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney was, as a matter of law, acting within his jurisdiction when he opposed defendant's motion for production of free transcript of earlier trial for murder, and was thus entitled to immunity in defendant's action under this section conferring right of action on person deprived of constitutional right, privilege or immunity. Brown v. Charles, E.D.Wis.1970, 309 F.Supp. 817. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3459. ---- Entrapment, jurisdictional duties, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney was immune from suit by prisoner for damages under this section for conduct akin to entrapment, in absence of allegations of actions outside the scope of his jurisdiction. Brazzell v. Adams, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1974, 493 F.2d 489. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3460. Administrative or investigative duties, prosecutorial immunity

When prosecutor functions as administrator rather than as officer of court, he is entitled to only qualified immunity from § 1983 liability. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute prosecutorial immunity protected state prosecutors from § 1983 liability with respect to allegations that prosecutors engaged in improper ex parte communications with state chancellor regarding public nuisance actions to be filed against nightclubs featuring nude dancing, given absence of allegation that prosecutors, in taking such actions, were performing investigative functions normally performed by detective or police officer. Cooper v. Parrish, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 2000, 203 F.3d 937, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 185, 531 U.S. 877, 148 L.Ed.2d 128. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute prosecutorial immunity will attach, not just to prosecutor's decision to file criminal complaint and seek arrest warrant, or presentation of charging documents to judicial officer and procurement of arrest warrant, but to administrative or investigative acts necessary for prosecutor to initiate or maintain criminal prosecution. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutors are absolutely immune from liability under § 1983 for their conduct in initiating prosecution and in presenting state's case insofar as that conduct is intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process; however, when prosecutors perform administrative or investigative, rather than advocatory, functions they do not receive absolute immunity. Roe v. City and County of San Francisco, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1997, 109 F.3d 578. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Absolute immunity from § 1983 actions applies to prosecutor's conduct that is intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process, but not to prosecutor's acts of investigation or administration. Dory v. Ryan, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 25 F.3d 81. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant state attorney general was entitled to absolute immunity in suit under § 1983 alleging that investigation of psychologist for alleged false Medicaid claims violated psychologist's constitutional rights; investigation was initiated only after state agency had received complaints from Inspector General, investigation pertained to these complaints, and investigation was essential to ensuing decision on whether to prosecute. Zar v. South Dakota Bd. of Examiners of Psychologists, C.A.8 (S.D.) 1992, 976 F.2d 459. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Although assistant district attorney was absolutely immune from liability under deprivation of civil rights under color of state law statute for acts within scope of his duties in initiating and pursuing criminal prosecution, he was entitled only to qualified immunity, requiring showing that his acts were objectively reasonable, for any administrative or investigative activities. Day v. Morgenthau, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1990, 909 F.2d 75, amended on rehearing, on remand 769 F.Supp. 472. Civil Rights 1376(9)

While a prosecutor, acting within the scope of his duties in initiating and pursuing a criminal prosecution, is absolutely immune from civil suit for damages under federal civil rights statute, if it is determined that the activities of the prosecutor are purely investigative and police related in nature and beyond the scope of his prosecutorial duties, the protection of absolute immunity from civil liability is lost. Pachaly v. City of Lynchburg, C.A.4 (Va.) 1990, 897 F.2d 723. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Supreme Court decision in Imbler v. Pachtman extends absolute prosecutorial immunity only so far as necessary to protect prosecutor's decision with respect to initiation and conduct of particular cases and does not immunize prosecutors for any and all measures they may undertake in course of wide-ranging law enforcement investigations or general fact-finding expeditions. Briggs v. Goodwin, C.A.D.C.1977, 569 F.2d 10, 186 U.S.App.D.C. 179, certiorari denied 98 S.Ct. 3089, 437 U.S. 904, 57 L.Ed.2d 1133. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutors enjoy absolute immunity in connection with those functions in which they participate in the judicial process but the same protection is not available when a claim under civil rights legislation focuses on a prosecutor's actions in the course of directing police investigative activity. Apton v. Wilson, C.A.D.C.1974, 506 F.2d 83, 165 U.S.App.D.C. 22. Civil Rights 1376(9); District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Derivative form of immunity exists for prosecutors who will be cloaked with same immunity granted to judges when they are acting within scope of their proper prosecutorial capacity, rather than in investigatory capacity. Duba v. McIntyre, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1974, 501 F.2d 590, certiorari denied 96 S.Ct. 1480, 424 U.S. 975, 47 L.Ed.2d 745. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Even if prosecutors enjoy an absolute immunity from suit in civil rights case when acting within their quasi-judicial capacity, such absolute immunity does not extend to acts essentially unrelated to judicial process, that is, acts done in prosecutor's investigatory role. Guerro v. Mulhearn, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1974, 498 F.2d 1249. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutorial immunity from § 1983 suits for damages does not apply when prosecutor's conduct falls outside of traditional advocacy functions, such as when prosecutor engages in "investigative" or "administrative" functions, e.g., prosecutor's involvement in wiretapping, giving legal advice to police during a police investigation, making false statements at press conference, and fabricating evidence prior to indictment or arrest, are not protected by prosecutorial immunity. Gibbs v. Deckers, D.Del.2002, 234 F.Supp.2d 458. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

District attorneys were not entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights action brought by family of murdered township officer, alleging that defendants failed to protect officer despite threats from perpetrator, since attorneys' interactions with perpetrator in attempting to elicit confession were investigative rather than prosecutorial in nature. Walter v. Pike County, Pennsylvania, M.D.Pa.2006, 2006 WL 3437384. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County District Attorney (DA) was not entitled to absolute immunity from liability under §§ 1983 for his allegedly negative statements about village police chief, which were far removed from the judicial process; chief's allegation that DA's statements caused village board to decline renewal of chief's contract indicated he made statements in course of advising village board on personnel matter, and fact he referred to his prosecutorial function by stating he would not prosecute cases investigated by the chief was irrelevant. Hoffman v. Kelz, W.D.Wis.2006, 443 F.Supp.2d 1007. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Deputy county attorney was not entitled to absolute immunity in citizen's civil rights lawsuit alleging that attorney participated in conspiracy with detective to search his residence and seize evidence without warrant in violation of Fourth Amendment; attorney's alleged actions occurred in context of police investigation and were not intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Allison v. Utah County Corp., D.Utah 2004, 335 F.Supp.2d 1310. Conspiracy 13

When a prosecutor supervises, conducts, or assists in the investigation of a crime, or gives advice as to the existence of probable cause to make a warrantless arrest, that is, when he performs functions normally associated with a police investigation, he loses his absolute protection from liability under § 1983. Carbajal v. County of Nassau, E.D.N.Y.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute immunity is not available when a prosecutor undertakes conduct that is beyond the scope of his or her litigation-related duties; when a prosecutor acts in an investigative or administrative capacity rather than in a prosecutorial one, absolute immunity is not available. Thomas v. County of Putnam, S.D.N.Y.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 711. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

County prosecutors who allegedly planned sting operation, suborned perjury that led to arrest warrant and indictment, and made false statements to press were not entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 liability; challenged activities were investigative or administrative activities for which only qualified immunity was available. Lehman v. Kornblau, E.D.N.Y.2001, 134 F.Supp.2d 281. Civil Rights 1376(9)

To determine whether prosecutor is immune from suit for damages under § 1983 based on prosecutor's role, that provides absolute immunity, or investigator's role, that provides qualified immunity, when prosecutor performs investigative functions normally performed by a detective or police officer, prosecutor is entitled to claim qualified, not absolute, immunity. Spurlock v. Whitley, M.D.Tenn.1997, 971 F.Supp. 1166, affirmed 167 F.3d 995 . Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor does not enjoy absolute immunity from civil rights liability for acts that are merely administrative, rather than prosecutorial, in nature. Eisenberg v. District Attorney of County of Kings, E.D.N.Y.1994, 847 F.Supp. 1029. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors are absolutely immune from liability for conduct in initiating prosecution and presenting state's case insofar as that conduct is intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process, but prosecutor enjoys only qualified immunity when he or she performs functions of administrative or investigatory nature. Chavers v. Stuhmer, E.D.Wis.1992, 786 F.Supp. 756. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Rule that a state prosecutor, while acting in his official duties associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process, is absolutely immune from damage suits under this section extends only to activities associated with the judicial process and, hence, does not extend to investigative or administrative functions. D'Iorio v. Delaware

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County, E.D.Pa.1978, 447 F.Supp. 229, reversed on other grounds 592 F.2d 681. Civil Rights 1376(9)

A prosecutor in a criminal case enjoys an absolute immunity from liability arising out of activities which constitute an integral part of the judicial process; however, a prosecutor is not completely immune from liability for an infringement of constitutional rights which occur in connection with investigatory, as opposed to quasi-judicial or advocacy activities. Carlsberg v. Gatzek, C.D.Cal.1977, 442 F.Supp. 813. Civil Rights 1376(9); District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Investigative activities fall outside a prosecutors's role as an officer of the court and, therefore, a prosecutor is subject to civil rights liability arising out of such investigative activities to the same extent as any other investigator acting under color of state law. Clark v. Lutcher, M.D.Pa.1977, 77 F.R.D. 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State assistant attorney general (AAG) was acting as a complaining witness when she filed a complaint with the Consumer Protection Division (CPD) of the Office of the Attorney General, alleging that plaintiff was practicing law without a license, and therefore AAG was not entitled to absolute immunity in plaintiff's §§ 1983 action; AAG's actions, of investigating plaintiff's involvement with associates seeking to bring suit against federal agents to determine whether he might be giving them legal advice, were purely investigative, rather than associated with initiating a prosecution. McCormick v. City of Lawrence, Kan., C.A.10 (Kan.) 2004, 99 Fed.Appx. 169, 2004 WL 882146, Unreported. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(9)

3461. Promulgation of policies and procedures, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutorial immunity does not apply to prosecutor's or municipality's promulgation of policies and procedures which result in deprivation of constitutional rights. Johnson v. Reno Police Chief, D.Nev.1989, 718 F.Supp. 36. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3462. Building inspections, prosecutorial immunity

Actions of town attorney and town board members in sending building inspector to find violations on religious corporation's property, especially violations which allegedly had been known about and ignored for years, could transform prosecutorial actions into investigative or administrative ones, thereby emasculating availability of prosecutorial immunity. Moore v. Trippe, S.D.N.Y.1990, 743 F.Supp. 201. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10; Towns 31

3463. Press statements, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor's allegedly false statements, made during public announcement of indictment of murder defendant, were entitled to only qualified, and not absolute immunity from § 1983 liability; comments had no functional tie to judicial process and, though announcement may have been integral part of prosecutor's job, he was in no different position than other executive officials who dealt with press and for whom qualified immunity was the norm. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity from liability in civil rights action alleging wrongful publication of disciplinary proceedings involving physician; individual state attorneys' dissemination of information to press and others outside of State Board of Medical Examiners' proceedings did not constitute quasi-judicial function deserving of cloak of absolute immunity. Pfeiffer v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1991, 929 F.2d 1484. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's alleged statements to press were part of administrative function, rather than role as advocate, and, therefore, could only be protected by qualified immunity, rather than absolute immunity, in § 1983 action. England

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

v. Hendricks, C.A.10 (Utah) 1989, 880 F.2d 281, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1130, 493 U.S. 1078, 107 L.Ed.2d 1036. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecuting attorneys were not entitled to absolute immunity from any damages which might arise from their issuance of an allegedly defamatory press release following their dismissal of child rape charges against civil rights plaintiff. Marx v. Gumbinner, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1988, 855 F.2d 783. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney's dissemination to press of information from suspect's psychiatric report did not violate clearly established right of privacy as of day of press conference, and thus, district attorney was entitled to qualified immunity. Borucki v. Ryan, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1987, 827 F.2d 836. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Only qualified good-faith immunity is available where a prosecutor distributes extraneous statements to the press designed to gain unfair advantage at trial; to the degree that a prosecutor is called upon as part of his official duties to deal with the press, such a duty would be administrative rather than "quasi-judicial," and hence not deserving of cloak of absolute immunity. Powers v. Coe, C.A.2 (Conn.) 1984, 728 F.2d 97. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Federal prosecutor's statements made at press conference announcing criminal indictment were not absolutely protected by quasi-judicial immunity. Stepanian v. Addis, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1983, 699 F.2d 1046. Libel And Slander 38(5)

Absolute prosecutorial immunity is not available when a prosecutor releases information or evidence to the media, authorizes or directs the use of wiretaps, or performs the functions normally performed by the police such as assisting in the execution of a search or seizure. Thomas v. County of Putnam, S.D.N.Y.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 711. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Level of immunity due a prosecutor, whether absolute or qualified, depends on functional nature of activities rather than prosecutor's status and accordingly court in civil rights action must determine whether prosecutor's activities in releasing information to press are more properly characterized as investigative or administrative rather than quasi-judicial. Strong v. Slaton, N.D.Ga.1981, 510 F.Supp. 161. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Even if plaintiff in civil rights action established that newspaper article which described plaintiff and his history in prerelease prison program deprived him of fair trial on charges arising out of offenses allegedly committed while he was in such program, prosecuting attorney who allegedly helped in preparing article was immune from liability in civil rights action. Tunnell v. Wiley, E.D.Pa.1974, 369 F.Supp. 1260, affirmed 514 F.2d 971. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3464. Police duties distinguished, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor is acting as advocate for the state, rather than as investigator or administrator, in recommending denial of bail and enjoys absolute immunity against any claims arising out of this function; prosecutor's function is intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process, and deals with initiation and pursuit of criminal prosecution. Hart v. O'Brien, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 127 F.3d 424, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 154 F.3d 419, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 868, 525 U.S. 1103, 142 L.Ed.2d 770. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor who acts in role of policeman is liable like policeman, under § 1983, if in so acting she deprives plaintiff of rights under the Constitution or federal laws. Hart v. O'Brien, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 127 F.3d 424, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 154 F.3d 419, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 868, 525 U.S. 1103, 142 L.Ed.2d 770. Civil Rights 1088(1)

District attorney and assistant district attorney were not immune from suits under this section seeking damage

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

because of their alleged participation in compelling plaintiff to act as police agent and informant since plaintiff, at least in part, challenged alleged prosecutorial conduct that was neither judicial nor even quasi-judicial, but, rather, was of a police/investigative nature; immunity to which the district attorney and the assistant claimed entitlement i.e., initiating prosecution and presenting the state's case, did not extend to their conduct while engaged in such police activity as recruiting or cultivating informants. Tomko v. Lees, W.D.Pa.1976, 416 F.Supp. 1137. Civil Rights 1376(9)

While the motive of a prosecutor is irrelevant in determining the scope of his immunity from damages in a civil rights suit, the immunity only extends to conduct which can be described as "quasi-judicial" as opposed to investigatory activities normally performed by laymen, such as police officers. Maney v. Ratcliff, E.D.Wis.1975, 399 F.Supp. 760. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3465. Advisor to county officials, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney and assistant were not entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from § 1983 suit arising from legal advice to county commissioners that commissioners court could not pay state district court clerk's legal expenses incurred in contempt proceeding. Hughes v. Tarrant County Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1991, 948 F.2d 918. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant state's attorney functions in quasi-judicial role when advising county officials, and, in that role, state's attorney must have absolute immunity from civil rights damage suits to properly carry out her duties; where the functioning as prosecutor or advice giver, questions of legality considered by state's attorney mirror those which are everyday work of judges and lawyers, without protection of absolute immunity for advice which law requires her to give, state's attorney's impartiality would be significantly diminished by fear of vexatious litigation, and Illinois law subjects state's attorney's opinion to many checks. Henderson v. Lopez, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1986, 790 F.2d 44. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3466. Advisor to police officers, prosecutorial immunity

Absolute immunity from liability for damages under § 1983 did not apply to state prosecutor's giving of legal advice to police; there was no historical or common-law support for extending absolute immunity in such cases, and advising police in investigative phase of criminal case was not intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Burns v. Reed, U.S.Ind.1991, 111 S.Ct. 1934, 500 U.S. 478, 114 L.Ed.2d 547, on remand 958 F.2d 374, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was entitled to qualified immunity for his conduct in advising the police that the countertop gaming machines seized from businesses were illegal under state law, in business owners' §§ 1983 claim challenging the warrantless seizure of the machines; even though prosecutor's position was ultimately rejected by the state Supreme Court, when prosecutor first rendered his opinion, the specific issue had not yet been decided, and factually different cases arguably supported prosecutor's position. Skokos v. Rhoades, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 440 F.3d 957. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's alleged conduct in directing deputy to prevent family and friends of defendant from entering hearing on postconviction motion did not amount to the giving of illegal advice to the police so as to come within exception to prosecutorial immunity. House v. Belford, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 956 F.2d 711. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor who directed police officer to arrest § 1983 claimant, after officer had decided to release claimant with a warning regarding a traffic violation, did not have absolute immunity from claimant's suit; in effectively advising officer that probable cause for arrest existed, prosecutor was not performing function that was intimately associated with judicial process, and prosecutor's interrogation of claimant was investigatory, rather than in preparation for trial. Johnson v. City of Meridian, S.D.Miss.1998, 23 F.Supp.2d 681. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecutors do not receive absolute immunity from § 1983 liability for legal advice given to police, and they are shielded only by qualified immunity for administrative or investigative functions which are not integral part of judicial process. Craig v. St. Martin Parish Sheriff, W.D.La.1994, 861 F.Supp. 1290. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3467. Advisor to prison officials, prosecutorial immunity

County attorney did not exercise any quasi-judicial authority and was not engaged in any prosecutorial activities when he gave legal advice concerning legality of strip searches to detention center officials and thus was not absolutely immune from damages under this section. Smith v. Montgomery County, Md., D.C.Md.1983, 573 F.Supp. 604, appeal dismissed 740 F.2d 963, on reconsideration 607 F.Supp. 1303. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3468. Advisor to probation officers, prosecutorial immunity

Assistant state's attorney was not merely rendering advice to probation officer when he based warrant for probationer's arrest on probation officer's affidavit, so that his actions were subject to absolute immunity from liability for any violation of civil rights. Schlosser v. Coleman, M.D.Fla.1993, 818 F.Supp. 1534. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3469. Employment duties, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney was not absolutely immune from damage suit under this section where act for which immunity was sought, alleged wrongful dismissal of plaintiff from employment as a county detective, was not an activity associated with judicial process, but rather represented action by district attorney in his administrative role. D'Iorio v. Delaware County, E.D.Pa.1978, 447 F.Supp. 229, reversed on other grounds 592 F.2d 681. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Status of district attorney as a quasi-judicial officer did not, in itself, immunize district attorney from suit under this section for his actions in terminating employment of his first assistant district attorney. Sprague v. Fitzpatrick, E.D.Pa.1976, 412 F.Supp. 910, affirmed 546 F.2d 560, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 2649, 431 U.S. 937, 53 L.Ed.2d 255. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3470. Civil proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Government attorney was entitled to absolute immunity from federal civil rights liability for initiating civil child neglect proceeding and allegedly incorporating unverified, libelous, and slanderous materials in her complaint and in her statements to court. Gray v. Poole, C.A.D.C.2001, 243 F.3d 572, 345 U.S.App.D.C. 236, entered 2001 WL 311218, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Acting corporation counsel for District of Columbia was entitled to absolute immunity from liability in federal civil rights action for any role she played in decision to initiate or continue civil child neglect proceeding. Gray v. Poole, C.A.D.C.2001, 243 F.3d 572, 345 U.S.App.D.C. 236, entered 2001 WL 311218, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting Attorney of judicial circuit, city, and county, was absolutely immune from civil rights action brought by property owner, arising from Prosecuting Attorney's actions in bringing a civil complaint against property owner and his corporation under Indiana's Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, even though Prosecuting Attorney's actions were taken in context of civil, rather than criminal proceeding, where Prosecuting Attorney sought seizure order from state trial court, and filed for injunction and seizure of property subject to forfeiture; Prosecuting Attorney acted in an enforcement role analogous to a prosecutor, and acted pursuant to the authority vested in him under state law, functioning purely in his capacity as advocate for the state. Mendenhall v.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Goldsmith, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1995, 59 F.3d 685, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 568, 516 U.S. 1011, 133 L.Ed.2d 492. Civil Rights 1376(9)

United States attorney and assistant United States attorney were entitled to immunity from liability for damages based on their actions in defending federal district judge and bankruptcy judge from debtor's claims that judges violated his civil rights in adjudicating his bankruptcy case, inasmuch as debtor's claims against attorneys were premised upon attorneys' performance of their duty to defend judges in debtor's civil action. Bryan v. Murphy, N.D.Ga.2003, 243 F.Supp.2d 1375, reconsideration denied 246 F.Supp.2d 1256. United States 50.10(2)

Government attorneys are not automatically entitled to absolute immunity under § 1983 for initiating civil proceedings without regard to nature of case or role attorney plays in that proceeding; rather, they are protected by absolute immunity only when performing "quasi-prosecutorial" functions in civil cases. Canell v. Oregon Dept. of Justice, D.Or.1993, 811 F.Supp. 546. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3471. Building code enforcement, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor was not entitled to absolute immunity with respect to her efforts to keep private school from opening where there was no enforcement proceeding in existence nor any showing that she was on the verge of initiating judicial action against the school in order to enforce building code. Sarf v. Town of Huntington, E.D.N.Y.1988, 702 F.Supp. 395. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3472. Commitment to mental hospital, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecuting attorney who prepared petition which resulted in commitment to mental hospital was immune from suit for any civil rights deprivations arising out of commitment. Sebastian v. U. S., C.A.8 (Ark.) 1976, 531 F.2d 900, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 153, 429 U.S. 856, 50 L.Ed.2d 133. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3473. Insurance proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Deputy and assistant attorneys general employed by Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in preparing and issuing suspension order against insurer, seeking injunction and order of impoundment, filing petition for liquidation, engaging in pretrial discovery, and conducting trial of Commonwealth's case against insurer, were engaged in activities which were intimately associated with judicial phase of insurance company's suspension process, and were entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability for such activities. Safeguard Mut. Ins. Co. v. Miller, E.D.Pa.1978, 456 F.Supp. 682. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3474. Licenses and permits, prosecutorial immunity

Elderly farmer's civil rights claim against state prosecutor, who cited him for hunting fur-bearing animals without harvester's license, was barred by prosecutor's absolute immunity in bringing state court action. Randles v. Gregart, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1992, 965 F.2d 90. Civil Rights 1376(9)

That state attorneys and chief attorney for Department of Professional Regulation were acting in their official capacity was alone insufficient to earn them absolute immunity to civil rights action brought by doctor following revocation of his license; rather, prior to dismissal of action on absolute immunity grounds, determination was required that attorneys were engaging solely in quasi-judicial functions and were not carrying out administrative or investigative functions. Kadivar v. Stone, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1986, 804 F.2d 635. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Deputy attorney general was absolutely immune from physician's suit alleging conspiracy in connection with administrative proceedings that resulted in conditional revocation of his license to practice medicine, including claim that deputy attorney general induced witnesses to testify falsely and allegation that he wrongfully failed to notify physician of revocation of waiver of medical course requirement. Demery v. Kupperman, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1984, 735 F.2d 1139, certiorari denied 105 S.Ct. 810, 469 U.S. 1127, 83 L.Ed.2d 803. Attorney General 8

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3475. Tax proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Civil rights action brought against federal judges and federal prosecutors for their participation in enforcement of Internal Revenue Service summons requiring bank to produce certain records in connection with prosecution for failure to file federal income tax returns was barred by doctrine of absolute immunity. Jarvis v. Roberts, W.D.Tex.1980, 489 F.Supp. 924. Civil Rights 1376(8); Civil Rights 1376(9)

3476. Zoning ordinance enforcement, prosecutorial immunity

City attorney's decision to seek injunction under city zoning ordinance was protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity, even though action was civil, rather than criminal, where injunction action was brought to enforce ordinance's criminal provision. Shoultes v. Laidlaw, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 886 F.2d 114. Zoning And Planning 353.1

3477. Attorney disciplinary proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Deputy disciplinary counsel for bar association was absolutely immune from suit brought under § 1983 by attorney who had been disciplined and who alleged that his access to courts had been denied by the discipline; bar association's counsel had acted as a prosecutor, his activities were likely to result in recriminatory lawsuits by disappointed parties, safeguards existed in regulatory framework to protect against unconstitutional conduct, and those disciplined could appeal decision of disciplinary board. Forman v. Ours, E.D.La.1992, 804 F.Supp. 864, affirmed 996 F.2d 306. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Grievance administrator for Michigan Attorney Grievance Commission was acting in prosecutorial capacity when he decided to initiate prosecution of attorney for practicing law while his license had been suspended and, thus, administrator was entitled to absolute immunity from liability for alleged civil rights violations during disciplinary proceedings. Eston v. Van Bolt, E.D.Mich.1990, 728 F.Supp. 1336. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3478. Contempt proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

City attorney was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity for participating in criminal contempt proceeding brought to enforce city zoning ordinance. Shoultes v. Laidlaw, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 886 F.2d 114. Zoning And Planning 353.1

State's attorney enjoyed absolute immunity from liability for alleged false and malicious filing of petition for adjudication of civil contempt in connection with contract for deed purchasers' failure to comply with Illinois court's order of levy on personal property to satisfy judgment of confession on promissory note and, therefore, was not liable under statute, which gives cause of action for violation of federal statutory or constitutional rights under color of law. Henry v. Farmer City State Bank, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1986, 808 F.2d 1228. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor is absolutely immune from suit for instituting prosecution against accused for contempt of court judgment. Tanner v. Heise, D.Idaho 1987, 672 F.Supp. 1356, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 879 F.2d 572. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State's attorneys and prosecuting attorneys were immune from liability, under this section, for actions in capacity and under authority of their offices in connection with contempt proceeding. Rhodes v. Houston, D.C.Neb.1962, 202 F.Supp. 624, affirmed 309 F.2d 959, certiorari denied 83 S.Ct. 724, 372 U.S. 909, 9 L.Ed.2d 719, motion denied 258 F.Supp. 546, affirmed 418 F.2d 1309, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 1382, 397 U.S. 1049, 25 L.Ed.2d 662. Civil Rights 1376(9); District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3479. Internal investigation division hearings, prosecutorial immunity

In civil rights conspiracy action for monetary damages brought by members of Black Panther Party and mothers of two deceased party members against federal and state law enforcement officers arising out of gun battle during raid on party apartment, certain state prosecutor defendants were absolutely immune from liability for their actions at police department internal investigation division hearing. Law Students Civil Rights Research Council, Inc., v. Wadmond, S.D.N.Y.1969, 299 F.Supp. 117, probable jurisdiction noted 90 S.Ct. 560, 396 U.S. 999, 24 L.Ed.2d 492, affirmed 91 S.Ct. 720, 401 U.S. 154, 27 L.Ed.2d 749.

3480. Juvenile court proceedings, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

Assistant district attorney for county district attorney's office who was appointed by juvenile court to represent child at detention hearing was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity in child's civil rights action based on claim that assistant district attorney caused child to be placed in custody of father who allegedly sexually abused her. M.K. through Hall v. Harter, E.D.Cal.1989, 716 F.Supp. 1333. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3481. ---- Child neglect and abuse proceedings, juvenile court proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

State juvenile officer was not entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity from prospective injunctive relief prohibiting him, based on allegations of mistreatment, from removing children from private boarding school without prior notice and hearing if and when he again sought removal of children in future. Heartland Academy Community Church v. Waddle, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2005, 427 F.3d 525. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's demand that mother swear to her innocence on a bible in a church as a condition of dropping charges that she had sexually abused her son was manifestly beyond prosecutor's authority, and thus prosecutor's conduct was not protected by absolute immunity. Doe v. Phillips, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 81 F.3d 1204, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 1244, 520 U.S. 1115, 137 L.Ed.2d 326. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney was not entitled to absolute immunity for his extra prosecutorial acts, including his alleged failure to report charges of sexual abuse to state welfare department, failure to investigate allegations of abuse, and allowing victim's father to have physical contact with her in violation of court order. Chrissy F. by Medley v. Mississippi Dept. of Public Welfare, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1991, 925 F.2d 844. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

State prosecuting attorneys had absolute immunity for their interviewing of child rape victim about her assailant, which could be asserted in victim's violation of right to privacy civil rights suit. Marx v. Gumbinner, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1988, 855 F.2d 783. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Attorney employed by county social services department, who initiated and prosecuted child protective orders and represented the interests of the department and the county in family court, was entitled to absolute immunity from claims asserted under this section arising out of the performance of her duties. Walden v. Wishengrad, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1984, 745 F.2d 149. Civil Rights 1376(9)

New Jersey prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 action brought by operators of day care center who had been acquitted of charges of child sexual abuse; activities intimately associated with judicial process are absolutely immune from civil suit. Simmerman v. Corino, D.N.J.1992, 804 F.Supp. 644, affirmed 16

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

F.3d 405. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Failure of § 1983 claimant to describe nature and scope of prosecutor's investigation of claimant's alleged sexual abuse of his child precluded court from being able to determine whether prosecutor was functioning in quasi-judicial or police-like capacity during investigation and thus court could not determine whether investigation was covered by absolute or by qualified immunity. Petry v. Lawler, S.D.Ind.1989, 718 F.Supp. 1396. Civil Rights 1395(5)

Attorney for county social services department was absolutely immune from liability under this section to former child protective caseworker with respect to whom attorney had obtained arrest warrant to compel caseworker's attendance at family court hearing, at least where attorney was at all times acting within scope of her duties. Walden v. Wishengrad, W.D.N.Y.1983, 573 F.Supp. 1115, affirmed 745 F.2d 149. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3482. Prison and prisoner proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor was absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for statements made to Illinois Prisoner Review Board in opposition to application for executive clemency; common law supported application of absolute immunity, risk of vexatious litigation would increase without absolute immunity, nothing prevented inmate from filing new application for clemency, and any abuse of authority by prosecutor could result in professional discipline or removal from office. Lucien v. Preiner, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 967 F.2d 1166, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 267, 506 U.S. 893, 121 L.Ed.2d 196. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Oregon Assistant Attorneys General were not performing "quasi-prosecutorial" functions when they sued inmate to attach funds inmate received to set off those funds against inmate's debt at prison; thus, officials were not entitled to absolute immunity in inmate's § 1983 action against them arising from that earlier litigation. Canell v. Oregon Dept. of Justice, D.Or.1993, 811 F.Supp. 546. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3483. Initiation of prosecution, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor's administrative duties and those investigatory functions that do not relate to advocate's preparation for initiation of prosecution or for judicial proceedings are entitled only to qualified, and not absolute immunity. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

State prosecuting attorney who acted within scope of his duties in initiating and pursuing criminal prosecution and in presenting state's case was absolutely immune from civil suit for damages under this section for alleged deprivations of accused's constitutional rights. Imbler v. Pachtman, U.S.Cal.1976, 96 S.Ct. 984, 424 U.S. 409, 47 L.Ed.2d 128. Civil Rights 1376(9)

A prosecutor's actions connected with initiation of prosecution, even if those actions are patently improper are immunized from civil liability under §§ 1983; however, purely administrative or investigative actions that do not relate to the initiation of a prosecution do not qualify for absolute immunity. Schenk v. Chavis, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2006, 461 F.3d 1043. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity in civil rights action for deciding to initiate criminal prosecution of gun store owner for reckless endangerment, although prosecutor did not sign charging documents. Springmen v. Williams, C.A.4 (Md.) 1997, 122 F.3d 211. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant district attorney was acting as advocate, and was absolutely immune from any liability under § 1983, for initiating aggravated sexual abuse prosecution against parent. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prosecuting attorneys are entitled to absolute immunity for their conduct in initiating prosecution and in presenting state's case as those activities are intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Enlow v. Tishomingo County, Miss., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1992, 962 F.2d 501, rehearing denied 971 F.2d 750. See, also, Brummett v. Camble, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1991, 946 F.2d 1178, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 2323, 504 U.S. 965, 119 L.Ed.2d 241. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Decision as to whether to file criminal charges falls within category of acts which are integral part of judicial process and for which prosecutors are immune from federal civil rights liability. Oliver v. Collins, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1990, 904 F.2d 278. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor in § 1983 action was absolutely immune from liability for initiating prosecution against owners of videotape rental store for aiding and abetting distribution of allegedly pornographic tapes to minors. England v. Hendricks, C.A.10 (Utah) 1989, 880 F.2d 281, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1130, 493 U.S. 1078, 107 L.Ed.2d 1036. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute prosecutorial immunity protected states attorneys from §§ 1983 liability to husband for charging him with offenses arising out of domestic abuse incident, allowing prosecution to proceed despite his wife's purported recantation, and failing to press charges against wife for alleged extortion of money; the choice of charges and decision to charge at all were quintessentially prosecutorial functions. Greene v. Wright, D.Conn.2005, 389 F.Supp.2d 416. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Acts undertaken by a prosecutor in preparing for the initiation of judicial proceedings or for trial, and which occur in the course of his role as an advocate for the state, are entitled to the protections of absolute immunity in a § 1983 action; included among those protected acts are the professional evaluation of the evidence assembled by the police and appropriate preparation for its presentation in an official proceeding. Miller v. City of Boston, D.Mass.2003, 297 F.Supp.2d 361. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors are absolutely immune from liability in their individual capacity under § 1983 for their conduct in initiating a prosecution and in presenting the state's case, insofar as that conduct is intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process. Carbajal v. County of Nassau, E.D.N.Y.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney's alleged failure to exercise proper discretion in evaluating whether former public utility executive's conduct warranted criminal prosecution and alleged failure to indict other utility executives for similar conduct implicated district attorney's traditional function of determining whether to initiate prosecution, and, if so, on what charges; thus, district attorney was entitled to absolute immunity for such decisions in executive's § 1983 action arising from criminal prosecution. Smith v. Gribetz, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 145. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor had absolute immunity from § 1983 civil rights action arising from plaintiff's arrest, prosecution, and eventual acquittal of criminal sexual assault charge, even if plaintiff's constitutional rights were infringed due to those actions; prosecutor's acts of prosecuting plaintiff and interviewing alleged victim's mother were protected quasi-judicial functions. Pierzynowski v. Police Dept. City of Detroit, E.D.Mich.1996, 941 F.Supp. 633. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Doctrine of absolute prosecutorial immunity provides that prosecutors are absolutely immune from liability under § 1983 for their conduct in initiating prosecution and in presenting state's case, insofar as that conduct is intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Quartararo v. Catterson, E.D.N.Y.1996, 917 F.Supp. 919. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's decision to commence and persist in prosecution, notwithstanding dearth of inculpatory evidence and existence of exculpatory evidence, was associated with judicial phase of criminal process and he enjoyed absolute immunity from civil rights liability. Eisenberg v. District Attorney of County of Kings, E.D.N.Y.1994, 847 F.Supp. 1029. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecutor's alleged policy of waiving or abrogating his duty to exercise prosecutorial discretion and of prosecuting sex crime charges merely upon the decision or insistence of complainant regardless of the total lack of evidence was insufficient to overcome district attorney's entitlement to absolute immunity from civil rights liability. Eisenberg v. District Attorney of County of Kings, E.D.N.Y.1994, 847 F.Supp. 1029. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors are absolutely immune from § 1983 when performing functions that are intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process, including but not limited to initiating prosecution and presenting state's case; absolute prosecutorial immunity is based on concern that harassment from unfounded litigation would cause prosecutor to shade decisions instead of exercising independence of judgment required by public trust. Hall v. Ruggeri, N.D.N.Y.1994, 841 F.Supp. 484. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant county district attorneys and county district attorney were absolutely immune from personal liability for their actions in initiating criminal prosecution against city police officers so as to preclude recovery of damages under § 1983. Feerick v. Sudolnik, S.D.N.Y.1993, 816 F.Supp. 879, affirmed 2 F.3d 403. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Insofar as deputy prosecuting attorneys were named in their individual capacities in § 1983 action, they were entitled to absolute immunity from acts taken to initiate or conduct prosecution. Study v. U.S., S.D.Ind.1991, 782 F.Supp. 1293. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was absolutely immune from action under civil rights statute where the only actions of prosecutor alleged to be improper were the prosecution of a criminal action against plaintiff. Bennett v. Batchik, E.D.Mich.1990, 743 F.Supp. 1245, affirmed 936 F.2d 572. Civil Rights 1376(9)

In the circumstances of an initiated prosecution, concern for protecting the flow of information from prosecutor concerning affairs of government and apprehension of criminals takes on added significance since prosecutor is direct and primary source of information regarding active prosecution of an individual; in this context, safeguard of absolute immunity for prosecutor is vital to both preservation of public awareness and proper performance of prosecutor's duties. Strong v. Slaton, N.D.Ga.1981, 510 F.Supp. 161. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State district attorney was entitled to absolute immunity from arrestee's civil rights suit, in which arrestee alleged that district attorney violated his Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment rights by initiating rape prosecution and continuing to pursue it in the face of a lack of evidence and by failing to abide by an earlier cooperation agreement. Bresko v. John, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2004, 87 Fed.Appx. 800, 2004 WL 180415, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant district attorney, in her individual capacity, was entitled to absolute immunity from pre-trial detainee's § 1983 lawsuit alleging attorney failed to prevent detainee's detention in a smoking facility; actions related to pre-trial confinement were part of the initiation and presentation of the state's case. Reid v. Schuman, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 83 Fed.Appx. 376, 2003 WL 22965003, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors were absolutely immune from liability under § 1983 for decision to prosecute, even based on an allegedly inadequate police investigation, and for decision whether and when to dismiss the charges against plaintiff. Joseph v. Yocum, C.A.10 (Utah) 2002, 53 Fed.Appx. 1, 2002 WL 31656696, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3484. Probable cause, prosecutorial immunity

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prosecutor was not entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity with respect to her actions in executing certification for determination of probable cause in connection with filing of charges against accused, for purposes of § 1983 action brought after charges were dropped, in which accused alleged that certification contained false statements; act of filing certification was not one of traditional functions of advocate, as neither federal nor state law required that prosecutor make certification and it could have been made by any competent witness. Kalina v. Fletcher, U.S.Wash.1997, 118 S.Ct. 502, 522 U.S. 118, 139 L.Ed.2d 471. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant district attorney was entitled only to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for his investigation of charges of child abuse against plaintiff, for his decision to have child removed from plaintiff's custody, and for his advise to police that they had probable cause to arrest plaintiff; in taking these actions, assistant district attorney was not acting as advocate. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor is not functioning as advocate, and hence does not have absolute immunity, before he has probable cause to have anyone arrested. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1994, 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 740, 513 U.S. 1085, 130 L.Ed.2d 642, on remand 1996 WL 10899. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity from arrestee's § 1983 action for monetary damages, which arose after rape charges against arrestee were dismissed based on finding of lack of probable cause; there was no allegation that prosecutor's conduct towards arrestee strayed from prosecutor's traditional advocacy functions. Gibbs v. Deckers, D.Del.2002, 234 F.Supp.2d 458. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3485. Decisions against prosecution, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor's decision not to prosecute is intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process and thus prosecutor enjoys absolute immunity, under § 1983, for that decision. Roe v. City and County of San Francisco, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1997, 109 F.3d 578. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Assistant district attorney for county was entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability for death of robbery victim, with respect to his decision not to prosecute person who allegedly tampered with victim by ordering him to change his testimony as to identity of robbery perpetrator; attorney's activities were clearly connected with prosecutorial function, for which absolute immunity was available. Ying Jing Gan v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 996 F.2d 522. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Absolute prosecutorial immunity barred civil rights claims seeking damages from county district attorney and deputy district attorney, arising from decision of district attorney not to prosecute arrests made by city police officer who was reinstated after suspension pending investigation of child sex abuse charges made against him; moreover, principles of prosecutorial independence, coupled with sensitivity to separation of powers concerns, counseled against any injunctive relief. Harrington v. Almy, C.A.1 (Me.) 1992, 977 F.2d 37, rehearing denied, on remand 148 F.R.D. 11. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor enjoyed absolute immunity from liability in civil rights action in which plaintiff alleged that she was unconstitutionally deprived of right to sue her former father-in-law for malicious prosecution when prosecutor agreed to dismiss criminal case father-in-law brought against plaintiff in exchange for plaintiff's waiver of right to assert civil liability against former father-in-law; prosecutor's actions were wholly within scope of prosecutorial function. Hammond v. Bales, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1988, 843 F.2d 1320. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County prosecuting attorney had absolute immunity, as to dog owner's equal protection and due process claims under §§ 1983 relating to prosecuting attorney's decision not to prosecute county deputy sheriff's cousin for allegedly stealing her dog. Curry v. Weiford, N.D.W.Va.2005, 389 F.Supp.2d 704, appeal dismissed 133 Fed.Appx. 50, 2005 WL 1220816. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecutor's decision not to investigate a civil rights plaintiff's accusations against a police officer was sufficiently closely related to decision not to prosecute so as to qualify the decision for absolute immunity. Woolfolk v. Thomas, N.D.N.Y.1989, 725 F.Supp. 1281. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecuting attorney's only participation in "conspiracy" against plaintiff to remove political signs from his property was his decision to terminate prosecutions against two defendants for removing the signs; therefore, prosecuting attorney had absolute immunity from liability asserted against him under this section and section 1985 of this title. Coon v. Froehlich, S.D.Ohio 1983, 573 F.Supp. 918. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3486. Intent of prosecution, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

Regardless of prosecutors' alleged political motives for engaging in conduct, absolute prosecutorial immunity protected local prosecutors from civil rights liability for their alleged malicious or selective prosecution of town officials, as well as for any misconduct in presentation of evidence to grand juries that indicted officials. Bernard v. County of Suffolk, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 356 F.3d 495. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County district attorney was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity for charging political rival with criminal conspiracy and attempt to deal in infant children, even if charges were politically motivated. Kulwicki v. Dawson, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1992, 969 F.2d 1454. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Doctrine of prosecutorial immunity bars § 1983 action brought after the fact to recover damages from prosecutors in their individual capacity for allegedly vindictive prosecution in violation of due process clause. Willhauck v. Halpin, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1991, 953 F.2d 689, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant county district attorneys and county district attorney were protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity from an action brought by plaintiff alleging that a policy existed in county district attorney's office to summarily arrest, incarcerate, and interrogate innocent citizens to obtain evidence implicating third parties charged with crimes leading to her alleged false arrest since prosecutors were performing actions related to initiation of a criminal prosecution. Hawk v. Brosha, E.D.Pa.1984, 590 F.Supp. 337. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Although perhaps motivated by improper purpose and carried out in bad faith, activities of county district attorney involving his instigation of criminal action against complainant which resulted in complainant's arrest and alleged damages were conducted entirely within scope of his duties as prosecutor and, hence, he was entitled to absolute immunity in complainant's civil rights action. Fabrizio v. Storey County, D.C.Nev.1982, 543 F.Supp. 573. Civil Rights 1376(9)

United States attorney and his assistants who prosecuted plaintiff for bank robbery offenses were absolutely immune from plaintiff's subsequent suit in which it was alleged that prosecutors conspired with other defendants to charge and convict plaintiff for offenses within he did not commit, since prosecutors were acting within scope of their duties in initiating and pursuing criminal prosecution against plaintiff. People ex rel. Snead v. Kirkland, E.D.Pa.1978, 462 F.Supp. 914. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutors for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania enjoyed absolute immunity from civil rights liability for their decision to bring criminal charges regardless of their motive or of whether they believed that the accused was in fact guilty of the crime charged; therefore, allegation that the prosecutors decided to prosecute and decided not to drop charges solely to maintain pressure on the accused to incriminate a third party could not form the basis for civil rights liability. Clark v. Lutcher, M.D.Pa.1977, 77 F.R.D. 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3487. ---- Malicious prosecutions, intent of prosecution, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor is absolutely immune from suit for malicious prosecution under this section; even though such immunity leaves genuinely wronged criminal defendant without civil redress against prosecutor whose malicious or dishonest action deprives him of liberty, since the alternative of qualifying prosecutor's immunity would disserve broader public interest, in that it would prevent vigorous and fearless performance of prosecutor's duty that is essential to proper functioning of criminal justice system and would often prejudice criminal defendants by skewing postconviction judicial decisions that should be made with sole purpose of insuring justice. Imbler v. Pachtman, U.S.Cal.1976, 96 S.Ct. 984, 424 U.S. 409, 47 L.Ed.2d 128. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Assistant state attorney was absolutely immune from arrestee's claim for malicious prosecution under § 1983, which alleged that attorney submitted willfully incomplete and inadequate assessment of case that provided basis for decision to prosecute him, inasmuch as attorney functioned as prosecutor when he reviewed police records, interviewed parties involved, and submitted evaluation of underlying complaints to superiors. Spiegel v. Rabinovitz, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1997, 121 F.3d 251, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 565, 522 U.S. 998, 139 L.Ed.2d 405. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Civil rights malicious prosecution claims against prosecuting attorney in his individual capacity as a member of creditor bank's board of directors and against another prosecutor in his individual capacity as a stockholder legal counsel for the bank were subject to prosecutorial immunity, despite debtor's argument that prosecutors acted in their respective capacities with bank to spur filing of charges which formed basis of civil rights suit. Brummett v. Camble, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1991, 946 F.2d 1178, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 2323, 504 U.S. 965, 119 L.Ed.2d 241. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Allegation that assistant district attorney engaged in malicious prosecution of charge against paralegal was within "judicial phase of criminal process," and therefore, he was immune from liability for deprivation of civil rights under color of state law for his part in prosecuting charge. Day v. Morgenthau, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1990, 909 F.2d 75, amended on rehearing, on remand 769 F.Supp. 472. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Although city attorney was authorized under local law to file only criminal charges based on violations of city ordinances, he was absolutely immune from liability under this section for damages based on filing of charges against plaintiffs under state felony statutes based on alleged assault of animal control officer as plaintiffs could have been prosecuted under city ordinances for their conduct and the statutes also arguably applied to the conduct, regardless of whether prosecutor acted intentionally or maliciously, and immunity extended to securing of arrest warrant and urging setting of high bail. Lerwill v. Joslin, C.A.10 (Utah) 1983, 712 F.2d 435. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney and his assistants, who were defendants in civil rights action which alleged that defendants conspired to wrongfully condemn parcel of plaintiff's property and to falsely arrest, imprison and criminally prosecute him, acted solely within scope of their prosecutorial responsibilities and were therefore immune. Smart v. Jones, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 530 F.2d 64, rehearing denied 532 F.2d 1375, rehearing denied 532 F.2d 1376, certiorari denied 97 S.Ct. 240, 429 U.S. 887, 50 L.Ed.2d 168, rehearing denied 97 S.Ct. 1166, 429 U.S. 1125, 51 L.Ed.2d 577. Conspiracy 13

Civil rights action against state prosecuting attorney on theory that he prosecuted complaint against plaintiff without probable cause and because he was motivated by malice was barred by prosecutorial immunity. Grow v. Fisher, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1975, 523 F.2d 875. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorneys named as defendants in civil rights action brought for alleged malicious prosecution and false arrest were protected by quasi-judicial immunity. Sykes v. State of Cal. (Dept. of Motor Vehicles), C.A.9 (Cal.) 1974, 497 F.2d 197. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Public prosecutor possesses same immunity in an action which seeks to hold him personally liable for official acts under this section as he does to similar action for malicious prosecution. Dacey v. New York County Lawyers'

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Ass'n, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1969, 423 F.2d 188, certiorari denied 90 S.Ct. 1819, 398 U.S. 929, 26 L.Ed.2d 92. Civil Rights 1376(9)

City prosecutors were absolutely immune from plaintiff's §§ 1983 claim for malicious prosecution, arising from prosecution of plaintiff on a traffic citation, absent evidence that prosecutors provided legal advice to the police involved in plaintiff's traffic case. King v. Knoll, D.Kan.2005, 399 F.Supp.2d 1169. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant district attorneys were entitled to absolute immunity from liability for alien's malicious prosecution claim brought against them in their individual capacities under § 1983 allegations that district attorney's office requested bail in sum of $50,000, that alien remained in jail because county and village officers continuously failed to investigate his identity, alibi, and numerous protestations of innocence, and that district attorney's chief of felony screening advised alien that grand jury had dismissed criminal charges, all arose out of traditional functions of prosecutor's office. Carbajal v. County of Nassau, E.D.N.Y.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 415. Civil Rights 1376(9)

To the extent he was functioning as advocate, assistant United States attorney had absolute immunity from liability in § 1983 alleging malicious prosecution with respect to tax and bank fraud charges against plaintiff, even if attorney maliciously singled out plaintiff for prosecution. Groom v. Fickes, S.D.Tex.1997, 966 F.Supp. 1466, affirmed 129 F.3d 606. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Section 1983 claim against prosecutors for malicious prosecution was barred by absolute prosecutorial immunity, despite arrestee's allegation of a conspiracy to present false testimony against him at his criminal trial. Marion v. Groh, D.Conn.1997, 954 F.Supp. 39. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney and former district attorney were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 claims of malicious prosecution, of presenting false testimony to and withholding exculpatory evidence from grand jury, and conspiracy, as charged acts were intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Covington v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1996, 916 F.Supp. 282. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Even if claims that prosecutors maliciously singled individual out for prosecution were true, those claims were within ambit of prosecutorial absolute immunity. Hunter v. City of Beaumont, E.D.Tex.1994, 867 F.Supp. 496. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor has absolute immunity from civil rights liability in connection with a decision whether to commence prosecution and the allegation that prosecutor engaged in malicious prosecution is within the judicial phase of the criminal process. Eisenberg v. District Attorney of County of Kings, E.D.N.Y.1994, 847 F.Supp. 1029. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State's attorney and city's assistant corporation counsel were immune from liability in civil rights and malicious prosecution action arising when plaintiff was arrested for disorderly conduct, where claims stemmed solely from performance of prosecutorial duties. Carr v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1987, 669 F.Supp. 1421. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County prosecutor was absolutely immune from liability for his alleged act of filing murder charge, even if he did so with malice coupled with some evil and sinister motive, and even if he knew the charge to be baseless in law and fact; declining to follow Beard v. Udall, 648 F.2d 1264 (9th Cir.), Brooks v. Fitch, 534 F.Supp. 129 (D.N.J.); and Elliott v. Perez, 561 F.Supp. 1325 (E.D.La.). Ginter v. Stallcup, E.D.Ark.1986, 641 F.Supp. 939, appeal dismissed 802 F.2d 462, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 869 F.2d 384, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9); District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Assistant district attorney (ADA) was entitled to absolute immunity from former police officer's § 1983 false arrest and malicious prosecution claims, stemming from officer's arrest and prosecution for perjury; all of attorney's actions were within scope of his official duties. Tartaglione v. Pugliese, S.D.N.Y.2002, 2002 WL 31387255, Unreported, affirmed 89 Fed.Appx. 304, 2004 WL 474011. Civil Rights 1376(9); Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3488. Motive, prosecutorial immunity

County prosecutor enjoyed absolute immunity in former criminal defendant's §§ 1983 and state-law malicious prosecution action seeking damages, which alleged that prosecutor had conspired with complainant to proceed against former defendant despite knowing she was innocent, and had done so with improper motive arising from friendship with complainant; prosecutor's improper state of mind did not constitute clear absence of all jurisdiction. Shmueli v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 424 F.3d 231. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutorial immunity from § 1983 liability is broadly defined, covering virtually all acts, regardless of motivation, associated with prosecutor's function as advocate. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's motives have no bearing on applicability of absolute immunity to civil rights action against prosecutor. Smith v. Gribetz, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 145. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Doctrine of absolute prosecutorial immunity creates formidable obstacle for plaintiff seeking to maintain civil rights action against district attorney in his individual capacity; prosecutorial immunity covers virtually all acts, regardless of motivation, associated with prosecutor's function as advocate and ensures vigorous and fearless performance of prosecutor's duty that is essential to proper functioning of criminal justice system. Smith v. Gribetz, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 145. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3489. Delays in prosecution, prosecutorial immunity

County prosecutor's decision not to charge prisoner until lineup could be held was prosecutorial rather than administrative decision, and prosecutor thus was absolutely immune from § 1983 claim by prisoner's widow alleging that delay in charging, after prisoner stated that he wanted to kill himself, led to prisoner's suicide and violated his Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment rights; prosecutor's review of evidence and determination that additional evidence was necessary to support charge were necessary part of his role as advocate. Anderson v. Simon, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2000, 217 F.3d 472, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 765, 531 U.S. 1073, 148 L.Ed.2d 666. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Inmate's § 1983 claims against prosecutors allegedly responsible for delay in direct appeal related to their functions as trial or appellate advocates, and thus, absolute judicial immunity barred such claims to extent prosecutors were sued in their individual capacities. Rodriguez v. Weprin, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 116 F.3d 62. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney and assistant district attorney were entitled to absolute immunity against damage claim brought under this section based upon any delay in prosecution of former district attorney for alleged murder of plaintiffs' daughter. Ryland v. Shapiro, W.D.La.1984, 586 F.Supp. 1495. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor enjoyed Imbler immunity from civil rights liability based on alleged failure to properly investigate allegations against plaintiffs before deciding to prosecute and prosecutor's allegedly deliberately slowing time table for prosecution was also entitled to absolute immunity as part of presentation of the State's case. Stefaniak v. State of Mich., W.D.Mich.1983, 564 F.Supp. 1194. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3489A. Medical treatment

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Fire department lieutenant's alleged actions in removing patient from his home to a hospital for medical treatment against his will violated patient's clearly established Fourth Amendment right to be free from seizure and transport for medical treatment unless he presented a danger to himself or others, and thus, lieutenant was not entitled to qualified immunity on patient's §§ 1983 claim alleging unreasonable seizure. Green v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2006, 465 F.3d 65. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3490. Convictions affirmed or reversed on appeal, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney's status as board member of organization whose members former criminal defendant was previously convicted of harassing, and his receipt of $300 campaign contribution from organization, did not constitute conflict of interest which would allow former criminal defendant to bring civil rights action against district attorney despite prosecutorial immunity; there was no evidence that district attorney directed and ordered prosecution and alleged improper acts that occurred during course of prosecution, and subsequent affirmance of former criminal defendant's conviction by Appellate Term of the Supreme Court, and denial of his petition for certiorari to United States Supreme Court, suggested that charges against him were not baseless. Katz v. Morgenthau, S.D.N.Y.1989, 709 F.Supp. 1219, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 892 F.2d 20, on remand. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Fact that conviction of arson with the intent to defraud an insurer was reversed on appeal in state court did not preclude application of doctrine of prosecutorial immunity to require dismissal of subsequent civil rights action based on allegation that state prosecuting attorney had violated accused's civil rights by unlawfully prosecuting him for arson. Wolf v. Carey, N.D.Ill.1977, 438 F.Supp. 545, affirmed 582 F.2d 1282. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor at trial resulting in plaintiff's conviction of theft by deception, which conviction was reversed on appeal, was protected from liability for misconduct in performing his official functions. Croy v. Skinner, N.D.Ga.1976, 410 F.Supp. 117. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3491. Arrest warrants, prosecutorial immunity

Section 1983 creates damages remedy against prosecutor for making false statements of fact in affidavit supporting application for arrest warrant, as such conduct is not protected by doctrine of absolute prosecutorial immunity; abrogating Joseph v. Patterson, 795 F.2d 549. Kalina v. Fletcher, U.S.Wash.1997, 118 S.Ct. 502, 522 U.S. 118, 139 L.Ed.2d 471. Civil Rights 1088(4); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor is absolutely immune for appearing before judicial officer to present evidence in support of application for arrest warrant, insofar as he acts as state's advocate in presenting evidence and arguing law. Kohl v. Casson, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1993, 5 F.3d 1141. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

District attorney enjoyed absolute immunity, in § 1983 action brought against district attorney in his individual capacity alleging that negligent transposition of descriptive information about suspect onto arrest warrant affidavit had led to false arrest; there was no showing that district attorney had personally investigated or participated in investigatory actions in preparation of warrant. White v. Oklahoma ex rel. Tulsa County Office of Dist. Attorney, N.D.Okla.2002, 250 F.Supp.2d 1319. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Officer, who arrested plaintiff pursuant to a facially valid bench warrant, was entitled to absolute immunity from §§ 1983 false arrest claim; since officer disclosed all evidence, exculpatory or otherwise, to prosecutor, could not be held liable for executing the arrest warrant allegedly obtained as a result of prosecutor's breach of his duties. Zamora v. City of Belen, D.N.M.2005, 383 F.Supp.2d 1315. Civil Rights 1376(6)

State prosecutor enjoys absolute immunity from §§ 1983 actions for preparing and filing an information and for moving for an arrest warrant, but only qualified immunity for acting as a complaining witness in averring a complaint for arrest and its supporting affidavit. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecuting attorney's failure to assure that judge's order cancelling bench warrant was carried out did not amount to recklessness, willfulness, or deliberate indifference, as required for claim under § 1983; he followed procedure he had followed in about 100 other cases, and he had no knowledge of bench warrant failing to be cancelled in any other case. Sielaff v. Cooper, E.D.Mich.1997, 965 F.Supp. 21. Civil Rights 1088(4)

State prosecutor's actions in allegedly directing police officer to delete exculpatory material from an arrest warrant were squarely within scope of prosecutor's adversarial duties, and thus, prosecutor was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity with regard to plaintiff's § 1983 action against prosecutor, alleging malicious prosecution. Sheehan v. Colangelo, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2002, 53 Fed.Appx. 584, 2002 WL 31840792, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3492. Bond or bail, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity as to an arrestee's § 1983 claim alleging violation of his right to be free from excessive bail, even though the prosecutor's input into the judicial process of setting bail, upon inquiry by the officer statutorily authorized to set bail and at a stage in which the statutory scheme did not give the prosecutor a formal role, constituted providing legal advice to the bail setter; such advisory conduct was still a component of the initiation and presentation of a prosecution for which the prosecutor is entitled to absolute immunity. Sanchez v. Doyle, D.Conn.2003, 254 F.Supp.2d 266. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutor was entitled to absolute judicial immunity for his conduct of unilaterally increasing the bond amount of an arrestee, in arrestee's §§ 1983 action alleging unreasonable seizure and the setting of unreasonable bond in violation of the Fourth, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments; setting bond was judicial in nature, it was done with colorable authority, pursuant to a Connecticut statute, which arguably permitted prosecutor to temporarily delay arrestee's release, and the a delay in release was the functional equivalent of a bond revocation, so that it was not unreasonable for prosecutor to conclude that he had the authority to modify the bond amount. Root v. Liston, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2006, 444 F.3d 127. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Although prosecutor acted without authority in unilaterally raising judicially-set bond on arrestee's failure to appear charge from $1,000 to $250,000 without consulting court, he had jurisdiction in general area of bond proceedings, was authorized by state statute to order defendants' release delayed after bond was set, and was engaged in activity closely associated with prosecutorial role when he raised arrestee's bond, and thus he was absolutely immune from § § 1983 action by arrestee claiming unreasonable seizure and setting of unreasonable bond in violation of Fourth, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Root v. Liston, D.Conn.2005, 363 F.Supp.2d 190, affirmed on other grounds 444 F.3d 127. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant attorney for the Commonwealth in appearing before court to argue that court should not reduce plaintiff's bond was absolutely immune from liability under this section, and also enjoyed qualified good-faith immunity. Harris v. Friedline, E.D.Va.1983, 585 F.Supp. 734, affirmed 745 F.2d 51, certiorari denied 105 S.Ct. 1368, 470 U.S. 1008, 84 L.Ed.2d 388. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Test whether allegedly injurious conduct falls within protected quasi-judicial role turns on whether harm is inflicted as part of or independently of prosecution, and actions of assistant state's attorneys in setting bond and arraignment date, in taking "not guilty" pleas, in dismissing case against one defendant at pretrial but refusing to drop case against another, in conducting discovery and obtaining continuance of trial date, in substituting charge of violation of one statute for different violation and in ultimately nolling case against remaining defendant just before trial were activities unquestionably essential to protected quasi-judicial aspects of prosecutorial function and were covered by immunity. Halpern v. City of New Haven, D.C.Conn.1980, 489 F.Supp. 841. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3493. Confessions, prosecutorial immunity

Illinois assistant state's attorney was entitled to directed verdict based on prosecutorial immunity in civil rights action brought by arrestee absent showing that attorney had engaged in investigative or administrative activities or in alleged coercion by police officer; attorney merely reviewed charges after arrestee had confessed and agreed to give statement. Hunt v. Jaglowski, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1991, 926 F.2d 689, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity in §§ 1983 suit based on allegations that they, in addition to conspiring to suppress the fact of and evidence obtained from the police defendants' abusive interrogation of plaintiff, actively participated with the police defendants in torturing plaintiff and fabricating his confession; allegations suggested that prosecutors were functioning as investigators rather than prosecutors and were therefore entitled only to the same qualified immunity as police officers performing similar tasks. Patterson v. Burge, N.D.Ill.2004, 328 F.Supp.2d 878. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3494. Confiscation of property, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

Prosecutor was not entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity for his role in sale of drug defendant's forfeited property by county where prosecutor's action in allegedly improper sale clearly involved administrative duties. Giuffre v. Bissell, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1994, 31 F.3d 1241. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Assistant county prosecutor was immune from civil rights suit in which plaintiff sought redress for allegedly unconstitutional confiscation and destruction of plaintiff's automobile, which was seized as evidence of crime and towed to police department to be impounded, in view of fact that assistant county prosecutor's actions with respect to automobile were in pursuance of his duties of investigating, initiating and pursuing criminal prosecution. Nylon v. City of Wellston, E.D.Mo.1981, 512 F.Supp. 560. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Even if state prisoner appearing pro se in civil rights action under § 1983 could pursue claims against city alleging that his mother and grandmother's home was razed based on city's fraudulent assertion in earlier civil forfeiture action that he committed drug-related murder on the property, prosecutors in civil forfeiture action were entitled to absolute immunity, since filing of complaint describing basis for forfeiture was integral part of judicial phase of litigation. Green v. City of Oakland, N.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 31855312, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3495. ---- Return of property, confiscation of property, prosecutorial immunity

Actions complained about by plaintiff in his first claim for relief against county prosecutor, viz., that the prosecutor's failure to return property seized from plaintiff's business premises constituted a deprivation of private property in violation of U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 5 and 14, fell within the function intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process and, therefore, the prosecutor was absolutely immune from damages on that claim for relief. Maxfield v. Thomas, D.C.Idaho 1983, 557 F.Supp. 1123. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3496. Cruel and unusual punishment, prosecutorial immunity

County district attorney and State Attorney General had absolute prosecutorial immunity for any actions taken within scope of their duties allegedly denying plaintiff his constitutional right to speedy trial and his constitutional right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment. Prince v. Wallace, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1978, 568 F.2d 1176. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3497. Dependency proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Civil rights claim for damages against district attorney was barred by official immunity where acts complained of, such as initiating dependency proceedings, occurred as part of initiation and prosecution of case against civil rights plaintiff. Martin v. Aubuchon, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1980, 623 F.2d 1282. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3498. Expungement of records, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity from action for deprivation of civil rights with regard to their opposing expungement of records of individuals against whom charges were dismissed, even after losing all appeals pertaining to dismissal, absent finding that individuals had prior record, and that hearing or legal proceeding was conducted with regard to motion for expungement during which prosecutors were acting as advocates representing state's interest in judicial processes; otherwise return of records was statutorily mandated, where underlying charge was not sexual offense. Joseph v. Patterson, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1986, 795 F.2d 549, certiorari denied 107 S.Ct. 1910, 481 U.S. 1023, 95 L.Ed.2d 516. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3499. Extradition, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney and deputy district attorney were entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity in connection with decision not to extradite father for failing to pay child support; extradition was intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process and was clearly litigation-associated duty. Larsen v. Early, D.Colo.1994, 842 F.Supp. 1310, affirmed 34 F.3d 1076. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting attorney was immune from liability under this section for actions in course of extradition process. Cleary v. Andersen, D.C.Neb.1976, 423 F.Supp. 745. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Although the decision of whether to extradite is within the "quasi-judicial" function of a state prosecutor, conduct of Louisiana district attorney's office in leaving outstanding arrest warrant entry on the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Crime Information Center computer system after having decided not to extradite plaintiff was not within the prosecutorial function and was outside the scope of prosecutorial immunity in a civil rights suit. Maney v. Ratcliff, E.D.Wis.1975, 399 F.Supp. 760. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3500. Grand jury proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

Fact that prosecutors later called grand jury to consider allegedly false evidence their investigatory work had produced did not retroactively transform that work from administrative into prosecutorial, and thus did not provide prosecutors with absolute immunity from charge that evidence had been fabricated. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Federal prosecutor was absolutely immune from liability for advocatory decisions including decision to prosecute individual for fraud, allegedly concealing exculpatory evidence from grand jury and allegedly manipulating evidence before grand jury to create false impression regarding individual's knowledge about alleged fraudulent scheme. Moore v. Valder, C.A.D.C.1995, 65 F.3d 189, 314 U.S.App.D.C. 209, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 75, 519 U.S. 820, 136 L.Ed.2d 35. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Mere fact that assistant district attorney obtained alleged child abuse victim's videotaped testimony pursuant to New York statute providing for the use of such videotaped testimony in grand jury proceedings, and that videotape was shown to grand jury just six days after it was recorded, was not determinative as to whether assistant district attorney was performing "investigative" or "advocate's" function in obtaining this videotaped testimony; neither the use of statutory procedure nor accelerated pace of events was controlling on assistant district attorney's entitlement to either qualified or absolute immunity from civil rights liability for his actions. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

There was no exception to absolute immunity afforded prosecutors in their quasi-judicial role, even if prosecutors caused defendant to be tried for felony without having first presented to grand jury evidence of particular criminal conduct sought to be shown. Celia v. O'Malley, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1990, 918 F.2d 1017. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Activities of district attorney and assistant district attorney in allegedly instituting grand jury proceedings without investigation and without good faith that wrongdoing had occurred, influencing and directing grand jury to present false findings, and intentionally failing to call witnesses with knowledge of events who they believed would exculpate investigation targets, were encompassed by prosecutorial immunity doctrine as intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Rose v. Bartle, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1989, 871 F.2d 331, on remand. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutor was absolutely immune from liability for damages under section 1983 for allegedly maliciously presenting evidence to a grand jury in a manner calculated to clear a suspect of wrongdoing. Morrison v. City of Baton Rouge, C.A.5 (La.) 1985, 761 F.2d 242. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Allegation that prosecutor was "in charge of the investigation" of felony charges was insufficient to establish that he was performing investigatory functions apart from grand jury inquiry, for purpose of determining whether civil rights action against prosecutor fell within narrow area left unresolved by the Imbler rule of absolute prosecutorial immunity when presenting a case to the grand jury. Maglione v. Briggs, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1984, 748 F.2d 116. Civil Rights 1398

Assistant district attorneys' presentation of evidence to grand juries was insulated from liability under this section. Fine v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1975, 529 F.2d 70, on remand 71 F.R.D. 374. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's request that grand jury consider suspect as target for indictment was intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process, and thus was protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity from liability in suspect's civil rights action. Miller v. Spiers, D.N.M.2006, 434 F.Supp.2d 1064. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

District attorney was entitled to absolute immunity for his alleged wrongful interference with grand jury proceedings by preventing grand jurors from obtaining evidence that would exculpate former public utility executive and presenting prejudicial evidence of executive's noncriminal activities, for purpose of executive's subsequent § 1983 action, as attorney's alleged conduct was part of his quasi-judicial, prosecutorial function; even if grand jury proceeding was initially investigative and did not focus on any particular individual, attorney's alleged misconduct took place after executive had been identified as target of investigation. Smith v. Gribetz, S.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 145. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorneys were entitled to absolute immunity with regard to arrestee's claim that they presented false information to grand jury. Pinaud v. County of Suffolk, E.D.N.Y.1992, 798 F.Supp. 913, affirmed in part, remanded in part 52 F.3d 1139. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Where New York Attorney General was conducting grand jury investigation respecting oil company's bidding practices in state and was thus "initiating a prosecution," in that the proceedings were clearly prelude to one or more indictments if sufficient evidence could be produced, and in fact grand jury subsequently handed up indictments against oil company, and, under state statute, Attorney General was obligated to mail to appropriate government officials notice of refusal of witness to testify, and Attorney General was acting under State statutes requiring insertion in government contracts of clause providing for disqualification from contract by reason of refusal to testify, Attorney General was absolutely immune from damage claims. Mobil Oil Corp. v. Lefkowitz, S.D.N.Y.1977, 454 F.Supp. 59. Attorney General 8

3501. Imprisonment, prosecutorial immunity

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Actions of assistant district attorneys general in connection with incarceration of material witness were inextricably intertwined with their initiation and presentation of the state's prosecution and were entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights action brought by witness. White by Swafford v. Gerbitz, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1988, 860 F.2d 661, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 1160, 489 U.S. 1028, 103 L.Ed.2d 219. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting attorney as "quasi-judicial officer" was immune from suit under this section for allegedly denying plaintiff access to supplementary police reports and causing him to be imprisoned before trial, thus allegedly handicapping preparations for his defense to state criminal prosecution. Guerrero v. Barlow, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1974, 494 F.2d 1190, rehearing denied 502 F.2d 1167, certiorari denied 96 S.Ct. 1481, 424 U.S. 975, 47 L.Ed.2d 746. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Inmate could not recover in civil rights action from district attorneys for alleged injuries emanating from duration and conditions of his imprisonment. Pinaud v. County of Suffolk, E.D.N.Y.1992, 798 F.Supp. 913, affirmed in part, remanded in part 52 F.3d 1139. Civil Rights 1098

Claim in civil rights action for damages against district attorneys for their part in bringing about plaintiff's arrest and incarceration was precluded by their absolute immunity from suit for actions taken while engaged in judicial phase of criminal process. Holland v. Rubin, E.D.N.Y.1978, 460 F.Supp. 1051. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Defendant who, as prosecuting attorney, authorized confinement of plaintiff in county jail for 40 hours, because it had been represented to defendant that plaintiff was insane and manifesting homicidal and other dangerous tendencies, was immune from civil liability to plaintiff under this section. Kenney v. Killian, W.D.Mich.1955, 133 F.Supp. 571, affirmed 232 F.2d 288, certiorari denied 77 S.Ct. 84, 352 U.S. 855, 1 L.Ed.2d 66, certiorari denied 77 S.Ct. 84, 352 U.S. 856, 1 L.Ed.2d 66. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3502. Indictment or information, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor's activities in connection with preparation and filing of charging documents, including information and motion for arrest warrant, were protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity in § 1983 action brought by accused after charges were dropped. Kalina v. Fletcher, U.S.Wash.1997, 118 S.Ct. 502, 522 U.S. 118, 139 L.Ed.2d 471. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor had absolute immunity from § 1983 suit based on decision not to divert indictee from trial into pretrial intervention (PTI). Davis v. Grusemeyer, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1993, 996 F.2d 617. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prisoner's allegation that prosecutor disregarded a court order to file an information or release prisoner would not place prosecutor outside scope of his prosecutorial duties and therefore prosecutor was absolutely immune from prisoner's civil rights claim based upon his denial of his constitutional right to a prompt judicial determination of probable cause. Webster v. Gibson, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1990, 913 F.2d 510. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Parish and its assistant District Attorneys were entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity from civil rights suit, even assuming truth of plaintiff's allegations that bill on information on which he was convicted was defective and that one of prior DWI convictions alleged in bill was not in fact conviction, thus warranting sua sponte dismissal of claim as based on meritless legal theory or as having no realistic chance of ultimate success. Pugh v. Parish of St. Tammany, C.A.5 (La.) 1989, 875 F.2d 436, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor who misread grand jury voting sheet and prepared indictment in erroneous belief that vote had been to indict was acting within course of his official duties and, therefore, was absolutely immune from § 1983 liability. Baez v. Hennessy, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 853 F.2d 73, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 805, 488 U.S. 1014, 102 L.Ed.2d 796. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State prosecutor was absolutely immune from civil liability for damages under this section for his actions in seeking an indictment and in the presentation of witnesses and documentary evidence at plaintiff's state trial and at challenges to his conviction in habeas corpus proceedings. Bruce v. Wade, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1976, 537 F.2d 850. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor, in assisting police in obtaining evidence before indictment, functions in investigative capacity not quasi-judicial capacity, so that prosecutor does not enjoy absolute immunity and may avoid liability for those actions under a § 1983 suit only if qualifiedly immune. Metro Charities, Inc. v. Moore, S.D.Miss.1990, 748 F.Supp. 1156. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Former state Attorneys General and other state officials were entitled to only qualified immunity under Civil Rights Act on claim by confidential informant that the defendants failed to honor an alleged agreement for relocation and new identity after the informant's undercover identity had been disclosed; defendants were acting in their investigative capacities, rather than prosecutorial capacity, in that there was no evidence that the defendants were investigating the informant with the intent to seek an indictment as to him, although they may have been using informant's information to indict others. G-69 v. Degnan, D.N.J.1990, 745 F.Supp. 254, clarified on denial of reconsideration 748 F.Supp. 274. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's activities in filing criminal complaint, instituting proceedings for arrest of person suspected of criminal activities, and drawing criminal information are automatically entitled to immunity from liability for damages, since decision to initiate, maintain or dismiss criminal charges is at core of prosecutorial function. Condos v. Conforte, D.C.Nev.1984, 596 F.Supp. 197. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State Attorney General and district attorney had prosecutorial immunity against action under this section based on claim that prejudicial preindictment publicity and information leaked by prosecutors biased grand jury into returning indictment against plaintiff. Sperl v. Deukmejian, C.D.Cal.1980, 482 F.Supp. 1026, affirmed 642 F.2d 1154. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors were immune from suit based upon their actions in reviving criminal indictments against prison inmate six and one-half years after indictments had been returned and eight years after alleged offenses had occurred. Gockley v. VanHoove, E.D.Pa.1976, 409 F.Supp. 645. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3503. Inquests, prosecutorial immunity

District attorney's participation in investigation by coroner's jury was action taken as county official and, if district attorney participated with others in covering up police misconduct in connection with fatal shooting of citizen, that activity would fall outside sphere of activity for which prosecutors are given absolute immunity from civil rights suit for damages. Bell v. City of Milwaukee, E.D.Wis.1981, 514 F.Supp. 1363. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3504. Jury selection, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity from personal liability under § 1983 for using peremptory strikes in claimant's trial in racially discriminatory manner, in that use of strikes was part of prosecutor's presentation of state's case. Esteves v. Brock, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 106 F.3d 674, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 114 F.3d 1185, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 91, 522 U.S. 828, 139 L.Ed.2d 47. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor, who was named a defendant in a black inmate's civil rights action, was immune from liability for allegedly participating in conspiracy to impanel an all-white jury in inmate's absence and later stating that inmate had been present. White v. Bloom, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1980, 621 F.2d 276, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 533, 449 U.S. 995, 66 L.Ed.2d 292, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 882, 449 U.S. 1089, 66 L.Ed.2d 816. Conspiracy 13

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3505. Notices for trial, prosecutorial immunity

In arrestee's § 1983 suit against prosecutor, prosecutor's alleged improper setting of arrestee's case for trial on short notice was shielded by absolute immunity, as action was taken in course and scope of prosecution. Geter v. Fortenberry, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1988, 849 F.2d 1550. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3506. Parole, prosecutorial immunity

District court could not determine that parole officer and officials were absolutely immune from suit for errors allegedly committed in revoking defendant's parole until it first conducted some factual inquiry into whether officials' duties were judicial or prosecutorial in nature. Stewart v. Lattanzi, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1987, 832 F.2d 12. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Prosecuting attorney had absolute immunity from suit by inmate, claiming that her letter in opposition to grant of parole violated his equal protection and due process rights; letter was written while attorney was involved with adjudicative process, affording her immunity similar to that given to judges. Bodie v. Morgenthau, S.D.N.Y.2004, 342 F.Supp.2d 193. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting and district attorneys, sued under § 1983 by prisoner, had absolute immunity from claims that they had wrongfully communicated with parole board urging that he not be granted parole; those communications were intimately associated with judicial or quasi-judicial phase of criminal process. Quartararo v. Catterson, E.D.N.Y.1996, 917 F.Supp. 919. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting and district attorneys did not have absolute immunity from § 1983 suit brought by prisoner claiming they had wrongfully communicated with committee responsible for determining whether prisoner would be retained on work release program; committee did not have indicia of adjudicatory body and consequently attorneys' activities did not relate to judicial or quasi-judicial function. Quartararo v. Catterson, E.D.N.Y.1996, 917 F.Supp. 919. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3507. Pleas, prosecutorial immunity

Even if state attorneys tried to force physician to give up his medical practice, first in return for keeping Colorado Board of Medical Examiners' proceedings confidential and then by threatening to file sexual assault charges against him, those offers were akin to plea bargaining, activity that was absolutely immune from § 1983 liability due to its intimate association with judicial process. Pfeiffer v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1991, 929 F.2d 1484. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity from police officer's civil rights claim arising out of his resignation in response to the threat of criminal perjury charges, as the "agreement" between district attorney and officer was sufficiently analogous to a plea bargain to warrant same deference to prosecutor's discretion. Arnold v. McClain, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1991, 926 F.2d 963. Civil Rights 1376(9); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Prosecutor who was involved in plea bargaining process was exercising prosecutorial activities as to which he enjoyed immunity from civil rights liability. Humble v. Foreman, C.A.5 (La.) 1977, 563 F.2d 780, rehearing denied 566 F.2d 106. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutor who prosecuted accused and obtained plea of guilty to charge of possession of narcotic paraphernalia was immune from liability for damages to the accused under this section. Conner v. Pickett, C.A.5 (Ala.) 1977, 552 F.2d 585. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

District attorney and chief assistant district attorney were immune from liability in damages for nonfulfillment of negotiated plea agreement. Palermo v. Warden, Green Haven State Prison, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1976, 545 F.2d 286, certiorari dismissed 97 S.Ct. 2166, 431 U.S. 911, 53 L.Ed.2d 221. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity from civil rights liability for allegedly wrongfully conditioning his plea negotiations with litigant's criminal counsel on discharge of defense investigator. Bembenek v. Donohoo, E.D.Wis.2005, 355 F.Supp.2d 942. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorneys were entitled to absolute immunity regarding arrestee's claim that they breached plea agreement. Pinaud v. County of Suffolk, E.D.N.Y.1992, 798 F.Supp. 913, affirmed in part, remanded in part 52 F.3d 1139. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor, who allegedly breached plea agreement, was immune from suit for damages for the alleged breach and therefore state prisoner's claim brought under this section for that breach would be dismissed, but state prisoner's claim that prosecutor's act of confining him in segregation violated his constitutional rights was cognizable under this section and was not barred by defense or prosecutorial immunity. Doe v. Russotti, S.D.N.Y.1980, 503 F.Supp. 942.

Prosecutor was entitled to immunity from suit for damages under this section based on alleged misrepresentations to criminal defendant during plea bargaining process. Taylor v. Kavanagh, S.D.N.Y.1980, 492 F.Supp. 386, affirmed 640 F.2d 450. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting attorney was immune from suit under this section for alleged breach of plea bargain. Berryman v. Shuster, W.D.Okla.1975, 405 F.Supp. 1346. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3508. Post-conviction proceedings, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

A prosecutor's actions after conviction and while a direct appeal is pending are protected from § 1983 action by absolute immunity. Parkinson v. Cozzolino, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2001, 238 F.3d 145. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity from damages arising from their alleged failure to object to erroneous lesser included offense charge in murder prosecution or to bring error to light in postconviction proceedings. Patterson v. Von Riesen, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1993, 999 F.2d 1235. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3509. ---- Habeas corpus, post-conviction proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

State prosecutor was not absolutely, but was only qualifiedly, immune from § 1983 liability for preventing execution of writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum to allow inmate to testify on his own behalf in workers' compensation proceeding; state had successfully completed inmate's prosecution months before and, thus, when prosecutor intervened to forestall execution of writ, she, at best, acted pursuant to administrative duty assigned to her office. Lemmons v. Law Firm of Morris and Morris, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1994, 39 F.3d 264. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors acting in their official capacities were immune from civil rights liability for allegedly using "false and untrue methods" in opposing attempts to secure habeas corpus relief and, likewise, same protection extended to former assistant district attorney charged merely with failing to come to the aid of plaintiff, who was then represented by counsel. Holloway v. Carey, S.D.N.Y.1979, 482 F.Supp. 551. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor, while acting in scope of his duties as an assistant attorney general in handling habeas corpus hearing, would be absolutely immune from suit under this section. Ray v. Time, Inc., W.D.Tenn.1976, 452 F.Supp. 618, affirmed 582 F.2d 1280. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3510. Private complaints, prosecutorial immunity

The decision to approve or disapprove a private criminal complaint fits squarely within broader function of "initiating a prosecution," and therefore it cannot subject a prosecutor to civil liability for damages under this section. Raitport v. Provident Nat. Bank, E.D.Pa.1978, 451 F.Supp. 522. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3511. Evidence, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

County prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity on citizen's §§ 1983 claim that they withheld exculpatory evidence, in the form of DNA samples, after citizen was convicted of kidnapping, rape, and murder, and sentenced to death, absent showing that their response to citizen's requests for DNA testing was part of their advocacy for the state in post-conviction proceedings in which they were personally involved, rather than part of their administrative duties. Yarris v. County of Delaware, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 465 F.3d 129. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Liability for prosecutor's suppression of exculpatory evidence is shielded by the doctrine of absolute prosecutorial immunity. Cousin v. Small, C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 325 F.3d 627, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 181, 540 U.S. 826, 157 L.Ed.2d 48. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor is absolutely immune from civil rights liability for his out-of-court efforts to control witness' grand jury testimony subsequent to decision to indict; however, this immunity does not protect prosecutor's efforts to manufacture evidence, to the extent that these efforts occur during investigatory phase of criminal case. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's allegedly malicious refusal to present exculpatory evidence to grand jury or to allow witnesses to testify who could have establish alibi for suspect were decisions within prosecutor's advocacy function, and thus were protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity from liability in suspect's civil rights action. Miller v. Spiers, D.N.M.2006, 434 F.Supp.2d 1064. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor was not entitled to absolute immunity on civil rights claims that he withheld exculpatory evidence and misrepresented nature of state's evidence absent evidence that alleged conduct occurred in course of his performing advocative function. Bembenek v. Donohoo, E.D.Wis.2005, 355 F.Supp.2d 942. Civil Rights 1376(9)

To extent that civil rights complaint could state a cause of action against prosecutor for the offer of tainted evidence at plaintiff's first trial, it was foreclosed by absolute immunity against civil rights actions enjoyed by state prosecutors engaged in the judicial phase of the criminal process. Jackson v. Dillon, E.D.N.Y.1981, 518 F.Supp. 618. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3511A. ---- Destruction of evidence, evidence, prosecutorial immunity

County prosecutors' alleged destruction of exculpatory evidence in citizen's prosecution for kidnapping, rape, and murder was not related to their prosecutorial function, and thus, they were not entitled to absolute immunity on citizen's §§ 1983 claim that they violated his Fourteenth Amendment rights by deliberately destroying exculpatory evidence. Yarris v. County of Delaware, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 465 F.3d 129. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3511B. ---- Exculpatory evidence withheld, evidence, prosecutorial immunity

State prisoner's §§ 1983 claims against prosecuting attorney, alleging that prosecutor conspired with prisoner's public defender to deprive prisoner of his constitutional rights by fabricating evidence used at trial, withholding

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

exculpatory evidence, suborning perjury, and attempting to intimidate him into accepting a guilty plea, were foreclosed by absolute prosecutorial immunity, regardless of their alleged illegality; claims encompassed activities involving the initiation and pursuit of prosecution. Peay v. Ajello, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2006, 470 F.3d 65. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

County prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity on citizen's §§ 1983 claim that they withheld exculpatory evidence prior to citizen's trial on charges of kidnapping, rape, and murder. Yarris v. County of Delaware, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 465 F.3d 129. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3512. ---- False testimony, evidence, prosecutorial immunity

County prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity on citizen's §§ 1983 claim that they concocted a false and fabricated confession in relation to citizen's prosecution for kidnapping, rape, and murder, and sentenced to death, absent showing that they were functioning as the state's advocates when they engaged in the conduct that gave rise to the evidence-fabrication allegations. Yarris v. County of Delaware, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 465 F.3d 129. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorneys' alleged conduct in acquiring known false statements from witness for use in prosecution against criminal defense attorney amounted to fabricating evidence, and thus was unprotected by absolute immunity in defense attorney's § 1983 suit against district attorneys for denial of due process and malicious prosecution; conduct allegedly occurred before grand jury was empaneled and before defense attorney was arrested. Milstein v. Cooley, C.A.9 (Cal.) 2001, 257 F.3d 1004, on remand 2001 WL 1674087. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Criminal prosecutor's absolute immunity from § 1983 claims applies even if prosecutor is accused of knowingly using perjured testimony. Boyd v. Biggers, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1994, 31 F.3d 279. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutor and witnesses were absolutely immune from liability for participation in alleged conspiracy to present false testimony against defendant, in violation of defendant's civil rights. Snelling v. Westhoff, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1992, 972 F.2d 199, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 977, 506 U.S. 1053, 122 L.Ed.2d 132. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(9)

Deputy prosecutor, as defendant in civil rights action, was entitled to absolute immunity against charges that he used perjured testimony in bail revocation hearing. Burns v. County of King, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1989, 883 F.2d 819. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Federal prosecutor's activities in trying case, presenting allegedly false testimony, allegedly using guilty plea allocution for investigative purposes, and allegedly transmitting false information to parole authorities were intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process and entitled prosecutor to absolute immunity in § 1983 action. Daloia v. Rose, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 849 F.2d 74, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 242, 488 U.S. 898, 102 L.Ed.2d 231. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors had absolute immunity from action for deprivation of civil rights with respect to their decision to file criminal complaint and seek issuance of arrest warrant, in that such activities were quasi-judicial duties involved in initiating prosecution, even assuming truth of allegation that prosecutors knowingly obtained issuance of criminal complaints and arrest warrants based on false, coerced statements elicited by prosecutors and police. Joseph v. Patterson, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1986, 795 F.2d 549, certiorari denied 107 S.Ct. 1910, 481 U.S. 1023, 95 L.Ed.2d 516. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting attorneys were entitled to prosecutorial immunity with respect to action brought under this section alleging prosecutorial misconduct including falsification of evidence and coercion of perjured testimony in connection with criminal prosecutions brought against plaintiff. Lee v. Willins, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1980, 617 F.2d 320, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 165, 449 U.S. 861, 66 L.Ed.2d 78. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prosecutor enjoyed immunity from civil rights action which was based on allegations that he had conspired to present perjured testimony against the defendant in a criminal trial. Blevins v. Ford, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1978, 572 F.2d 1336. Conspiracy 13

District attorney was acting within his jurisdiction in bringing criminal charge for claimed violation of state law and hence was immune from liability under this section, regardless of claim that subsequent conviction was result of perjured testimony. Kauffman v. Moss, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1970, 420 F.2d 1270, certiorari denied 91 S.Ct. 93, 400 U.S. 846, 27 L.Ed.2d 84. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's alleged fabrication of evidence needed to establish probable cause for suspect's arrest did not fall within prosecutor's traditional advocacy function, and thus was not protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity from liability in suspect's civil rights action. Miller v. Spiers, D.N.M.2006, 434 F.Supp.2d 1064. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Even if assistant attorney general did present perjured testimony in habeas corpus action, as alleged by § 1983 plaintiff, she retained absolute prosecutorial immunity from the § 1983 claim. Summers v. Sjogren, D.Utah 1987, 667 F.Supp. 1432. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3513. Scene of crime evidence, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutors' alleged misconduct, when endeavoring to determine whether bootprint at scene of crime had been left by suspect was investigatory, administrative function rather than prosecutorial function, for which prosecutors were entitled to only qualified immunity in suspect's subsequent § 1983 suit; prosecutors had no probable cause to arrest suspect or to initiate judicial proceedings against him at time of bootprint investigation. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3514. Searches and seizures, prosecutorial immunity--Generally

Prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity in § 1983 action alleging that search of attorney's person and effects, while attorney's client was testifying in grand jury proceeding, violated attorney's Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment rights, as prosecutors' acts, including serving of initial search warrant on attorney's client, directing police officer to obtain search warrant for attorney, informing attorney of need for second search, and viewing of attorney's documents during search, were investigative in nature. Gabbert v. Conn, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1997, 131 F.3d 793, certiorari granted in part 119 S.Ct. 39, 525 U.S. 809, 142 L.Ed.2d 30, reversed 119 S.Ct. 1292, 526 U.S. 286, 143 L.Ed.2d 399. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity from liability under federal civil rights statute in conducting search to obtain evidence to prosecute indictment. Pachaly v. City of Lynchburg, C.A.4 (Va.) 1990, 897 F.2d 723. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutor's participation in allegedly illegal search and seizure which occurred prior to initiation of any judicial proceedings against plaintiffs fell outside sphere of activity for which prosecutors are given absolute immunity in actions under this section. Marrero v. City of Hialeah, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1980, 625 F.2d 499, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1353, 450 U.S. 913, 67 L.Ed.2d 337. Civil Rights 1376(9)

County attorneys were not absolutely immune from § 1983 liability arising out of police search of premises of private detective agency pursuant to partially invalid search warrant, in which attorneys had participated; absolute immunity extended only to their activities relating to advocacy, and their presence at search scene and advice as to whether particular items were covered by search warrant was a "police-related function." Naugle v. Witney, D.Utah 1990, 755 F.Supp. 1504. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3515. ---- Application for search warrants, searches and seizures, prosecutorial immunity

State prosecutor's appearance in court in support of application for search warrant and presentation of evidence at hearing were protected by absolute immunity in civil rights action brought by arrestee; there was support for finding of absolute immunity in the common law and absolute immunity was justified by policy concerns. Burns v. Reed, U.S.Ind.1991, 111 S.Ct. 1934, 500 U.S. 478, 114 L.Ed.2d 547, on remand 958 F.2d 374, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Applying to court for wiretap warrant was not clearly a prosecutorial function entitling prosecutors to absolute immunity in civil rights action. Liffiton v. Keuker, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1988, 850 F.2d 73. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutor's preparation of arrest and search warrants and participation in search and seizure are investigatory activities rather than advocacy, and therefore receive only qualified immunity from suit. McSurely v. McClellan, C.A.D.C.1982, 697 F.2d 309, 225 U.S.App.D.C. 67. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Deputy county district attorney had not waived absolute immunity from §§ 1983 action, claiming deprivation of homeowner's constitutional rights by filing of charges of controlled substance possession and dealing in harmful material to minor, by engaging in investigative rather than judicial function, when she allegedly drove past home during investigation, instructed police officer to gather information from certain individuals, and physically typing affidavit in support of search warrant while officer dictated it. Gibbons v. Lambert, D.Utah 2005, 358 F.Supp.2d 1048. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Deputy district attorney was engaged in quasi-judicial conduct when she reviewed and approved affidavit that subsequently was submitted in support of search warrant, the execution of which resulted in seizure of personal computer used by university student to create, maintain, and publish internet-based journal, and therefore deputy district attorney was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity that precluded §§ 1983 claim for violations of First and Fourth Amendments allegedly resulting from search warrant execution. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney and township solicitor were immune from civil suit for damages under this section where allegation against them brought by pro se plaintiff asserted that they "caused to issue a search warrant and a search of plaintiff's property," in that such conduct was no more than initiating a prosecution and presenting the state's case and such conduct was immune from suit. Groff v. Eckman, E.D.Pa.1981, 525 F.Supp. 375. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Actions of attorney with New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) in preparing and signing application for administrative search warrant were primarily investigative in nature and were not prosecutorial duties that would have entitled attorney to absolute immunity in property owner's § 1983 action; attorney did not participate in hearing on application, her conduct occurred before she could have possibly claimed to be acting as an advocate, and her later initiation of action did not retroactively transform investigative work into prosecution. Eden v. Voss, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2004, 105 Fed.Appx. 234, 2004 WL 1535829, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3516. ---- Execution of search warrants, searches and seizures, prosecutorial immunity

State Attorney General had absolute prosecutorial immunity from charges by charitable bingo sponsor that procurement and execution of search warrants in connection with state's civil proceedings violated sponsor's civil rights, despite sponsor's contention that immunity should not apply where government was pursuing administrative enforcement action not specifically authorized by statute. Metro Charities, Inc. v. Moore, S.D.Miss.1990, 748 F.Supp. 1156. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3517. ---- Execution of arrest warrants, searches and seizures, prosecutorial immunity

Allegations that assistant district attorney "directed" court officer to arrest paralegal, while all three men were in same courtroom, suggested that assistant district attorney may have participated in "executing the arrest," an act typically considered police function, not prosecutorial function, and thus, assistant district attorney was not entitled to absolute immunity for deprivation of civil rights for such conduct. Day v. Morgenthau, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1990, 909 F.2d 75, amended on rehearing, on remand 769 F.Supp. 472. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3518. Speedy trial, prosecutorial immunity

Claims under this section for damages for libel and denial of speedy trial, based on allegedly libelous statements against plaintiffs by the Nebraska Attorney General, a deputy attorney general and an assistant attorney general and their initiation of deceptive practices suit in state court, were barred by doctrine of prosecutorial immunity. Ledwith v. Douglas, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1978, 568 F.2d 117. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors enjoyed absolute immunity with respect to claims of denial of civil rights through denial of right to speedy trial. Cribb v. Pelham, D.C.S.C.1982, 552 F.Supp. 1217. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3519. Suppression of evidence, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor's withholding of information, after indictment, that is subject to disclosure under Brady is advocatory decision entitled to absolute immunity. Moore v. Valder, C.A.D.C.1995, 65 F.3d 189, 314 U.S.App.D.C. 209, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 75, 519 U.S. 820, 136 L.Ed.2d 35. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Assistant district attorney's failure to turn over alleged Brady material during prosecutorial phase of case was a discretionary advocacy function, for which assistant district attorney was accorded absolute immunity from liability under § 1983. Hill v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 45 F.3d 653. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's absolute immunity from civil suit under § 1983 for acts committed within scope of his duties in pursuing criminal prosecution is applicable even when prosecutor knowingly used perjured testimony and deliberately withheld exculpatory information. Dory v. Ryan, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 999 F.2d 679, modified on rehearing 25 F.3d 81. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutors, who discovered evidence exculpating persons who had been imprisoned on murder convictions at time prosecutors were not involved in pending postconviction proceedings, were not entitled to absolute immunity from persons' civil rights claims for failure to disclose the evidence; prosecutors were acting solely in investigative capacity and, accordingly, were only entitled to assert qualified immunity. Houston v. Partee, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 978 F.2d 362, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1647, 507 U.S. 1005, 123 L.Ed.2d 269. Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorney was not liable under this section to prisoner who alleged that deputy district attorney destroyed or permitted the destruction of exculpatory evidence related to the prosecution of the prisoner because if prisoner alleged that district attorney was directly involved in the decision not to preserve the evidence, he enjoyed absolute prosecutorial immunity, and there was no evidence that district attorney either trained deputy district attorney inadequately or failed to supervise him properly or that it was the custom or policy of the district attorney to fail to preserve evidence in order to deprive criminal defendants of a fair trial. Ybarra v. Reno Thunderbird Mobile

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Home Village, C.A.9 (Nev.) 1984, 723 F.2d 675. Civil Rights 1376(9)

In allegedly failing to preserve exculpatory evidence, which was removed on morning of trial, the prosecutor was acting in administrative or investigative role, rather than in an advocate role and, hence, was not entitled to absolute immunity from liability under this section but only to a qualified immunity. Henderson v. Fisher, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1980, 631 F.2d 1115, on remand 506 F.Supp. 579. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Alleged unlawful acts of prosecutors, including filing information without investigation, filing charges without jurisdiction, filing a baseless detainer, offering perjured testimony, suppressing exculpatory evidence, refusing to investigate complaints about prison system and threatening defendant with further criminal prosecutions, were a necessary and integral part of prosecutors' role and fell within prosecutorial immunity from civil suit under this section proscribing a deprivation of rights. Henzel v. Gerstein, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1979, 608 F.2d 654. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Notwithstanding acts and omissions of state prosecutor in withholding certain information and in failing to prevent or correct deceptive and misleading testimony deprived state defendant of constitutional right to fair trial, prosecutor was absolutely immune from liability for civil damages under this section. Hilliard v. Williams, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1976, 540 F.2d 220. Civil Rights 1376(9); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Allegations that federal prosecutor conspired with a cooperating witness to use perjured testimony and to conceal exculpatory evidence in order to convict certain persons related to actions in the prosecutor's role as an advocate, rather than as an administrator or investigator, and he was thus immune from civil rights action predicated on those claims. Brawer v. Horowitz, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1976, 535 F.2d 830. Conspiracy 13

Prosecutors are absolutely immune in § 1983 actions for their decisions to prosecute, and withholding exculpatory evidence is quasi-judicial act protected by absolute immunity. Douris v. Schweiker, E.D.Pa.2002, 229 F.Supp.2d 391, reconsideration denied, affirmed 100 Fed.Appx. 126, 2004 WL 1396209. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors are absolutely immune from § 1983 claims that they offered false testimony or suppressed material at trial, or suppressed exculpatory evidence. Malloy v. Coleman, M.D.Fla.1997, 961 F.Supp. 1568. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecuting attorneys were absolutely immune from plaintiff's § 1983 claims that they prosecuted the wrong person and/or ignored exculpatory hearsay statements in course of their prosecution; alleged acts and omissions by prosecutors related solely to core prosecutorial functions. Rumfola v. Murovich, W.D.Pa.1992, 812 F.Supp. 569. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Former county state's attorney and assistant state's attorneys were not absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for their alleged suppression of exonerating evidence first discovered postconviction but then willfully withheld from both defense counsel and postconviction courts. Houston v. Partee, N.D.Ill.1991, 758 F.Supp. 1228, affirmed and remanded on other grounds 978 F.2d 362, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1647, 507 U.S. 1005, 123 L.Ed.2d 269. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3520. Transcripts, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutorial functions do not extend to supervision of trial transcript, and thus prosecutors are not immune from liability for damages for allegedly altering trial transcript. Slavin v. Curry, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1978, 574 F.2d 1256, opinion modified on other grounds, rehearing denied 583 F.2d 779. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3521. Victim impact statements, prosecutorial immunity

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prosecutors are entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 civil rights personal liability for failure to notify victims under victim impact law. Pusey v. City of Youngstown, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 11 F.3d 652, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 2742, 512 U.S. 1237, 129 L.Ed.2d 862. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3522. Witnesses, prosecutorial immunity

Prosecutor's contacts with government witness in preparing her to testify at trial, and his interviews of other government witnesses with extensive criminal backgrounds, were all actions associated with prosecuting alleged criminal acts of suspect, and thus prosecutor was absolutely immune from liability on suspect's Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment claims under §§ 1983, although prosecutor had not undertaken active investigation beyond polygraph test to corroborate witnesses' statements. Reasonover v. St. Louis County, Mo., C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 447 F.3d 569. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor who allegedly instructed State's witness to implicate defendant falsely in murder trial was acting as an advocate rather than as an investigator, and therefore, prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity from defendant's §§ 1983 and 1985 claims; prosecutor's interview with witness was intended to secure evidence that would be used in the presentation of the state's case at the pending trial of an already identified suspect, not to identify a suspect or establish probable cause. Cousin v. Small, C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 325 F.3d 627, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 181, 540 U.S. 826, 157 L.Ed.2d 48. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor's alleged detention of witnesses in district attorney's office during criminal trial to prevent them from testifying in criminal proceedings, while unlawful and improper, was nonetheless shielded by absolute immunity in §§ 1983 and 1985 suit. Cousin v. Small, C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 325 F.3d 627, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 181, 540 U.S. 826, 157 L.Ed.2d 48. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Federal prosecutor was entitled to only qualified immunity, not absolute immunity, from liability for alleged misconduct of intimidating and coercing witnesses into changing their testimony and disclosing grand jury testimony to unauthorized third parties, as such conduct was investigatory, not advocatory. Moore v. Valder, C.A.D.C.1995, 65 F.3d 189, 314 U.S.App.D.C. 209, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 75, 519 U.S. 820, 136 L.Ed.2d 35. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

Prosecutors were entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action alleging that prosecutors obtained expert testimony implicating him from witness who was allegedly well-known for her willingness to fabricate unreliable expert testimony as their alleged action did not violate any well-established constitutional right; prosecutors' discussions with witness did not injure arrestee, and only decision to file charges and proffer testimony, for which prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity, injured arrestee. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1994, 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 740, 513 U.S. 1085, 130 L.Ed.2d 642, on remand 1996 WL 10899. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant district attorney general who failed to act timely in securing release of material witness from incarceration after being ordered by the court to work out the details of the release was not absolutely or qualifiedly immune from civil rights action by the material witness. White by Swafford v. Gerbitz, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1988, 860 F.2d 661, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 1160, 489 U.S. 1028, 103 L.Ed.2d 219. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant United States attorneys who allegedly communicated with prosecutors in another district in an attempt generally to prevent Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) special agent from testifying in any court case were not entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity in agent's civil rights action; attorneys were not performing an advocacy function in connection with a specific criminal prosecution. Maye v. Reno, D.D.C.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 332. United States 50.10(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Assistant county attorney, acting as witness instead of as prosecutor, was protected by qualified immunity on claim that he violated arrestee's Fourth Amendment rights by making allegedly untrue statements in an affidavit to support search warrant for arrestee's brother's car; affidavit was based on information provided to attorney by officer, officer stated he had been shown marijuana patch on property before arrestee was arrested, a car had been reported as trespassing on land, officer saw car hidden in hedgerow, and canine tracking unit backtracked from where arrestee came out of woods to marijuana patch. Dopp v. Rask, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2004, 91 Fed.Appx. 79, 2004 WL 119877, Unreported. Civil Rights 1375

3523. Condemnation proceedings, prosecutorial immunity

City attorney was entitled to absolute immunity in civil rights suit, in which landowners alleged that by initiating proceedings to condemn their one-acre parcel, city attorney violated their Fourteenth Amendment procedural and substantive due process and equal protection rights and violated the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), where city attorney was merely performing duties that were integrally part of the judicial process when he engaged in the challenged conduct. Parette v. Virden, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 173 Fed.Appx. 534, 2006 WL 858271, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

XXXI. LEGISLATIVE IMMUNITY

<Subdivision Index>

Administrative agency employees, state officials 3581
Aldermen, municipal or city officials 3570
Assembly members, state officials 3582
Attorneys 3556
Bar associations and members 3557
Board members, county officials 3561
Board members, municipal or city officials 3571
Board members, town officials 3589
Borough officials 3558
Commission members, town officials 3590
Commissioners, county officials 3562

Commissioners, municipal or city officials 3572
Commissioners, state officials 3583
Committee members, state officials 3584
Common law 3552
Council members, county officials 3563
Council members, municipal or city officials 3573
Counties 3559
County executives, county officials 3564
County officials 3560-3564
- County officials - Generally 3560
- County officials - Board members 3561
- County officials - Commissioners 3562
- County officials - Council members 3563
- County officials - County executives 3564

Courts and judges 3565
Directors, municipal or city officials 3574
Education and school officials 3566
Executive officials 3567

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Governors, state officials 3585
Legislative immunity generally 3551
Mayors, municipal or city officials 3575

Miscellaneous officials, municipal or city officials 3576
Miscellaneous officials, state officials 3587
Municipal or city officials 3569-3576
Municipal or city officials - Generally 3569
Municipal or city officials - Aldermen 3570
Municipal or city officials - Board members 3571
Municipal or city officials - Commissioners 3572
Municipal or city officials - Council members 3573
Municipal or city officials - Directors 3574
Municipal or city officials - Mayors 3575
Municipal or city officials - Miscellaneous officials 3576
Municipalities 3568
Nature of acts 3554
Parish officials 3577
Particular acts 3555
Party caucus, state officials 3584a
Puerto Rico officials 3578
Regional planning agencies and members 3579
School officials 3566
Senators, state officials 3586
State officials 3580-3587

State officials - Generally 3580
State officials - Administrative agency employees 3581
State officials - Assembly members 3582
State officials - Commissioners 3583
State officials - Committee members 3584
State officials - Governors 3585
State officials - Miscellaneous officials 3587
State officials - Party caucus 3584a
State officials - Senators 3586
Status as legislative official generally 3553
Town officials 3588-3590
Town officials - Generally 3588
Town officials - Board members 3589
Town officials - Commission members 3590
Village officials 3591
Virgin Island officials 3578a
Zoning 3592
Zoning officials 3593

3551. Legislative immunity generally

Absolute legislative immunity from suit under § 1983 attaches to all actions of local officials taken in sphere of legitimate legislative activity. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Purpose of legislative immunity is to insure that legislative function may be performed independently without fear of outside interference. Supreme Court of Virginia v. Consumers Union of U. S., Inc., U.S.Va.1980, 100 S.Ct. 1967, 446 U.S. 719, 64 L.Ed.2d 641, on remand 505 F.Supp. 822. States 28(2)

Individual state legislators were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from official capacity suits under §§ 1983 for prospective relief. Scott v. Taylor, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2005, 405 F.3d 1251. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Under §§ 1983, absolute immunity attaches to all actions taken in sphere of legitimate legislative activity. Baird v. Board of Educ. for Warren Community Unit School Dist. No. 205, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 389 F.3d 685, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 332, 163 L.Ed.2d 45. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Montana state legislators were entitled to absolute immunity from liability in § 1983 action brought by consumers, alleging that enactment of legislation deregulating state energy markets violated their constitutional rights. Single Moms, Inc. v. Montana Power Co., C.A.9 (Mont.) 2003, 331 F.3d 743, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1415, 540 U.S. 1180, 158 L.Ed.2d 82. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Acts that are administrative in nature do not give rise to absolute legislative immunity from liability in damages under § 1983. Romero-Barcelo v. Hernandez-Agosto, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1996, 75 F.3d 23. Civil Rights 1376(1)

To determine whether actions are to be regarded as legislative for immunity purposes, (1) action must be "substantively" legislative, which requires that it involve policy-making or line-drawing decision, and (2) action must be "procedurally" legislative, which requires that it be undertaken through established legislative procedures. Acierno v. Cloutier, C.A.3 (Del.) 1994, 40 F.3d 597. Municipal Corporations 170

Acts undertaken by legislators that are administrative in nature do not give rise to absolute immunity from liability in damages under § 1983. Negron-Gaztambide v. Hernandez-Torres, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1994, 35 F.3d 25, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1098, 513 U.S. 1149, 130 L.Ed.2d 1066. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Not all actions taken by official with legislative duties are protected by absolute immunity from § 1983 suit; only those duties that are functionally legislative are protected. Hughes v. Tarrant County Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1991, 948 F.2d 918. Civil Rights 1376(1)

In order for legislative immunity to attach, defendant seeking immunity from civil rights claim must demonstrate both that challenged functions performed by defendant were legislative, rather than managerial, and that functions were carried out pursuant to prescribed statutory procedures governing legislative enactments. Ryan v. Burlington County, N.J., C.A.3 (N.J.) 1989, 889 F.2d 1286. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Absolute immunity is accorded to legislators while acting in the course of their official duties. Johnson v. Reagan, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1975, 524 F.2d 1123. Judges 36; Officers And Public Employees 114

With respect to legislators and judges, the immunity doctrine may not be circumvented by allegations of improper motives; rather, the availability of the immunity depends on the character of the conduct under attack. Hampton v. City of Chicago, Cook County, Ill., C.A.7 (Ill.) 1973, 484 F.2d 602, certiorari denied 94 S.Ct. 1413, 415 U.S. 917, 39 L.Ed.2d 471, certiorari denied 94 S.Ct. 1414, 415 U.S. 917, 39 L.Ed.2d 471. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(8)

Section 1983 legislative immunity did not protect mayor in political discrimination action brought by lessors of vendor kiosk located in public market on city-owned property, alleging that lessors' political affiliation was motivating factor in mayor's refusal to permit enlargement of their kiosk; regardless of mayor's contention that challenged actions flowed from local legislative plans to remodel public market, lessors were alleging selective application of those plans, i.e. that mayor's actions were administrative. Rodriguez Cruz v. Trujillo, D.Puerto Rico 2006, 443 F.Supp.2d 240. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

"Legislative immunity" protects legislator from being sued under § 1983 in his or her individual capacity for legitimate legislative acts. Gordon v. Katz, S.D.N.Y.1995, 934 F.Supp. 79, reconsideration denied, affirmed 101 F.3d 1393. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Legislators acting within a traditional legislative capacity are immune from damages under civil rights statute. Bennett v. Batchik, E.D.Mich.1990, 743 F.Supp. 1245, affirmed 936 F.2d 572. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Properly delegated legislative acts enjoy absolute immunity. Johnson v. Reno Police Chief, D.Nev.1989, 718 F.Supp. 36. Officers And Public Employees 114

Individual defendants are entitled to absolute immunity from liability under federal civil rights statute for those actions which they take while functioning in their traditional legislative capacity. Epstein v. Township of Whitehall, E.D.Pa.1988, 693 F.Supp. 309. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3552. Common law, legislative immunity

State and regional legislators have absolute federal common law immunity from liability for damages occasioned by their legislative acts, an immunity which Congress left undisturbed with its passage of the civil rights provision now codified in this section. Gorman Towers, Inc. v. Bogoslavsky, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1980, 626 F.2d 607. Civil Rights 1376(1); Officers And Public Employees 114

Legislators are immune from liability for damages for official acts within legislative role and the immunity was not abolished by this section providing for civil action for deprivation of rights. C. M. Clark Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Maxwell, C.A.D.C.1973, 479 F.2d 1223, 156 U.S.App.D.C. 240. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Common law immunity from suit afforded legislative and judicial officers continues to have force in suits brought under this section. Jobson v. Henne, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1966, 355 F.2d 129. Civil Rights 1376(1)

This section did not abrogate pre-existing absolute immunity of judicial and legislative officers from civil liability for acts performed in course of their official duties. Morgan v. Sylvester, S.D.N.Y.1954, 125 F.Supp. 380, affirmed 220 F.2d 758, certiorari denied 76 S.Ct. 112, 350 U.S. 867, 100 L.Ed. 768, rehearing denied 76 S.Ct. 201, 350 U.S. 919, 100 L.Ed. 805. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(8)

3553. Status as legislative official generally, legislative immunity

Local legislators are absolutely immune from suit under § 1983 for their legislative activities. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Legislators, whether federal, state, or regional, are entitled to absolute immunity from federal damages liability insofar as they act in their legislative capacities. Lake Country Estates, Inc. v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, U.S.Nev.1979, 99 S.Ct. 1171, 440 U.S. 391, 59 L.Ed.2d 401, on remand 474 F.Supp. 901. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Absolute immunity for legislative acts attaches to federal legislature, state legislature, and regional public officials. Acevedo-Cordero v. Cordero-Santiago, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1992, 958 F.2d 20. Municipal Corporations 170; States 28(2); United States 12

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Local legislators are protected by absolute immunity when they act in their legislative capacities. Shoultes v. Laidlaw, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 886 F.2d 114. Municipal Corporations 170

Legislators of any political subdivision of a state are absolutely immune from civil rights liability insofar as they are acting in a legislative capacity. Haskell v. Washington Tp., C.A.6 (Ohio) 1988, 864 F.2d 1266. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Although there is an immunity under this section in favor of local legislators for conduct in furtherance of their legislative duties, no immunity exists for actions outside the sphere of legitimate legislative activity; it is the official function that determines degree of immunity required, not the status of the acting officer. Espanola Way Corp. v. Meyerson, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1982, 690 F.2d 827, certiorari denied 103 S.Ct. 1431, 460 U.S. 1039, 75 L.Ed.2d 791. Civil Rights 1376(4)

If legislators of any political subdivision of state function in a legislative capacity, they are absolutely immune from being sued under provisions of this section. Bruce v. Riddle, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1980, 631 F.2d 272. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Local legislators named in their individual capacities are absolutely immune from civil rights liability under § 1983 if conduct giving rise to potential liability was in legislative capacity. Sims v. City of New London, D.Conn.1990, 738 F.Supp. 638. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Local officials performing legislative functions are absolutely immune from damages in §§ 1983 and 1985 suits. Jodeco, Inc. v. Hann, D.N.J.1987, 674 F.Supp. 488. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Reason for privilege of legislative immunity is to encourage public legislative representatives to discharge their duties with fullest measure of freedom of speech and action, and such privilege extends to federal, state and regional legislators. Rheuark v. Shaw, D.C.Tex.1979, 477 F.Supp. 897, affirmed in part, reversed in part 628 F.2d 297, certiorari denied 101 S.Ct. 1392, 450 U.S. 931, 67 L.Ed.2d 365. Counties 59; States 28(2); United States 12

3554. Nature of acts, legislative immunity

Whether act is "legislative," so as to confer absolute immunity from suit under § 1983 on local official performing act, turns on nature of act, rather than on motive or intent of official performing it. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Mere fact that the county council retained authority to grant conditional use permits (CUP) did not necessarily imply that granting CUPs involved policy-making, for purpose of analysis whether denial of a CUP was a legislative act so as to entitle the council members to absolute legislative immunity under § 1983; the council's decision to grant or deny a CUP was not a derogation from the county's comprehensive zoning ordinance, but rather, was an individualized determination that the proposed use was similar, related, or compatible to permitted uses. Kaahumanu v. County of Maui, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 315 F.3d 1215. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Determination of whether an activity is "legislative," for purposes of applying absolute legislative immunity from § 1983 action, must be made without regard to legislators' subjective intent; whether an act is legislative turns on the nature of the act, rather than on the motive or intent of the official performing it. Canary v. Osborn, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2000, 211 F.3d 324, certiorari denied 121 S.Ct. 304, 531 U.S. 927, 148 L.Ed.2d 244. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Under second part of two-part analysis for determining whether public official's act is legislative, such that official is entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 claim, court must consider particularity of impact of state of action; if action involves establishment of general policy, it is legislative, but if it singles out specifiable individuals and affects them differently from others, it is administrative. Acevedo-Garcia v. Vera-Monroig, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2000, 204 F.3d 1. Civil Rights 1376(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County chief executive officer (CEO) was entitled to absolute legislative immunity from manager's free speech retaliation claim under §§ 1983, inasmuch as CEO's submission of budget, which abolished manager's position, was legislative in nature. Bryant v. Jones, N.D.Ga.2006, 464 F.Supp.2d 1273. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Enforcement by a fire district's auditor and moderator of a rule of order which prohibited nonresidents from speaking or otherwise participating in the district's annual meeting was a legislative act, and thus, the moderator was protected by absolute legislative immunity from §§ 1983 liability on First Amendment claims asserted by a firefighter against whom the rule was enforced; moderator was enforcing a general policy, and did not target specific individuals for their views. Carlow v. Mruk, D.R.I.2006, 425 F.Supp.2d 225. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Government officials are entitled to absolute legislative immunity only when they take actions that are an integral part of the deliberative and communicative process by which they participate in proceedings with respect to the consideration and passage of legislation; however, legislators' administrative acts, such as employment decisions, are not entitled to legislative immunity even though those decisions are made through votes. Hershell Gill Consulting Engineers, Inc. v. Miami-Dade County, Fla., S.D.Fla.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 1305. Municipal Corporations 170

Actions that are integral steps in legislative process or bear all the hallmarks of traditional legislation are within bounds of legislative immunity from § 1983 claims; decisions encompassing discretion and policymaking, including services to constituents, are considered integral steps in legislative process. Thornton v. City of St. Helens, D.Or.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 1019. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3555. Particular acts, legislative immunity

City manager and city planner were not entitled to legislative immunity in wrecking yard owners' §§ 1983 due process action alleging improper delays in processing of owners' application for city approval of state wrecking license renewal; planner's and manager's jobs were administrative, and they were sued for performing administrative act. Thornton v. City of St. Helens, C.A.9 (Or.) 2005, 425 F.3d 1158. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Limited number of people impacted by county council's denial of conditional use permit (CUP) to allow operator of commercial wedding business to conduct weddings on beach-front residential property weighed against a finding that the decision was a legislative act so as to entitle the council members to absolute legislative immunity under § 1983, even if granting one application for a CUP would make it politically difficult for the council to deny a similar application from someone else, as a grant would have no legal effect on subsequent council decisions. Kaahumanu v. County of Maui, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 315 F.3d 1215. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Prohibition on videotaping of an annual meeting of a fire district except by members of the press, imposed by the district's auditor and moderator, was a legislative act, and thus, the moderator was protected by absolute legislative immunity from §§ 1983 liability on First Amendment claims asserted by firefighters against whom the prohibition was applied; moderator was enforcing a rule of order which applied to all members of the public, which was designed to ensure that he could conduct the meeting without distraction and that the voters could speak without feeling intimidated, and which had been endorsed by a majority of the voters. Carlow v. Mruk, D.R.I.2006, 425 F.Supp.2d 225. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Town officials' alleged actions of intentionally violating, and actively seeking to silence, free speech rights of town clerk and deputy town clerk, and retaliating against town clerk and deputy town clerk for exercising their First Amendment rights, if proven, were outside officials' legislative authority, and thus were not basis for absolute immunity from town clerk and deputy town clerk's §§ 1983 claims. Denton v. McKee, S.D.N.Y.2004, 332

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

F.Supp.2d 659. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County supervisors were not engaged in legislative activity when they decided whether to indemnify deputy sheriffs for punitive damage awards, and therefore were not entitled to absolute immunity on claim that their policy and custom of indemnifying deputy sheriffs for punitive damage awards operated to cause constitutional violations by deputy sheriffs. Hawkins v. Baca, C.D.Cal.2000, 114 F.Supp.2d 987. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Introduction of proposed budget and subsequent signing into law of ordinance adopting budget are legislative functions for which executive officials enjoy absolute immunity from § 1983 liability regardless of their motive or intent. Hiller v. County of Suffolk, E.D.N.Y.2000, 81 F.Supp.2d 420. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3556. Attorneys, legislative immunity

Where counsel acts only in role of legislative aid to a legislative committee, counsel enjoys the same immunity as do the committee members from liability under this section. Green v. DeCamp, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1980, 612 F.2d 368. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3557. Bar associations and members, legislative immunity

Although absolute judicial immunity did not apply to State Committee of Bar Examiners' promulgation of general rules relating to scoring of bar exams, members of Committee were immune from suits for damages based on such official legislative act of establishing rules governing bar admissions. Levanti v. Tippen, S.D.Cal.1984, 585 F.Supp. 499. Attorney And Client 7

3558. Borough officials, legislative immunity

Borough council's abolishment of local police force by vote rather than by enactment of an ordinance was not a proper exercise of the council's legislative powers so as to entitle its members to absolute legislative immunity from suit brought by former members of force under § 1983, notwithstanding claim that, because council possessed authority to abolish police force, failure to enact ordinance was at most a procedural error which did not divest members of legislative immunity; applicable Pennsylvania statute indicated that a borough's legislative powers were to be exercised by or be based on an ordinance, and the ordinance procedure, including notice and comment requirements, served legitimate purposes. Donivan v. Dallastown Borough, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1987, 835 F.2d 486, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 1596, 485 U.S. 1035, 99 L.Ed.2d 910. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Former borough councilman performed legislative act, in voting not to fund promotion of police officer to lieutenant position, and consequently had absolute immunity from § 1983 suit brought by officer; officer's action fell within the discretionary, budgetary functions traditionally assigned to legislators. Scully v. Borough of Hawthorne, D.N.J.1999, 58 F.Supp.2d 435. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3559. Counties, legislative immunity

County was not entitled to legislative immunity from liability in § 1983 action brought by former employees, alleging that they were improperly fired for having supported a particular political candidate; doctrine of legislative immunity, if applied to county, would cut away core principle of Monell that local governments should be held liable for losses they cause. Carver v. Foerster, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1996, 102 F.3d 96. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Absolute legislative immunity did not apply to county in civil rights action. Fry v. Board of County Com'rs of County of Baca, D.Colo.1991, 837 F.Supp. 330, affirmed 7 F.3d 936, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3560. County officials, legislative immunity--Generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In suit brought by nurses against county officials who allegedly acted in concert to harass nurses' association and to discriminate against its members, claim of absolute legislative immunity was inapplicable to the county employee relations director and the county personnel director, both of whom are nonlegislative employees of the county. Thomas v. Younglove, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1976, 545 F.2d 1171. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Members of county legislature were entitled to absolute immunity for actions taken in legislative capacity to reorganize department of social services, despite claim that the reorganization was undertaken to remove employees of one political party. Orange v. County of Suffolk, E.D.N.Y.1993, 830 F.Supp. 701. Civil Rights 1376(10)

High level county officials' alleged repeated actions designed to wrongfully terminate employment of employee working for county agencies were not performed solely in legislative capacity so as to make individual officials absolutely immune in civil rights action under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 by allegedly wrongfully discharged employee pursuant to legislative immunity, where termination of employee did not involve promulgation of general or prospective legislation despite policy implemented through decision resulting in termination, but rather, case involved employment decision involving one individual. Kuchka v. Kile, M.D.Pa.1985, 634 F.Supp. 502. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3561. ---- Board members, county officials, legislative immunity

African-American county commissioners board members' vote to appoint an African-American clerk to replace white female clerk was an administrative act not protected by legislative immunity in § 1983 action brought by the white female clerk alleging equal protection violation. Smith v. Lomax, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1995, 45 F.3d 402. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Decision by county board of supervisors to terminate public works superintendent was not a legislative action by board members acting in their legislative capacities and, thus, neither county board members nor board itself were absolutely immune from liability in former superintendent's § 1983 civil rights claim arising out of termination. Roberson v. Mullins, C.A.4 (Va.) 1994, 29 F.3d 132. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Members of county board of freeholders were not entitled to absolute legislative immunity from civil rights claim of pretrial detainee who was assaulted by inmate in county jail, notwithstanding members' contention that their decision to operate existing jail while building a new one and their decision not to pay for additional security officers were legislative acts, where decisions were not reached in legislative manner by means of resolution or ordinance. Ryan v. Burlington County, N.J., C.A.3 (N.J.) 1989, 889 F.2d 1286. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Individual members of county board of supervisors, who enacted ordinance relating to wireless telecommunications facilities, had absolute legislative immunity to §§ 1983 claim brought by federally licensed provider of commercial mobile radio service under Telecommunications Act (TCA), since there was no set of circumstances under which provider could have established that act of enacting ordinance was not legislative act. Sprint Telephony PCS, L.P. v. County of San Diego, S.D.Cal.2004, 311 F.Supp.2d 898, opinion clarified 2004 WL 859333. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Individual members of county board of supervisors were entitled to absolute immunity from liability with respect to their denial of applications for conditional use permits if their actions could be considered "legislative" function under state law. Pendleton Const. Corp. v. Rockbridge County, Va., W.D.Va.1987, 652 F.Supp. 312, affirmed 837 F.2d 178. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Individual members of county board accused of introducing, debating and adopting allegedly unconstitutional resolution providing for mandatory retirement at age 55 for all nonelective protective occupation employees of county were absolutely immune from action alleging that such resolution was an violation of equal protection clause of U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 14. Heiar v. Crawford County, Wis., W.D.Wis.1983, 558 F.Supp. 1175. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County board of supervisors was immune from claim for punitive damages based on alleged constitutional deprivations in rezoning property adjacent to plaintiff's tract. Tolbert v. Nelson County, W.D.Va.1981, 527 F.Supp. 836. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Members of county board of supervisors were entitled to absolute immunity for their conduct, within the legislative function of making zoning decisions or deliberations, in down zoning area in questions and in disapproving plaintiff's plan of development, but board members were not exempt from conduct alleged which was beyond that necessary to perform duties in establishing zoning policies. Fralin & Waldron, Inc. v. Henrico County, Va., E.D.Va.1979, 474 F.Supp. 1315. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3562. ---- Commissioners, county officials, legislative immunity

County commissioners' vote to ban attendee from all future commission meetings after he protested award of bid to his employer's competitor, and commissioners' subsequent decision to prohibit attendee from participating in or speaking before commission meetings, were administrative rather than legislative acts, even assuming that board acted in relation to business of awarding bids, and commissioners thus were not legislatively immune from attendee's § 1983 action alleging violation of his free speech rights. Kamplain v. Curry County Bd. of Com'rs, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1998, 159 F.3d 1248. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County commissioners were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from any liability under § 1983 in action alleging that commissioners and landowners jointly conceived and executed plan to vacate road in retaliation for property owners' exercise of First Amendment rights and in violation of due process and equal protection; any individual motive which guided any commissioner was irrelevant where decision to vacate was made following open public meeting in which all parties were heard. Fry v. Board of County Com'rs of County of Baca, State of Colo., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1993, 7 F.3d 936, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Doctrine of legislative immunity was complete defense for county officials against claims that elimination of former county employee's position and refusal to hire her for another position violated her rights of free speech and association, and also barred her state law claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress; she failed to show that her political affiliation was determining factor in county board of commissioners' legislative decisions to abolish position that she had held and position for which she applied. Hollyday v. Rainey, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1992, 964 F.2d 1441, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 636, 506 U.S. 1014, 121 L.Ed.2d 567. Civil Rights 1376(10); Counties 59

County commissioners were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from § 1983 suit challenging imposition of temporary moratorium on issuance of permits for mobile homes; by enacting resolution imposing temporary moratorium of general application on issuance of mobile home permits for specified area of county until revised zoning development plan could be reviewed, individual county commissioners were performing traditional legislative function; moreover, even if conspiracy or bad faith could be proved, unworthy purpose does not preclude absolute immunity for legislators acting in their legislative capacity. Brown v. Crawford County, Ga., C.A.11 (Ga.) 1992, 960 F.2d 1002. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Other county commissioners, who were accused of not acting to prevent first commissioner, to whom personnel decisions at hospital were delegated, from making allegedly discriminatory personnel decisions even after other commissioners received several complaints, were charged with improper "legislative activity," in civil rights suit against them, and thus were protected by legislative immunity; only lawful action other commissioners could have taken to stop alleged improper personnel decisions would have been to redistribute assignments, by introduction of resolution to that effect and unanimous vote by all of commissioners. Yeldell v. Cooper Green Hosp., Inc., C.A.11

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

(Ala.) 1992, 956 F.2d 1056. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County commissioners' refusal to compensate state district court clerk for attorney fees incurred in contempt proceeding was not legislative, and, thus, commissioners were not entitled to absolute legislative immunity from § 1983 suit; decision was based on specific facts of individual situation, rather than general facts regarding policy, and did not purport to establish general policy. Hughes v. Tarrant County Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1991, 948 F.2d 918. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County commissioners enjoyed legislative immunity in § 1983 suit challenging constitutionality of ordinances requiring licensing of adult entertainment facilities. Redner v. Citrus County, Florida, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1990, 919 F.2d 646, rehearing denied 935 F.2d 1297, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 303, 502 U.S. 909, 116 L.Ed.2d 246. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County commissioners, who were entitled to absolute immunity for their legislative actions in establishing unconstitutional minority and women business enterprise (MWBE) programs establishing "participation goals" for minority and women business enterprises in awarding county architectural and engineering (A & E) contracts, were acting in an administrative, rather than legislative, capacity when they voted to apply performance goals to specific county A & E contracts, and therefore they were not entitled to absolute legislative immunity with respect to those actions. Hershell Gill Consulting Engineers, Inc. v. Miami-Dade County, Fla., S.D.Fla.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 1305. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Decision by county board of commissioners to continue to maintain Ten Commandments as part of statue within courtroom until ordered by court to remove them constituted policy-making decision on behalf of citizens of county and was "legislative act" for which commissioners were entitled to legislative immunity, not just from liability but from defense of lawsuit brought by citizen under § 1983, despite fact that board never actually passed ordinance concerning Ten Commandments. Suhre v. Board of Com'rs, W.D.N.C.1995, 894 F.Supp. 927, reversed 131 F.3d 1083, on remand 55 F.Supp.2d 384. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Under doctrine of legislative immunity, county commissioners were immune from liability in their official capacities for damages arising out of employee's termination, as determination of claims against commissioners in their official capacities would necessarily involve testimony from commissioners as to their motivation in enacting resolution to declassify all employee positions in commissioners' office; it was not appropriate to inquire into commissioners' motivations in changing status of certain employees in terminated employee's § 1983 action. Racine v. Cecil County, Md., D.Md.1994, 843 F.Supp. 53. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County commissioners' vote to terminate employees of commissioners' office was executive in nature and, therefore, commissioners were not entitled to absolute immunity from employees' § 1983 action, but enjoyed only qualified immunity, because vote neither applied to general community, nor involved promulgation of legislative policy as defined and binding rule of conduct. Christian v. Cecil County, Md., D.Md.1993, 817 F.Supp. 1279. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County commissioners were entitled to absolute legislative immunity for performing their legislative functions in approving budgets for maintenance of county jail, where approved budgets appeared to adequately maintain jail in order to meet constitutional standards. Lane v. Hutcheson, E.D.Mo.1992, 794 F.Supp. 877. Counties 59

3563. ---- Council members, county officials, legislative immunity

For the purpose of analyzing whether county council's denial of conditional use permit (CUP) to allow operator of commercial wedding business to conduct weddings on beach-front residential property was a legislative act so as to entitle the council members to absolute legislative immunity under § 1983, the decision was "ad hoc" where it was made based on the circumstances of the particular case and did not effectuate policy or create a binding rule of conduct; although granting permit would require council's enactment of ordinance and decision involved exercise of considerable discretion, the ordinance would be specific rather than general, affecting only the parcel of land at issue, and the decision involved administering policies set out in county code. Kaahumanu v. County of Maui, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 315 F.3d 1215. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County zoning officials in enacting ordinance which rezoned single parcel of land to less intensive use were acting in substantively legislative manner for purposes of determining whether they were entitled to legislative immunity. Acierno v. Cloutier, C.A.3 (Del.) 1994, 40 F.3d 597. Zoning And Planning 355

Individual county council members were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from liability to landowner for alleged deprivation of landowner's civil rights due to alleged diminution in value of landowner's real property as result of zoning ordinance which he claimed was unconstitutionally enacted by the council since the members were acting within scope of their legislative activity when they voted on the ordinance, even though that had previously met with partisans to one side of the zoning controversy. Bruce v. Riddle, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1980, 631 F.2d 272. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Plaintiffs, holding title to the property as trustees, could not overcome absolute immunity and impose personal liability on defendant members of Montgomery County council for rezoning actions which Maryland Court of Appeals found constitutionally valid despite claim that actions denied the plaintiffs the right to equal protection and deprived plaintiffs of their constitutional right not to have their property taken without just compensation. Ligon v. State of Md., D.C.Md.1977, 448 F.Supp. 935. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Members of county council in approving change of zone of property owned by plaintiff from commercial to residential were acting within scope of legitimate legislative activity and no personal liability could be imposed on them under this section for doing so. Shellburne, Inc. v. New Castle County, D.C.Del.1968, 293 F.Supp. 237. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3564. ---- County executives, county officials, legislative immunity

County chief executive officer's (CEO) executive assistant was not entitled to absolute legislative immunity from manager's retaliatory discharge and free speech claim under §§ 1983, even though CEO's submission of budget, which abolished manager's position, was legislative in nature, where executive assistant did not decide final budget to be submitted, did not introduce final version for approval, and did he take any other act that could be deemed legislative. Bryant v. Jones, N.D.Ga.2006, 464 F.Supp.2d 1273. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County legislators' decisions concerning the creation and subsequent abolition of county dispatch supervisor position were legislative functions, and therefore, legislators were entitled to absolute immunity from civil county employee's § 1983 claim; although there were comments regarding employee's connection with the positions, the overall question was whether to authorize such a position. Pfeiffer v. Lewis County, N.D.N.Y.2004, 308 F.Supp.2d 88. Civil Rights 1376(10); Civil Rights 1529; Labor And Employment 2458

Action of county executive in signing budget resolution which created some positions and eliminated others was legislative in nature and he was thus entitled to absolute legislative immunity with respect to civil rights suit brought by county employees who alleged that their discharge or transfer as a result of the budget resolution was due to political affiliation. Orange v. County of Suffolk, E.D.N.Y.1993, 830 F.Supp. 701. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3565. Courts and judges, legislative immunity

In promulgating Virginia Code of Professional Responsibility, Virginia Supreme Court acted in legislative capacity

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

and, in that capacity, Court and its members were immune from suit. Supreme Court of Virginia v. Consumers Union of U. S., Inc., U.S.Va.1980, 100 S.Ct. 1967, 446 U.S. 719, 64 L.Ed.2d 641, on remand 505 F.Supp. 822. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Circuit court judge's orders in domestic relations cases did not rise to level of rule making in clear absence of jurisdiction, as would expose judge to liability for money damages. Mann v. Conlin, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 22 F.3d 100, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 193, 513 U.S. 870, 130 L.Ed.2d 126. Judges 36

Illinois Supreme Court, Supreme Court's Attorney Registration and Disciplinary Commission (ARDC) and Northern District of Illinois Executive Committee were immune from money damages under § 1983 in connection with adoption by Illinois Supreme Court and federal district court of disciplinary rules forbidding lawyers from assisting laypersons in unauthorized practice of law and from entering into partnerships with nonlawyers; Supreme Court, ARDC and executive committee were state actors performing acts in their legislative capacity. Lawline v. American Bar Ass'n, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 956 F.2d 1378, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 551, 510 U.S. 992, 126 L.Ed.2d 452. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Justices of Michigan Supreme Court were acting within their legislative capacity in promulgating mediation rule, and, thus, court and its justices were entitled to legislative immunity from civil rights action; immunity applied whether relief sought was money damages or injunctive relief. Alia v. Michigan Supreme Court, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1990, 906 F.2d 1100, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Although challenged disciplinary rule of Virginia Supreme Court was unconstitutional except as applied to criminal jury trials, inasmuch as Virginia Supreme Court was acting in legislative capacity in promulgating disciplinary rule, it was absolutely immune, and no award of attorney's fees would be made against Court under this section. Hirschkop v. Snead, C.A.4 (Va.) 1981, 646 F.2d 149. Civil Rights 1480

In federal civil rights action challenging Alabama's bar examination and admission process, individual justices of Alabama Supreme Court, and members of Alabama State Bar and Board of Bar Examiners, were entitled to absolute legislative immunity as to all claims for damages against them for their respective roles in promulgating rules governing admission to Alabama State Bar. McFarland v. Folsom, M.D.Ala.1994, 854 F.Supp. 862. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8)

3566. Education and school officials, legislative immunity

School board members were not absolutely immune from §§ 1983 liability for superintendent's termination on theory that determination of rules and procedures, participation in pretermination hearing and individual decisions to terminate superintendent were legislative acts; termination of employee was administrative act. Baird v. Board of Educ. for Warren Community Unit School Dist. No. 205, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 389 F.3d 685, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 332, 163 L.Ed.2d 45. Civil Rights 1376(10)

School board members' actions in allegedly denying tenured Connecticut art teacher terminated as result of budgetary cutbacks the opportunity to be reappointed to position for which she was qualified were administrative in nature and thus did not qualify for legislative immunity; board did not engage in broad prospective policymaking characteristic of legislative action but instead "tabled" another art teacher's resignation, albeit by board vote, a decision only directed to his situation and not implicating any board policy. Harhay v. Town of Ellington Bd. of Educ., C.A.2 (Conn.) 2003, 323 F.3d 206, on remand 2006 WL 861058. Civil Rights 1376(10); Schools 62

The members of a university's board of regents who approved a prior consent decree containing pay increases for female faculty members were not entitled to legislative immunity from male faculty member's § 1983 action alleging discriminatory pay scale, even though board members were elected to their position by the state legislature, since board members were not acting as legislators, but rather administrators of university. Maitland v. University of Minnesota, C.A.8 (Minn.) 2001, 260 F.3d 959, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 122 S.Ct. 1300, 535 U.S. 929, 152 L.Ed.2d 212. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Acting school committee chairperson was not absolutely immune from suit brought by committee member alleging that chairperson's ordering his ejection from meeting violated his free speech rights and constituted intentional infliction of emotional distress; subject of dispute leading to ejection was propriety of using certain funds to hire certain teachers, an administrative matter to which absolute immunity did not attach. Vacca v. Barletta, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1991, 933 F.2d 31, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 194, 502 U.S. 866, 116 L.Ed.2d 154. Civil Rights 1376(5); Schools 62

Secretary of community college's board of trustees enjoyed no absolute immunity from liability for claims that she, acting on her own behalf and as agent for college, intentionally and/or recklessly discriminated against white male administrators by falsely accusing them of racism and sexism. Chonich v. Wayne County Community College, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 874 F.2d 359. Libel And Slander 36

Although regents of state university were given power to enact laws for government of university, they were essentially administrators who oversaw operation of state educational institution; thus, doctrine of legislative immunity under this section did not shield regents' decision to establish refund system for university's newspaper motivated at least in part by offensive issue of newspaper. Stanley v. Magrath, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1983, 719 F.2d 279. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Superintendent of school district and elected members of board of education of that district were not absolutely immune from suit by probationary public school teachers who alleged they had been discriminatorily discharged for their union membership. McLaughlin v. Tilendis, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1968, 398 F.2d 287. Civil Rights 1376(10)

School board members effectively eliminated position of director of elementary education when they transferred its occupant to teaching position and reassigned her duties to existing administrative personnel, meaning their actions were legislative and they were entitled to legislative immunity in her political discrimination case under §§ 1983; while board meeting's minutes did not explicitly state that position was eliminated, no person had held that position since she was transferred, and employment advertisement placed by board on occasion of retirement of office member to whom her former responsibilities had been reassigned indicated that position had been eliminated. Chadwell v. Lee County School Bd., W.D.Va.2006, 457 F.Supp.2d 690. Civil Rights 1376(10)

School board members, in their individual capacities, were acting in capacity of school officials when they brought temporary restraining order (TRO) action against former president of parent teacher association (PTA) and candidate for trustee of school board and, therefore, were not entitled to absolute immunity from president's and candidate's § 1983 claim. Mazza v. Hendrick Hudson Cent. School Dist., S.D.N.Y.1996, 942 F.Supp. 187. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Federal retaliation and conspiracy claims against local school board members by school district employee based on formulation of reorganization plan and votes which effectively eliminated employee's position from budget did not state a cause of action, regardless of whether adoption of the plan was a "ruse" to transfer and effectively demote the employee; the allegedly improper actions were legislative acts for which school board members were cloaked with absolute legislative immunity. Callaway v. Hafeman, W.D.Wis.1986, 628 F.Supp. 1478, affirmed 832 F.2d 414. Conspiracy 18; Schools 62

3567. Executive officials, legislative immunity

Absolute legislative immunity may be appropriate if act is legislative in nature, regardless of whether actor's office is in executive, judicial, or legislative branch of government. Redwood Village Partnership v. Graham, D.N.D.1993, 819 F.Supp. 867, affirmed 26 F.3d 839, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 423, 513 U.S. 962, 130 L.Ed.2d 337. Municipal Corporations 170

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Legislative immunity is not applicable to acts of executive officer in a generally executive function. Keker v. Procunier, E.D.Cal.1975, 398 F.Supp. 756. Officers And Public Employees 114

3568. Municipalities, legislative immunity

Town was not entitled to absolute legislative immunity from damage alleged to have been suffered by supernumerary police officer when town, by legislative action, eliminated his job in retaliation for his having supported chief of police on controversial issue; there was no immunity defense, either qualified or absolute, available to municipality sought to be held liable under § 1983. Goldberg v. Town of Rocky Hill, C.A.2 (Conn.) 1992, 973 F.2d 70. Civil Rights 1376(10)

City was not entitled to legislative immunity from damages arising from its zoning regulations if those zoning regulations resulted in "taking" of private property for public use without just compensation. Hernandez v. City of Lafayette, C.A.5 (La.) 1981, 643 F.2d 1188, rehearing denied 649 F.2d 336, certiorari denied 102 S.Ct. 1251, 455 U.S. 907, 71 L.Ed.2d 444. Eminent Domain 285

3569. Municipal or city officials, legislative immunity--Generally

Municipal legislators have absolute immunity from civil rights suit for actions taken in legislative capacity. Gorman Towers, Inc. v. Bogoslavsky, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1980, 626 F.2d 607. Municipal Corporations 170

Members of a municipal legislative body do not share complete immunity from liability under this section which is enjoyed by judges and state legislators. Nelson v. Knox, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1958, 256 F.2d 312. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Legislative immunity from § 1983 liability extends only to actions by legislators in their legislative capacities, not to any of their administrative or executive acts. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Village of South Barrington, N.D.Ill.1997, 958 F.Supp. 1285. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Municipal legislators are absolutely immune from damages in civil rights suits for actions taken within scope of their valid legislative authority. Ligon v. State of Md., D.C.Md.1977, 448 F.Supp. 935. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Doctrine of legislative immunity was not available to city legislators where suit sought only injunctive and declaratory relief, but legislators are cloaked with immunity only in damage actions brought pursuant to this section. Citizens Council on Human Relations v. Buffalo Yacht Club, W.D.N.Y.1977, 438 F.Supp. 316. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3570. ---- Aldermen, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

Failure of town aldermen to establish they were acting in legislative as opposed to executive capacity when they ordered fellow alderman ejected from closed meeting, after he insisted on making tape recording of proceedings, precluded claim of absolute legislative immunity from §§ 1983 action by alderman, claiming deprivation of his free speech, seizure and due process rights. King v. Jefferies, M.D.N.C.2005, 402 F.Supp.2d 624. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City aldermen's alleged action of denying employee a raise commensurate with that of other city employees because she was a married woman was not legislative act, and members of board of aldermen thus were not legislatively immune from employee's § 1983 claim, inasmuch as alleged action singled out specifiable individuals. Fortner v. City of Archie, Missouri, W.D.Mo.1999, 70 F.Supp.2d 1028. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Members of Board of Aldermen and Board of Adjustment, who voted to deny application for zoning variance, could not be held liable in their individual capacities for violation of applicant's civil rights, in that it was clear that officials were acting within scope of their legislative duties when they voted. Dunmore v. City of Natchez, S.D.Miss.1988, 703 F.Supp. 31. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3571. ---- Board members, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

Executive director and members of governing board of Tahoe Regional Planning Authority, who possessed both legislative and executive powers, had qualified immunity in connection with their executive function and absolute immunity to degree they acted in their legislative capacity and, to create liability under Bivens, property owners, who alleged that Authority's land use ordinance constituted inverse condemnation or "taking" of their property, would have to show something more than even-handed enforcement of ordinance. Jacobson v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1977, 566 F.2d 1353, certiorari granted 98 S.Ct. 2843, 436 U.S. 943, 56 L.Ed.2d 784, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 99 S.Ct. 1171, 440 U.S. 391, 59 L.Ed.2d 401, on remand 474 F.Supp. 901. States 6

If members of board of supervisors performed only legislative functions, and if, in all of activities which purportedly deprived plaintiffs of constitutional rights, defendant member was engaged only in sphere of legitimate legislative activity, then he enjoyed legislative immunity from liability for damages in civil rights suit. Gillibeau v. City of Richmond, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1969, 417 F.2d 426. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Town board members were not shielded by legislative immunity from liability under §§ 1983 for their failure to rehire employee whose position had been eliminated as result of reorganization, or for requiring employee to sign release before receiving accrued vacation, personal and sick time and withholding that pay without signed release; those actions were administrative personnel matters. Zdziebloski v. Town of East Greenbush, N.Y., N.D.N.Y.2004, 336 F.Supp.2d 194. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Village board members performed legislative act when they passed amending ordinance that enabled village to draw down letter of credit due to developer's failure to provide replacement letter and, thus, were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from developer's claim that its constitutional rights were violated by that conduct, even if board members enacted amending ordinance as pretext for drawing down developer's letter of credit. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Village of South Barrington, N.D.Ill.1997, 958 F.Supp. 1285. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3572. ---- Commissioners, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

Decision by township board of commissioners to discharge director of roads and public property was, by statute and ordinance, a managerial rather than legislative activity, and thus commissioners were not entitled to legislative immunity. Abraham v. Pekarski, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1984, 728 F.2d 167, certiorari denied 104 S.Ct. 3513, 467 U.S. 1242, 82 L.Ed.2d 822. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Current and former city commissioners were entitled to absolute legislative immunity on claims seeking to hold them liable for enacting ordinances which imposed occupancy limits on residential rental property in areas which were zoned for single family residences, since city commissioners were engaged in legislative acts when they did so. Jones v. Wildgen, D.Kan.2004, 320 F.Supp.2d 1116, on reconsideration in part 349 F.Supp.2d 1358. Municipal Corporations 170

Action of city commissioners in voting to rescind redevelopment plan fell within scope of absolute legislative immunity, but commissioners' conduct surrounding the actual vote would not fall within purview of furthering their legislative duties if they failed to follow established commission procedures. Key West Harbour Development Corp. v. City of Key West, Fla., S.D.Fla.1990, 738 F.Supp. 1390. Municipal Corporations 170

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

City commissioners, who voted in favor of city's budget ordinance, were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from liability as to wrongful termination claims of city employees eliminated from city's budget pursuant to ordinance. Rateree v. Rockett, N.D.Ill.1986, 630 F.Supp. 763, affirmed 852 F.2d 946. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3573. ---- Council members, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

Ordinance eliminating city department of which civil rights complainant was sole employee was legislative in substance, precluding any need to consider whether formally legislative character of putatively legislative action by local officials would be sufficient to confer absolute immunity from § 1983 suit on city officials; ordinance reflected discretionary, policymaking decision implicating budgetary priorities of city. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Jury's findings that mayor's and city council member's stated reason for seeking enactment of ordinance which eliminated position of city's social services director was not their real reason and that director's constitutionally protected speech was substantial or motivating factor in mayor's and member's actions regarding ordinance supported conclusion that mayor's and member's actions were administrative, rather than legislative, for purpose of determining whether mayor and member were shielded by legislative immunity from director's resulting § 1983 action alleging violation of director's First Amendment rights. Scott-Harris v. City of Fall River, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1997, 134 F.3d 427, certiorari granted 117 S.Ct. 2430, 520 U.S. 1263, 138 L.Ed.2d 192, reversed 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1184, 523 U.S. 1003, 140 L.Ed.2d 315. Civil Rights 1376(10)

City council members who vote to pay punitive damage award pursuant to California Government Code section, authorizing public entity to pay that part of a judgment that is for punitive or exemplary damages, perform an administrative, not legislative, act and therefore, they are not entitled to absolute immunity; decision whether to pay punitive damages is made on case-by-case basis, decision does not involve the formulation of policy, and decision does not apply to the community at large, but rather is directed toward shielding individuals from specific damage awards. Trevino By and Through Cruz v. Gates, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1994, 23 F.3d 1480, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 327, 513 U.S. 932, 130 L.Ed.2d 286. Municipal Corporations 170

Mayor and city council members who voted for zoning ordinance that was later declared invalid were protected by legislative immunity in civil rights action brought by operator of adult bookstore who had been fined and subsequently found to be in civil and criminal contempt for violating ordinance. Shoultes v. Laidlaw, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1989, 886 F.2d 114. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Members of city council were entitled to absolute immunity for actions taken in furtherance of their duty as members, and such duties included decision to disband police department, so that members could not be held liable to former police chief, who claimed that he was discharged in retaliation for exercise of his First Amendment rights. Finch v. City of Vernon, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1989, 877 F.2d 1497. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(10)

District of Columbia council member was acting in administrative, not legislative capacity in terminating legislative researcher, and thus was not entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 liability to researcher. Gross v. Winter, C.A.D.C.1989, 876 F.2d 165, 277 U.S.App.D.C. 406. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Where city council was simply monitoring and administering contract which gave promoter right to promote live entertainment in municipally-owned amphitheater by voting on various proposed concerts, council member was acting in his executive, rather than legislative, capacity and enjoyed only qualified immunity in action alleging that entertainers were denied access to public forum in violation of U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 1 on basis of content of their expression and other arbitrary factors. Cinevision Corp. v. City of Burbank, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1984, 745 F.2d 560, certiorari denied 105 S.Ct. 2115, 471 U.S. 1054, 85 L.Ed.2d 480. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Members of municipal council acting in a legislative capacity are absolutely immune from damage suits under this section and those acting in a legislative capacity are immune from suit under section 1985 of this title. Aitchison v. Raffiani, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1983, 708 F.2d 96. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Since, in civil rights action brought by allegedly wrongfully dismissed county detective, district court's back pay award was imposed against district attorney and members of county council in their official capacities, immunities from individual damage liability under this section governing civil action for deprivation of rights were not relevant. D'Iorio v. Delaware County, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1978, 592 F.2d 681. Civil Rights 1413

Members of town selectboard were entitled to legislative immunity from federal damage claims asserted by nude dancing establishment under §§ 1983 in its suit challenging town public indecency ordinance on First Amendment grounds, where damages claims arose from town's enactment of ordinance, as enactment was a purely legislative function. White River Amusement Pub, Inc. v. Town of Hartford, Vt., D.Vt.2005, 412 F.Supp.2d 416. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City council members were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from claims based on their vote to approve an ordinance appropriating funds for the purchase of voting equipment which did not permit visually and manually impaired voters to vote without assistance; voting by such officials was manifestly a legislative act. American Ass'n of People With Disabilities v. Smith, M.D.Fla.2002, 227 F.Supp.2d 1276, reconsideration denied 278 F.Supp.2d 1337. Civil Rights 1376(4); Municipal Corporations 170

Mayor and city council members were absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for their legislative activity in adopting an ordinance eliminating position of director of public safety, and in signing the ordinance into law. Lumpkin v. City of Lafayette, M.D.Ala.1998, 24 F.Supp.2d 1259. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Claims of cogenerators seeking to construct cogeneration plant against city council member were not barred by legislative immunity under District of Columbia speech or debate statute in § 1983 action for due process violation, unconstitutional impairment of contracts, and tortious interference with contractual and economic relations, where, to extent complaint alleged member sought to interfere with regulatory building permit process by using his influence to cajole or intimidate executive branch members, such acts would not fall within legitimate scope of legislative activity, and complaint raised fact issue as to whether member acted outside legislative sphere. Dominion Cogen, D.C., Inc. v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.1995, 878 F.Supp. 258. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City council members were not acting in their legislative capacity when they denied property owners' renewed application for special use permit, such that they would be entitled to absolute immunity on property owners' claims brought under § 1983. Triomphe Investors v. City of Northwood, N.D.Ohio 1993, 835 F.Supp. 1036, affirmed 49 F.3d 198, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 70, 516 U.S. 816, 133 L.Ed.2d 31. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City council members were entitled to absolute legislative immunity in inmate's § 1983 action alleging that they violated his constitutional rights by failing to allocate sufficient money to city jail and by failing to enact legislation to address conditions at jail. Terry v. Bobb, E.D.Va.1993, 827 F.Supp. 366. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Members of city council were entitled to absolute immunity from liability in their individual capacity in § 1983 action challenging unconstitutional zoning ordinance; city council members were acting in their legislative capacity in reviewing recommendations of proposed ordinance. Burkhart Advertising, Inc. v. City of Auburn, Ind., N.D.Ind.1991, 786 F.Supp. 721. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

City council members were entitled to legislative immunity in civil rights action brought by former city employee who claimed that council members' budget vote resulted in loss of his job and that budget vote was invalidated by procedural error; council members were protected in their legitimate efforts to conduct legislative business and court would not allow trivial errors to obviate that protection. Draughon v. City of Oldsmar, M.D.Fla.1991, 767 F.Supp. 1144. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Individual members of city council and of city light and water commission were entitled to legislative immunity in connection with nonexclusive cable franchisee's § 1983 claims concerning establishment of municipal cable system, absent any allegations that members were acting in any capacity other than their official ones or that council and commission implemented laws in violation of nonexclusive franchisee's constitutional rights. Paragould Cablevision, Inc. v. City of Paragould, Ark., E.D.Ark.1990, 739 F.Supp. 1314, affirmed 930 F.2d 1310, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 430, 502 U.S. 963, 116 L.Ed.2d 450. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3574. ---- Directors, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

City directors were absolutely immune with respect to their enactment of allegedly unconstitutional zoning amendment. Gorman Towers, Inc. v. Bogoslavsky, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1980, 626 F.2d 607. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3575. ---- Mayors, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

City mayor performed legislative act, in formulating budget eliminating department of which civil rights complainant was sole employee, and in signing ordinance so providing, and was consequently entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 suit by complainant, even though he was member of executive department of municipal government. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Absolute immunity did not shield mayor from §§ 1983 liability because the conduct with which he was charged, specifically, constructive discharge through harassment, defamation, and accusations of illegality, was not legislative activity. Hill v. Borough of Kutztown, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 455 F.3d 225. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Alleged acts of mayor and city human resources director, upon taking office, of selectively laying off and imposing restrictions upon employees belonging to opposing political party were administrative rather than legislative, and such officials thus were not protected by absolute immunity from employees' § 1983 claims, notwithstanding that municipal assembly formally enacted mayor's layoff plan and ordered elimination of specified positions, and that alleged actions may have been taken pursuant to Puerto Rico law; claims concerned implementation of layoff plan and challenged targeting of specific individuals. Acevedo-Garcia v. Vera-Monroig, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2000, 204 F.3d 1. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Mayor was not entitled to absolute immunity from liability to citizen alleging First Amendment violation arising out of mayor's order that citizen be removed from city council meeting for speaking out of order, in that mayor was not acting in "legislative capacity" at relevant time; mayor's conduct occurred during portion of city council meeting which was devoted to open comments from general public. Hansen v. Bennett, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1991, 948 F.2d 397, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 1939, 504 U.S. 910, 118 L.Ed.2d 545. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Determination of absolute immunity of village mayor in exercise of judicial responsibilities as liquor control commissioner and of legislative responsibilities as president of village board of trustees, and of absolute immunity of all trustees in exercise of their legislative responsibilities, would not warrant dismissal in its entirety of former liquor licensees' complaint, alleging that local legislators, judicial officers and municipal employer interfered with and eventually destroyed licensees' business in violation of due process, where not only were there other defendants who did not and could not claim absolute immunity as judicial or legislative officers, but also complaint against village mayor extended to nonjudicial nonlegislative conduct as mayor. Reed v. Village of Shorewood,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

C.A.7 (Ill.) 1983, 704 F.2d 943. Federal Civil Procedure 1729

Mayor's presentation to city council of recommended annual operating budget covering all city agencies, departments, and city expenditures was legislative in nature, and thus mayor was entitled to absolute immunity from liability under §§ 1983, despite city employees' claims that their positions were eliminated or reduced in retaliation for their support for mayor's opponent, where city charter required mayor to present budget, city council amended certain aspects of recommended budget, and approved budget resulted in layoff of thirteen full-time positions and reduction of four full-time positions to part-time. Lorusso v. Borer, D.Conn.2005, 359 F.Supp.2d 121 . Civil Rights 1376(10)

Mayor and city council members were absolutely immune from § 1983 liability for their legislative activity in adopting an ordinance eliminating position of director of public safety, and in signing the ordinance into law. Lumpkin v. City of Lafayette, M.D.Ala.1998, 24 F.Supp.2d 1259. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Police chief, mayor, and city council members were not entitled to absolute immunity from former parking ticket officer's § 1983 claims that he was discharged for refusing to discriminate in issuing parking tickets; municipal employment decisions were administrative rather than legislative in nature and, thus, did not enjoy immunity from suit. Reitz v. Persing, M.D.Pa.1993, 831 F.Supp. 410. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Mayor and county plan commission members were entitled to absolute immunity from liability in § 1983 action challenging constitutionality of zoning ordinance which imposed total ban on off-premise advertising billboards; mayor and commission members were exercising legislative function when they executed responsibilities to enact proposed ordinance into local law. Burkhart Advertising, Inc. v. City of Auburn, Ind., N.D.Ind.1991, 786 F.Supp. 721. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Action of mayor of township in casting his vote, along with members of township committee, in favor of adopting rezoning plan was legislative in character, and thus mayor was entitled to absolute immunity from civil suit for damages brought by property owner adversely affected by zoning change. Jodeco, Inc. v. Hann, D.N.J.1987, 674 F.Supp. 488. Zoning And Planning 353.1

Mayor's meeting with economically self-interested private developers and other persons and mayor's formal approval of ordinance limiting conversion of rental units to condominiums were within mayor's legislative function so that mayor enjoyed absolute legislative immunity with respect to action arising out of the adoption of the ordinance. Traweek v. City and County of San Francisco, N.D.Cal.1984, 659 F.Supp. 1012, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds 920 F.2d 589. Municipal Corporations 747(1)

Mayor and city council members were absolutely immune from suit for damages under this section and section 1985 of this title to extent that they acted in their legislative capacities, and were further absolutely immune from suit for declaratory and injunctive relief under such sections for acts within sphere of legitimate legislative activity. Latino Political Action Committee, Inc. v. City of Boston, D.C.Mass.1984, 581 F.Supp. 478. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3576. ---- Miscellaneous officials, municipal or city officials, legislative immunity

Vice president of city council committed legislative act, when she voted for amendment abolishing city department of which complainant was sole employee, and consequently had absolute immunity from § 1983 suit brought by claimant. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Former city employee stated § 1983 claim against supervisors, that she was terminated in retaliation for filing earlier discrimination lawsuit, despite argument that supervisors were engaged in immune legislative activity when they prepared legislation abolishing employee's position. Brennan v. Straub, S.D.N.Y.2003, 246 F.Supp.2d 360. Municipal Corporations 218(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

City's street superintendents, who were in charge of maintaining drainage ditch constructed by city on African-American property owner's land, were not entitled to qualified immunity, in property owner's §§ 1983 equal protection claim, asserting that city officials failed to properly maintain ditch causing flooding on property, where superintendents allegedly knew that the ditch needing mowing and that flooding occurred, but they did nothing to maintain the ditch or otherwise prevent flooding. Wilson v. Northcutt, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 441 F.3d 586, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City manager and city financial services director were entitled to qualified immunity from claim that they enforced ordinance that invalidly capped number of permits to operate horse-drawn carriage permits at 46, and annually renewed 42 permits held by competitor of claimant while competitor used only 16; actions were within scope of their respective authorities, and there was no showing that officers had violated equal protection or commerce clause rights of claimant. Avalon Carriage Service Inc. v. City of St. Augustine, FL, M.D.Fla.2006, 417 F.Supp.2d 1279. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Zoning officials were acting in mere "administrative" or "ministerial" capacity, so as not to be absolutely immune from subsequent civil rights action, when they refused to grant property owner a curative amendment from denial of zoning variance. de Botton v. Marple Tp., E.D.Pa.1988, 689 F.Supp. 477. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Officers who conducted search and housing-code inspection of residence were entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983, where officers acted under authority of warrant, and warrant was not transparently defective. Bielenberg v. Griffiths, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 130 Fed.Appx. 817, 2005 WL 1122666, Unreported, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3577. Parish officials, legislative immunity

Parish police jurors were entitled to legislative immunity against damages in their individual capacities in connection with their adoption of series of construction moratoria that frustrated construction of low to moderate-income housing project, regardless of whether jurors were motivated by discriminatory intent; although moratoria involved spot zoning rather than zoning ordinance, such zoning remained legislative in character in that moratoria involved legislative judgment and evaluation of legislative facts. Calhoun v. St. Bernard Parish, C.A.5 (La.) 1991, 937 F.2d 172, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 939, 502 U.S. 1060, 117 L.Ed.2d 110. Civil Rights 1376(4); Counties 59

3578. Puerto Rico officials, legislative immunity

Decision of Director of Legislative Service Office of Puerto Rico, President of the Puerto Rico House of Representatives, and President of the Puerto Rico Senate to discharge librarian in legislative library was not a legislative act entitled to absolute legislative immunity from damages under § 1983. Negron-Gaztambide v. Hernandez-Torres, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1994, 35 F.3d 25, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1098, 513 U.S. 1149, 130 L.Ed.2d 1066. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Municipal assembly members were entitled to legislative immunity, although they were nonelected officials, if they were acting in manner comparable to that of state legislators; municipal legislators were closer to constituents than either state or federal counterparts and were thus most vulnerable to and least able to defend lawsuits caused by passage of legislation. Acevedo-Cordero v. Cordero-Santiago, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1992, 958 F.2d 20. Municipal Corporations 170

Activities of Judiciary Committee of Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in conducting televised hearings concerning shooting incident involving supporters of radical proindependence group and in publishing documents were within sphere of legitimate legislative activity and, therefore, civil rights action seeking to enjoin Committee from compelling plaintiffs to appear and testify publicly at televised hearings and from publishing documents was barred by legislative immunity. Colon Berrios v. Hernandez Agosto, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1983, 716 F.2d 85. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Speaker of the House and President of the Senate of Puerto Rico were entitled to absolute legislative immunity with respect to discharge of Superintendent of the Capitol Building, since Superintendent occupied position which constituted integral element of meaningful input necessary for performance of defendants' legislative duty and for general functioning of legislative process. Lasa v. Colberg, D.C.Puerto Rico 1985, 622 F.Supp. 557. Territories 19

Investigation by Puerto Rican Senate Nomination Committee of Puerto Rican Secretary of Justice was part of function of representative government; thus, legislature of Puerto Rico was protected from civil suit arising out of subpoena of Secretary and subpoena was proper. Acosta v. Agosto, D.C.Puerto Rico 1984, 590 F.Supp. 144. Territories 19

3578A. Virgin Island officials, legislative immunity

Speech or Debate Clause of Virgin Islands Organic Act guaranteed that Virgin Islands' Senators could claim absolute legislative immunity from suit pursuant to § 1983. Unidos v. Government of U.S. Virgin Islands, D.Virgin Islands 2004, 314 F.Supp.2d 501. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3579. Regional planning agencies and members, legislative immunity

To extent that individual members of controlling board of Tahoe Regional Planning Agency were acting in legislative capacity, they were entitled to absolute immunity from federal damages liability. Lake Country Estates, Inc. v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, U.S.Nev.1979, 99 S.Ct. 1171, 440 U.S. 391, 59 L.Ed.2d 401, on remand 474 F.Supp. 901. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3580. State officials, legislative immunity--Generally

State and regional legislators are entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 for their legislative activities. Bogan v. Scott-Harris, U.S.Mass.1998, 118 S.Ct. 966, 523 U.S. 44, 140 L.Ed.2d 79. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

Personal defenses are generally unavailable in official capacity suits under §§ 1983 because such suits are treated as suits against the underlying entity; however, exception exists under Ex Parte Young, which held that official capacity suits for prospective relief to enjoin state officials from enforcing unconstitutional acts are not deemed to be suits against the state and thus are not barred by the Eleventh Amendment. Scott v. Taylor, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2005, 405 F.3d 1251. Civil Rights 1366; Federal Courts 269; Federal Courts 272

State legislators, to same extent as their federal counterparts, are immune from suit under this section for injunctive relief, as well as from damages, based on their activities within traditional sphere of legislative activity. Star Distributors, Ltd. v. Marino, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1980, 613 F.2d 4. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Legislative immunity shields state officials only from liability for actions performed in sphere of legitimate legislative activity. Grass Roots Organizing Workshop (GROW) v. Campbell, D.S.C.1988, 704 F.Supp. 644. States 79

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Federal common-law immunity from suit under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 accorded to state legislators acting in sphere of legitimate legislative activity does not encompass everything that legislator might do while in office; administrative functions are not protected and only legislator's conduct while acting in sphere of legitimate legislative activity is immunized. Hudson v. Burke, N.D.Ill.1985, 617 F.Supp. 1501, affirmed 913 F.2d 427. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State legislators enjoy absolute immunity from suits for damages by individuals alleging violations of this section when their conduct occurs in a field where legislators traditionally have the power to act; test is whether the activity took place in a session of the legislature by one of its members in relation to the business before it. Shultz v. Sundberg, D.C.Alaska 1984, 577 F.Supp. 1491, affirmed 759 F.2d 714. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3581. ---- Administrative agency employees, state officials, legislative immunity

Employees of North Dakota Department of Human Services were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 suit for damages for their promulgation of amended rules for basic care facilities. Redwood Village Partnership v. Graham, C.A.8 (S.D.) 1994, 26 F.3d 839, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 423, 513 U.S. 962, 130 L.Ed.2d 337. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Employees of North Dakota Department of Human Services, who promulgated rules establishing reimbursement rates for nursing homes, were entitled to absolute legislative immunity from nursing home's § 1983 claim asserting that new rules were merely attempt to circumvent unfavorable court decision; that new rules may only have affected nursing home in question did not change nature of employees' conduct from legislative to executive. Redwood Village Partnership v. Graham, D.N.D.1993, 819 F.Supp. 867, affirmed 26 F.3d 839, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 423, 513 U.S. 962, 130 L.Ed.2d 337. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3582. ---- Assembly members, state officials, legislative immunity

State representative was entitled to absolute legislative immunity for his conduct, in reporting state agency employee's meeting with governor's office to state agency employer, reporting employee's alleged nonresponsiveness to state legislators, and allegedly pushing through a bill without following state procedure, in employee's §§ 1983 action, arising from her discharge resulting from communication of her public policy views to governor; pushing through legislation was legislative duty, and representative's discussions with state agency about agency employee were also part of his responsibilities on legislative committee. Hinshaw v. Smith, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 436 F.3d 997, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Position of legislative budget analyst was closely enough connected to legislative process so that decisions regarding position warranted protection of state legislative immunity, and analyst could not maintain Equal Pay Act or § 1983 claims against state assembly men based on alleged wage and work load discrimination, where legislative budget analyst had substantial input into preparing documents upon which assembly men relied in drafting proposed legislation. Bostick v. Rappleyea, N.D.N.Y.1985, 629 F.Supp. 1328, affirmed 907 F.2d 144. Labor And Employment 2458

3583. ---- Commissioners, state officials, legislative immunity

Investigation of nursing home operator pursued by temporary commission was fully within the powers of the commission so that its chairman, a state legislator, was immune from civil rights action brought against him by the nursing home operator. Bergman v. Stein, S.D.N.Y.1975, 404 F.Supp. 287. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3584. ---- Committee members, state officials, legislative immunity

Where plaintiff circulated a petition to persuade the legislature of a state not to appropriate further funds for a particular legislative committee and in the petition plaintiff charged that the committee in question had used plaintiff as a tool in order to smear a local mayoral candidate and plaintiff indicated that evidence previously given by him to the legislative committee was false, the individual members of the committee and the committee were acting in the sphere of legitimate legislative activity in calling the plaintiff before it and examining him, and this section did not create a civil liability for such conduct. Tenney v. Brandhove, U.S.Cal.1951, 71 S.Ct. 783, 341 U.S. 367, 95 L.Ed. 1019, rehearing denied 72 S.Ct. 20, 342 U.S. 843, 96 L.Ed. 637. Civil Rights 1038; States 28(2); States 34

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Where New York State Select Legislative Committee on Crime investigation was well within bonds of traditional sphere of legislative activity, the committee members were immune from suit, brought under this section, for injunctive relief against enforcement of subpoenas duces tecum, which were issued in course of the authorized, legitimate investigation into child pornography. Star Distributors, Ltd. v. Marino, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1980, 613 F.2d 4. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3584A. ---- Party caucus, state officials, legislative immunity

State party caucus and representative exercised administrative function when they terminated employee allegedly for reporting improprieties in electoral affidavit process, and thus legislative immunity was inapplicable to civil rights action brought by employee, alleging First Amendment retaliatory discharge; decision did not reach beyond single employee, did not eliminate employee's position, did not rely on any broad consideration of policy, and was not directed to creating new policy. Fowler-Nash v. Democratic Caucus of Pa. House of Representatives, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2006, 469 F.3d 328. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3585. ---- Governors, state officials, legislative immunity

Because office of governor is political, discretion vested in chief executive by Constitution and laws of state respecting his official duties is not subject to control or review by courts. Mitchell v. King, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1976, 537 F.2d 385. Constitutional Law 72

Enactment of Puerto Rico statute reducing number of Commissioners of Industrial Commission to five from 25 was legislative rather than administrative act, and Governor thus was protected by absolute legislative immunity from Commissioners' political discrimination claims under §§ 1983 stemming from her signing of such legislation, where impetus for statute was general concern about functioning of Commission as whole, and statute did not favor any Commissioners over others. Torres-Rivera v. Calderon-Serra, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 328 F.Supp.2d 237, affirmed 412 F.3d 205. Civil Rights 1376(3)

The governor of a state, as well as state legislators, are immune from suit under this section for acts or omissions done within the sphere of legitimate executive or legislative activities. Parker v. McKeithen, E.D.La.1971, 330 F.Supp. 435, vacated on other grounds 488 F.2d 553, certiorari denied 95 S.Ct. 67, 419 U.S. 838, 42 L.Ed.2d 65. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3586. ---- Senators, state officials, legislative immunity

Both senators who were members of select committee of Nebraska legislature designed to review operations of criminal and drug divisions in the state patrol and committee counsel were immune from liability under this section for release to news reporting and publishing agencies of a report which was critical of homicide investigation undertaken by city police chief and which was prepared in connection with the committee's investigation of state patrol's review of the matter. Green v. DeCamp, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1980, 612 F.2d 368. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State senator was entitled to absolute legislative immunity from civil rights liability for his role in sponsorship of amendment to state's child support laws, notwithstanding contention that statements made by senator in support of amendment were intended to fraudulently mislead his fellow legislators and that immunity did not extend to legislative actions occurring off senate floor. Larsen v. Early, D.Colo.1994, 842 F.Supp. 1310, affirmed 34 F.3d 1076. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Even if state senator had taken actions to prevent commutation of state prisoner's sentence and had made libelous statements to the press about prisoner's case as an example to support "campaign" to restrict commutation powers of the Governor, the senator was acting within lawful scope of his duties as a member of the California Senate Select Committee on Penal Institutions and as a representative of its constituency and, accordingly, had absolute immunity from prisoner's civil rights suit arising from termination of his minimum security status. Lokey v. Richardson, N.D.Cal.1982, 534 F.Supp. 1015. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3587. ---- Miscellaneous officials, state officials, legislative immunity

Rule of state House of Representatives purporting to ban lobbyists from floor of House and exclude lobbyists from perimeter of House while House was in session was protected from civil rights challenge by legislative immunity; rule affected manner in which House conducted its legislative functions, and claim that rule, as applied, favored public lobbyists over private lobbyists was insufficient to overcome immunity. National Ass'n of Social Workers v. Harwood, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1995, 69 F.3d 622. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Two Illinois legislators enjoyed official immunity with respect to civil complaint charging them with violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, sections 1-7 of Title 15, S.H.A. ch. 38, § 60-3, this section, the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, section 1961 et seq. of Title 18, the commission of common-law torts of fraud, unfair competition, and interference in view of fact that causes of action focused on legislators' attempts to use their legislative positions to influence regulation of currency exchanges, a legitimate legislative activity. Thillens, Inc. v. Community Currency Exchange Ass'n of Illinois, Inc., C.A.7 (Ill.) 1984, 729 F.2d 1128, certiorari dismissed 105 S.Ct. 375, 469 U.S. 976, 83 L.Ed.2d 342. States 28(2)

Even if motivation of certain legislators in supporting bill which provided for annexation of certain territory to a city in violation of that city's agreement with two other cities was suspect, the conduct of the legislators was clearly within the traditional sphere of legislative activity and thus immune from liability for violation of alleged civil rights of one of the cities in question. City of Safety Harbor v. Birchfield, C.A.5 (Fla.) 1976, 529 F.2d 1251. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State legislators were immune from liability in civil rights action brought by prisoners who claimed that California Adult Authority had failed to grant parole or sentence determination in violation of principles and ideas of the state indeterminate sentence law, West's Ann.Cal.Pen.Code, § 1168, and that the legislators and justices had violated oaths of office by permitting the Authority to so act. Johnson v. Reagan, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1975, 524 F.2d 1123. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(8)

County clerk was "state official," immune under Eleventh Amendment from official capacity suit under §§ 1983, claiming that lis pendens procedure, of which clerk was part due to his role in collecting fees, violated homeowner's due process and equal protection rights. Diaz v. Pataki, S.D.N.Y.2005, 368 F.Supp.2d 265. Federal Courts 269

In federal civil rights action challenging Alabama's bar examination and admission process, Alabama's Secretary of State and members of Alabama's House of Representatives and Senate were entitled to absolute legislative immunity to extent that action sought monetary damages against those persons in their individual capacities due to their respective roles in legislative process and enactment of statutes pertaining to admission to bar. McFarland v. Folsom, M.D.Ala.1994, 854 F.Supp. 862. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State legislators were cloaked with legislative immunity with respect to alleged discrimination on the grounds of race against applicant for position as fiscal analyst with legislative committee. Birdsong v. Dirck, E.D.Mo.1984, 633 F.Supp. 54. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3588. Town officials, legislative immunity--Generally

City aldermen were entitled to absolute legislative immunity for introducing and voting for zoning ordinances that would prevent churches from purchasing particular parcels of property in aldermen's wards, in churches' resulting § 1983 action, because such activities were elements of core legislative process and could not be separated from that legislative function; fact that aldermen may have known of churches' requests for special use permits was immaterial. Biblia Abierta v. Banks, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1997, 129 F.3d 899. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Failure of town and its officials to authorize sewer service for landowners was not legislative action, and hence, was not protected by absolute immunity from liability in civil rights action; decision of town and its officials had to do with zoning enforcement rather than with rule making. Front Royal and Warren County Indus. Park Corp. v. Town of Front Royal, Va., C.A.4 (Va.) 1989, 865 F.2d 77, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Issue whether town officials were qualifiedly immune from §§ 1983 claims of town clerk and deputy town clerk, that officials violated their First Amendment speech rights by enacting facilities policy, and retaliated against them for exercising their speech rights, could not be resolved at motion to dismiss phase because of factual disputes. Denton v. McKee, S.D.N.Y.2004, 332 F.Supp.2d 659. Federal Civil Procedure 1831

Town justice's act of proposing budget, which eliminated court assistant and court attendant positions and town supervisor's act of voting on that budget were functionally legislative, as required for protection by absolute legislative immunity, even though their duties as town justice and town supervisor were administrative. Gordon v. Katz, S.D.N.Y.1995, 934 F.Supp. 79, reconsideration denied, affirmed 101 F.3d 1393. Judges 36; Towns 31

Activities of town officials in proposing ordinance setting percentage limitations on number of mobile homes which could be located in town were absolutely immune from liability under this subchapter. Cloutier v. Town of Epping, D.C.N.H.1982, 547 F.Supp. 1232, affirmed 714 F.2d 1184. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3589. ---- Board members, town officials, legislative immunity

Members of town board were not entitled to absolute legislative immunity on plaintiff's § 1983 claim that he was fired in retaliation for constitutionally protected activities, even if subsequent elimination of plaintiff's position as Park Superintendent for town-owned country club was legislative act for which members were entitled to immunity, as earlier termination from position which then remained open at least briefly was administrative act that legislative immunity did not protect. Jessen v. Town of Eastchester, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 114 F.3d 7. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Members of town planning board were not protected by absolute immunity from developer's action alleging that board violated constitutional guarantees of due process and equal protection by imposing "outrageous conditions" on development of subdivision because of racial animus towards developer's purchasers. Cutting v. Muzzey, C.A.1 (N.H.) 1984, 724 F.2d 259. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Members of township board of supervisors were not individually liable to civil rights claimant, who alleged that he was denied use and occupation permit pursuant to established township procedure, in that board members participated in making allegedly unconstitutional zoning policy in legislative capacity, for which they had absolute immunity from liability under § 1983. Forest v. Banko, E.D.Pa.1984, 662 F.Supp. 275. See, also, Herbst v. Daukas, D.Conn.1988, 701 F.Supp. 964. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Members of town board were acting as local legislators in capacity comparable to that of members of state legislature in reducing salaries for town supervisor and his confidential secretary, and in declining to reappoint deputy town attorney, and thus were entitled to absolute immunity from liability under this section for those actions. Dusanenko v. Maloney, S.D.N.Y.1983, 560 F.Supp. 822, affirmed 726 F.2d 82. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3590. ---- Commission members, town officials, legislative immunity

Members of township board of commissioners were not acting in legislative capacity when they voted to disapprove proposed development plan and thus were not entitled to legislative immunity from civil rights claim. Epstein v. Township of Whitehall, E.D.Pa.1988, 693 F.Supp. 309. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Defendant township supervisors and planning commissioners were not subject to being dismissed from civil rights complaint on ground that they were legislators who enjoyed absolute immunity from suit where complaint did not challenge any of the defendants' actions which could be described as legislative in nature, but merely alleged that defendants arbitrarily and capriciously refused to grant plaintiff necessary building permits, and even if those actions were legislative in nature, it was not clear whether doctrine of absolute legislative immunity was applicable to local officials whose duties included legislative tasks. Riccobono v. Whitpain Tp., E.D.Pa.1980, 497 F.Supp. 1364. Federal Civil Procedure 388

3591. Village officials, legislative immunity

Acts of village trustees which resulted in termination of employment of assistant village attorney and two employees of village urban renewal agency, that is, creation of housing and community development agency, transfer of funds of programs of urban renewal agency to village and approval of appointments of individuals to positions that performed duties previously performed by discharged employees were clearly within scope of trustees' authority under village law, and were traditional legislative acts, reflecting policy objectives, and therefore trustees were entitled to absolute immunity from suit under this section by the discharged employees. Goldberg v. Village of Spring Valley, S.D.N.Y.1982, 538 F.Supp. 646. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3592. Zoning, legislative immunity

When ordinance is passed in effort to facilitate enforcement of existing zoning laws, and not to facilitate enactment or amendment of new zoning laws involving broad-based policy or line-drawing determinations, then the action is administrative in nature and not protected by absolute legislative immunity in § 1983 action. Summerchase Ltd. Partnership I v. City of Gonzales, M.D.La.1997, 970 F.Supp. 522. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3593. Zoning officials, legislative immunity

For the purpose of analyzing whether county council's denial of conditional use permit (CUP) to allow operator of commercial wedding business to conduct weddings on beach-front residential property was a legislative act so as to entitle the council members to absolute legislative immunity under § 1983, the decision did not bear all the hallmarks of traditional legislation, where it did not change the county's comprehensive zoning ordinance or the policies underlying it, or affect the county's budgetary priorities or the services the county provided to residents. Kaahumanu v. County of Maui, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 315 F.3d 1215. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County commissioners' actions, in voting to reorganize land use departments and approving unified structure for county development department, were quintessentially legislative functions and, thus, commissioners were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 suit brought by county license investigator whose position was eliminated during reorganization. Macuba v. Deboer, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1999, 193 F.3d 1316, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 210 F.3d 395. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Rezoning ordinances that prevented churches from buying certain property for use as church sites were legislation, not administrative or executive acts, for purpose of aldermen's claim of legislative immunity in churches' § 1983 action arising from aldermen's introduction and support of ordinances, because, even if ordinances presently applied to limited group of people, they created neutral, prospective rules that applied to all current and future owners of property. Biblia Abierta v. Banks, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1997, 129 F.3d 899. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Actions of city's board of aldermen members in revoking building permit previously issued to developer and in refusing to accept further permit applications from developer were not legislative actions entitled to absolute immunity in action brought by developer under § 1983 and Fair Housing Act (FHA); each of challenged actions involved enforcement of existing zoning laws and affected only the developer. Summerchase Ltd. Partnership I v. City of Gonzales, M.D.La.1997, 970 F.Supp. 522. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Zoning officials in their official capacities, township zoning board, and township were not entitled to absolute immunity, in landowner's §§ 1983 lawsuit under Fourteenth Amendment alleging violation of its procedural and substantive due process rights, since planning board as governmental agency had no immunity whatsoever. Lonzetta Trucking and Excavating Co. v. Schan, C.A.3 (Pa.) 2005, 144 Fed.Appx. 206, 2005 WL 730363, Unreported, on remand 2005 WL 3277996. Civil Rights 1376(4)

XXXII. QUALIFIED IMMUNITY GENERALLY

<Subdivision Index>

Absolute immunity distinguished 3624
Access to courts, prison officials 3729
Access to mail, prison officials 3730
Affirmative action, employers 3686
Affirmative defense 3627-3629
Affirmative defense - Generally 3627
Affirmative defense - Burden of proof 3628
Affirmative defense - Clearly established right 3627a
Affirmative defense - Dismissal motion 3629
Agents 3663
Application for arrest warrants, police officers 3717
Applications for search warrant, child welfare workers 3670
Applications for search warrant, police officers 3720
Arrests generally, police officers 3710
Assaults on students, education and school officials 3675
Assaults, prison officials 3731
Attorneys General 3664
Bank regulators 3666
Banks and banking officials 3665
Bar admission committees 3667
Building inspectors 3668
Burden of proof, affirmative defense 3628
Burden of proof, summary judgment 3640
Capacity 3660
Child welfare workers 3669, 3670
Child welfare workers - Generally 3669
Child welfare workers - Applications for search warrant 3670
Clearly established right 3624a

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Clearly established right, affirmative defense 3627a

Common law 3623
Confiscation of property, police officers 3721
Conservation officers 3691a, 3691b
Conservation officers - Generally 3691a
Conservation officers - Excessive force 3691b
Considerations governing generally 3631
Conspiracy 3661
Contractors 3671
County officials 3672
Court reporters 3673
Custom or usage 3634
Discharges or dismissals, employers 3688
Disciplinary proceedings, prison officials 3732
Discretionary duties 3658, 3659
Discretionary duties - Generally 3658
Discretionary duties - Ministerial duties distinguished 3659
Dismissal motion, affirmative defense 3629
Education and school officials 3652, 3674-3680
Education and school officials - Generally 3674
Education and school officials - Assaults on students 3675
Education and school officials - Failure to report 3676

Education and school officials - Freedom of speech 3680
Education and school officials - Handicapped students 3677
Education and school officials - Medical care 3678
Education and school officials - Searches 3679
Education and school officials - Summary judgment 3652
Employees 3681
Employers 3682-3691
Employers - Generally 3682
Employers - Affirmative action 3686
Employers - Discharges or dismissals 3688
Employers - Equal protection 3683
Employers - First Amendment 3685
Employers - Harassment 3690
Employers - Hiring 3687
Employers - Promotions or demotions 3689
Employers - Racial discrimination 3684
Employers - Suspension 3691
Employment officials, summary judgment 3646
Environment officials 3692, 3693
Environment officials - Generally 3692
Environment officials - Warrantless searches 3693
Equal protection, employers 3683
Equitable relief 3653, 3654
Equitable relief - Generally 3653
Equitable relief - Injunctions 3654
Evidence, police officers 3715
Excessive force, conservation officers 3691b

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Excessive use of force, police officers 3713
Executive officials 3694
Extension of time to file motion, summary judgment 3644
Facts of each case as controlling 3638
Failure to report, education and school officials 3676
False arrests and imprisonment, police officers 3716
First Amendment, employers 3685
Foster parents 3695
Freedom of religion, prison officials 3727
Freedom of speech, education and school officials 3680
Freedom of speech, municipal or city officials 3705
Freedom of speech, police officers 3708
Governmental entities 3656
Governors 3696
Handicapped students, education and school officials 3677

Harassment, employers 3690
Hiring, employers 3687
Hospital officials, summary judgment 3647
Individual capacity 3660
Injunctions, equitable relief 3654
Investigations, police officers 3712
Investigators 3697
Issues of material fact, summary judgment 3645
Judges 3698
Knowledge 3632
Laches as bar to raising defense, time for raising defense 3626
Legal question 3637
License officials 3699
Mayors, municipal or city officials 3704
Medical care, education and school officials 3678
Medical care, prison officials 3733
Medical examiners 3700
Mental health officials 3701
Mental hospital officials 3702
Ministerial duties distinguished, discretionary duties 3659
Motive or intent 3633

Municipal or city officials 3648, 3703-3705
    Municipal or city officials - Generally 3703
    Municipal or city officials - Freedom of speech 3705
    Municipal or city officials - Mayors 3704
    Municipal or city officials - Summary judgment 3648
Municipalities or cities 3657
Official capacity 3660
Parole officers 3706
Parole officers, summary judgment 3649
Particular claims 3743
Permit officials 3699
Persons entitled to qualified immunity generally 3662
Police officers 3650, 3707-3723

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police officers - Generally 3707
Police officers - Application for arrest warrants 3717
Police officers - Applications for search warrant 3720
Police officers - Arrests generally 3710
Police officers - Confiscation of property 3721
Police officers - Evidence 3715
Police officers - Excessive use of force 3713
Police officers - False arrests and imprisonment 3716

Police officers - Freedom of speech 3708
Police officers - Investigations 3712
Police officers - Related offenses 3714
Police officers - Reliance 3722
Police officers - Right to bear arms 3709
Police officers - Searches generally 3719
Police officers - Stops 3711
Police officers - Summary judgment 3650
Police officers - Training and supervision 3723
Police officers - Warrantless arrests 3718
Practice and procedure 3742a
Pretrial detainees, prison officials 3728
Prima facie evidence, summary judgment 3642
Prison officials 3724-3737
Prison officials - Generally 3724
Prison officials - Access to courts 3729
Prison officials - Access to mail 3730
Prison officials - Assaults 3731
Prison officials - Disciplinary proceedings 3732
Prison officials - Freedom of religion 3727
Prison officials - Medical care 3733

Prison officials - Pretrial detainees 3728
Prison officials - Searches 3734
Prison officials - Sexual harassment 3725
Prison officials - Smoking in prison 3736
Prison officials - Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners 3735
Prison officials - State-employed correctional officers 3726
Prison officials - Training and supervision 3737
Prison officials, summary judgment 3651
Private defendants 3738
Probation officers 3739
Promotions or demotions, employers 3689
Prosecutors 3740
Purpose 3622
Qualified immunity generally 3621
Question of law 3637
Racial discrimination, employers 3684
Related offenses, police officers 3714
Reliance 3635
Reliance, police officers 3722
Religious freedom, prison officials 3727

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Retrospective relief 3655

Right to bear arms, police officers 3709
School officials 3652, 3674-3680
School officials, summary judgment 3652
Searches, education and school officials 3679
Searches generally, police officers 3719
Searches, prison officials 3734
Sexual harassment, prison officials 3725
Shifting of burden, summary judgment 3641
Smoking in prison, prison officials 3736
Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners, prison officials 3735
Special relationship 3636
Standard of proof, summary judgment 3643
State-employed correctional officers, prison officials 3726
Stops, police officers 3711
Summary judgment 3639-3652
Summary judgment - Generally 3639
Summary judgment - Burden of proof 3640
Summary judgment - Employment officials 3646
Summary judgment - Extension of time to file motion 3644
Summary judgment - Hospital officials 3647
Summary judgment - Issues of material fact 3645

Summary judgment - Municipal or city officials 3648
Summary judgment - Parole officers 3649
Summary judgment - Police officers 3650
Summary judgment - Prima facie evidence 3642
Summary judgment - Prison officials 3651
Summary judgment - School officials 3652
Summary judgment - Shifting of burden 3641
Summary judgment - Standard of proof 3643
Supervision, police officers 3723
Supervision, prison officials 3737
Suspension, employers 3691
Time for raising defense 3625, 3626
Time for raising defense - Generally 3625
Time for raising defense - Laches as bar to raising defense 3626
Training and supervision, police officers 3723
Training and supervision, prison officials 3737
Utilities officials 3741
Waiver of defense 3630
Warrantless arrests, police officers 3718
Warrantless searches, environment officials 3693
Zoning officials 3742

3621. Qualified immunity generally

Qualified immunity strikes balance between compensating those who had been injured by official conduct and protecting government's ability to perform its traditional functions; in short, qualified immunity acts to safeguard government, and thereby to protect public at large, not to benefit its agents. Wyatt v. Cole, U.S.Miss.1992, 112

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

S.Ct. 1827, 504 U.S. 158, 118 L.Ed.2d 504, on remand 994 F.2d 1113. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity doctrine recognized that officials can act without fear of harassing litigation only if they reasonably can anticipate when their conduct may give rise to liability for damages and only if unjustified lawsuits are quickly terminated. Davis v. Scherer, U.S.Fla.1984, 104 S.Ct. 3012, 468 U.S. 183, 82 L.Ed.2d 139, rehearing denied 105 S.Ct. 26, 468 U.S. 1226, 82 L.Ed.2d 919. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Although qualified immunity is a question of law determined by the court, when qualified immunity depends on disputed issues of fact, those issues must be determined by the jury. Monteiro v. City of Elizabeth, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2006, 436 F.3d 397, petition for certiorari filed 2006 WL 1557608. Officers And Public Employees 119

When deciding whether a public official is entitled to qualified immunity, Court of Appeals simply assumes the disputed facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, and then decides, under those facts, whether the defendants violated any of the plaintiff's clearly established constitutional rights. Board v. Farnham, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 394 F.3d 469. Civil Rights 1376(2); Federal Courts 791

Where defendants continue to assert qualified immunity after undergoing trial on § 1983 claim, post-trial grant of immunity would still confer benefit by shielding them from any liability for monetary damages awarded by jury. Acevedo-Garcia v. Monroig, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 2003, 351 F.3d 547. Civil Rights 1376(1)

On review of district court's ruling on motion to dismiss § 1983 action on qualified immunity grounds, whether complaint alleges violation of clearly established right is question of law which Court of Appeals reviews de novo, accepting facts alleged as true and drawing all reasonable inferences therefrom in plaintiff's favor. Snider v. Jefferson State Community College, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 344 F.3d 1325, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 90 Fed.Appx. 391, 2003 WL 23190922. Federal Courts 776; Federal Courts 797

The court, in evaluating a claim of qualified immunity in a § 1983 action, must first determine whether the defendant's alleged conduct constituted a constitutional violation; if so, the defendant is entitled to qualified immunity only if the constitutional right that he allegedly violated was not clearly established. Doe ex rel. Doe v. Hawaii Dept. of Educ., C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 334 F.3d 906, on remand 351 F.Supp.2d 998. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

The initial step in evaluating a qualified immunity defense is determining whether the complaint states a claim for violation of a constitutional right. Allison v. Snyder, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 332 F.3d 1076, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 486, 540 U.S. 985, 157 L.Ed.2d 377. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Doctrine of qualified immunity offers public officials defense against liability under § 1983. Guzman-Rivera v. Rivera-Cruz, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1996, 98 F.3d 664. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity protects government officials from insubstantial suits and harassing litigation while not foreclosing suits for damages which may be the only realistic avenue for vindication of constitutional rights. Runge v. Dove, C.A.8 (S.D.) 1988, 857 F.2d 469. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Whether qualified immunity applied to preclude arresting officer's §§ 1983 liability for false arrest could not be decided on motion to dismiss, given factual questions as to whether arrestee's ambiguous response when officer addressed him by using narcotics suspect's name, in attempt to determine whether arrestee was suspect, provided probable cause to arrest in light of information possessed by officers about suspect, and as to reasonableness of officers' actions in immediately attempting to take arrestee into custody. Williams v. City of Mount Vernon, S.D.N.Y.2006, 2006 WL 800963. Federal Civil Procedure 1831

State officials are not entitled to qualified immunity from §§ 1983 liability simply because no case with materially similar facts has held that their conduct was unconstitutional, in that the standard is one of fair warning, and when the contours of the violated right have been defined with sufficient specificity that a state official had fair warning that her conduct deprived a victim of his rights, she is not entitled to qualified immunity. Myers v. Baca, C.D.Cal.2004, 325 F.Supp.2d 1095. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualified immunity shields government officials from liability under § 1983 insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Tyson v. Willauer, D.Conn.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 190. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Typical motion to dismiss standard, rather than heightened pleading standard of Judge v. City of Lowell, would be applied in considering motion to dismiss § 1983 action involving qualified immunity defense. Torres Ocasio v. Melendez, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 283 F.Supp.2d 505. Civil Rights 1398

Procedures regarding qualified immunity for alleged civil rights violations under § 1983 allow for judicial review, via certiorari, on the qualified immunity issue; thus, in order to avoid subjecting state officials to unnecessary and burdensome discovery or trial proceedings, district courts and courts of appeal must rule on the qualified immunity issue from the beginning, focusing on the characterization of the constitutional right in controversy and deciding, whether from the facts alleged in the complaint, a constitutional violation could be found. Hernandez Carrasquillo v. Rivera Rodriguez, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 281 F.Supp.2d 329. Federal Courts 452

Building inspector did not show prima facie evidence that his conduct in making numerous warrantless entries into lessees' offices was objectively reasonable, and, although inspector showed that it was objectively reasonable to submit purported code violations to superior agency, lessees presented sufficient evidence that inspector's actions were motivated by an intent to unfairly target or harass them; thus, building inspector was not entitled to summary judgment on his qualified immunity defense to equal protection claim of lessees, who showed that they were treated differently than other similarly situated businesses and proprietors, and that their equal protection rights were "clearly established" at the time of inspector's conduct. Mimics, Inc. v. Village of Angel Fire, D.N.M.2003, 277 F.Supp.2d 1131, affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded 394 F.3d 836. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Because qualified immunity under § 1983 is more than just affirmative defense to liability but instead immunity to lawsuits and their attendant burdens, early resolution of its availability is encouraged. Vinagro v. Reitsma, D.R.I.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 425. Civil Rights 1376(1)

District court does not reach qualified immunity issue if claims against defendants are not actionable. James By and Through James v. Unified School Dist. No. 512, D.Kan.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1407. Officers And Public Employees 114

Doctrine of qualified immunity is judicial construction aimed at balancing competing policies of vindication of constitutional rights by those aggrieved and preservation of independent decisionmaking by public officials who are discharging their duty. Carrigan v. State of Del., D.Del.1997, 957 F.Supp. 1376. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Public officers are entitled to qualified immunity from claims for monetary damages if they can prove that their actions did not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have been aware. Garrett v. Angelone, W.D.Va.1996, 940 F.Supp. 933, affirmed 107 F.3d 865. Civil Rights 1376(2)

"Qualified immunity" shields government officials performing discretionary functions from liability for suits brought against them in their individual capacities unless their conduct violates clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Callis v. Sellars, S.D.Tex.1996, 931 F.Supp. 504. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Qualified immunity analysis in § 1983 claim requires courts to determine whether plaintiff has alleged violation of constitutional right, and whether that plaintiff has shown that applicable constitutional standards were clearly established at time of alleged misconduct. Flenner v. Sheahan, N.D.Ill.1996, 920 F.Supp. 905, reversed 107 F.3d 459. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity shields public officials from damages unless their conduct was unreasonable in light of clearly established law. Lanigan v. Village of East Hazel Crest, N.D.Ill.1996, 913 F.Supp. 1202. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Generally, government officials performing discretionary functions are accorded qualified immunity and thereby shielded from civil damages liability insofar as they do not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known or as long as their actions could reasonably have been thought consistent with rights they are alleged to have violated. Field v. Kirton, D.Conn.1994, 856 F.Supp. 88. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Arresting officer's determination that he had probable cause to arrest sexual assault suspect was objectively reasonable, and thus he was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability arising out of allegedly false arrest; officer was entitled to rely on victim's complaint, absent showing that it was inherently incredible. Obilo v. City University of City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1809471, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3622. Purpose, qualified immunity generally

The primary goal of qualified immunity to a § 1983 action is to permit government officials to act in areas of legal uncertainty without undue fear of subsequent liability. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity, for purposes of § 1983 action, is designed to shield from civil liability all but the plainly incompetent government officials or those who knowingly violate the law. Brady v. Fort Bend County, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1995, 58 F.3d 173, rehearing en banc granted, dismissed. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Underlying doctrine of qualified immunity for § 1983 purposes is desire to avoid overdeterrence of energetic law enforcement by subjecting governmental actors to high risk of liability. Rowland v. Perry, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1994, 41 F.3d 167. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Grant of qualified immunity to government officials ensures that the officials can perform their duties free from specter of endless and debilitating lawsuits. Torchinsky v. Siwinski, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1991, 942 F.2d 257. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Under qualified immunity doctrine, government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known; doctrine recognizes that government officials need to perform their duties without fear of litigation and to be able to reasonably anticipate if their actions will give rise to liability for damages. McCrea v. Zieba, N.D.Ohio 1996, 955 F.Supp. 801. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity protects government officials performing discretionary functions from civil liability if their conduct violates no clearly established statutory or constitutional rights, and seeks to protect government officials from cost of trial and burdens of broad reaching discovery. L.Q.A. By and Through Arrington v. Eberhart, M.D.Ala.1996, 920 F.Supp. 1208, affirmed 111 F.3d 897. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity is designed to protect public official from liability in his or her individual capacity where official's conduct concerns performance of discretionary functions and does not violate clearly establish statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would know. Gonzales v. Galveston Independent School Dist., S.D.Tex.1994, 865 F.Supp. 1241. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualified immunity acts as means to avoid deterring capable persons from accepting public office and encouraging action on pressing social issues. Han v. Department of Justice, D.Hawai'i 1993, 824 F.Supp. 1480, affirmed 45 F.3d 333. Officers And Public Employees 114

3623. Common law, qualified immunity generally

Qualified immunity covers civil liability for claims brought against police officers under both § 1983 and common law. Capone v. Marinelli, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1989, 868 F.2d 102. Civil Rights 1376(6); Municipal Corporations 747(3)

3624. Absolute immunity distinguished, qualified immunity generally

Presumption is that qualified rather than absolute immunity is sufficient to protect government officials in exercise of their duties. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1407

When determining which type of immunity government official enjoys, qualified or absolute, Court of Appeals looks to nature of function that official was performing in particular case; if government official's function was quasi-judicial, official enjoys absolute immunity, while if function was administrative or investigatory, official enjoys only qualified immunity. Henderson v. Lopez, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1986, 790 F.2d 44. Officers And Public Employees 114

Qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 is entitlement not to stand trial, not defense from liability. Leisure v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 848. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity is not absolute. Comfort v. Town of Pittsfield, D.Me.1996, 924 F.Supp. 1219. Officers And Public Employees 114

"Absolute immunity" is complete shield for defendants sued under § 1983; "qualified immunity" affords defendants immunity from suit if their conduct was objectively reasonable. Redwood Village Partnership v. Graham, D.N.D.1993, 819 F.Supp. 867, affirmed 26 F.3d 839, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 423, 513 U.S. 962, 130 L.Ed.2d 337. Civil Rights 1376(1)

An allegation that a police officer destroyed exculpatory evidence by discarding result receipts from an alcohol breath testing machine is considered under a qualified, as opposed to absolute, immunity analysis, in a lawsuit under § 1983. Ankele v. Hambrick, E.D.Pa.2003, 2003 WL 21223821, Unreported, affirmed 136 Fed.Appx. 551, 2005 WL 1532436. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3624A. Clearly established right, qualified immunity generally

Rights of inmates to practice their religion, to communicate with the outside world, and to compile a legal defense were clearly established rights any reasonable person would be aware of, and sheriff was accordingly not entitled to qualified immunity at motion to dismiss stage on inmate's claims that sheriff conspired to violate those rights. Yoder v. Ryan, N.D.Ill.2004, 318 F.Supp.2d 601. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Civil rights activists who brought § 1983 action against police officers, stemming from their arrests while attempting to film traffic stops, adequately alleged in non-conclusory fashion that officers' purportedly improper conduct while making arrests violated their clearly-established rights to criticize and journalistically record traffic stops, and thus officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to activists' First Amendment retaliation claim; criticism of officers was clear constitutional right, officers' alleged threats and physical attacks on activists would have chilled persons of ordinary firmness from engaging in protected activity, and officers allegedly took their actions immediately after activists made political speech criticizing officers from public sidewalk. McCormick v. City of Lawrence, D.Kan.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 1292, amended 289 F.Supp.2d 1264, affirmed 130 Fed.Appx. 987, 2005 WL 1221632. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1395(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity from an award of any damages at all, including nominal damages for any violations of Native American prisoner's rights under Free Exercise Clause of First Amendment, where none of the First Amendment claims made prisoner was founded upon clearly established law. Wilson v. Moore, N.D.Fla.2003, 270 F.Supp.2d 1328. Civil Rights 1376(7)

In undertaking qualified immunity analysis with respect to § 1983 claims against government officials, district court must first determine whether plaintiff has shown violation of constitutionally protected right, and if so, court must examine whether right was clearly established. M.W. ex rel. T.W. v. Madison County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 737. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

To show that right was clearly established, such that official is not entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claims, right allegedly violated cannot be asserted at high level of generality, but instead, must have been "clearly established" in more particularized, and hence more relevant, sense, i.e., contours of right must be sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. M.W. ex rel. T.W. v. Madison County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 737. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3625. Time for raising defense, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Government official may not assert defense of qualified immunity at trial in § 1983 action if official did not first assert defense in pretrial dispositive motion, absent special circumstances, such as when detailed factual findings significantly affect qualified immunity inquiry. Falkner v. Houston, D.Neb.1997, 974 F.Supp. 757. Federal Civil Procedure 1942

Because qualified immunity is immunity from suit rather than mere defense to liability, any claims to immunity are to be resolved at earliest possible stage in litigation before any other action is taken by district court. Swenson v. Culberson County, W.D.Tex.1996, 925 F.Supp. 478. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity issue should be resolved at earliest possible stage of litigation. Spiegel v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1996, 920 F.Supp. 891, affirmed 196 F.3d 717, as amended, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 2688, 530 U.S. 1243, 147 L.Ed.2d 961. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Motion to dismiss based on qualified immunity may be raised at any time in employment discrimination action against government officials. Verney v. Dodaro, M.D.Pa.1995, 872 F.Supp. 188, affirmed 79 F.3d 1140. Federal Civil Procedure 1822.1

Court must decide defense of qualified immunity from civil rights violations at earliest opportunity as qualified immunity is immunity from suit rather that mere defense to liability. Orozco v. County of Yolo, E.D.Cal.1993, 814 F.Supp. 885. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3626. ---- Laches as bar to raising defense, time for raising defense, qualified immunity generally

City police officers were not barred by laches from asserting claim of qualified immunity in connection with warrantless search of social club, even though availability of privilege was known to them at least year prior to their motion, based on Court of Appeals finding of qualified immunity on part of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents who had accompanied them on search. Washington Square Post No. 1212 v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1992, 808 F.Supp. 264. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3627. Affirmative defense, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Qualified immunity is an affirmative defense to § 1983 action that may be waived. Bogle v. McClure, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 332 F.3d 1347, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 77 Fed.Appx. 510, 2003 WL 21804722, certiorari dismissed 124 S.Ct. 1168, 540 U.S. 1158, 157 L.Ed.2d 1059. Civil Rights 1398

Government officials performing discretionary functions are entitled to plead qualified immunity as affirmative defense to civil rights claim and are shielded from liability if their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known; moreover, even if permissible scope of activity is clearly defined, qualified immunity protects official if it was objectively reasonable for him to believe his acts were lawful. Wachtler v. County of Herkimer, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 35 F.3d 77. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Although qualified immunity is affirmative defense, no principle forbids court to notice that such defense exists, is bound to be raised, and is certain to succeed when raised. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1994, 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 740, 513 U.S. 1085, 130 L.Ed.2d 642, on remand 1996 WL 10899. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Affirmative defense of qualified immunity is available to all government officials, including police officers, in § 1983 action. England v. Hendricks, C.A.10 (Utah) 1989, 880 F.2d 281, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1130, 493 U.S. 1078, 107 L.Ed.2d 1036. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity constitutes an affirmative defense that the defendant official has the burden of pleading. Mason v. Arizona, D.Ariz.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 807. Civil Rights 1398

Qualified immunity is affirmative defense against § 1983 claims, which provides immunity from suit, not merely from liability. James By and Through James v. Unified School Dist. No. 512, D.Kan.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1407. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity is affirmative defense to § 1983 liability. McCrea v. Zieba, N.D.Ohio 1996, 955 F.Supp. 801. Civil Rights 1376(1)

In civil rights cases, qualified immunity determines defendant's immunity from his or her ability to avoid trial altogether, rather than his or her immunity from damages. Kelly v. Foti, E.D.La.1994, 870 F.Supp. 126, affirmed in part and remanded 77 F.3d 819, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 85 F.3d 627. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity is immunity from suit, rather than mere defense to liability. Bapat v. Connecticut Dept. of Health Services, D.Conn.1992, 815 F.Supp. 525. Civil Rights 1376(1)

If § 1983 plaintiff seeks damages from government official in that official's individual capacity, official may raise affirmative defense of qualified immunity. Datz v. Hutson, N.D.Ga.1992, 806 F.Supp. 982, affirmed 14 F.3d 58. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity is an affirmative defense that must be pleaded by the defendant. Gavrilles v. O'Connor, D.C.Mass.1984, 579 F.Supp. 301. Civil Rights 1398

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

To extent that county board members and village trustees were acting in administrative rather than legislative capacity, they enjoyed only qualified immunity, which was affirmative defense to be pleaded by particular defendant. LaSalle Nat. Bank v. Lake County, N.D.Ill.1984, 579 F.Supp. 8. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3627A. ---- Clearly established right, affirmative defense, qualified immunity generally

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by allegedly transsexual inmate who was refused medical treatment in violation of the Eighth Amendment; although officials' conduct comported with prison policy of providing treatment to inmates who were diagnosed with gender identity disorder (GID) prior to incarceration, but not those who were diagnosed after incarceration, officials' conduct in denying inmate treatment was not objectively reasonable in light of clearly established law. Brooks v. Berg, N.D.N.Y.2003, 270 F.Supp.2d 302, vacated in part 289 F.Supp.2d 286. Civil Rights 1376(7)

To overcome defendants' claim to qualified immunity, § 1983 plaintiff must claim violation of a right pursuant to a statute or the Constitution which is clearly established so that objectively, reasonable officer would have known of it. Echtenkamp v. Loudon County Public Schools, E.D.Va.2003, 263 F.Supp.2d 1043. Civil Rights 1376(2)

The final steps in the qualified immunity analysis in a § 1983 action require the court to determine whether the right police officer allegedly violated was a clearly established constitutional right of which a reasonable person would have known, and, if so whether the officer's actions were objectively unreasonable in light of the right. Fultz v. Whittaker, W.D.Ky.2003, 261 F.Supp.2d 767, appeal dismissed 88 Fed.Appx. 896, 2004 WL 360389. Civil Rights 1376(6)

For a right to be clearly established, for qualified immunity purposes in a § 1983 action, the contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right; this is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in the light of pre-existing law the unlawfulness must be apparent and officials can still be on notice that their conduct violates established law even in novel factual circumstances. Fultz v. Whittaker, W.D.Ky.2003, 261 F.Supp.2d 767, appeal dismissed 88 Fed.Appx. 896, 2004 WL 360389. Civil Rights 1376(2)

At the time of arrest giving rise to arrestee's § 1983 action, the law was clearly established, for purposes of qualified immunity, that a police officer should use no more force than necessary to effect an arrest. Fultz v. Whittaker, W.D.Ky.2003, 261 F.Supp.2d 767, appeal dismissed 88 Fed.Appx. 896, 2004 WL 360389. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3628. ---- Burden of proof, affirmative defense, qualified immunity generally

In civil rights action which plaintiff alleged lack of probable cause for arrest and use of excessive force during arrest, plaintiff was not required to prove absence of qualified immunity by arresting officer; officers did not raise qualified immunity defense and both parties agreed that no qualified immunity issue existed. Tatro v. Kervin, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1994, 41 F.3d 9. Civil Rights 1407

Qualified immunity is affirmative defense, and burden of proving defense lies with official asserting it. Houghton v. South, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1992, 965 F.2d 1532. Officers And Public Employees 119

Qualified good-faith immunity which protects a police officer under this section is an affirmative defense and must be pled by officer claiming it. Satchell v. Dilworth, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1984, 745 F.2d 781. Civil Rights 1398

Defendant under this section retains burden of pleading qualified immunity defense, and proving either that the law

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

was not clearly established at time of plaintiff's alleged injury, or, if the law was clearly established, that he neither knew nor should have known of the relevant legal standard due to extraordinary circumstances. Alexander v. Alexander, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1983, 706 F.2d 751, on remand 573 F.Supp. 373. Civil Rights 1398; Civil Rights 1407

It is plaintiff's burden in § 1983 action, in opposing legitimate qualified immunity defense, to point to cases of Supreme Court and Court of Appeals demonstrating that her rights purportedly violated were clearly established, in light of facts and circumstances of her particular case. Hale v. Vance, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 725. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1407

After public official properly raises the defense of qualified immunity, the plaintiff initially bears the burden of showing the violation of a clearly established federal right; if plaintiff makes such showing, ultimate burden of persuasion switches back to the defendant official. Mason v. Arizona, D.Ariz.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 807. Civil Rights 1407

To assert qualified immunity in § 1983 action, defendants must show that they were acting within scope of their discretionary authority when allegedly wrongful activities occurred, and once this has been shown, burden shifts and plaintiff must show lack of good faith on individual defendants' part; plaintiff can meet this burden by alleging that individual defendants' actions violated clearly established constitutional law or that individual defendants' objective intent was to harm plaintiff, regardless of state of law at time of conduct. Coletta v. City of North Bay Village, S.D.Fla.1997, 962 F.Supp. 1486. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1407

In § 1983 action, it was not burden of defendants claiming qualified immunity to demonstrate that the law was clearly established in their favor; rather, plaintiff had heavy burden of demonstrating substantial correspondence between conduct in question and prior law establishing that defendants' actions were clearly prohibited. James By and Through James v. Unified School Dist. No. 512, D.Kan.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1407. Civil Rights 1407

Section 1983 litigant must overcome onerous burden of defeating qualified immunity defense to recover monetary damages from pocket of government official. Wallace v. City of Montgomery, M.D.Ala.1996, 956 F.Supp. 965. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3629. ---- Dismissal motion, affirmative defense, qualified immunity generally

Allegations that police officer punched arrestee in the face, without first identifying himself as police officer and without preceding physical force on arrestee's part, and caused arrestee physical injury necessitating medical treatment supported arrestee's §§ 1983 claim for use of excessive force, and therefore officer was not entitled to dismissal for failure to state claim based on qualified immunity, notwithstanding officer's different version of incident. Williams v. City of Mount Vernon, S.D.N.Y.2006, 2006 WL 800963. Civil Rights 1395(6)

Officials of New Mexico Commission for the Blind Adult Orientation Center (AOC) were qualifiedly immune from former residents' §§ 1983 claims of deprivation of property without due process and denial of equal protection, inasmuch as former residents failed to provide any responsive argument or authority to officials' assertion of qualified immunity in motion to dismiss, and there was no reason why it would be improper to apply qualified immunity defense. Baumeister v. New Mexico Com'n for the Blind, D.N.M.2006, 425 F.Supp.2d 1250. Federal Civil Procedure 1752.1

Qualified immunity did not apply at motion-to-dismiss stage of §§ 1983 action brought against officials of Puerto Rico agency by 19 former employees, given that former employees asserted viable claims that their First Amendment and equal protection rights were violated as a result of former employees' termination, and, viewing those allegations in the most favorable light, court could not conclude that rights implicated were not clearly established. Acevedo-Orama v. Rodriguez-Rivera, D.Puerto Rico 2005, 389 F.Supp.2d 238. Federal Civil

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Procedure 1752.1

Village's chief of police was not entitled to qualified immunity from black, former police dispatcher's civil rights action alleging race discrimination claim, on ground that former dispatcher's constitutional rights were not violated, or that her version of events was wrong; rather, former dispatcher's version of events were presumed true on chief's motion to dismiss on basis of qualified immunity. Dolson v. Village of Washingtonville, S.D.N.Y.2005, 382 F.Supp.2d 598. Civil Rights 1407

Although qualified immunity is affirmative defense, it is one that may, in some circumstances, be raised and decided on motion to dismiss before parties have commenced discovery. Connor v. Foster, N.D.Ill.1993, 833 F.Supp. 727. Federal Civil Procedure 1788.6

3630. Waiver of defense, qualified immunity generally

Like absolute immunity, qualified immunity from a civil rights action is effectively lost if a case is erroneously permitted to go to trial. Saucier v. Katz, U.S.2001, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 533 U.S. 194, 150 L.Ed.2d 272, on remand 262 F.3d 897. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Police officers waived claim of qualified immunity as grounds for judgment as matter of law at trial of action by mother of suspect killed by officers under § 1983, alleging excessive use of force, by not raising claim on motion for judgment as matter of law, even though they had raised claim in pretrial motion for summary judgment. Isom v. Town of Warren, Rhode Island, C.A.1 (R.I.) 2004, 360 F.3d 7. Federal Civil Procedure 2602

Psychiatrist, director of administrative services, and supervisor of psychiatric care unit at correctional center waived qualified immunity defense to inmate's claim that he was deprived of liberty without due process through forcible administration of psychotropic medications where they did not press defense in any pretrial motions, at pretrial conference, or at trial. Maul v. Constan, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1991, 928 F.2d 784. Federal Civil Procedure 751

Entitlement to qualified immunity in civil rights action is an immunity from suit, rather than a mere defense to liability and, like absolute immunity, is effectively lost if case is permitted to go to trial erroneously. Alvarado v. Picur, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1988, 859 F.2d 448, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1373

Government official's entitlement to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim is immunity from suit rather than mere defense to liability, and like absolute immunity, it is effectively lost if case is erroneously permitted to go to trial. Rapkin v. Rocque, D.Conn.2002, 228 F.Supp.2d 142. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Qualified immunity privilege is immunity from § 1983 suit, rather than mere defense to liability; like absolute immunity, it is effectively lost if case is erroneously permitted to go to trial. Castaldo v. Stone, D.Colo.2001, 192 F.Supp.2d 1124, reconsideration denied 191 F.Supp.2d 1196. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Because qualified immunity is immunity from suit rather than mere defense to § 1983 liability, it is effectively lost if case is erroneously permitted to go to trial. Smith v. Tolley, E.D.Va.1997, 960 F.Supp. 977. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Prison nurse waived defense of qualified immunity in inmate's civil rights suit, where, after raising general immunity as defense in answer, she failed to raise qualified immunity defense in form of motion during years of pretrial litigation, she did not seek to establish qualified immunity defense during trial, and her proposed jury instructions did not include request to charge on issue of qualified immunity. Blissett v. Eisensmidt, N.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 449. Estoppel 52.10(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3631. Considerations governing generally, qualified immunity generally

County chancery clerk was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to deputy clerk's §§ 1983 claims for violations of her First and Fourteenth Amendment rights based upon alleged constructive discharge; deputy clerk offered no facts suggesting that her free speech rights were violated, or that chancery clerk sought to avoid providing her with pretermination procedures. Rutland v. Pepper, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2005, 404 F.3d 921. Civil Rights 1376(10)

When determining whether a defendant is entitled to qualified immunity in a § 1983 action, court ordinarily begins with a two-step test; first, court determines whether the conduct attributed to defendant violated federal law, and then determines whether that right was clearly established. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity from a § 1983 action is analyzed from the perspective of the defendant at the time of the challenged conduct. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Courts evaluating § 1983 claims based on allegedly unconstitutional conduct by state actors should conduct a two-prong inquiry to determine whether the state actors are entitled to qualified immunity: the first inquiry must be whether a constitutional right would have been violated on the facts alleged and, if a violation could be made out on a favorable view of the parties' submissions, the next sequential step is to ask whether the right was clearly established. McClendon v. City of Columbia, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2002, 305 F.3d 314, certiorari denied 123 S.Ct. 1355, 537 U.S. 1232, 155 L.Ed.2d 196. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether allegations by § 1983 plaintiff are sufficient to overcome defendant's defense of qualified immunity, court must determine whether plaintiff has alleged violation of clearly established constitutional right, if plaintiff fails, defendant is entitled to qualified immunity, but if plaintiff is successful, issue becomes objective legal reasonableness of defendant's conduct under circumstances. Baker v. Putnal, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1996, 75 F.3d 190 . Civil Rights 1376(2)

Supervisor sued in individual capacity in federal civil rights action is entitled to qualified immunity unless reasonable supervisor would have known that his or her actions were unlawful in light of clearly established law and information possessed. Dolihite v. Maughon By and Through Videon, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1996, 74 F.3d 1027, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 185, 519 U.S. 870, 136 L.Ed.2d 123. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To determine existence of qualified immunity, first step is to determine whether plaintiff has alleged violation of constitutional right; if plaintiff has, then next step is to decide if right was clearly established at time conduct occurred and whether defendant's conduct was objectively reasonable. Hale v. Townley, C.A.5 (La.) 1995, 45 F.3d 914, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 51 F.3d 1047. Civil Rights 1376(2)

District court is not required to determine, as part of qualified immunity analysis in § 1983 action, whether plaintiff has stated claim upon which relief can be granted, to decide, independent of and prior to addressing defendant's entitlement to qualified immunity, whether plaintiff has stated claim upon which relief can be granted, or to decide merits of constitutional claim. DiMeglio v. Haines, C.A.4 (Md.) 1995, 45 F.3d 790. Civil Rights 1376(1)

"Qualified immunity" or "good faith immunity" shields government officials performing discretionary functions from liability unless their conduct violates clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Babb v. Dorman, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1994, 33 F.3d 472. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Court must make three-part inquiry to determine whether defendants in civil rights action are entitled to qualified immunity: first, it determines whether plaintiff is asserting violation of constitutional rights; second, it determines whether allegedly violated constitutional right was clearly established; and third, it determines if, given facts most favorable to plaintiff, there are no genuine issues of material fact as to whether reasonable official would have known that alleged acts violated that right. Foulks v. Cole County, Mo., C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 991 F.2d 454. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Two-part test for determining whether public official is entitled to qualified immunity from liability in civil rights action requires consideration of whether alleged conduct violated plaintiff's constitutional rights and then, if rights were violated, whether rights were clearly established at time of violation. Sherman v. Four County Counseling Center, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1993, 987 F.2d 397. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In order to determine whether official is entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action, court must identify right allegedly violated, determine whether right was clearly established, and determine whether reasonable official would have believed his or her conduct to be lawful. Hamilton v. Endell, C.A.9 (Alaska) 1992, 981 F.2d 1062. Civil Rights 1376(2)

For right to have been clearly established for purposes of qualified immunity in § 1983 action, something more than general constitutional rights such as due process must have been recognized; right must be established in more particularized sense meaning that contours of right must be sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates right. Heflin v. Stewart County, Tenn., C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1992, 958 F.2d 709, rehearing denied, on reconsideration 968 F.2d 1, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 598, 506 U.S. 998, 121 L.Ed.2d 535. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity shields officials from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Lundblad v. Celeste, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1991, 924 F.2d 627, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 2889, 501 U.S. 1250, 115 L.Ed.2d 1054. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials are shielded from liability for civil damages in an action under this section insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. A.E. v. Mitchell, C.A.10 (Utah) 1983, 724 F.2d 864. Civil Rights 1376(2)

When determining if a public official is entitled to qualified immunity in a lawsuit under §§ 1983, a court considers whether: (1) plaintiff's allegations, if true, establish a constitutional violation; (2) that right was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation; and (3) a similarly situated reasonable official would have understood that the challenged action violated the constitutional right at issue. Sistemas Urbanos, Inc. v. Lugo Ramos, D.Puerto Rico 2006, 413 F.Supp.2d 96. Civil Rights 1376(2)

There are certain § 1983 cases where the inquiries into qualified immunity and the underlying merits are intertwined, in which the qualified immunity analysis unavoidably calls into question the existence of a constitutional violation, and in those cases the District Court considers both the assertion of qualified immunity and the issue of a constitutional violation. Forest v. Pawtucket Police Dept., D.R.I.2003, 290 F.Supp.2d 215, affirmed 377 F.3d 52, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 1315, 543 U.S. 1149, 161 L.Ed.2d 111. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Under qualified immunity analysis, court must first determine whether, based on applicable law, genuine issue of fact has been raised as to existence of constitutional violation, and then whether defendant officials should have known their actions were in violation of that constitutional right. Wysinger v. City of Benton Harbor, W.D.Mich.1997, 968 F.Supp. 349. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Determination of whether official is entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action depends upon consideration of whether allegations state claim for violation of any rights secured by United States Constitution, whether rights and law at issue are clearly established, and whether reasonably competent official should have known when his conduct was unlawful in light of clearly established law. Carrigan v. State of Del., D.Del.1997, 957 F.Supp. 1376.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Civil Rights 1376(2)

"Qualified immunity" shields government officials from civil rights liability under § 1983 as long as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known, and for right to be clearly established, there does not have to be prior case directly on point, but on lawfulness of precipitating acts must be apparent in light of the existing law. Harris by Tucker v. County of Forsyth, M.D.N.C.1996, 921 F.Supp. 325. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Test for whether governmental defendant is entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability in his or her individual capacity is whether defendant public official can first prove that he or she was acting within scope of his or her discretionary authority when allegedly wrongful acts occurred, and then burden shifts to plaintiff to show lack of good faith on defendant public official's part by proof demonstrating that law was clearly established at time and that official's actions violated clearly established constitutional law. L.Q.A. By and Through Arrington v. Eberhart, M.D.Ala.1996, 920 F.Supp. 1208, affirmed 111 F.3d 897. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1407

In determining whether government officials are entitled to qualified immunity, it must be determined whether (1) claimant asserted violation of constitutional right, (2) whether constitutional right was clearly established at time incident occurred, and (3) whether reasonable official would have known his actions violated that right. Long v. Nix, S.D.Iowa 1995, 877 F.Supp. 1358, affirmed 86 F.3d 761, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under the doctrine of qualified immunity, state actors are immune from damages under § 1983 if they have performed discretionary functions falling within scope of their authority and have done so in objectively reasonable manner measured by the state of law at the time the conduct occurred. Rosario v. Brooks, D.Mass.1995, 877 F.Supp. 765. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Courts must engage in two-part analysis in determining whether government officials are entitled to qualified immunity: whether plaintiff had clearly established constitutional right; and whether that right was violated. Verney v. Dodaro, M.D.Pa.1995, 872 F.Supp. 188, affirmed 79 F.3d 1140. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether defense of qualified immunity is established, court must inquire as to whether there has been in fact violation of clearly established constitutional right by defendant; if court determines there has been such violation, court must then conduct second inquiry as to objective legal reasonableness of defendant's conduct. Vines v. City of Dallas, Tex., N.D.Tex.1994, 851 F.Supp. 254, affirmed 52 F.3d 1067. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity allows public official to escape liability in § 1983 civil rights claim if official's conduct did not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Gehl Group v. Koby, D.Colo.1993, 838 F.Supp. 1409, affirmed 63 F.3d 1528. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Individual liability under § 1983 turns on objective legal reasonableness of defendant's actions assessed in light of clearly established law at that time. Thompson v. City of Arlington, Tex., N.D.Tex.1993, 838 F.Supp. 1137. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3632. Knowledge, qualified immunity generally

City's chief inspector was entitled to qualified immunity, in African-American property owner's §§ 1983 equal protection claim, asserting that city officials failed to properly maintain ditch causing flooding on property, absent evidence that inspector was involved with any aspect of constructing or maintaining the ditch, or was aware of property owner's complaints about the flooding and ditch problems. Wilson v. Northcutt, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 441 F.3d 586, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Government officials are not entitled to qualified immunity if they had fair warning that their conduct violated §§ 1983 plaintiff's rights. Moran v. Clark, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2004, 359 F.3d 1058. Civil Rights 1376(2)

If official pleading qualified immunity defense claims extraordinary circumstances and can prove that he neither knew nor should have known of relevant legal standard, defense should be sustained. Walter v. Pike County, Pennsylvania, M.D.Pa.2006, 2006 WL 3437384. Civil Rights 1376(2)

For qualified immunity purposes, an arresting officer does not need to have personal knowledge of probable cause, but can be informed of the facts by his fellow officers; collective knowledge of law enforcement officials should be considered when making a determination of whether arguable probable cause to arrest existed. Delgado v. Miami-Dade County, S.D.Fla.2006, 456 F.Supp.2d 1234. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Executive director of school district's intermediate unit was entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 for alleged violations of student's rights under Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), where director did not know student until action was filed, did not become aware of the due process hearings involving student until after they occurred, and did not take any particular action with respect to student. Colon ex rel. Disen-Colon v. Colonial Intermediate Unit 20, M.D.Pa.2006, 443 F.Supp.2d 659. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Alleged failure of New Mexico Commission for the Blind Adult Orientation Center (AOC) to provide residents with adequate medical care, despite knowing of dangerous medical circumstances, if proven, did not create special relationship so as to preclude qualified immunity defense to former AOC resident's claim of violation of her right to bodily integrity and personal security. Baumeister v. New Mexico Com'n for the Blind, D.N.M.2006, 425 F.Supp.2d 1250. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to what arresting officer actually did or knew, precluding summary judgment for arresting officer on basis of qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action against the officer for false arrest. Cuba-Diaz v. Town of Windham, D.Conn.2003, 274 F.Supp.2d 221. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity against arrestee's § 1983 malicious prosecution claim that was based on sheriff's alleged awareness of alleged wrongdoing in his department and failure to prevent the commission of those wrongs, which allegedly resulted in arrestee's alleged false arrest and imprisonment, where there was evidence that more than one investigation was carried out in response to arrestee's complaints, and there was no proof that the investigations were in any way inadequate. Riebsame v. Prince, M.D.Fla.2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 1225, affirmed 91 Fed.Appx. 656, 2004 WL 177567, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 166, 543 U.S. 888, 160 L.Ed.2d 149. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Officials of state department of human services were not entitled to qualified immunity, in suit brought by African-American employees challenging placement of white female in department through nonconventional hiring procedure and promotion of female without giving them opportunity to seek position when they were at least equally qualified; assuming officials committed charged acts, they knew or should have known that they were violating employees' constitutional and statutory rights. Bankhead v. Arkansas Dept. of Human Services, E.D.Ark.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 805, reversed 360 F.3d 839, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 57, 543 U.S. 818, 160 L.Ed.2d 26. Civil Rights 1376(10)

In § 1983 action brought by former employee against county community service board and individual board members, alleging retaliation for exercise of First Amendment rights, employee failed to establish that members were sufficiently alerted to fact that they might have been acting illegally, since employee could not maintain prima facie retaliation claim, and thus members were entitled to qualified immunity. Collier v. Clayton County Community Service Bd., N.D.Ga.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 1345, affirmed 82 Fed.Appx. 222, 2003 WL 22227530. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Qualified immunity protects all but plainly incompetent or those who knowingly violate law. LaFleur v. Wallace State Community College, M.D.Ala.1996, 955 F.Supp. 1406. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public officials are shielded from liability for damages in civil rights action as long as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known; stated differently, qualified immunity provides ample protection to all but the plainly incompetent or those who knowingly violate the law. Hare v. City of Corinth, Miss., N.D.Miss.1996, 949 F.Supp. 456, reversed 135 F.3d 320 . Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity defense allows for mistaken judgments; it protects all but the plainly incompetent or those who knowingly violate law. McRae v. Tena, D.Ariz.1996, 914 F.Supp. 363, affirmed on other grounds 113 F.3d 1241. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Former police chief and mayor were entitled to qualified immunity regarding former police officer's §§ 1981 and 1983 race discrimination claim in which disabled black officer claimed white police officers with disabilities were accommodated while he was not and he was treated differently with respect to job rotation policy in comparison with white officers; there was no competent evidence that white police officers were accommodated while black officer was not or that, in comparison to white officers, black officer was treated differently with respect to job rotation policy, and neither former police chief or mayor was aware of any difference in treatment along racial lines even if such differences existed. Ways v. City of Lincoln, D.Neb.1995, 909 F.Supp. 1316. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Qualified immunity is not intended to protect plainly incompetent state officials or those who knowingly violate law. Pinder v. Commissioners of Cambridge in City of Cambridge, D.Md.1993, 821 F.Supp. 376, affirmed 33 F.3d 368, rehearing granted and vacated, on rehearing 54 F.3d 1169, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 530, 516 U.S. 994, 133 L.Ed.2d 436. Officers And Public Employees 114; Officers And Public Employees 116

3633. Motive or intent, qualified immunity generally

Material issue of genuine fact existed as to whether city council president acted with a motive to suppress council member's speech based upon his viewpoint when she had him removed from council meeting, precluding summary judgment in favor of president on qualified immunity grounds on member's First Amendment claim. Monteiro v. City of Elizabeth, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2006, 436 F.3d 397, petition for certiorari filed 2006 WL 1557608. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Firetruck driver responding to emergency call at time he struck and killed on-coming motorist was entitled to qualified immunity, as matter of law, from §§ 1983 claim based on substantive due process violation, absent allegation that he intended to harm motorist; it could not be said that decision to drive quickly, even recklessly so, in response to emergency call shocked conscience. Perez v. Unified Government of Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Kan., C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 432 F.3d 1163, petition for certiorari filed 2006 WL 1130534. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Because issue in determining whether defendant is entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action is one of objective reasonableness in respect to whether challenged action violated constitutional provision sued on, defendant's subjective motivation and subjective belief as to lawfulness of defendant's conduct or what facts justified it are irrelevant. Pierce v. Smith, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 117 F.3d 866. Civil Rights 1376(2)

State of mind of public official is irrelevant to question of qualified immunity in §§ 1983 action, except for those cases in which impermissible intent is essential element of constitutional violation alleged. Irizarry-Lopez v. Torres-Gonzalez, D.Puerto Rico 2005, 363 F.Supp.2d 7. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Pro se inmate who was experienced with § 1983 litigation, articulate, and cognizant of basic procedural requirements was not entitled to appointment of counsel in suit alleging violations of his right of access to courts and counsel, where suit did not present difficult factual or legal issues. Davidson v. Goord, W.D.N.Y.2003, 259 F.Supp.2d 238. Civil Rights 1445

A government official sued for discrimination under § 1983 may prevail on qualified immunity grounds, even if the plaintiff establishes that official acted with a discriminatory motive, if official establishes that he also acted from a non-discriminatory motive and that non-discriminatory motive alone would have prompted same adverse action, even had the discriminatory motive not existed. Morris v. Wallace Community College-Selma, S.D.Ala.2001, 125 F.Supp.2d 1315, affirmed 34 Fed.Appx. 388, 2002 WL 518045. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3634. Custom or usage, qualified immunity generally

Policy or custom requirement imposed by Supreme Court's Monell decision, i.e., that government is liable under § 1983 only when injury is inflicted as result of execution of governmental policy or custom, cannot be equated with qualified immunity; to contrary, requirement of municipal policy or custom is essential element of § 1983 claim that plaintiff must prove in order to establish municipal liability. Buckner v. Toro, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1997, 116 F.3d 450, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 608, 522 U.S. 1018, 139 L.Ed.2d 495. Civil Rights 1351(1); Civil Rights 1376(1)

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether the city had a custom or policy of having its police officers conduct strip searches of all persons on premises when executing search warrant, precluded summary judgment in favor of city, in §§ 1983 action brought by minors who were subject to strip search by officers during execution of search warrant, alleging that city failed to properly train its officers. Quiles v. Kilson, D.Mass.2004, 337 F.Supp.2d 224. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3635. Reliance, qualified immunity generally

City manager and police officers who, in reliance on advice given to them by city attorney, enforced city ordinance barring distribution of newspapers on public sidewalks were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in individual's § 1983 action alleging that enforcement of ordinance violated his First Amendment rights. Steele v. City of Bemidji, D.Minn.2003, 242 F.Supp.2d 624. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

3636. Special relationship, qualified immunity generally

Even if police officers prevented bar fight participant's friends from driving him home after he was asked to leave bar, officers did not create dangerous situation or render participant more vulnerable to danger, so as to create "special relationship" implicating due process protections, given that officers gave participant several reasonable options, including a ride to a nearby service station, which he accepted; accordingly, qualified immunity prevented police officers from being held liable in participant's estate's civil rights action. Estate of Stevens v. City of Green Bay, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1997, 105 F.3d 1169. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Agency employee's alleged action of letting strangers into New Mexico Commission for the Blind Adult Orientation Center (AOC), who allegedly attempted to extort money from resident, if proven, did not create special relationship so as to preclude qualified immunity defense to resident's claim of violation of her right to bodily integrity and personal security, inasmuch as alleged action did not impose any limitation on resident's freedom. Baumeister v. New Mexico Com'n for the Blind, D.N.M.2006, 425 F.Supp.2d 1250. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Neither individual nor his minor daughter had Fourteenth Amendment right to be protected by the state from acts of Mississippi parolee, who murdered daughter in Wisconsin, and, thus, former Mississippi commissioner of corrections and interstate compact administrator were entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights suit in their personal capacities; no custodial relationship existed between plaintiff's daughter and Mississippi officials, there was no prior relationship of any kind between officials and daughter such that daughter would have been foreseeable victim of officials' failure to act, and there was no allegation that officials were aware that daughter, as distinguished from public at large, faced any special danger. Hodgson v. Mississippi Dept. of Corrections, E.D.Wis.1997, 963 F.Supp. 776. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3637. Legal question, qualified immunity generally

District court's denial of parole officer's claim of qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by parolee alleging Fourth Amendment violations was appealable, given that the officer conceded parolee's facts as to what happened, and thus the determination of officer's entitlement to qualified immunity turned on a question of law. Knox v. Smith, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 342 F.3d 651, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1422, 540 U.S. 1183, 158 L.Ed.2d 86. Federal Courts 579

With respect to qualified immunity defense in § 1983 case, question of whether defendants acted objectively in reasonable manner and whether plaintiff's rights were clearly established at time of alleged deprivation is to be applied to particular defendant's conduct as question of law and is to be decided by court prior to trial. Whisman Through Whisman v. Rinehart, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1997, 119 F.3d 1303. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1432

Determination of qualified immunity in § 1983 action essentially is legal rather than factual question. Turiano v. Schnarrs, M.D.Pa.1995, 904 F.Supp. 400. Civil Rights 1432

Existence of qualified immunity from civil rights claim is question of law for the court, rather than question of fact for the jury. Defore v. Premore, N.D.N.Y.1994, 863 F.Supp. 91, affirmed 86 F.3d 48. Civil Rights 1432

Determining whether qualified immunity applies is question for court where factual issues are undisputed. Malignaggi v. County of Gloucester, D.N.J.1994, 855 F.Supp. 74. Civil Rights 1432

Qualified immunity test requires three inquiries, the first two of which present pure questions of law, while the third, though ultimately a legal question, may require some factual determinations as well: identification of specific right allegedly violated; determination whether right was so clearly established as to alert reasonable officer to its constitutional parameters; and determination whether reasonable officer could have believed his conduct was lawful. Dennis v. Thurman, C.D.Cal.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1253. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1432

3638. Facts of each case as controlling, qualified immunity generally

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability on § 1983 claim alleging they used excessive force, in violation of Fourth Amendment, in attempting to take mentally individual, who was ultimately shot and killed, into custody, because fact issues existed as to whether officers acted reasonably under the circumstances. Herrera v. Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Dept., D.Nev.2004, 298 F.Supp.2d 1043. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Court should use plaintiff's allegations in complaint to determine appropriateness of defendants' qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action. Leisure v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 848. Civil Rights 1398

Plaintiff seeking to overcome bar of qualified immunity to § 1983 claims can show that right that was allegedly violated was clearly established in law by pointing to binding precedent that directly establishes conduct in question as violating plaintiff's rights or to generally applicable principle from either binding or persuasive authorities whose specific application to relevant controversy is so clearly foreshadowed by applicable direct authority as to leave no doubt in mind of reasonable officer that his conduct was unconstitutional. M.W. ex rel. T.W. v. Madison County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 737. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

While issue of qualified immunity is question of law, it cannot be decided in abstract; court can only make such determination in reference to particular facts of case. Simkunas v. Tardi, N.D.Ill.1989, 720 F.Supp. 687, affirmed 930 F.2d 1287. Officers And Public Employees 119

Remand was required in property owner's § 1983 action against town officials, private architect, and others, arising from demolition of building on property, for purpose of determining whether architect acted under state law or was entitled to qualified immunity, where district court dismissed action against architect, but opinion was unclear as to reason for dismissal. Davis v. Ferdico, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 67 Fed.Appx. 43, 2003 WL 21309149, Unreported. Federal Courts 947

3639. Summary judgment, qualified immunity generally--Generally

For purposes of determining if a government official is entitled to qualified immunity from a civil rights action, if the law did not put the official on notice that his conduct would be clearly unlawful, summary judgment based on qualified immunity is appropriate. Saucier v. Katz, U.S.2001, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 533 U.S. 194, 150 L.Ed.2d 272, on remand 262 F.3d 897. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Court of Appeals reviews the district court's denial of summary judgment on the ground of qualified immunity in a § 1983 case, to the extent that the denial turns on an issue of law, de novo. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Federal Courts 776

Summary judgment on basis of qualified immunity is appropriate only if asserted rights were not clearly established, or if evidence is such that, even when it is viewed in light most favorable to plaintiffs and with all permissible inferences drawn in their favor, no rational jury could fail to conclude that it was objectively reasonable for defendants to believe that they were acting in fashion that did not violate clearly established right. Davidson v. Scully, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 114 F.3d 12. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Disputed facts are treated no differently in qualified immunity analysis than in any other context for summary judgment purposes; if plaintiff has alleged clearly established right, summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds is improper as long as there remains any material factual dispute regarding actual conduct of defendants. Buonocore v. Harris, C.A.4 (Va.) 1995, 65 F.3d 347. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

When motion for summary judgment is brought claiming qualified immunity to § 1983 action, plaintiff must state claim of violation of clearly established law and must present evidence sufficient to create genuine issue as to whether defendant in fact committed acts that violated law. Adams v. Metiva, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 31 F.3d 375. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Government officials performing discretionary functions are entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity in civil rights cases if, taking facts in light most favorable to plaintiff, officials' conduct did not violate clearly established constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Kane v. Hargis, C.A.4 (Va.) 1993, 987 F.2d 1005. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To avoid summary judgment in § 1983 civil rights action based on qualified immunity, plaintiff must show that, at time of public official's action or inaction, specific right at issue was so clearly established that any reasonable officer in defendant's position would have clearly understood that he was under duty to refrain from conduct alleged to have been unconstitutional. Morton v. City of Little Rock, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1991, 934 F.2d 180. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether presence of allegedly disputed material facts relating to qualified immunity claim prevents interlocutory appeal of summary judgment denial of qualified immunity defense, the Court of Appeals should consider in the light most favorable to plaintiff all undisputed facts discernible from pleadings and other materials submitted to supplement them by time motion for summary judgment is made. DeVargas v. Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co., Inc., C.A.10 (N.M.) 1988, 844 F.2d 714, 105 A.L.R. Fed. 829. Federal Courts 802

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualified immunity determination in the special context of First Amendment retaliation claims cannot properly be resolved on the face of the pleadings on motion to dismiss, but rather, can be resolved only after the plaintiff has had an opportunity to adduce evidence in support of the allegations that the true motive for the conduct was retaliation. Bradshaw v. Township of Middletown, D.N.J.2003, 296 F.Supp.2d 526, affirmed 145 Fed.Appx. 763, 2005 WL 2077137. Civil Rights 1398; Federal Civil Procedure 1752.1

When the record shows an unresolved dispute of historical fact relevant to a qualified immunity analysis, in a § 1983 action, a motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity should be properly denied. Unzueta v. Steele, D.Kan.2003, 291 F.Supp.2d 1230. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Triable issue of fact as to whether retaliatory animus motivated village and state defendants' conduct toward plaintiff precluded summary judgment for his First Amendment retaliation claim based on qualified immunity. Stein v. Janos, S.D.N.Y.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 256. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

City council members were entitled to absolute immunity from § 1983 claims arising out of application of ordinance that was enacted to establish local procedures for annual renewal of wrecker certificates; procedures adopted affected everyone who applied, or would be applying, for wrecker certificate, and thus adoption of procedures was within legislative sphere. Thornton v. City of St. Helens, D.Or.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 1019. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Presentation of genuine issues of material fact on elements of § 1983 claim will not preclude summary judgment for defendants if defendants are immune from suit. Wysinger v. City of Benton Harbor, W.D.Mich.1997, 968 F.Supp. 349. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

District court should grant summary judgment on a claim of qualified immunity if asserted rights were not clearly established, or if the evidence is such that, even when viewed in light most favorable to plaintiffs and with all permissible inferences drawn in their favor, no rational jury could fail to conclude that it was objectively reasonable for defendants to believe that they were acting in a fashion that did not violate a clearly established right. Davidson v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1997, 968 F.Supp. 121. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Whether defendants are entitled to qualified immunity may be properly determined on pretrial motion for summary judgment. Wallace v. City of Montgomery, M.D.Ala.1996, 956 F.Supp. 965. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Defendants claiming qualified immunity cannot prevail at summary judgment stage if plaintiff can present version of facts that is supported by evidence and under which defendants would not be entitled to qualified immunity. Estate of Frank v. City of Beaver Dam, E.D.Wis.1996, 921 F.Supp. 590. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

To defeat defendants' motion for summary judgment of § 1983 claim based on qualified immunity, plaintiff must show that defendants are not entitled to qualified immunity as matter of law or that genuine issues of material fact exist so that determination of whether defendants are entitled to qualified immunity are only properly determined after findings of fact have been made by jury, but even disputes over genuine issues of material fact will not preclude summary judgment premised on qualified immunity if legal norms allegedly violated were not clearly established at time of challenged actions. L.Q.A. By and Through Arrington v. Eberhart, M.D.Ala.1996, 920 F.Supp. 1208, affirmed 111 F.3d 897. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Issue of qualified immunity is threshold question in any summary judgment motion in § 1983 action, because purpose of objective qualified immunity inquiry is to avoid unnecessary burdens on government officials by more frequent use of summary judgment tool. Pyka v. Village of Orland Park, N.D.Ill.1995, 906 F.Supp. 1196. Federal

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Civil Procedure 2491.5

Under doctrine of qualified immunity, summary judgment must be granted against any damages claim against actions taken by government employees in their official government capacities insofar as conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Umbehr v. McClure, D.Kan.1993, 840 F.Supp. 837, reversed 44 F.3d 876, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 2616, 515 U.S. 1161, 132 L.Ed.2d 859, certiorari granted 115 S.Ct. 2639, 515 U.S. 1172, 132 L.Ed.2d 878, motion granted 116 S.Ct. 416, 516 U.S. 962, 133 L.Ed.2d 334, affirmed and remanded 116 S.Ct. 2342, 518 U.S. 668, 135 L.Ed.2d 843, dissenting opinion 116 S.Ct. 2361, 518 U.S. 668, 135 L.Ed.2d 843. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

To succeed on motion for summary judgment in § 1983 action on basis of qualified immunity, defendants need not show that there is only one reasonable conclusion jury could reach; rather, standard to be applied is whether defendants acted reasonably under settled law in circumstances, not whether another reasonable, or more reasonable, interpretation of events can be constructed. Myers v. Becker County, D.Minn.1993, 833 F.Supp. 1424. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

When presented with motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity, court must engage in three-part analysis: identification of specific right allegedly violated; determination of whether that right was so clearly established as to alert reasonable officer to its constitutional parameters; and ultimate determination of whether reasonable officer could have believed conduct at issue was lawful; officers will prevail if right asserted was not clearly established or officer could have reasonably believed his conduct was lawful. Marshall v. Gates, C.D.Cal.1993, 812 F.Supp. 1050, reversed 44 F.3d 722, as amended. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In deciding whether to grant summary judgment based on qualified immunity, court must address state of law at time of incident and determine whether officer acted reasonably in light of clearly established law and information he possessed at that time. Africa v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1992, 809 F.Supp. 375, opinion after remand 849 F.Supp. 331, affirmed in part, reversed in part, dismissed in part 49 F.3d 945, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 176, 516 U.S. 863, 133 L.Ed.2d 116, on remand 910 F.Supp. 212, on remand 938 F.Supp. 1264. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In applying qualified immunity test, court must first identify specific right allegedly violated, then determine whether right was so clearly established as to alert reasonable officer to its constitutional parameters, before considering third inquiry, requiring determination of whether reasonable officer could have believed his conduct was lawful. Dennis v. Thurman, C.D.Cal.1997, 959 F.Supp. 1253. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3640. ---- Burden of proof, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

In context of summary judgment motion, to prevail against qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action plaintiff must come forward with facts or allegations to show both that defendant's alleged conduct violated law and that law was clearly established when violation occurred. Pallottino v. City of Rio Rancho, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1994, 31 F.3d 1023. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Civil rights plaintiff, as nonmovant, could not rest on his pleadings to defeat defendant officials' summary judgment motion premised on qualified immunity defense, particularly when plaintiff was currently represented by counsel, even if he was proceeding pro se when he filed his amended complaint. Kerr v. Puckett, E.D.Wis.1997, 967 F.Supp. 354, affirmed 138 F.3d 321. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

To enjoy qualified immunity, government official must first demonstrate that he or she was acting within scope of his or her discretionary authority when allegedly wrongful acts occurred. Wallace v. City of Montgomery, M.D.Ala.1996, 956 F.Supp. 965. Officers And Public Employees 114

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

To establish defense of qualified immunity on motion for summary judgment, prison official who performed allegedly unconstitutional strip search of prison visitor bore burden of showing upon undisputed facts either that it was not clear at time of search that interest asserted by plaintiff was protected by federal law or that it was objectively reasonable for official to believe his conduct did not violate visitor's clearly established rights. Varrone v. Bilotti, E.D.N.Y.1994, 867 F.Supp. 1145, reversed 123 F.3d 75. Civil Rights 1376(7)

When defendant moves for summary judgment in § 1983 action on basis of qualified immunity, it is plaintiff's burden to demonstrate defendant's infringement of a "clearly established" federal right; if plaintiff fails to do so, defendant prevails. Hansen v. Lamontagne, D.N.H.1992, 808 F.Supp. 89. Federal Civil Procedure 2544

To avoid summary judgment when § 1983 defendant raises defense of qualified immunity, plaintiff bears burden of coming forward with facts or allegations sufficient to show both that defendant's alleged conduct violated law and that law was clearly established when alleged violation occurred; if plaintiff meets such burden, defendant assumes normal burden of movant for summary judgment of establishing that no material facts remain in dispute that would defeat his or her claim of qualified immunity. King v. Marmon, D.Kan.1992, 793 F.Supp. 1030. Federal Civil Procedure 2544

3641. ---- Shifting of burden, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

In applying the qualified immunity test on a motion for summary judgment in a § 1983 action, court reviews the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and draw all permissible inferences in the plaintiff's favor. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Federal Civil Procedure 2543

Once defendant public official asserting qualified immunity establishes that he or she was acting within scope of his or her discretionary authority when allegedly wrongful acts occurred, burden shifts to plaintiff bringing § 1983 claim to show lack of good faith on defendant's part, which can be met by demonstrating that official's actions violated clearly established constitutional law. Wallace v. City of Montgomery, M.D.Ala.1996, 956 F.Supp. 965. Civil Rights 1407

Test for qualified immunity at summary judgment stage of proceeding requires plaintiff to demonstrate that law is clearly established; defendant official must then prove that his or her conduct either does not violate plaintiff's rights or that there were extraordinary circumstances and that he neither knew nor should have known of relevant legal standard. Kurtz v. Denniston, N.D.Iowa 1994, 872 F.Supp. 631. Civil Rights 1376(2)

On § 1983 retaliation claim against government employee, burden is on plaintiff to demonstrate that protected conduct was substantial or motivating factor in employee's decision; once such showing is made, burden shifts to defendant to prove by preponderance of evidence that it would have reached same decision absent protected conduct. Blue v. Koren, S.D.N.Y.1994, 865 F.Supp. 169, reversed 72 F.3d 1075. Civil Rights 1405

If civil rights plaintiffs meet their burden of both identifying the clearly established law that defendants allegedly violated and of demonstrating that defendants' alleged conduct violated that law, burden shifts to defendants moving for summary judgment on basis of qualified immunity to show that no material issues of fact remain as to whether their actions were objectively reasonable in light of the law and the information they possessed at the time; showing of objective reasonableness entitles defendants to summary judgment unless plaintiffs show that there are factual disputes relevant to claims of immunity. Harris v. Evans, D.Kan.1992, 795 F.Supp. 1060. Federal Civil Procedure 2544

3642. ---- Prima facie evidence, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

City government made prima facie showing of objective reasonableness of laying off from position as assistant city manager Hispanic female over age of 40, and city produced enough evidence to require employee to show that summary judgment based on qualified immunity was inappropriate. Lewis v. City of Ft. Collins, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1990, 903 F.2d 752. Civil Rights 1551; Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3643. ---- Standard of proof, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

For § 1983 plaintiff to defeat defendants' motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity, plaintiff must show that defendants are not entitled to qualified immunity as matter of law or that genuine issues of material fact exist so that determination of whether defendants are entitled to qualified immunity is only properly made after findings of fact have been made by jury; however, even disputes over genuine issues of material fact will not preclude summary judgment premised on defendants' qualified immunity if legal norms allegedly violated were not clearly established at time of challenged actions. Dowdell v. Chapman, M.D.Ala.1996, 930 F.Supp. 533. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Plaintiff's claims will withstand summary judgment against public official claiming qualified immunity only if plaintiff presents some evidence upon which reasonable fact finder could find that public official violated well-established federal rights and that it was not objectively reasonable for public official to believe that his conduct did not violate those rights. Abdul-Matiyn v. New York State Dept. of Correctional Services, N.D.N.Y.1994, 871 F.Supp. 1542, affirmed 66 F.3d 309. Civil Rights 1376(2)

When civil rights defendants move for summary judgment on basis of qualified immunity, plaintiffs bear heavier burden than is normally imposed to avoid summary judgment and must show that defendants violated clearly established law; to meet this burden, plaintiffs must demonstrate substantial correspondence between conduct in question and prior law allegedly establishing that the defendant's actions were clearly prohibited. Harris v. Evans, D.Kan.1992, 795 F.Supp. 1060. Federal Civil Procedure 2544

3644. ---- Extension of time to file motion, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Civil rights plaintiff's unexplained failure to request additional time to file opposition to summary judgment motion based on qualified immunity and his proffered explanations for late filing, counsel's engagement in another trial and plaintiff's incarceration, did not constitute "inadvertence" or "inexcusable neglect" and, due to consequent violation of numerous local rules, court would not consider untimely filed documents in ruling on motion; defense counsel had not even received opposing papers, which plaintiff served by mail, by hearing date. Marshall v. Gates, C.D.Cal.1993, 812 F.Supp. 1050, reversed 44 F.3d 722, as amended. Federal Civil Procedure 2547.1

3645. ---- Issues of material fact, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Genuine issue of material fact, as to whether changes in intangible employment conditions were significant or material such that state employee's reassignment in retaliation for protected speech was actionable adverse employment action, precluded summary judgment for state employee's supervisors on § 1983 claim on basis of qualified immunity; although employee's pay, benefits and job title did not change, she was not reprimanded, and difference in her duties following transfer was not material, there was also evidence of considerable downward shift in skill level required to perform her new job responsibilities, and of work load reduced to degree that supervisors had to find other "tasks" to keep employee busy. Meyers v. Nebraska Health and Human Services, C.A.8 (Neb.) 2003, 324 F.3d 655. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether police chief and mayor terminated police officer in retaliation for his statements regarding his investigation into illegal activities of police chief, precluding summary judgment on issue of whether police chief and mayor were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in police officer's civil rights action alleging violation of his First Amendment rights. Walter v. Morton, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1994, 33 F.3d 1240. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Employee of regional detention center was not entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds to extent that there remained fact issues with regard to arrestee's claims of deliberate indifference to serious medical needs and excessive force. Robertson v. Johnson County, Ky., E.D.Ky.1995, 896 F.Supp. 673. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Although dismissal or summary judgment is often proper on ground of qualified immunity, rules of procedure which apply to either dismissal or summary judgment are not abrogated; thus, even where official moves for summary judgment on ground of qualified immunity, court may not grant motion if there exists genuine issue of material fact. Bee v. DeKalb County, N.D.Ga.1988, 679 F.Supp. 1107. Federal Civil Procedure 2465.1

3646. ---- Employment officials, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Genuine issues of material fact as to police department official's intent or motive in developing and bringing disciplinary charges against police officer precluded summary judgment as to official's qualified immunity defense in officer's § 1983 action alleging that charges were brought in retaliation for his exercise of his First Amendment rights; officer supported allegations that official failed to offer officer opportunity to accept lesser form of discipline, rejected recommendations of officer's commander, and became unusually involved in investigation of officer. Broderick v. Roache, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1993, 996 F.2d 1294. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

There were issues of fact precluding grant of qualified immunity to supervisor of terminated county employee on claim of violation of due process, in light of supervisor's withdrawal of offer for continuance of pretermination hearing and termination of employee without a hearing, in light of fact that supervisor who terminated plaintiff was not unbiased decision maker, and in light of question of whether appeal to county grievance board would have been full-blown hearing sufficient to overcome deficiencies in pretermination procedure. Langley v. Adams County, Colo., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1993, 987 F.2d 1473. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether university employee's employment contract was governed by manual allegedly authorizing university president to discharge employee without cause or hearing precluded summary judgment in favor of president on qualified immunity grounds in employee § 1983 action. Archer v. Sanchez, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1991, 933 F.2d 1526, rehearing denied. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3647. ---- Hospital officials, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Qualified immunity defense was not available to county hospital in §§ 1983 claim for damages brought by husband of patient alleging the hospital violated husband's rights under the First Amendment by participating in a malicious and wrongful filing of a state-court lawsuit against him for libel. Beedle v. Wilson, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 422 F.3d 1059. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Triable issues of fact, as to whether qualified immunity was available precluded summary judgment in favor of director of Montana Department of Institutions in mental patient's civil rights suit for alleged violation of his substantive due process liberty interest in reasonably nonrestrictive confinement conditions, arising from director's refusal to transfer inmate from hospital's maximum security unit; director did not meet his burden on summary judgment of showing that he was qualified professional entitled to Youngberg deference, or provide basis for his denial of request by hospital medical staff to transfer inmate to less restrictive confinement environment. Houghton v. South, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1992, 965 F.2d 1532. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether medical officials and staff members of security and medical facility reasonably could have believed that deprivations used in pretrial detainee's intensive behavior modification program represented legitimate psychological treatment precluded summary judgment for officials and members on ground of qualified immunity in detainee's civil rights action. Green v. Baron, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1991, 925 F.2d 262. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Issues of fact as to whether consulting psychiatrists involved in treatment of patient, who was involuntarily committed to state adolescent mental health facility, exercised professional judgment in his treatment precluded summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds in § 1983 action arising out of his suicide attempt in facility; psychiatrists had authority to intervene at any time to direct treatment, facility policy stated that actively suicidal patients were not appropriate for placement at facility, expert's affidavit stated that psychiatrists knew or should have known of patient's documented increasing self-mutilation, disruptive behavior, mood swings, psychotic episodes, and suicide threats and that failing to act appropriately, through medication, evaluation, or therapy, could constitute absence of professional judgment. Dolihite v. Videon, M.D.Ala.1994, 847 F.Supp. 918, affirmed in part, reversed in part 74 F.3d 1027, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 185, 519 U.S. 870, 136 L.Ed.2d 123. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3648. ---- Municipal or city officials, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Fact question as to whether police commissioner's decisions not to promote deputy police inspector and to transfer inspector to subordinate position were motivated by desire to retaliate against inspector for criticizing police department, precluded summary judgment on issue of whether commissioner was entitled to qualified immunity from inspector's First Amendment retaliation claim. Mandell v. County of Suffolk, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 316 F.3d 368. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

Material issue of fact as to whether supervisors knew or had reason to know that former employee was source of complaints to Department of Pollution Control and Ecology regarding city Wastewater Utility Commission's operations and were motivated by that knowledge when terminating employee precluded summary judgment for supervisors on defense of qualified immunity to § 1983 action alleging that employee's First Amendment rights were violated when she was terminated. Engle v. Townsley, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1995, 49 F.3d 1321. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

Allegations that municipal officials acted with politically discriminatory motive when they demoted employee, lowered his salary, and harassed and persecuted him concerned potentially discriminatory treatment, and thus alleged sufficient facts to assert claim for political discrimination under the First Amendment, so as to withstand motion to dismiss § 1983 action on qualified immunity grounds. Valentin Rodriguez v. Municipality of Barceloneta, D.Puerto Rico 2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 189. Civil Rights 1395(8); Civil Rights 1398

Genuine issue of material fact, as to reasons why supervisor fired city mechanical inspector, precluded summary judgment for supervisor on inspector's §§ 1983 claim on basis of qualified immunity. Donnell v. City of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, N.D.Iowa 2006, 437 F.Supp.2d 904. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

3649. ---- Parole officers, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Whether male parole officer violated female parolee's constitutional right to bodily privacy was fact question precluding summary judgment on issue of whether officer was entitled to qualified immunity from liability for civil rights suit where officer allegedly walked into stall where parolee was partially unclothed while collecting urine sample for drug testing. Sepulveda v. Ramirez, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1992, 967 F.2d 1413, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 342, 510 U.S. 931, 126 L.Ed.2d 307, on remand. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3650. ---- Police officers, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Fact question as to whether warrantless searches of arrestee's personal belongings in bedroom of apartment that arrestee was visiting and in her purse in living room, were justified incident to arrest, precluded summary judgment on issue of whether police officers' were entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's claim that searches violated the Fourth Amendment. Holmes v. Kucynda, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 321 F.3d 1069. Federal Civil Procedure

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

2491.5

Fact question as to whether police officer filed recklessly false application for arrest warrant, precluded summary judgment on issue of whether officer was entitled to qualified immunity from claim that officer's actions violated the Fourth Amendment. Holmes v. Kucynda, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 321 F.3d 1069. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether truck's flight presented an immediate threat of serious harm to officer or others at the time officer fired the shot that struck passenger, whether officer's use of deadly force was necessary to prevent escape, whether it was feasible for officer to warn truck's occupants of the potential use of deadly force, and as to whether it would have been clear to an objectively reasonable officer that officer's conduct was unlawful, precluding summary judgment in favor of officer on qualified immunity grounds on passenger's § 1983 claim predicated on Fourth Amendment violation; assuming a Fourth Amendment violation, a reasonable officer would have known that firing into the cabin of a pickup truck, traveling at approximately 80 miles per hour on an interstate highway in the morning, would transform the risk of an accident on the highway into a virtual certainty. Vaughan v. Cox, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 343 F.3d 1323, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 88 Fed.Appx. 394, 2003 WL 22994454. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether police officer lost sight of unarmed suspect long enough for suspect to have possibly secured firearm before officer shot and killed suspect precluded summary judgment for officer on basis of qualified immunity, premised on objective reasonableness, in § 1983 action by administrator of suspect's estate for use of excessive force during arrest. O'Bert ex rel. Estate of O'Bert v. Vargo, C.A.2 (Vt.) 2003, 331 F.3d 29. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact issues precluded summary judgment on whether police officers' actions were protected by qualified immunity against § 1983 claims for false arrest and denial of medical treatment where legal principles governing officers' conduct were well established and where question of whether it was reasonable for officers to believe their actions met standards set by those principles depended on whether one believed officers' version of the facts that was sharply disputed. Weyant v. Okst, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 101 F.3d 845. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Speculation and extrapolation based on witness' "understanding of human nature and human factors and working in gunshot cases" did not suffice to create genuine issue of material fact with regard to reasonableness of police officer's decision to use deadly force and thus did not preclude summary judgment for officer on grounds of qualified immunity from civil rights claim. Reynolds v. County of San Diego, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 84 F.3d 1162. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Interlocutory summary judgment which denied police officer's motion for qualified immunity due to existence of factual issues concerning officer's compliance with knock and announce rule was not appealable. Bonner v. Anderson, C.A.4 (Va.) 1996, 81 F.3d 472. Federal Courts 574

Material issues of fact concerning police officer's reasons for refusing to release arrestee following his arrest for writing on sidewalk precluded summary judgment to police officer on grounds of qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action for wrongful arrest; police officer was required to release arrestee without bail if he promised to appear in court and if there was no reasonable likelihood that arrestee would continue to commit offense, and arrestee claimed he agreed to stop writing on sidewalk and that police officer would not release him because of his "attitude," while police officer claimed that arrestee refused to agree to stop writing on sidewalk. Mackinney v. Nielsen, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1995, 69 F.3d 1002. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In civil rights suit arising when police officers with warrant to search upper duplex unit mistakenly entered lower unit during raid, there was issue of fact precluding summary judgment for officers on ground of qualified immunity as to whether any of the illegal searches and seizures, and use of physical force to compel residents to lie on the floor at gunpoint, took place after the police officers discovered or reasonably should have discovered that they were in fact in the wrong residence. Pray v. City of Sandusky, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1995, 49 F.3d 1154. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issue of material fact existed, as to whether a police officer in city police officer's position could have believed that force he allegedly used against detainee, who had obtained woman's lost five-dollar bill, was objectively reasonable in light of the circumstances, precluding summary judgment for officer on qualified immunity grounds respecting detainee's § 1983 excessive force claim against officer, alleging degree of force against detainee that violated Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable seizures. Rowland v. Perry, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1994, 41 F.3d 167. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In suit by residents of private home, seeking damages for alleged excessive measures employed by Secret Service agent and others during search, issues of material fact existed as to extent of physical force and intrusive measures employed during search, and whether such measures were justified by purposes of search, precluding summary judgment on issue of whether agent was qualifiedly immune. Ayeni v. Mottola, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 35 F.3d 680, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 1689, 514 U.S. 1062, 131 L.Ed.2d 554. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

There were genuine issues of material fact, precluding summary judgment for police officers in plaintiff's civil rights action, as to whether police officers used excessive force in effecting arrest; there was testimony from plaintiff and other witnesses that officer continued to spray plaintiff with mace even after he was placed in vehicle. Adams v. Metiva, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 31 F.3d 375. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact issue existed as to whether police officers ordered storming of house of plaintiff's decedent primarily for purpose of arresting decedent rather than to assist health department officials in conducting administrative inspection, precluding summary judgment with respect to issue of qualified immunity. Alexander v. City and County of San Francisco, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1994, 29 F.3d 1355, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 735, 513 U.S. 1083, 130 L.Ed.2d 638. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact question precluded summary judgment for uniformed officers based on qualified immunity, on demonstrator's claim that he was arrested for exercising his freedom of speech. Johnston v. City of Houston, Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1994, 14 F.3d 1056. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Question of fact as to whether arrestee was attempting to flee deputy sheriff, such that reasonable officer could have believed that probable cause existed to arrest plaintiff for obstructing public servant, precluded summary judgment on grounds of qualified immunity from arrestee's § 1983 suit alleging unlawful arrest. Palmer v. Sanderson, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1993, 9 F.3d 1433. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Director of public safety and chief of police were entitled to summary judgment in plaintiffs' civil rights suit arising from shooting of disturbed teenager in response to call for assistance where plaintiffs failed to establish disputed issue of fact regarding whether supervisors' actions or admissions with respect to county training and use of force policies would violate any clearly established constitutional right. McKinney by McKinney v. DeKalb County, Ga., C.A.11 (Ga.) 1993, 997 F.2d 1440. Civil Rights 1358

Genuine issue of material fact as to conduct engaged in by arresting officers precluded summary judgment for officers on ground of qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action; arrestee alleged that he did not grab at nonarresting officers, and that, after he unlocked door for arresting officers, he was hit from behind and thrown face down on floor, after which one of arresting officers choked him until he passed out. Arnott v. Mataya, C.A.8 (S.D.) 1993, 995 F.2d 121. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether officers used excessive force in violation of clearly established principles in effectuating arrest, thus precluding summary judgment based on qualified immunity, was presented by testimony of arrestee that three officers rushed in, tackled him, and threw him face first into the bed of a pickup, that he was handcuffed and beaten with flashlights, that he was kneed in the groin and shoved into patrol car, and that he did not fight back. Butler v. City of Norman, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1993, 992 F.2d 1053. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issues of material fact, precluding summary judgment for police officers on qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action by fleeing felon's widow who alleged that officers unconstitutionally used excessive force, existed as to, inter alia, whether objectively reasonable officers should have realized that felon was not armed, and as to whether officers had probable cause to believe that felon posed threat of serious bodily harm to them or to others. Washington v. Newsom, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1992, 977 F.2d 991, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1848, 507 U.S. 1031, 123 L.Ed.2d 472. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In absence of genuine dispute as to reasonableness of police officers' perceptions when they responded to report of disturbance at apartment complex, issue of officers' entitlement to qualified immunity was ripe for summary judgment. Gooden v. Howard County, Md., C.A.4 (Md.) 1992, 954 F.2d 960. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether police officers' repeated shooting of potentially homicidal and suicidal paranoid schizophrenic violated clearly established precedents on use of deadly force, so as to preclude summary judgment for officers on ground of qualified immunity in suit under the federal civil rights statute, § 1983, alleging use of excessive force. Russo v. City of Cincinnati, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1992, 953 F.2d 1036. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether police officer, who relied on confidential informant to obtain search warrant for "the second house on the right" of a street, acted reasonably in not clarifying which houses were to be considered in determining which house was second house, precluding summary judgment in favor of officer on his qualified immunity claim in civil rights action of inhabitants of house that was erroneously searched. Navarro v. Barthel, C.A.9 (Or.) 1991, 952 F.2d 331, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 2324, 504 U.S. 966, 119 L.Ed.2d 243. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether police detective, who disregarded any semblance of victim's individual safety in rushing to produce sufficient evidence to arrest him and his brother for narcotics trafficking, was entitled to qualified immunity for police defendants' failure to protect victim from shooting by father who was duped by police into believing that his daughter was facing a prison sentence because of victim, precluding summary judgment in favor of detective in civil rights action; issues of fact existed as to whether detective's actions were objectively reasonable, and whether they were proximate cause of victim's injuries. Avalos v. City of Glenwood, S.D.Iowa 2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 1091, reversed 382 F.3d 792, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Material issues of fact, as to whether house occupant was lunging at police officer while brandishing wood splitter, precluded summary judgment that officer had qualified immunity from suit that he used excessive force in shooting and killing occupant. La v. Hayducka, D.N.J.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 566. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine questions of material fact as to whether plaintiff sold drugs to undercover police officer precluded summary judgment for officer based on qualified immunity defense to claims of false arrest and malicious prosecution under § 1983. Taylor v. City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 68, clarified 2003 WL 21781941. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether undercover officer identified plaintiff as drug seller to arresting officers precluded summary judgment for arresting officers based on qualified immunity defense against claims of false arrest and malicious prosecution under § 1983. Taylor v. City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 68, clarified 2003 WL 21781941. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Summary judgment on basis of qualified immunity is proper in § 1983 action against police officer, notwithstanding factual disputes, if those disputes do not call into question reasonableness of officer's perceptions. Cunningham v. Hamilton, E.D.Va.2003, 259 F.Supp.2d 457, affirmed 84 Fed.Appx. 357, 2004 WL 48857, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 68, 543 U.S. 818, 160 L.Ed.2d 25. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Issue of whether police officer who was investigating fire at elementary school was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by student who was repeatedly questioned by officer, in which student alleged that he had been seized in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights, could not be resolved at motion for judgment on the pleadings phase, due to factual dispute as to whether officer's conduct was so plausibly unreasonable that officer should have been on notice as to illegality of his actions. Bills by Bills v. Homer Consol. School Dist. No. 33-C, N.D.Ill.1997, 967 F.Supp. 1063. Federal Civil Procedure 1054 Material issues of fact as to whether police officer beat arrestee because of arrestee's statement "Are you going to shoot me like the other guy? Mason v. Stock, D.Kan.1997, 955 F.Supp. 1293.

Genuine issues of material fact regarding reasonableness of police officers' actions in conjunction with alleged intentional burning of house during search, including whether officers knew occupant was present in house at time of fire and whether officers were involved in setting of fire, precluded summary judgment in favor of officers on qualified immunity grounds in occupant's § 1983 action for use of excessive force in violation of Fourth Amendment. Johnson v. City of Detroit, E.D.Mich.1996, 944 F.Supp. 586. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact question as to whether officer had probable cause to arrest was sufficient to defeat summary judgment for qualified immunity in § 1983 case; fact question remained whether probable cause existed given significant disparity between height and weight of subject of warrant and plaintiff, even though plaintiff and subject had same name and were same race, and further issue remained as to whether failure to seek fuller description of subject such as address, eye color or skin tone was reasonable. Johnson v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 631. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact issue as to whether police officer, who had allegedly instructed mother that she would be arrested if she did not turn child over to father's custody pursuant to divorce order, was entitled to qualified immunity in mother's federal civil rights action alleging that officer had unreasonably seized mother, precluding summary judgment, was presented by dispute as to whether divorce order was valid or had been superseded by order giving mother permission to move. Bennett v. Town of Riverhead, E.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 481. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact, precluding summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds as to false arrest claim asserted under § 1983 action by arrestee against arresting officer and officer who signed criminal complaint, existed as to whether arrest occurred merely because arresting officer perceived that arrestee was trying to get him and other officers in trouble for having used excessive force in effecting arrest of another person. Humphrey v. Demitro, N.D.Ill.1996, 931 F.Supp. 571, reversed in part 148 F.3d 719, rehearing denied. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact, precluding summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds for police officers who allegedly arrested plaintiffs without probable cause, and who allegedly used excessive force during arrest, existed as to whether seizure was Terry stop rather than arrest, as to magnitude of force actually employed, and as to circumstances provoking same in respect of each plaintiff. Tobing v. City of New York, E.D.N.Y.1996, 929 F.Supp. 86. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Material issues of fact precluded summary judgment on behalf of police officers, alleging qualified immunity in response to civil rights action brought by female occupants of apartment claiming that they had been illegally strip searched as part of search for presence of drugs; if as was indicated in police testimony in related civil matter officers had not discovered drugs during their first search of apartment, which preceded strip search, trier of fact could find that reasonable officer would not believe that probable cause for strip search existed, barring qualified immunity claim. Howard v. Schoberle, S.D.N.Y.1995, 907 F.Supp. 671. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Fact issue as to whether police officer breached clearly established duty to take affirmative steps to protect motorist who had been stopped by officer on suspicion of drunk driving, precluding grant of summary judgment for officer based on qualified immunity in federal civil rights action brought by motorist, was presented by evidence that second officer with whom motorist was left by officer had confined motorist to his car and repeatedly sexually assaulted her during time in which motorist reasonably believed she was in custody of police, giving rise to duty. Valanzuela v. Snider, D.Colo.1995, 889 F.Supp. 1409. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact precluding summary judgment on officer's claim of qualified immunity arising out of search of home and frisk was presented by conflicting evidence as to whether he was in charge of the scene and whether he was grossly negligent in insuring that officers acted consistent with the situation in which exigent circumstances and probable cause were absent. Signorile By and Through Signorile v. City of New York, E.D.N.Y.1995, 887 F.Supp. 403. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether deputy sheriff reasonably feared for his own safety when he fired shot that killed motorist precluded summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds in § 1983 suit alleging use of deadly force without justification. Martin v. Dishong, C.A.4 (S.C.) 2003, 57 Fed.Appx. 153, 2003 WL 194776, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3651. ---- Prison officials, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether state treatment facility employees' use of seclusion against civilly committed sex offenders for at least 20 consecutive days, and as much as 82 consecutive days in one case, could be justified on either security or treatment grounds, precluding summary judgment, on qualified immunity grounds, for employees in detainees' § 1983 action for alleged violation of their due process rights. West v. Schwebke, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2003, 333 F.3d 745. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact existed, precluding summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds, in prison visitor's civil rights action challenging search of her automobile, about exact scope of search of car or whether sign was posted and visible notifying visitor that her car would be searched; absent resolution of factual questions, it could not be said whether search was unreasonable and, if so, whether law had been clearly established at the time. Spear v. Sowders, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1995, 71 F.3d 626. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In inmates' § 1983 action alleging various due process violations in connection with disciplinary proceedings instituted after prison riot, district court did not abuse its discretion in allowing discovery to proceed before the court ruled on defendants' motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity; if inmates' allegations stated claim of violation of clearly established law and parties disagreed as to what actions law enforcement officers took, discovery may have been appropriate for limited purpose of addressing issue of qualified immunity. Lovelace v. Delo, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1995, 47 F.3d 286. Federal Civil Procedure 2553

General issue of material fact existed as to whether two prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in connection with inmate's § 1983 claim arising out of failure of prison officials to release him from special management facility and after multiple recommendations for release had been approved, although those two officials were not directly involved in the decision. Hall v. Lombardi, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 996 F.2d 954, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 698, 510 U.S. 1047, 126 L.Ed.2d 665. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact question as to whether prison sergeant acted in good faith to restore order in cell block or acted maliciously in allegedly beating prisoner for refusing to exit his cell precluded summary judgment for official on grounds of qualified immunity. Hill v. Shelander, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1993, 992 F.2d 714. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Material issues of fact existed as to whether jailer who ignored warning that detainee might try to kill himself was entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights suit brought by detainee's widow, precluding summary judgment for jailer on qualified immunity issue. Gordon v. Kidd, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1992, 971 F.2d 1087, as amended. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact, concerning whether digital rectal searches performed on inmates were reasonably related to legitimate penological goal and concerning whether governor and state prison officials reasonably could have believed that searches were conducted to further legitimate purpose, precluded summary judgment on qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action arising out of policy requiring digital rectal search whenever inmate is moved into secure housing unit within maximum security prison. Tribble v. Gardner, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1988, 860 F.2d 321, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 2087, 490 U.S. 1075, 104 L.Ed.2d 650. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact, precluding summary judgment for county detention officer on qualified immunity grounds in arrestee's civil rights action, existed as to whether officer touched arrestee's buttocks during strip-search, and, if so, the nature of that contact, and, thus, as to whether officer's conduct violated clearly established law. Gonzalez v. City of Laredo, S.D.Tex.1995, 879 F.Supp. 701. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Material issue, precluding summary judgment for prison guard, existed as to whether guard's conduct violated clearly established law, and, thus, whether guard was entitled to qualified immunity in pretrial detainee's civil rights action, where detainee presented evidence indicating that guard arbitrarily shoved detainee, who was disabled, to floor of prison cell. Telfair v. Gilberg, S.D.Ga.1994, 868 F.Supp. 1396, affirmed 87 F.3d 1330. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether prison staff physician and health administrator of state Department of Criminal Justice were entitled to qualified immunity in denial of medical care claim precluded summary judgment in § 1983 action brought by prisoner. Sappington v. Ulrich, E.D.Tex.1994, 868 F.Supp. 194. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether state prison warden's operating procedure in reviewing and authorizing transfers of inmates was defective so as to create unconstitutional condition under Eighth Amendment, precluding summary judgment for warden on Eleventh Amendment qualified immunity basis in inmate's civil rights action. Taylor v. Foltz, E.D.Mich.1992, 803 F.Supp. 1261, affirmed 14 F.3d 602. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Fact issue as to whether hearing officer acted reasonably in failing to call stabbing victim as witness in prison disciplinary proceeding precluded summary judgment in favor of officer on grounds of qualified immunity in inmate's civil rights action. Vasquez v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1989, 726 F.Supp. 466. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3652. ---- School officials, summary judgment, qualified immunity generally

Genuine issue of material fact, as to whether Alabama public high school teacher and principal who punished student who silently raised his fist during daily flag salute were motivated by desire to suppress student's supposedly unpatriotic viewpoint, precluded summary judgment on that Speech Clause claim against them on qualified immunity grounds. Holloman ex rel. Holloman v. Harland, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2004, 370 F.3d 1252, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 116 Fed.Appx. 254, 2004 WL 1737002. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In § 1983 action against teacher for alleged fabrication of child abuse charge against child's father, there was issue of fact as to causation, precluding summary judgment, despite contention that welfare officials and a state judge independently evaluated the allegations of sexual abuse, where the plaintiffs claimed that teacher not only created false evidence that was presented to the state court judge and to child welfare officials in the first instance, but also that she continued to create false evidence after the child was removed from the home and any emergency had passed, in violation of specific instructions to discontinue the use of controversial facilitated communications (FC) device with the child. Morris v. Dearborne, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1999, 181 F.3d 657, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 196 F.3d 1259, on remand 69 F.Supp.2d 868. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

To withstand motion for summary judgment based on defense of qualified immunity, § 1983 plaintiff must first show from the facts alleged that the government official violated a clearly established statutory or constitutional right. M.W. ex rel. T.W. v. Madison County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 737. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether school board members in their individual capacities acted in good faith in suspending student for use of alcohol prior to school function precluded summary judgment in favor of school board members on basis of qualified immunity. Kubany by Kubany v. School Bd. of Pinellas County, M.D.Fla.1993, 818 F.Supp. 1504. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

3653. Equitable relief, qualified immunity generally--Generally

In action brought by claimant challenging forfeiture of $9,000 in cash allegedly wrongfully taken from him by police officers, individual officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability; although shield of qualified immunity protects official defendants where monetary damages are sought, claimant's demand that money taken from him be returned was equitable in nature. Jones v. U.S. Drug Enforcement Admin., M.D.Tenn.1992, 801 F.Supp. 15. United States 50.10(3)

3654. ---- Injunctions, equitable relief, qualified immunity generally

Evidence was sufficient to support finding that employee, a teacher at state-run, federally-funded program, was entitled to injunctive relief, in § 1983 action against his employer for allegedly violating his constitutional rights by requiring him to sign release of various documents, including medical records, as condition of his contract renewal; employer testified that other employees' release forms remained in their personnel files, and that none of the other employees were informed that the release form had been revised to cover only criminal records. Denius v. Dunlap, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 330 F.3d 919. Civil Rights 1422; Civil Rights 1455

Doctrine of qualified immunity did not shield correctional officials from inmates' § 1983 action insofar as inmates sought injunctive relief. Fortner v. Thomas, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1993, 983 F.2d 1024. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Defense of qualified immunity was not available to state officials in § 1983 action by dealer in automobile repair service contracts, in which dealer sought injunctive relief, but no money damages, in relation to due process challenge to state bulletin expressing view that automobile repair service contracts amounted to automobile insurance and to alleged threats made to revoke license of any broker who refused to stop selling those contracts. American Fire, Theft & Collision Managers, Inc. v. Gillespie, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1991, 932 F.2d 816. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Defense of qualified immunity was not available to secretary of state public corrections department, and warden of state prison, sued under §§ 1983 in their individual capacities by inmate seeking declaratory and injunctive relief from conviction under prison disciplinary rule prohibiting spreading of rumors, challenged on vagueness and overbreadth grounds. Cassels v. Stalder, M.D.La.2004, 342 F.Supp.2d 555. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Government official is not entitled to qualified immunity from actions seeking only injunctive and declaratory

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

relief. McCrea v. Zieba, N.D.Ohio 1996, 955 F.Supp. 801. Officers And Public Employees 114

State legal ethics committee did not have qualified immunity against suspended attorney's § 1983 action for injunctive relief; qualified immunity applied only to damages. Sexton v. Arkansas Supreme Court Committee on Professional Conduct, W.D.Ark.1989, 725 F.Supp. 1051. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3655. Retrospective relief, qualified immunity generally

Prison officials who were sued in their individual capacities by inmate in civil rights action could assert good-faith qualified immunity from retrospective relief. McDuffie v. Estelle, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1991, 935 F.2d 682. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3656. Governmental entities, qualified immunity generally

Governmental bodies do not enjoy qualified immunity from damage actions under § 1983. Hedge v. County of Tippecanoe, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1989, 890 F.2d 4. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Correctional facility was "governmental entity," rather than individual "government actor," for qualified immunity purposes and, therefore, was not eligible for qualified immunity. Smith v. U.S., M.D.Fla.1995, 896 F.Supp. 1183. United States 50.10(3)

3657. Municipalities or cities, qualified immunity generally

Where an immunity was well-established at common law at the time the Civil Rights Act was enacted, and where its rationale was compatible with the purposes of the Act, the Act has been construed to incorporate that immunity; but there is no tradition of immunity for municipal corporations, and neither history nor policy support a construction of the Act that would justify a grant of qualified immunity to a city. Owen v. City of Independence, Mo., U.S.Mo.1980, 100 S.Ct. 1398, 445 U.S. 622, 63 L.Ed.2d 673, rehearing denied 100 S.Ct. 2979, 446 U.S. 993, 64 L.Ed.2d 850, on remand 623 F.2d 550. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1376(4)

Municipality may not invoke qualified immunity defense to claim that it has violated constitutional rights of person. Eagle v. Morgan, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1996, 88 F.3d 620. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City was responsible for alleged Fourth Amendment violation of its officials when they allowed explosive device to be used while attempting to arrest individuals who were barricaded in building and allowing resulting fire to burn, and was not entitled to qualified immunity from liability, even if officials themselves were entitled to immunity from personal liability. In re City of Philadelphia Litigation, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1995, 49 F.3d 945, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 176, 516 U.S. 863, 133 L.Ed.2d 116, on remand 910 F.Supp. 212, on remand 938 F.Supp. 1264. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City was not entitled to the qualified immunity asserted by city police officers in § 1983 suit arising from use of force to obtain blood sample for blood alcohol analysis. Hammer v. Gross, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1991, 932 F.2d 842, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 582, 502 U.S. 980, 116 L.Ed.2d 607, on remand 981 F.2d 1115. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Because purpose of good faith immunity is to protect officials from personal liability, such immunity is available only to individuals, not to municipalities. Rollins by Agosta v. Farmer, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1984, 731 F.2d 533. Municipal Corporations 723

City of Cedar Rapids, Iowa was qualifiedly immune from liability under §§ 1983 to mechanical inspector who was allegedly fired in retaliation for talking to public officials about cronyism in his department, absent evidence of city policy or custom of suppressing employees' free speech rights. Donnell v. City of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, N.D.Iowa 2006, 437 F.Supp.2d 904. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Municipalities enjoy neither Eleventh Amendment nor qualified immunity in suits brought pursuant to §§ 1983. Batiste v. City of Beaumont, E.D.Tex.2005, 421 F.Supp.2d 969. Federal Courts 270

There is no qualified immunity from suit for municipality, there is only freedom from liability. Daniels v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1996, 920 F.Supp. 901. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Arrestee could not recover from city, under § 1983, absent showing that his constitutional rights were violated. Schilling v. Swick, W.D.Mich.1994, 868 F.Supp. 904. Civil Rights 1348

While municipality and agencies may not be held liable, under § 1983, for acts of employees on theory of respondeat superior, they are not permitted to assert defense of qualified immunity available to individual employees. Tenenbaum v. Williams, E.D.N.Y.1994, 862 F.Supp. 962, adhered to on denial of reconsideration 907 F.Supp. 606, affirmed in part, vacated in part 193 F.3d 581, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 1832, 529 U.S. 1098, 146 L.Ed.2d 776. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Common-law immunity for discretionary functions of municipality does not apply in § 1983 suit; doctrine cannot serve as foundation for good faith immunity under § 1983 inasmuch as municipality has no discretion to violate the constitution. B.M.H. by C.B. v. School Bd. of City of Chesapeake, Va., E.D.Va.1993, 833 F.Supp. 560. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City community development agency and city were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action of design corporation, which had contracted with agency for design of shopping area, arising from city's last-minute rejection of design. La Societe Generale Immobiliere v. Minneapolis Community Development Agency, D.Minn.1993, 827 F.Supp. 1431, reversed 44 F.3d 629, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 58, 516 U.S. 810, 133 L.Ed.2d 22. Civil Rights 1376(4)

As long as governmental entity has notice of civil rights action, suit against officials in their official capacity is treated as suit against entity, and, thus, municipality is not entitled to assert good faith of its officers as defense under § 1983 suit. J & A Realty v. City of Asbury Park, D.N.J.1991, 763 F.Supp. 85. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Municipality is not entitled to assert defense of qualified immunity in action under this section. Taylor v. Collins, E.D.Mich.1983, 574 F.Supp. 1554. See, also, Pinder v. Commissioners of Cambridge in City of Cambridge, D.Md.1993, 821 F.Supp. 376, affirmed 33 F.3d 368, rehearing granted and opinion vacated, reversed 54 F.3d 1169, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 530, 133 L.Ed.2d 436; Greiner v. City of Champlin, D.Minn.1993, 816 F.Supp. 528, affirmed in part, remanded in part 27 F.3d 1346; Pennington v. Hobson, S.D.Ind.1989, 719 F.Supp. 760. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3658. Discretionary duties, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Government officials performing discretionary functions generally are granted a qualified immunity and are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Wilson v. Layne, U.S.Md.1999, 119 S.Ct. 1692, 526 U.S. 603, 143 L.Ed.2d 818. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under doctrine of "qualified immunity" from liability under this section, government officials are not subject to damages liability for performance of their discretionary functions when their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons, U.S.Ill.1993, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 509 U.S. 259, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, on remand 20 F.3d 789, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Government officials performing discretionary functions are entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983, insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Cagle v. Sutherland, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 334 F.3d 980, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 82 Fed.Appx. 216, 2003 WL 22076253. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Where government official was acting within his discretionary authority, court's inquiry, in deciding whether official is protected by qualified immunity from liability under § 1983, focuses on two questions: (1) whether there was some underlying constitutional violation; and (2) whether the law the public official is alleged to have violated was clearly established at the time of incidents giving rise to § 1983 action. Cagle v. Sutherland, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 334 F.3d 980, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 82 Fed.Appx. 216, 2003 WL 22076253. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public official who performs act clearly established to be beyond scope of his or her discretionary authority is not entitled to claim qualified immunity under § 1983. In re Allen, C.A.4 (W.Va.) 1997, 106 F.3d 582, suggestion for rehearing denied 119 F.3d 1129, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 689, 522 U.S. 1047, 139 L.Ed.2d 635. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials who perform discretionary functions are entitled to qualified immunity from civil suits for damages arising out of performance of their official duties as long as their actions could reasonably have been thought consistent with rights they are alleged to have violated. Adams v. Metiva, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 31 F.3d 375 . Officers And Public Employees 114

Qualified immunity shields government officials performing discretionary functions from civil damages liability if their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Raju v. Rhodes, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1993, 7 F.3d 1210, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1543, 511 U.S. 1032, 128 L.Ed.2d 194. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Availability of qualified immunity defense to official exercising discretionary authority in particular case requires careful consideration of established law at time, state actor's objective knowledge of that law, and complained-of conduct. Latimore v. Widseth, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1993, 7 F.3d 709, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1124, 510 U.S. 1140, 127 L.Ed.2d 433. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity provides that government officials performing discretionary functions are shielded from civil liability to extent that their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Rainey v. Conerly, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1992, 973 F.2d 321. Officers And Public Employees 114

Qualified immunity operates to shield government officials performing discretionary functions from civil damages liability as long as their actions could reasonably have been thought consistent with rights they are alleged to have violated. Enlow v. Tishomingo County, Miss., C.A.5 (Miss.) 1992, 962 F.2d 501, rehearing denied 971 F.2d 750. Officers And Public Employees 114

Public officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known; qualified immunity inquiry requires examination of two issues: whether at time of alleged conduct there was clearly established constitutional right that was violated; and whether reasonable person would have known that her conduct violated that constitutional right. Frazier v. Bailey, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1992, 957 F.2d 920 . Officers And Public Employees 114

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In order to allow government officials to perform their discretionary duties without constant fear that each time they act they will be forced to defend themselves in civil suit, officials are protected from suit unless their actions violate clearly established law which reasonable officer would be aware of at time of their actions. Jackson v. Hoylman, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1991, 933 F.2d 401. Officers And Public Employees 114

In federal civil rights suit, government official is entitled to qualified immunity for discretionary acts undertaken within scope of his authority; in determining applicability of such immunity, court focuses on objective legal reasonableness of an official's conduct to ascertain whether conduct infracted clearly established constitutional rights. Collins v. Marina-Martinez, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1990, 894 F.2d 474. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

When exercising discretionary authority, a state official whose conduct deprives another of a right secured by federal constitutional or statutory law may avoid liability for damages under §§ 1983 under the doctrine of qualified immunity; that doctrine does not apply, however, where at the time and under the circumstances of the challenged conduct all reasonable officials would have realized that it was proscribed by the federal law on which the suit is founded. Russo v. City of Hartford, D.Conn.2004, 341 F.Supp.2d 85. Civil Rights 1376(3)

The doctrine of qualified immunity protects government officials who perform discretionary functions from suit and from liability for monetary damages under § 1983. Flores Camilo v. Alvarez Ramirez, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 283 F.Supp.2d 440. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Public elementary school principal and teacher who were allegedly performing their discretionary duties when they allegedly deprived a student of his Fourth Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment due process and equal protection rights by allegedly failing to protect him from racial harassment and assaults by other students were state actors, as required in student's § 1983 action against the principal and teacher. Crispim v. Athanson, D.Conn.2003, 275 F.Supp.2d 240. Civil Rights 1326(6)

Government officials performing discretionary functions are entitled to qualified immunity as long as their actions could reasonably have been thought to be consistent with the rights they are alleged to have violated. Okocci v. Klein, E.D.Pa.2003, 270 F.Supp.2d 603, affirmed 100 Fed.Appx. 127, 2004 WL 1396358, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 878, 543 U.S. 1061, 160 L.Ed.2d 790. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity shields government officials from civil liability under § 1983 for damages based upon the performance of discretionary functions if the acts were objectively reasonable in light of then clearly established law. Herrera v. Medical Center Hosp., E.D.La.2002, 241 F.Supp.2d 601. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Patients at state mental health facility, following adjudication as not guilty by reason of insanity (NGRI), failed to show that officials violated patients' substantive due process rights, in their actions regarding alleged glaring and protracted deficiencies in facility conditions, on officials' assertion of qualified immunity on patients' § 1983 confinement conditions claims; officials were entitled to presumption they exercised their professional judgment, and officials' actions did not shock the conscience of the court. Neiberger v. Hawkins, D.Colo.2002, 239 F.Supp.2d 1140. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Test whether governmental defendant in § 1983 action is entitled to qualified immunity from liability requires determination whether government official was acting within scope of his or her discretionary authority when allegedly wrongful acts occurred, and then whether that official's actions violated clearly established constitutional law or federal statute. LaFleur v. Wallace State Community College, M.D.Ala.1996, 955 F.Supp. 1406. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public officials, including law enforcement officers, are entitled to assert defense of qualified immunity in a § 1983 civil rights suit for discretionary acts occurring in the course of their official duties. Hare v. City of Corinth, Miss.,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

N.D.Miss.1996, 949 F.Supp. 456, reversed 135 F.3d 320. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity shields government officials performing discretionary functions from liability for civil damages when their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Rodriguez v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1996, 931 F.Supp. 209, affirmed 112 F.3d 505. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials performing discretionary functions are entitled to qualified immunity from liability in a § 1983 action unless their conduct violated clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Brinston v. Dunn, S.D.Miss.1996, 928 F.Supp. 669. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials performing discretionary functions are shielded by qualified immunity from civil damages liability, as long as their actions could reasonably have been thought consistent with rights they are alleged to have violated. Green v. Clarendon County School Dist. Three, D.S.C.1996, 923 F.Supp. 829. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity provides that government officials performing discretionary functions are generally shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights which reasonable person would have known. Estate of Frank v. City of Beaver Dam, E.D.Wis.1996, 921 F.Supp. 590. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under doctrine of qualified immunity, government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Stevens v. Umsted, C.D.Ill.1996, 921 F.Supp. 530, affirmed 131 F.3d 697. Civil Rights 1376(2)

State officials performing discretionary functions in the course of their duties are immune from suits alleging constitutional violations insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known; even when such rights are clearly established, qualified immunity will protect official if it was objectively reasonable for official to believe that his acts did not violate those rights. Atkins v. Latanzio, W.D.N.Y.1995, 918 F.Supp. 668. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under doctrine of "qualified immunity," government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Griswold v. Alabama Dept. of Indus. Relations, M.D.Ala.1995, 903 F.Supp. 1492. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages in § 1983 actions insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person should have known; qualified immunity protects all but the plainly incompetent or those who knowingly violate the law. Douglas v. Evans, M.D.Ala.1995, 888 F.Supp. 1536. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Governmental officials who perform discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Gregory v. Hunt, W.D.Tenn.1991, 872 F.Supp. 476, clarified 1992 WL 695478, affirmed 24 F.3d 781. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Verney v. Dodaro, M.D.Pa.1995, 872 F.Supp. 188, affirmed 79 F.3d 1140. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Qualified immunity of public officials from civil liability when they are exercising discretionary responsibilities, and their conduct does not violate clearly established constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known, is the rule, not the exception. Telfair v. Gilberg, S.D.Ga.1994, 868 F.Supp. 1396, affirmed 87 F.3d 1330. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity shields government officials from civil liability when they perform discretionary functions to the extent that their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Gavin v. McGinnis, N.D.Ill.1994, 866 F.Supp. 1107. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To be entitled to qualified immunity, government official must have been performing discretionary functions, and his conduct must not have violated clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Baker v. Putnal, S.D.Tex.1994, 865 F.Supp. 389, affirmed in part, reversed in part 75 F.3d 190 . Civil Rights 1376(2)

Supervisor was not qualifiedly immune from § 1983 sexual harassment claim brought by lifeguard; supervisor did not act within scope of his discretionary authority when he sexually harassed lifeguard, and a reasonable person would have known during period from 1985 to 1990 that sexual harassment violated clearly established law. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton, S.D.Fla.1994, 864 F.Supp. 1552, affirmed in part, reversed in part 76 F.3d 1155, rehearing granted, opinion vacated 83 F.3d 1346, affirmed in part, reversed in part 111 F.3d 1530, certiorari granted 118 S.Ct. 438, 522 U.S. 978, 139 L.Ed.2d 337, reversed 118 S.Ct. 2275, 524 U.S. 775, 157 A.L.R. Fed. 663, 141 L.Ed.2d 662, on remand 166 F.3d 1152. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Actions of deputy sheriffs in resolving dispute over shipment of watermelons involved discretionary decision-making process entitling them to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by owner of tractor and trailer that had been retained by farmer. Padgett v. Palmer, S.D.Miss.1994, 856 F.Supp. 1185, affirmed 58 F.3d 636. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Correctional officer is performing a "discretionary function" as that term is used in context of federal law of qualified immunity, applied in § 1983 cases, when officer exercises his authority to use reasonable force for a permissible purpose. Foster v. McGrail, D.Mass.1994, 844 F.Supp. 16. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3659. ---- Ministerial duties distinguished, discretionary duties, qualified immunity generally

Doctrine of qualified immunity shields government officials performing discretionary, as distinct from ministerial, functions from liability in individual capacity for damages arising from actions which do not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Kaminsky v. Rosenblum, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1991, 929 F.2d 922. Civil Rights 1376(2); Officers And Public Employees 114

Sheriff acted within the scope of his discretionary authority, as required for qualified immunity against arrestee's § 1983 claims for failing to disclose exculpatory evidence and for inadequately training, supervising, and instructing his deputies, where the sheriff supervised the investigations into arrestee's multiple complaints placed by telephone and letter, and oversaw the training, supervision, and instruction of deputy who made arrest. Riebsame v. Prince, M.D.Fla.2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 1225, affirmed 91 Fed.Appx. 656, 2004 WL 177567, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 166, 543 U.S. 888, 160 L.Ed.2d 149. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3660. Capacity, qualified immunity generally

Immunity from suit under § 1983 extends to public servants only in their individual capacities. Board of County Com'rs, Wabaunsee County, Kan. v. Umbehr, U.S.Kan.1996, 116 S.Ct. 2342, 518 U.S. 668, 135 L.Ed.2d 843, dissenting opinion 116 S.Ct. 2361, 518 U.S. 668, 135 L.Ed.2d 843. Civil Rights 1376(1)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

An official in a personal-capacity section 1983 action may, depending on his position, be able to assert personal immunity defenses to liability, such as objectively reasonable reliance on existing law. Kentucky v. Graham, U.S.Ky.1985, 105 S.Ct. 3099, 473 U.S. 159, 87 L.Ed.2d 114, on remand 791 F.2d 932. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity only shields defendants in their individual capacity from money damages. Flynn v. Sandahl, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1995, 58 F.3d 283. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Any qualified immunity enjoyed by school superintendent relative to his conduct in allegedly refusing to recommend teacher's reemployment due to her involvement in divorce, in violation of teacher's First Amendment right to privacy, did not compel dismissal of entire case, where in addition to money damages, teacher sought, inter alia, an injunction reinstating her to a position as a classroom teacher in the school system, since at most, resolution of qualified immunity issue would settle only superintendent's liability as an individual for money damages, and superintendent would not be entitled to such immunity in his official capacity as superintendent. Littlejohn v. Rose, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1985, 768 F.2d 765, certiorari denied 106 S.Ct. 1260, 475 U.S. 1045, 89 L.Ed.2d 570. Civil Rights 1376(10)

City and mayor who was sued in official capacity were not entitled to qualified immunity on § 1983 free speech, free assembly, due process, and equal protection claims asserted by abortion protesters, as qualified immunity doctrine could be raised only by a natural person sued in individual capacity. Trewhella v. City of Lake Geneva, Wis., E.D.Wis.2003, 249 F.Supp.2d 1057. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Deputy sheriff, in his individual capacity, was entitled to qualified immunity, in § 1983 action alleging that county violated farmer's federal and Iowa constitutional rights by seizing her horses, where farmer made no specific allegations against deputy and presented no evidence that he was involved in execution of the search warrant. McClendon v. Story County Sheriff's Dept., S.D.Iowa 2004, 312 F.Supp.2d 1146, affirmed in part, reversed in part 403 F.3d 510. Civil Rights 1376(6)

It is no defense to individual liability under § 1983 that officer appeared to be acting within her official capacity. Hale v. Vance, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 725. Civil Rights 1354

Assertion of qualified immunity by jail administrators and sheriff, on pretrial detainee's § 1983 claims that he was denied access to telephone and mail communications that hindered his ability to make bail and investigate his defense to underlying criminal charges, was mooted, where detainee amended complaint to indicate that claims were against defendants in official capacity only. Simpson v. Gallant, D.Me.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 341. Federal Courts 13.10

Public officials in their individual capacities are entitled to assert qualified immunity defense to claims under § 1983, but qualified immunity is not available to officials sued in their official capacity. Feasel v. Willis, N.D.Tex.1995, 904 F.Supp. 582. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Neither District of Columbia nor District's police officers had qualified immunity defense under § 1983 insofar as they were sued in their official capacities. O'Callaghan v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.1990, 741 F.Supp. 273. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Public employees sued in their individual capacities under § 1983 are entitled to assert defense of qualified immunity. Murphy v. McClendon, N.D.Ga.1988, 712 F.Supp. 921. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Individual members of vocational center's board of control would not be dismissed from teacher's civil rights action under § 1983 alleging she was improperly dismissed from her job due to sex discrimination; language of complaint suggested teacher was suing board members in both their official and personal capacities, qualified immunity could not insulate board members in their personal capacities from teacher's claim of intentional discrimination, teacher might be entitled to punitive damages if she prevailed, and she could only recover such damages from individual board members. Dunlop v. Colgan, N.D.Ill.1988, 687 F.Supp. 406. Civil Rights 1359; Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Various public animal control officers are entitled to qualified immunity for acts done in their official capacity which require exercise of judgment. Keeble v. Cisneros, S.D.Tex.1987, 664 F.Supp. 1076. Animals 105

City police officers who fired into speeding vehicle that had crashed were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability in §§ 1983 action brought by driver's estate and survivors alleging use of excessive force, where officers were outside their jurisdiction at the time and had presented nothing to support a finding that their interaction with driver, whom they claimed was trying to run them over with vehicle, was undertaken in the performance of their official duties. Jones v. City of Atlanta, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2006, 192 Fed.Appx. 894, 2006 WL 2273171, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3661. Conspiracy, qualified immunity generally

Private citizen who allegedly conspired with town supervisor and other town officials to deprive developer of his federal constitutional rights, by improperly influencing town zoning board in connection with board's recision of developer's zoning variance and building permit, was not entitled to qualified immunity from liability in developer's civil rights action. Toussie v. Powell, C.A.2 2003, 323 F.3d 178. Civil Rights 1373

Defense of qualified immunity is applicable to conspiracy claims under § 1983. Owens v. Board of Regents of Texas Southern University, S.D.Tex.1996, 953 F.Supp. 781. Conspiracy 11

3662. Persons entitled to qualified immunity generally

Actions of city solicitor in advising police officer that police officer's manual did not prohibit imposition of a hearing board penalty until after appeal process was complete in disciplinary proceeding were insufficient to overcome solicitor's assertion of qualified immunity, in suspended police officer's § 1983 action against solicitor in her individual capacity for denial of procedural due process, absent showing that solicitor was responsible for determining that police officer should be terminated pending appeal of decision of second hearing board in disciplinary proceedings against police officer. Izquierdo v. Sills, D.Del.1999, 68 F.Supp.2d 392. Civil Rights 1376(10)

When state employee brings action under § 1983 to hold individual fellow state employee liable in damages for violation of § 1981 rights, fellow employee, because he or she is state actor, is entitled to rely on defense of qualified immunity. Ebrahimi v. City of Huntsville Bd. of Educ., N.D.Ala.1995, 905 F.Supp. 993, appeal dismissed 114 F.3d 162. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3663. Agents, qualified immunity generally

Female director of crisis center, who was private individual, and who acted under color of state law by conducting strip search of female detainees for contraband at request of police officer, had qualified immunity from § 1983 suit arising out of searches since she acted as agent of officer who also had qualified immunity. Warner v. Grand County, C.A.10 (Utah) 1995, 57 F.3d 962. Civil Rights 1373

3664. Attorneys General, qualified immunity generally

West Virginia's Attorney General performed act clearly established to be beyond his authority when he established

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

"government agency corporation," and he thus was not qualifiedly immune from § 1983 action arising from such act. In re Allen, C.A.4 (W.Va.) 1997, 106 F.3d 582, suggestion for rehearing denied 119 F.3d 1129, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 689, 522 U.S. 1047, 139 L.Ed.2d 635. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3665. Banks and banking officials, qualified immunity generally

Bank and attorney who instituted state foreclosure proceedings on bank's behalf were entitled to qualified immunity in mortgagors' civil rights action based on claim that mortgagors were denied due process through use of state court rule providing for constructive service of process in mortgage foreclosure actions, where bank and attorney acted in good-faith belief that rule was constitutional when they pursued foreclosure. Shipley v. First Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n of Delaware, D.Del.1988, 703 F.Supp. 1122, affirmed 877 F.2d 57, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 3218, 496 U.S. 938, 110 L.Ed.2d 666, rehearing denied 111 S.Ct. 238, 498 U.S. 891, 112 L.Ed.2d 197. Civil Rights 1374; Civil Rights 1375

3666. Bank regulators, qualified immunity generally

Director of Wyoming Department of Audit who was also acting state examiner and manager of banking division of Department were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for bank president's termination in reaction to letter written to bank board of directors informing them of bank's legal violations, members' potential liability for monetary penalties, and possibility of bank president's removal if noncompliance continued as director and manager acted within scope of employment as state regulators, no evidence showed that they violated the law or knew or should have known that letter triggered bank president's due process rights or that they did not act in good faith. Lenz v. Dewey, C.A.10 (Wyo.) 1995, 64 F.3d 547. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3667. Bar admission committees, qualified immunity generally

In view of fact that assignment of examination numbers to applicants to the District of Columbia bar involved no exercise of judge-like discretion, members of Committee on Admissions appointed by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, otherwise entitled to absolute immunity for actions involving exercise of discretion, would be entitled at most to qualified immunity, if their acts were performed in good faith, with respect to allegation in unsuccessful applicant's civil rights suit that examination numbers assigned to applicants were used to predetermine test scores. Powell v. Nigro, D.C.D.C.1985, 601 F.Supp. 144. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3668. Building inspectors, qualified immunity generally

Employees of private property inspection agency were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action of apartment building owners arising out of employees' search of building conducted pursuant to special inspection warrant and under contract to perform building inspections for village; employees did not establish anything special about job or its organizational structure to justify extension of governmental immunity, and employees carried out duties largely without government supervision or direction. Malinowski v. DeLuca, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1999, 177 F.3d 623. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Village building inspector was entitled to qualified immunity on homeowner's claim that inspector violated his due process rights by posting his home as uninhabitable after inspector discovered extraordinary number of animals in house, terrible smell in house, dead and sick animals in house, and raw sewage in basement. McGee v. Bauer, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 956 F.2d 730. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Town building official was entitled to qualified immunity in his individual capacity from § 1983 liability on warehouse lessees' claim that building official deprived lessees of rights to due process under Federal Constitution by failing to notify them of scheduled demolition of warehouse; building official acted objectively reasonable given that no statutory or regulatory provision required him to notify tenants of scheduled demolition. Kendrick v. Town of Winchester/City of Winsted, D.Conn.1998, 11 F.Supp.2d 212. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3669. Child welfare workers, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Social workers and police officer who conducted investigation into mother's and father's conflicting allegations of child abuse were entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights liability for alleged interference with custodial mother's and child's substantive due process right to familial integrity for actions taken within confines of investigation. Dornheim v. Sholes, C.A.8 (N.D.) 2005, 430 F.3d 919, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 2031. Civil Rights 1376(6)

County bureau of child welfare caseworkers who, during investigation of child abuse relating to corporal punishment at private Christian elementary school, conducted warrantless search of school premises and seized student for interview were entitled to qualified immunity from school's and student's parents' action under § 1983, since caseworkers relied on Wisconsin statute granting them authority to conduct search and seizure, even though statute violated Fourth Amendment as applied; statute was not patently unconstitutional, since statute had never been challenged, there were no reported decisions addressing precise issue, and Wisconsin Attorney General had issued formal opinion on legality of statute. Doe v. Heck, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2003, 327 F.3d 492, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(4)

District of Columbia social worker was entitled to qualified, not absolute immunity in child custodian's § 1983 damages action, as to her actions as investigator and advisor to District corporation counsel in recommending that neglect proceeding be brought; social worker's role was analogous to police officer's role prior to giving testimony in criminal prosecution. Gray v. Poole, C.A.D.C.2002, 275 F.3d 1113, 348 U.S.App.D.C. 369. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(3)

Juvenile officers, social workers, and their supervisors were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action against them based on grandparents' claim that defendants' delay in instituting juvenile court proceedings after taking grandchild into temporary protective custody violated grandparents' First Amendment rights of access to courts; Missouri law gave grandparents right to intervene in such proceedings but not to initiate them, defendants knew that grandparents desired to obtain custody and that mother had authorized it, and grandparents alleged that defendants nonetheless unreasonably delayed initiation of proceedings. Whisman Through Whisman v. Rinehart, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1997, 119 F.3d 1303. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Letter in which treating physician expressed his suspicion that mother was engaging in life-threatening form of child abuse, although based solely upon circumstantial evidence, was rationally drawn from child's medical history, specific acts by mother which physician described, and other physicians' alleged concern about mother's "affect" permitted child welfare authorities to form reasonable suspicion of abuse which would justify some degree of interference with parents' due process liberty rights, for purposes of determining whether authorities were entitled to qualified immunity in subsequent civil rights action. Thomason v. SCAN Volunteer Services, Inc., C.A.8 (Ark.) 1996, 85 F.3d 1365. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Social workers were entitled to qualified immunity from parents' suit arising out of investigation into child abuse allegations; grandmother, who lived with parents and children, provided detailed accounts of children being beaten for trifles with great severity and interviews with children provided substantial support for grandmother's concerns. DeCosta v. Chabot, C.A.1 (N.H.) 1995, 59 F.3d 279. Civil Rights 1376(1); Infants 17

Illinois child welfare workers were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability for placing child in the custody of a foster parent who allegedly was known or was suspected to be a child abuser, after the child had been removed from the custody of her natural parents; welfare workers would be liable for damages only if, without financial justification or other considerations of professional judgment, they placed child in hands they knew to be dangerous or otherwise unfit. K.H. Through Murphy v. Morgan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1990, 914 F.2d 846, on remand 765

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

F.Supp. 432. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Social workers were entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights liability for their removal in September, 1986 of suspected child abuse victim from his parents' physical custody and taking of that child into temporary protective custody. Baker v. Racansky, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1989, 887 F.2d 183. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Employees of county youth services department, and private family intervention crisis service acting as department's agent, were not entitled to qualified immunity from §§ 1983 suit alleging that they violated privacy rights of parent being investigated for child custody purposes, when they allegedly took third parties with them on home visitations; employees should have been aware presence of third parties was violation of parent's privacy rights. Bowser v. Blair County Children and Youth Services, W.D.Pa.2004, 346 F.Supp.2d 788. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1376(4)

Employees of county youth services department had qualified immunity from §§ 1983 suit, challenging their seizure of minor child; employees could believe their conduct was consistent with governing legal principles, when they acted upon state court judge's oral authorization to seize. Bowser v. Blair County Children and Youth Services, W.D.Pa.2004, 346 F.Supp.2d 788. Civil Rights 1376(4)

For purposes of defendants' motion for summary judgment in action under §§ 1983 incident to child protection proceedings, reasonable jury could conclude that social worker's removal of children from mother's custody violated Fourteenth Amendment, where social worker lacked judicial authorization for removal, removal was based on one child's report of molestation by father, there were no allegations of molestation or abuse by mother, and social worker stated that mother's failure to be protective placed sibling of child who reported molestation at risk of serious bodily harm but that mother did not present risk to child who reported molestation. Parkes v. County of San Diego, S.D.Cal.2004, 345 F.Supp.2d 1071. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

State, state social workers, private foster care contractor, and private social workers were entitled to qualified immunity as matter in civil rights conspiracy action brought by mother whose parental rights were terminated based, in part, on her handicap; handicap may be a legitimate reason for terminating one's parental rights. Bartell v. Lohiser, E.D.Mich.1998, 12 F.Supp.2d 640, affirmed 215 F.3d 550. Conspiracy 13

Division of Family Services (DFS) social worker assigned to child, who was beaten and sexually abused by juvenile while placed in county shelter unit, was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to claim against her in her individual capacity alleging that she violated constitutional rights of child, where there was no evidence that social worker was aware or should have been aware that child was at risk in shelter unit. Schaffrath on Behalf of R.J.J. v. Thomas, D.Utah 1998, 993 F.Supp. 842, affirmed 189 F.3d 478. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Alleged behavior of police detective and social worker of seeking and obtaining ex parte order for temporary custody of child in connection with sexual abuse investigation without requisite belief that child's life or health was seriously endangered would have been clearly unlawful deprivation of mother's substantive due process right to familial association and privacy, and therefore, would not be protected by qualified immunity in mother's § 1983 action. Malik v. Arapahoe County Dept. of Social Services, D.Colo.1997, 987 F.Supp. 868, affirmed in part, dismissed in part 191 F.3d 1306. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(6)

School and division of family services employees were protected by qualified immunity for any violation of parents' rights in conducting interview with son without informing parents, where parents' refusal to allow son to attend high school on days he did not first complete his home chores and parents' practice of handcuffing son were reasonably considered to be probable cause to believe that son was being subjected to form of neglect or abuse prohibited by state law. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Caseworker and her supervisor were entitled to qualified immunity from father's § 1983 claim arising out of caseworker's direction that, in light of allegations of sexual abuse, he would have to leave his home or face removal of his daughter; given procedures on training they were given, it was objectively reasonable for caseworker and her supervisor to believe that their acts were necessary to avoid serious risk of imminent harm to child. Gottlieb v. County of Orange, S.D.N.Y.1994, 871 F.Supp. 625, affirmed 84 F.3d 511. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Caseworkers who received report of suspected child abuse acted reasonably in removing children from their parents' home and taking them to hospital for medical examination, entitling caseworkers to qualified immunity in parents' civil rights action; although no evidence of abuse was discovered at home, child abuse report indicated that two of the children had suffered skull fractures. Chayo v. Kaladjian, S.D.N.Y.1994, 844 F.Supp. 163. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Social workers and sheriff's deputy who removed children from parents' home, against parents' wishes and without prior court order, following their investigation of physician's sex abuse report, were entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by parents. Whitcomb v. Jefferson County Dept. of Social Services, D.Colo.1987, 685 F.Supp. 745. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(6)

County social workers had qualified immunity from suit by boyfriend of children's mother, challenging removal of children from household; as boyfriend had no right to associate with children, workers could not have violated any right. Wittman v. California Dept. of Social Services, N.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 31398711, Unreported, affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded 108 Fed.Appx. 548, 2004 WL 1987357. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3670. ---- Applications for search warrant, child welfare workers, qualified immunity generally

Social workers and agency attorney who allegedly provided false and misleading information to judge, for purpose of securing warrant to enter private home being operated as emergency shelter and remove children were not entitled to qualified immunity in homeowners' subsequent § 1983 action. Snell v. Tunnell, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1990, 920 F.2d 673, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 1622, 499 U.S. 976, 113 L.Ed.2d 719, on remand 792 F.Supp. 718. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3671. Contractors, qualified immunity generally

Private contractor that was responsible for processing parking tickets for city was not entitled to assert qualified immunity in § 1983 action against it; although contractor claimed to be subject to city's close supervision, contractor was responsible for general oversight of project activities, while city was responsible for setting policy and monitoring contractor's performance, and thus contractor was subject to limited direct supervision that was inadequate to confer qualified immunity. Ace Beverage Co. v. Lockheed Information Management Services, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1998, 144 F.3d 1218. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Correctional officers employed by a private corporation under contract with state were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in inmate's § 1983 action, although public had interest in maintaining secure and efficient correctional facilities, and refusal to grant qualified immunity would result in increased litigation costs which may be passed on to state in form of increased contract price, where such officers are not principally motivated by a desire to further interests of public at large, state could force private actor to internalize monitoring costs otherwise borne by state, and denial of qualified immunity would not deter talented candidates from entering public service. McKnight v. Rees, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1996, 88 F.3d 417, certiorari granted 117 S.Ct. 504, 519 U.S. 1002, 136 L.Ed.2d 395, affirmed 117 S.Ct. 2100, 521 U.S. 399, 138 L.Ed.2d 540. Civil Rights 1376(7)

When private party defendants act in accordance with duties imposed by contract with governmental body, perform governmental function, and are sued solely on basis of those acts performed pursuant to contract, private party defendants are entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 and constitutional tort liability. DeVargas v. Mason &

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Hanger-Silas Mason Co., Inc., C.A.10 (N.M.) 1988, 844 F.2d 714, 105 A.L.R. Fed. 829. Civil Rights 1373; United States 50.5(2)

Defense of qualified immunity to prisoners' civil rights claims was available to personnel of state corrections facility that was operated by private contractor; the private prison guards and correctional officers were required to perform same functions and were faced with same type of situations requiring exercise of discretion as were state employees working in state prisons, and mere fact that their contractual ties to state were different did not provide logical basis for denying those workers benefit of qualified immunity. Citrano v. Allen Correctional Center, W.D.La.1995, 891 F.Supp. 312. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Employees of rape crisis center who acted under contract of the center with public school system in giving presentation to students as representatives of the school acted as public officials and thus were entitled to raise defense of qualified immunity in civil rights action against them arising from report of suspected child abuse. Wojcik v. Town of North Smithfield, D.R.I.1995, 874 F.Supp. 508, affirmed 76 F.3d 1. Civil Rights 1376(5)

3672. County officials, qualified immunity generally

County investigator was not entitled to qualified immunity in felon-in-possession arrestee's §§1983 Fourth Amendment action alleging that investigator had filed false arrest warrant affidavit averring that arrestee was felon, where at time of filing of affidavit investigator had learned from out-of-state authorities that arrestee had been previously arrested in other state, but had no information regarding conviction; investigator was charged with knowing difference between arrest and conviction. Kearse v. Moffett, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2002, 311 F.3d 891. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Letter from employee of county housing authority to her supervisor, which contained accusations that supervisor forced her to engage in discriminatory housing practices, clearly did not contain speech on a "matter of public concern," and therefore, supervisor was entitled to qualified immunity from employee's § 1983 claim alleging that she was terminated in retaliation for such letter in violation of the First Amendment; letter focused on employee's own aggravation and her disputes with supervisor rather than rights of potential tenants. Gonzalez v. Lee County Housing Authority, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1998, 161 F.3d 1290. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Chairman of county board of commissioners was not entitled to legislative immunity in § 1983 action for any actions he took to abolish public employees' positions allegedly because they had supported a particular political candidate, even assuming that salary board's decision to eliminate the positions was legislative; in giving unilateral order to have supporters of candidate fired, chairman was not engaging in policy-making of general application regarding expenditure of county funds but was making either executive decision on how anticipated cutback should be implemented or administrative decision that certain individuals should be fired. Carver v. Foerster, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1996, 102 F.3d 96. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Qualified immunity shielded county executive and county attorney in their individual capacities from former deputy sheriff's § 1983 claims alleging that he was deprived of liberty interest in reputation when executive represented on television that deputy was being forced to retire because of management problems at jail; deputy's claim was not founded on any clearly established principle of federal law, in that deputy's liberty interests were not implicated by harm to reputation alone, and executive's announcement indicated at most that deputy was incompetent, not that he was dishonest or immoral. Zepp v. Rehrmann, C.A.4 (Md.) 1996, 79 F.3d 381. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim arising from valid arrest in courthouse based on arrestee's violation of rule prohibiting wearing of masks in courthouse, as sheriff had custody and care of courthouse and with that custody came authority to issue reasonable rules for maintaining safety and decorum of building, regardless of suggestion that rule was actually promulgated by chief judge of circuit court of county which occupied county courthouse. Ryan v. County of DuPage, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1995, 45 F.3d 1090. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Female manager was entitled to qualified immunity on male county employee's § 1983 claim that manager violated his equal protection rights by conducting a "sham" investigation of his complaints regarding county's domestic violence shelter; there was no evidence of a pattern or practice of violations concerning male employees' equal protection rights. Kulikowski v. Board of County Com'rs of County of Boulder, D.Colo.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 1053 . Civil Rights 1376(10)

Newly-arrested felony detainee's right to be free from body cavity search without individualized reasonable suspicion was not clearly established in 2000, and thus sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 arising from county's blanket policy of subjecting all newly-arrested felony detainees in correctional facility to visual body cavity searches, even though unconstitutionality of county's policy with regard to misdemeanor arrestees was clearly established in 1994, and officers implementing policy conducted searches without regard to detainees' status. Murcia v. County of Orange, S.D.N.Y.2002, 226 F.Supp.2d 489. Civil Rights 1376(7)

County commissioners were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by foster parents, individually and on behalf of their minor natural children who were injured by foster children, where there was no evidence that the commissioners were responsible for any injury of constitutional magnitude, and sole basis for the claims against them appeared to be parents' opinion that the commissioners did not pursue adequate measures after the alleged injuries were sustained to secure parents sufficient compensation from county department of human services or to discipline department officials. Reed v. Knox County Dept. of Human Services, S.D.Ohio 1997, 968 F.Supp. 1212 . Civil Rights 1376(4)

County circuit clerk was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action brought by former deputy clerk who alleged that circuit clerk unlawfully terminated his employment in violation of First Amendment in retaliation for his having qualified to run against her; circuit clerk could reasonably have concluded that former deputy clerk's candidacy would disrupt efficient functioning of office in such a manner that interests of public would have outweighed deputy clerk's First Amendment rights given that deputy clerk was only one of ten employees working in small office where compatibility of all employees was important, and other employees might have been placed in difficult position of choosing sides, trying to predict ultimate winner to secure favorable treatment after election. Brinston v. Dunn, S.D.Miss.1996, 928 F.Supp. 669. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County animal control officer, who entered dog owners' backyard with utility workers to assist in removal of meter from home and who shot dog after it allegedly charged him with teeth bared and hackles raised, was entitled to qualified immunity from dog owners' § 1983 civil rights claims. Helms v. Gamet, D.Colo.1993, 828 F.Supp. 819. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County officials were entitled to qualified immunity as to any duty to protect juvenile from his own suicidal behavior while he was detained in single-occupancy cell in juvenile detention facility in early 1983. Vega v. Parsley, W.D.Tex.1988, 700 F.Supp. 879. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County official was protected from personal liability by the doctrine of qualified immunity for enforcement of illegal ordinance where he was simply enforcing what he thought to be a valid county ordinance; official could reasonably have believed that he was not violating performer's First Amendment rights by acting in accord with county policy. Hobbs v. County of Westchester, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21919882, Unreported, affirmed 397 F.3d 133, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 340, 163 L.Ed.2d 51. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County board of supervisors had qualified immunity from civil rights suit, brought by boyfriend of children's mother, claiming that removal of children from household was wrongful; boyfriend was not denied any rights protected by Constitution. Wittman v. California Dept. of Social Services, N.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 31398711, Unreported, affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded 108 Fed.Appx. 548, 2004 WL 1987357. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

District court lacked authority to grant leave to amend complaint in which plaintiff asserted § 1983 claims against sheriff and other county officers, where Court of Appeals had determined in an earlier appeal that sheriff and officers were protected by qualified immunity. Hill v. Johnson, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 208 F.3d 218, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 851

3673. Court reporters, qualified immunity generally

Court reporter acted within his legal authority in fulfilling transcript requests in order received and in preparing transcript as he did at request of defendant's attorney under Missouri rules; thus, qualified immunity protected court reporter from liability in civil rights suit brought against him based upon delay in preparation of criminal defendant's trial transcript. Holt v. Dunn, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1984, 741 F.2d 169.

Individual stenographers were entitled to qualified immunity on inmates' claim that delay in filing appellate transcripts violated Eighth Amendment. Mathis v. Bess, S.D.N.Y.1991, 767 F.Supp. 558. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Federal court reporter was entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights claim based upon his alleged conduct, while acting on behalf of judge, in causing transcript of courtroom proceeding to be altered. Neville v. Dearie, N.D.N.Y.1990, 745 F.Supp. 99. Civil Rights 1376(8)

Court reporter's delay in furnishing defendant in criminal trial with transcript of guilty plea proceedings was not alleged to be a knowing act in contravention of defendant's constitutional rights, and thus, reporter was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to defendant's subsequent civil rights claim for money damages; delay in furnishing transcript was apparently occasioned by misunderstanding concerning which of several court proceedings defendant sought to have transcribed and, once reporter received notice of request and learned which transcript was sought, she promptly prepared and delivered that transcript. Formanek v. Arment, E.D.Mo.1990, 737 F.Supp. 72. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3674. Education and school officials, qualified immunity generally-- Generally

Alabama public high school economics and government teacher was not engaged in discretionary function when she led class in moment of silent prayer and thus was not entitled to qualified immunity on Establishment Clause-based § 1983 claim; assuming she was attempting to pursue legitimate job-related function of fostering her students' character education by teaching compassion, she was not doing so through legitimate means that fell within her powers. Holloman ex rel. Holloman v. Harland, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2004, 370 F.3d 1252, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 116 Fed.Appx. 254, 2004 WL 1737002. Civil Rights 1376(5)

High school principal was eligible for qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action arising from his alleged use of excessive force while disciplining thirteen-year-old student; disciplining students lay within principal's general discretionary authority. Kirkland ex rel. Jones v. Greene County Bd. of Educ., C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 347 F.3d 903, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 88 Fed.Appx. 393, 2003 WL 22994441. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Middle school teachers' concerns regarding proper care and education of special education students were outweighed by principal's interest in efficiently administering school, and thus principal was entitled to qualified immunity in teachers' suit alleging he had infringed on their First Amendment rights, where teachers' conduct had polarized school faculty. Fales v. Garst, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2001, 235 F.3d 1122. Civil Rights 1376(5)

School district was not entitled to qualified immunity in student's § 1983 action alleging equal protection violation stemming from school officials' alleged failure to protect student from harassment and harm by other students due to student's sexual orientation. Nabozny v. Podlesny, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1996, 92 F.3d 446. Civil Rights 1376(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualified immunity did not apply to teacher's civil rights claims against school principal and school district in their official capacities only; fact that teacher sought recovery of attorney fees did not mean that he was seeking damages so as to render qualified immunity doctrine applicable. Williams v. Vidmar, N.D.Cal.2005, 367 F.Supp.2d 1265. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Qualified immunity from §§ 1983 liability, enjoyed by public officials exercising discretionary powers who do not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known, extends to public school officials. Mohammed ex rel. Mohammed v. School Dist. of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.2005, 355 F.Supp.2d 779. Civil Rights 1376(5)

As nonjudicial officers, state education officials held qualified immunity under Hawaii law and were immune from liability on state law tort claims, absent clear and convincing proof that their actions were motivated by malice. Doe ex rel. Doe v. State of Hawaii Dept. of Educ., D.Hawai'i 2004, 351 F.Supp.2d 998, reconsideration denied 351 F.Supp.2d 1021. Schools 47

College president was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for her actions in violation of students' First Amendment rights, as reasonable official in president's position would not have understood that her actions were unlawful; while it was clearly established at time of decision that, in absence of reasonable limitations on scope of limited public forum, college newspapers had right to print election-related coverage without retribution, it was not yet clearly established that nullifying and rescheduling student government election that was subject of coverage was impermissible retribution for that expression, i.e., it was not established with sufficient specificity that canceling student government election, as opposed to impounding newspaper, denying funding, or directly disciplining students would constitute actionable form of reprisal against them. Husain v. Springer, E.D.N.Y.2004, 336 F.Supp.2d 207. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Principal, who recommended African-American teacher's termination, was entitled to qualified immunity from teacher's individual capacity claims under §§ 1981 and 1983; principal did not violate any of teacher's constitutional rights, in that, he was not decisionmaker who terminated her, and even if he had violated her constitutional rights, principal's recommendation to terminate teacher was objectively reasonable, in light of teacher's history of unprofessional behavior toward colleagues, students, and supervisors despite repeated warnings and reprimands. Bluitt v. Houston Independent School Dist., S.D.Tex.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 703. Civil Rights 1376(10)

School board members and superintendent were not entitled to qualified immunity in their individual capacities against § 1983 civil rights suit alleging that personally identifiable information about student was released to newspaper in violation of Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act; whether disclosed information was personally identifiable was jury question. Doe v. Knox County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.1996, 918 F.Supp. 181. Civil Rights 1376(5)

School officials were entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action based on their interpretation of school rule prohibiting students from being on school property while "under the influence of alcohol" as prohibiting the presence of a student who has ingested only a single alcoholic beverage. Kubany v. School Bd. of Pinellas County, M.D.Fla.1993, 839 F.Supp. 1544. Civil Rights 1376(5)

3675. ---- Assaults on students, education and school officials, qualified immunity generally

Assuming high school student had substantive due process right not to be sexually abused by teacher, school board superintendent did not deprive her of that right, thus entitling superintendent to qualified immunity in his individual capacity on due process claim, where superintendent did not personally participate in teacher's sexual abuse of student, and there was no evidence of any prior inappropriate acts by teacher that should have put superintendent on notice that teacher might commit such abuse, nor evidence that superintendent had any preexisting policy in place which could have led teacher to believe that sexual abuse of students was permitted by superintendent. Hartley v. Parnell, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1999, 193 F.3d 1263, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether grade school principal was deliberately indifferent to risk of teacher sexually abusing his students precluded summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds in student's §§ 1983 action against principal. Arbaugh v. Board of Educ., County of Pendleton, N.D.W.Va.2004, 329 F.Supp.2d 762. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In action by high school student alleging that school administrators maintained a policy, custom, or practice which played an affirmative role in bringing about the sexual abuse plaintiff suffered from coach, current principal was entitled to qualified immunity in light of evidence showing that he personally investigated report of abuse. Seneway v. Canon McMillan School Dist., W.D.Pa.1997, 969 F.Supp. 325, appeal quashed 118 F.3d 1577. Civil Rights 1376(5)

School district and individual school administrators were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by former middle school student who alleged that during school year teacher subjected him to sexual, physical, and verbal abuse and harassment; student sufficiently alleged that defendants tolerated and tacitly condoned teacher's behavior. K.L. v. Southeast Delco School Dist., E.D.Pa.1993, 828 F.Supp. 1192. Civil Rights 1376(5)

College administrator, as supervisor of campus security officers, could only be held liable under § 1983 if: (1) she directly participated in officers' violation of student's rights; (2) created policy or custom under which unconstitutional practices occurred, or allowed such policy or custom to continue; or (3) was grossly negligent in managing officers. Obilo v. City University of City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1809471, Unreported. Civil Rights 1356; Civil Rights 1358

3676. ---- Failure to report, education and school officials, qualified immunity generally

In order to impose liability on teacher under § 1983 for failing to report sexual abuse of student by another teacher, student was required to establish that teacher knew of facts pointing plainly to conclusion that another teacher was sexually abusing student, that teacher demonstrated deliberate indifference toward constitutional rights of student by failing to take action to stop abuse, and that such failure caused constitutional injury to student; barring such proof, teacher possessed qualified immunity to student's action. Doe v. Rains Independent School Dist., E.D.Tex.1994, 865 F.Supp. 375, reversed 66 F.3d 1402, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(5)

3677. ---- Handicapped students, education and school officials, qualified immunity generally

Parents of female handicapped student who had been sexually abused by school van driver failed to show pattern of unconstitutional behavior as required to render school district liable to parents under § 1983 for governmental custom of failing to receive, investigate, and act upon complaints of sexual misconduct of its employees; parents could point only to one prior complaint regarding driver's behavior toward student. Larson by Larson v. Miller, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1996, 76 F.3d 1446. Civil Rights 1352(2)

School district officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from suit, brought against them in their individual capacities by high school students and their parents, alleging failure to address students' educational and disciplinary problems in violation of their rights under Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), Rehabilitation Act, Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and Fourteenth Amendment; claimants cited several instances of conduct clearly impermissible under IDEA. McCachren v. Blacklick Valley School Dist.,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

W.D.Pa.2002, 217 F.Supp.2d 594.

Qualified immunity for school board members in their individual capacity did not absolve school board itself for alleged § 1983 violation, in § 1983 action brought by autistic student and his parents against school district and its members for violation of Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). Maynard v. Greater Hoyt School Dist. No. 61-4, D.S.D.1995, 876 F.Supp. 1104. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Employees and agents of school committee were not liable under federal civil rights statute for failure to provide student with written Individualized Educational Plan (IEP) or finding of no special needs or for issuance of diploma; special education that would have been offered to student had IEP been drawn up was rejected by her, and school staff had acted in good faith and was entitled to raise defense of qualified immunity. Puffer v. Raynolds, D.Mass.1988, 761 F.Supp. 838. Civil Rights 1376(5)

3678. ---- Medical care, education and school officials, qualified immunity generally

Under Mississippi law, head football coach, athletic trainer, and team physician at state university were entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights and state law suit by estate of football player who died after practice session; trainer and physician were performing discretionary functions in administering medical treatment to player, and coach was sued merely because of his general authority over program. Sorey v. Kellett, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1988, 849 F.2d 960, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(5); Colleges And Universities 8(1)

3679. ---- Searches, education and school officials, qualified immunity generally

School officials did not violate Fourth Amendment's prohibition against unreasonable seizures and were entitled to qualified immunity, when, in acting in loco parentis, they transported one child to school of her sibling so that siblings could be interviewed together in connection with investigation of possible abuse report. Wojcik v. Town of North Smithfield, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1996, 76 F.3d 1. Civil Rights 1376(5); Schools 169.5

State university employees and officials, who coordinated search of campus office of department head as part of investigation into possible child pornography stored on computers located in the office that resulted in seizure of his personal laptop computer, were entitled to qualified immunity from department head's §§ 1983 action, since search and seizure did not violate the Fourth Amendment. Soderstrand v. Oklahoma, ex rel. Bd. of Regents of Oklahoma Agr. and Mechanical Colleges, W.D.Okla.2006, 463 F.Supp.2d 1308. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3680. ---- Freedom of speech, education and school officials, qualified immunity generally

Chancellor was not entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 on New York City community school board member's claim that she was removed from office in retaliation for her political views, in violation of First Amendment. Velez v. Levy, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2005, 401 F.3d 75. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Although student's sketch depicting violent siege on high school, composed off-campus and inadvertently brought on campus by his brother, was protected by First Amendment, principal was entitled to qualified immunity from student's First Amendment claim stemming from his removal from school; given unsettled nature of pertinent First Amendment law, contours of student's First Amendment rights were not clearly established, and principal's determination that drawing was not entitled to First Amendment protection was objectively unreasonable. Porter v. Ascension Parish School Bd., C.A.5 (La.) 2004, 393 F.3d 608, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 2530, 544 U.S. 1062, 161 L.Ed.2d 1112. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Alabama public high school principal who "paddled" student for silently raising his fist during daily flag salute instead of reciting Pledge of Allegiance with rest of class, in lieu of three-day detention that would have delayed student's graduation, was engaged in legitimate discretionary function for purposes of determining his entitlement to qualified immunity against student's Speech Clause claims; disciplining students was such a function, and in state of Alabama spanking students was legitimate part of principal's arsenal for enforcing such discipline. Holloman ex rel. Holloman v. Harland, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2004, 370 F.3d 1252, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 116 Fed.Appx. 254, 2004 WL 1737002. Civil Rights 1376(5)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

University committee chairman's conduct of preparing and reading to university faculty a mental illness memo concerning assistant professor did not rise to the level of an adverse employment action, as required to establish a First Amendment violation, and thus official was entitled to qualified immunity in assistant professor's First Amendment retaliation claim brought pursuant to § 1983. Stavropoulos v. Firestone, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2004, 361 F.3d 610, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 123 Fed.Appx. 388, 2004 WL 3108141, certiorari denied 125 S.Ct. 1850, 544 U.S. 976, 161 L.Ed.2d 727. Civil Rights 1376(10); Colleges And Universities 8.1(1); Constitutional Law 90.1(7.3)

State university chancellor was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by professors alleging violation of their First Amendment rights, on basis of balancing test used to determine whether public employer's termination of employee violates employee's right to free speech, where chancellor failed to establish workplace disruption or, at least, to make connection between professors' speech and workplace atmosphere. Burnham v. Ianni, C.A.8 (Minn.) 1997, 119 F.3d 668. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3681. Employees, qualified immunity generally

Public employees subjected to § 1983 action in their individual capacities can establish qualified immunity if they can show (1) it was not clear at time of official acts that interests asserted by plaintiff was protected by federal statute or Constitution or (2) it was not clear at time of acts at issue that exception did not permit those acts or (3) even if contours of rights were clearly delineated, it was objectively reasonable for them to believe their acts did not violate those rights. Tenenbaum v. Williams, E.D.N.Y.1994, 862 F.Supp. 962, adhered to on denial of reconsideration 907 F.Supp. 606, affirmed in part, vacated in part 193 F.3d 581, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 1832, 529 U.S. 1098, 146 L.Ed.2d 776. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3682. Employers, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Director of federally-funded teaching program was not entitled to qualified immunity, in § 1983 action by program teacher for allegedly violating his constitutional rights by requiring him to sign release of various documents, including medical records, as condition of his contract renewal. Denius v. Dunlap, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 330 F.3d 919. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Public official will normally enjoy qualified immunity from damage liability in public employee job dismissal case as long as job in question potentially concerned matters of partisan political interest and involved at least modicum of policy-making responsibility, access to confidential information, or official communication. Juarbe-Angueira v. Arias, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1987, 831 F.2d 11, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 1222, 485 U.S. 960, 99 L.Ed.2d 423. Officers And Public Employees 116

Supervisor was not qualifiedly immune from city employee's § 1983 gender discrimination claim, inasmuch as supervisor, who had had sexual harassment training, surely knew that he could not harass and discriminate against employee because of her gender. Dunnom v. Bennett, S.D.Ohio 2003, 290 F.Supp.2d 860. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3683. ---- Equal protection, employers, qualified immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Female manager was entitled to qualified immunity on male county employee's § 1983 claim that manager violated his equal protection rights by conducting a "sham" investigation of his complaints regarding county's domestic violence shelter; there was no evidence of a pattern or practice of violations concerning male employees' equal protection rights. Kulikowski v. Board of County Com'rs of County of Boulder, D.Colo.2002, 231 F.Supp.2d 1053 . Civil Rights 1376(10)

In § 1983 action brought by black state employee, employee's superiors were entitled to qualified immunity from employee's equal protection claims where employee could not show that his superiors actively participated in, directed, or authorized any harassment, and employee acknowledged that on several occasions his superiors attempted to assist him by alleviating allegedly discriminatory and hostile work environment. Coney v. Department of Human Resources of State of Ga., M.D.Ga.1992, 787 F.Supp. 1434. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3684. ---- Racial discrimination, employers, qualified immunity generally

Members of board of trustees for public library system and director of system were not entitled to qualified immunity from Caucasian librarians' § 1983 action, alleging race discrimination; defendants violated librarians' constitutional rights by transferring them on basis of race, it was clearly established that intentional discrimination in workplace violated federal law, and record did not indisputably establish that defendants were motivated, at least in part, by lawful reasons. Bogle v. McClure, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 332 F.3d 1347, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 77 Fed.Appx. 510, 2003 WL 21804722, certiorari dismissed 124 S.Ct. 1168, 540 U.S. 1158, 157 L.Ed.2d 1059. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Fact questions existed as to whether second-level supervisor of African-American employee of state agency, and agency's director, exhibited deliberate indifference to employee's equal protection rights by failing to act on employee's complaints of first-level supervisor's allegedly racially discriminatory conduct, precluding summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds in employee's §§ 1981 and 1983 action. Hill v. Taconic Developmental Disabilities Services Office, S.D.N.Y.2003, 283 F.Supp.2d 955, affirmed 82 Fed.Appx. 254, 2003 WL 22879684. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

Black executive director of housing authority was entitled to qualified immunity to claim of racial discrimination in his discharge of white deputy director; deputy director produced no evidence that executive director's articulated nondiscriminatory reasons for the discharge were pretextual or disguises of racial animus. Fauser v. Memphis Housing Authority, W.D.Tenn.1991, 780 F.Supp. 1168. Civil Rights 1529

3685. ---- First Amendment, employers, qualified immunity generally

University officials were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to allegations that they denied tenure to professor in retaliation for his exercise of First Amendment rights. Dube v. State University of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1990, 900 F.2d 587, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 2814, 501 U.S. 1211, 115 L.Ed.2d 986. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Professor failed to show any activity by college officials regarding his denial of tenure that was in violation of employee's constitutional rights and, thus, officials were entitled to qualified immunity in their individual capacities from employee's § 1983 claim alleging violation of his First Amendment rights. Thornton v. Kaplan, D.Colo.1996, 937 F.Supp. 1441. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Speech of staffing clerk at county residential health care facility in conversation with her supervisor, who just returned from meeting at which facility director told supervisor that facility's overstaffing problem required immediate resolution, expressing, in course of defending her staffing decisions, clerk's concerns for quality of resident care at the facility, addressed a matter of public concern, and thus, director was not entitled to qualified immunity against clerk's § 1983 claim for alleged violation of her First Amendment rights by terminating her in retaliation for her speech. English v. County of Orange, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 72 Fed.Appx. 848, 2003 WL 21729006, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Even assuming that police officer could establish First Amendment retaliation claim and deprivation of her liberty interest in her reputation, police department officials were entitled to qualified immunity since it was objectively reasonable for officials to believe that their decision to reassign officer to a different precinct in light of interpersonal differences with her supervisor did not violate clearly established constitutional law. Martinez v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 2006619, Unreported, affirmed 82 Fed.Appx. 253, 2003 WL 22879401. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3686. ---- Affirmative action, employers, qualified immunity generally

Mayor was entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by white applicant for police chief position, for which black was hired, alleging racial discrimination; consent decree directed city to use best efforts to increase representation of blacks in job classification in which blacks had been underrepresented, decree could reasonably be construed to encompass police chief position, and, at time of hiring, it was clearly established that public employer could undertake voluntary affirmative action plan, but parameters of permissible plan were unclear. Stubblefield v. City of Jackson, Miss., S.D.Miss.1994, 871 F.Supp. 903. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Government officials were entitled to qualified immunity from claim that they manipulated scores and positions of police sergeants' eligibility test for "race-conscious purpose of increasing the number of blacks and Hispanics promoted and decreasing the number of whites," where officials had acted pursuant to affirmative action program. Petit v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1991, 766 F.Supp. 607. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3687. ---- Hiring, employers, qualified immunity generally

State officials were entitled to qualified immunity in hiring temporary power plant maintenance worker allegedly based on political affiliation, though unsuccessful candidate for permanent position alleged that state officials chose to fill position on temporary basis to circumvent terms of court-approved settlement prohibiting consideration of political affiliation for nonexempt positions; court would not speculate about allegations of noncompliance with settlement in another case. Tarpley v. Jeffers, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1996, 96 F.3d 921. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3688. ---- Discharges or dismissals, employers, qualified immunity generally

Officials at community college who discharged faculty member, without a name-clearing hearing, were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability in faculty member's § 1983 procedural due process claim; discharge was allegedly made in connection with stigmatizing accusations that faculty member was being investigated for misappropriating school funds, and that he encouraged the performance group he founded to put on events with inappropriate sexual overtones, and faculty member had clearly established protected liberty interest in his good name, reputation, honor, and integrity. Putnam v. Keller, C.A.8 (Neb.) 2003, 332 F.3d 541, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Nurse failed to demonstrate that she had constitutionally protected property interest in continued employment with university medical center, and therefore medical center employees were entitled to qualified immunity in nurse's § 1983 action with regard to nurse's claim that she was deprived of property interest in continued employment without due process, where nurse did not produce evidence that employment manual stated employees could not be fired except for cause, nurse did not provide any information as to what the medical center's grievance procedures involved, and nurse identified no state statute on which a property interest could be grounded. Watson v. University of Utah Medical Center, C.A.10 (Utah) 1996, 75 F.3d 569. Constitutional Law 277(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Chief of police who made stigmatizing public remark regarding officers who resigned rather than face formal charges after sting operation, that former officers were "dirty cops," was entitled to qualified immunity on claim by former officers that they were deprived of liberty interest without due process, since officers had already resigned before chief made stigmatizing remark and it was not clearly established that officers' resignations were "discharges." Barnette v. Folmar, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1995, 64 F.3d 598. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County officials did not have qualified immunity against claims by deputy sheriffs alleging that dismissals were made solely for political activities since party affiliation did not further effective performance of deputies' tasks of serving process, transporting prisoners, and providing security for courtrooms. Burns v. County of Cambria, Pa., C.A.3 (Pa.) 1992, 971 F.2d 1015, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1049, 506 U.S. 1081, 122 L.Ed.2d 357. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Members of board of trustees for public military college were entitled to qualified immunity against § 1983 civil rights claims by former savings and loan association executive vice president, based on allegation that defendants conspired to have vice president terminated in retaliation for public criticism of college, in absence of evidence that board members violated any constitutional right. Burrell v. Board of Trustees of Ga. Military College, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1992, 970 F.2d 785, rehearing denied 978 F.2d 718, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1814, 507 U.S. 1018, 123 L.Ed.2d 445. Conspiracy 13

School officials were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by maintenance supervisor who was discharged after appearing before school board and accusing basketball coach of profanity in presence of students and physical abuse of students; evidence indicated that supervisor's accusation of physical abuse was unfounded, and unrefuted evidence showed that supervisor's speech caused severe disruption in operation of school system. Nieto v. San Perlita Independent School Dist., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1990, 894 F.2d 174. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Government officials will normally enjoy qualified immunity from damage liability in upper level, managerial-type job dismissal cases brought under § 1983 where the government jobs in question are not purely technical or scientific in nature. Figueroa-Rodriguez v. Lopez-Rivera, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1989, 878 F.2d 1478. Civil Rights 1376(10)

County sheriff was not entitled to qualified immunity from liability for his conduct in discharging part-time sheriff's department employee and failing to place her on the jail officer eligibility list, in former employee's action alleging that sheriff made those decisions because employee was in an interracial marriage, in violation of § 1981, § 1983, and Title VII, absent showing that sheriff did not know that employee was in an interracial marriage at time he made decisions. Jones v. Adams County, Wisconsin, W.D.Wis.2003, 297 F.Supp.2d 1132. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Genuine issues of material fact regarding public officials' motivations for taking adverse employment actions against public employees, precluded summary judgment in favor of public officials on grounds of qualified immunity, in public employees' § 1983 claims, asserting political discrimination. Reyes Canada v. Rey Hernandez, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 286 F.Supp.2d 174, reconsideration denied in part 221 F.R.D. 294. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

University officials in their individual capacities were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim of tenured professor that his constitutional free speech rights were violated by nonrenewal of his wife's contract in retaliation for his engaging in speech critical of university and its policies, absent presentation by professor of any case law whatsoever extant at time of officials' action permitting individual to bring free speech claim based on retaliation directed towards that individual's spouse. Anderson-Free v. Steptoe, M.D.Ala.1997, 970 F.Supp. 945. Civil Rights 1376(10)

University vice president was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to allegations that plaintiff was terminated or was not hired by university on basis of her citizenship, in light of vice president's limited role and lack of involvement in decision, as well as deference to counsel; plaintiff alleged that she showed vice president her contract and other documents that explained situation and that vice president promised to call her but never did, and vice president stated that he deferred judgment regarding situation to officials involved in the hiring process, and to legal counsel. Chacko v. Texas A&M University, S.D.Tex.1997, 960 F.Supp. 1180, affirmed 149 F.3d 1175 . Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

State officials being sued in their individual capacities were not entitled to invoke qualified immunity as defense to former employees' claims against them for allegedly intentional and deliberately selecting their positions for elimination because of high concentration of women, persons over 40, and union activists; termination of public employee because of his or her union activities, gender, or age would violate individual's constitutional and federal statutory rights. DeLoreto v. Ment, D.Conn.1996, 944 F.Supp. 1023. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Police chief was entitled to qualified immunity from discharged officers' claims that they were entitled to postdeprivation hearings, where officers waived any postdeprivation hearing rights they might have had by choosing to appeal termination through grievance and arbitration procedure under collective bargaining agreement, and arbitration procedure comported with their due process rights. Liedtke v. Ploeckelman, E.D.Wis.1993, 827 F.Supp. 575. Municipal Corporations 182

3689. ---- Promotions or demotions, employers, qualified immunity generally

Police officers' allegations that they were transferred from prestigious positions to street jobs and passed over for promotions after speaking with coworkers and union representatives about deputy inspector's order forbidding officers from conducting follow-up investigations or assisting detective bureau without inspector's direct authorization stated claim outside qualified immunity defense. Gustafson v. Jones, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1997, 117 F.3d 1015. Constitutional Law 90.1(7.2); Municipal Corporations 184.1

State employee who worked as chief legal counsel for Wisconsin Department of Revenue prior to his demotion to attorney was entitled to some pre-deprivation process prior to being demoted, and thus, Department Secretary was not entitled to dismissal on basis of qualified immunity as to employee's §§ 1983 claim alleging a deprivation of procedural due process; public employees were generally entitled to some process before termination or demotion, employee alleged that he was demoted without pre-deprivation hearing, and record was not sufficiently developed to permit a determination of whether employee's right to pre-deprivation hearing was clearly established at time of its alleged violation. Evans v. Morgan, W.D.Wis.2003, 304 F.Supp.2d 1100. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Community college president could not establish that he failed to promote female athletic instructor to athletic director position due to concerns over her reliability, trustworthiness and loyalty, as would allow qualified immunity defense to instructor's § 1983 claim alleging that failure to promote her to such position violated equal protection clause; president's reasons for not promoting instructor fluctuated and were not corroborated by others. Morris v. Wallace Community College-Selma, S.D.Ala.2001, 125 F.Supp.2d 1315, affirmed 34 Fed.Appx. 388, 2002 WL 518045. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Qualified immunity of government officials alleged to have promoted individual to municipal position on basis of race did not bar plaintiff's claim of intentional racial discrimination in employment. Zervas v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.1993, 817 F.Supp. 148. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3690. ---- Harassment, employers, qualified immunity generally

Town councilwoman, who allegedly subjected male town employee whom she supervised to unwelcome sexual conduct and harassment following his cessation of their romantic relationship, was not entitled to qualified immunity from employee's § 1983 claim; employee had a clearly established constitutional right to be free of sexual discrimination, and a reasonable person in councilwoman's position would have known of such right. Perks v. Town of Huntington, E.D.N.Y.2003, 251 F.Supp.2d 1143. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issue of material fact, as to whether police chief condoned harassment of female county police officer, precluded summary judgment for chief on officer's §§ 1983 claim on basis of qualified immunity. Ensko v. Howard County, Md., D.Md.2006, 423 F.Supp.2d 502. Federal Civil Procedure 2497.1

County sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity from county corrections officer's § 1983 claims, which alleged that sheriff and his department had policy of condoning a "code of silence," resulting in harassment of officer after he reported coworker's misconduct, despite sheriff's hands-off management style; harassment occurred at beginning of sheriff's tenure, and officer produced no evidence that sheriff was on notice of code of silence. Baron v. Hickey, D.Mass.2003, 242 F.Supp.2d 66. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3691. ---- Suspension, employers, qualified immunity generally

Officers had qualified immunity from any violation of due process occurring when they suspended state trooper without pay pending further investigation without prior notice or hearing, based on cause to believe that trooper had engaged in serious domestic abuse that would support criminal charges. Myers v. Shaver, W.D.Va.2003, 245 F.Supp.2d 805. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Terminated secretary's §§ 1983 claims against school superintendent in his individual capacity, alleging violation of her right to procedural due process in context of her suspension without pay and subsequent termination from employment, were not barred by doctrine of qualified immunity. Branham v. May, E.D.Ky.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 668. Civil Rights 1376(10)

3691A. Conservation officers, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Wildlife officers, who were conducting investigation of an illegal killing of a deer on farm property owned and occupied by farmer, did not possess probable cause to arrest farmer, and his right to be free from such an arrest was clearly established for qualified immunity purposes; officers were aware that they could not simply enter onto a private landowner's property and demand access, given that they were told the person they were investigating was not present, the reported criminal activity they were investigating had been completed and therefore required no immediate action, and they did not have a search warrant to search for any parts of the deer that reportedly had been shot out of season. Johnson v. Wolgemuth, S.D.Ohio 2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 1013. Arrest 63.4(14); Civil Rights 1376(6)

3691B. ---- Excessive force, conservation officers, qualified immunity generally

Wildlife officers, who were conducting investigation of an illegal killing of a deer on farm property owned and occupied by farmer, were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to farmer's excessive force claim; it was clearly established at the time of farmer's arrest that a property owner who had committed no crime, as far as the arresting officers knew at the time, and was not under investigation for the commission of any crime, could not be grabbed in a bear hug, thrown against his car, wrestled to the ground, sprayed with mace and handcuffed, and then left untreated for a longer period of time than necessary, merely for insisting that law enforcement officers, who were not in hot pursuit of a suspect, not acting under any other exigent circumstances and not acting pursuant to a warrant, remove themselves from his property and not attempt to re-enter his property without his permission. Johnson v. Wolgemuth, S.D.Ohio 2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 1013. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3692. Environment officials, qualified immunity generally--Generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Executive deputy commissioner of New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to § 1983 First Amendment claim brought by discharged special assistant to General Counsel of DEC; reasonable officials could disagree over special assistant's status as policymaker. Catone v. Spielmann, N.D.N.Y.1997, 966 F.Supp. 1288, appeal dismissed 149 F.3d 156. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Even if suit by owners of barges used for transportation of oil was against individual commissioner and officer of state Department of Environmental Conservation in their personal capacity, they were afforded qualified immunity for violations of constitutional rights resulting from exercise of official powers. Berman Enterprises, Inc. v. Jorling, E.D.N.Y.1992, 793 F.Supp. 408, affirmed 3 F.3d 602, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 883, 510 U.S. 1073, 127 L.Ed.2d 78. States 79

Evidence that New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) representatives were present when warrant was executed was insufficient to establish that subcontractor that had been awarded contract with NMED to help remediate hazardous waste environmental conditions was closely supervised by NMED when it executed warrant, such that subcontractor was entitled to assert qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by property owner. Eden v. Voss, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2004, 105 Fed.Appx. 234, 2004 WL 1535829, Unreported. Civil Rights 1373

3693. ---- Warrantless searches, environment officials, qualified immunity generally

Town officials reasonably relied on town nuisance abatement law and subsequent town board resolution to justify their warrantless entry onto property to remove debris, and thus officials were entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 for their actions, even if officials were required to get judicial warrant before abating nuisance on property. Livant v. Clifton, E.D.N.Y.2004, 334 F.Supp.2d 321. Civil Rights 1376(4)

State environmental inspection officer had qualified immunity in suit by service station after inspector took nonconsensual warrantless administrative search of exposed area surrounding station's underground gasoline storage tanks, which complied with state statute; lawfulness of search and official's attempts to get court order as well as inspector's receipt of legal advice concerning lawfulness of his action demonstrated he did not act in obvious violation of station's rights. V-1 Oil Co. v. State of Wyo., Dept. of Environmental Quality, D.Wyo.1988, 696 F.Supp. 578, affirmed 902 F.2d 1482, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 295, 498 U.S. 920, 112 L.Ed.2d 249. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3694. Executive officials, qualified immunity generally

In general, executive officials are protected from constitutional claims only by qualified immunity; in certain instances, however, executive officials may be entitled to absolute immunity, but such instances are limited to those exceptional situations where it is demonstrated that absolute immunity is essential for conduct of public business. Chalkboard, Inc. v. Brandt, C.A.9 (Ariz.) 1989, 902 F.2d 1375, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 509, 498 U.S. 980, 112 L.Ed.2d 521. Officers And Public Employees 114

3695. Foster parents, qualified immunity generally

Where juvenile officer who took child into custody was protected from liability by qualified immunity, so too were foster parents in whose care he placed child. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3696. Governors, qualified immunity generally

Governor in § 1983 action enjoyed qualified immunity from suit arising out of police action to retake prison after inmate uprising and to rescue hostages. Al-Jundi v. Estate of Rockefeller, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1989, 885 F.2d 1060.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Civil Rights 1376(3)

Former governor of Alabama was qualifiedly immune from employee's § 1983 suit alleging First Amendment violations; record did not contain any inferable facts that could support finding that former governor engaged in any activity, positive or negative, in response to any public criticism employee may have made concerning his job or his employers. Gorman v. Roberts, M.D.Ala.1995, 909 F.Supp. 1493. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Massachusetts' Governor and Attorney General, as state officials, would be entitled in civil rights action to qualified immunity from personal liability for actions taken in "good faith." Feliciano v. DuBois, D.Mass.1994, 846 F.Supp. 1033. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(9)

Former governor of Illinois was entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action based on Illinois Medical Disciplinary Board's revocation of physician's license to practice medicine. McCabe v. Caleel, N.D.Ill.1990, 739 F.Supp. 387, affirmed 931 F.2d 895, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Immunity afforded to executive officials other than President of United States, including governors of several states, is not absolute, but qualified. Tasker v. Moore, S.D.W.Va.1990, 738 F.Supp. 1005. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3697. Investigators, qualified immunity generally

Child abuse investigation of foster care facility conducted by detective was objectively reasonable, and thus detective was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by operator of facility against detective, even though operator alleged that the investigation was motivated by race, where detective received several reports of abuse not only from facility residents, but from school officials, the reports of abuse were corroborated by the existence of apparent physical injury, protocol required an investigation upon reports of abuse, and health and human services official accompanied detective on most of his investigations and attested to the professionalism and thoroughness of the investigation. Omni Behavioral Health v. Miller, C.A.8 (Neb.) 2002, 285 F.3d 646, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

State Gaming Control Board (NGCB) agent was not entitled to qualified immunity for his arrest of casino patron under authority of two state statutes for the patron's refusal to identify himself to the agent, and for his search of the patron's shoes incident to that arrest, even though the agent lawfully detained the patron under Terry v. Ohio based on the agent's reasonable suspicion that the patron was cheating at a card game; a reasonable officer in the agent's position would have known that the patron had a clearly established Fourth Amendment right not to identify himself, in view of two Ninth Circuit cases which unambiguously held that compelling an individual to identify himself during a Terry stop violated the Fourth Amendment. Carey v. Nevada Gaming Control Bd., C.A.9 (Nev.) 2002, 279 F.3d 873. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Investigator who vouched for truth of contents of criminal complaint offered in support of warrant for mayor's arrest was entitled only to qualified, and not absolute, immunity for his actions in subsequent civil rights action. Ireland v. Tunis, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 113 F.3d 1435, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 560, 522 U.S. 996, 139 L.Ed.2d 401. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Employees of county environmental health department, who had conducted investigation into septic tank pumping business prior to district attorney's bringing criminal charges against business's operators for violations of environmental laws and conspiracy to defraud, were entitled to qualified immunity in operators' subsequent §§ 1983 malicious prosecution action; no Fourth Amendment violation occurred from employees' actions since state court had made preliminary finding of probable cause, district attorney rather than employees had made decision to prosecute, and employees' involvement primarily had consisted of referral of information to district attorney. Ayala v. KC Environmental Health, E.D.Cal.2006, 426 F.Supp.2d 1070. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State prosecutor's conduct in investigating evidence against potential criminal defendant prior to his arrest justifies only qualified, rather than absolute, immunity from §§ 1983 liability. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Humane investigator was entitled to qualified immunity under § 1983 for alleged due process violation resulting from his impounding of horses pursuant to Illinois Humane Care for Animals Act without providing owner with predeprivation process; Act provided only for post-deprivation process, and a reasonable government actor could not be required to come to a conclusion that predeprivation process was due despite the fact that the Illinois General Assembly had come to a different conclusion, whether correctly or incorrectly, by passing a statute that provided for only post-deprivation process. Siebert v. Severino, C.D.Ill.2000, 97 F.Supp.2d 882, reversed and remanded 256 F.3d 648. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Counsel for state bar was entitled to qualified immunity in inmate's § 1983 action alleging that state bar failed to conduct proper investigation into inmate's grievance filed against clerk of federal district court; inmate provided no factual support for his allegation of a conspiracy between state bar and clerk, and inmate possessed no federally protected constitutional right to compel state bar to investigate his grievance. Brinson v. McKeeman, W.D.Tex.1997, 992 F.Supp. 897. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Assistant United States attorney who was sued in § 1983 action for malicious prosecution after plaintiff was acquitted of bank fraud charges was entitled only to qualified immunity to the extent he functioned as an investigator rather than as an advocate. Groom v. Fickes, S.D.Tex.1997, 966 F.Supp. 1466, affirmed 129 F.3d 606 . Civil Rights 1376(9)

3698. Judges, qualified immunity generally

State trial judge who had denied individual custody of his children in custody dispute was entitled to qualified immunity for requesting pat down search of that individual; judge had been warned in advance to have security in courtroom because of that individual's supposed "volatility," had learned about angry comment made by individual after court's ruling, and observed him pacing back and forth outside "staff only" door. McPherson v. Kelsey, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1997, 125 F.3d 989, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1370, 523 U.S. 1050, 140 L.Ed.2d 518. Civil Rights 1376(8)

County auditor stated claim against state judges outside qualified immunity defense by alleging that judges refused to reappoint her for reporting specific wrongs and abuses within county government. Warnock v. Pecos County, Tex., C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 116 F.3d 776. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Judge was not entitled to make claim of qualified immunity for stopping motorist on interstate after motorist honked his horn and motioned to judge to change lanes; judge was not peace officer authorized to make stop. Malina v. Gonzales, C.A.5 (La.) 1993, 994 F.2d 1121, rehearing denied 1 F.3d 304, on remand 1993 WL 534163. Judges 36

County probate judge, in his individual capacity, was not entitled to qualified immunity from county employee's race and gender discrimination claims as enforced under § 1983, where right to be free from discrimination in workplace because of race and gender has long been established and reasonable official would have understood that such discrimination was unlawful. Johnson v. Waters, M.D.Ala.1997, 970 F.Supp. 991. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Hearing officer's failure to call two witnesses during state inmate's prison disciplinary proceeding did not violate established constitutional rights of which hearing officer should have known, given general nature of inmate's objection to "this whole hearing," and therefore qualified immunity applied to shield hearing officer from § 1983 liability for alleged violation of inmate's constitutional rights. Johnson v. Coombe, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

1883352, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(8)

3699. License officials, qualified immunity generally

City planner and city engineer were not entitled to qualified immunity from claim they violated property owner's right to procedural due process when they denied building permit, thereby effectively revoking conditional use permit, without notice and an opportunity to be heard; owner had a clearly established right to a pre-deprivation hearing, and defendants did not have a reasonable belief that their actions were constitutional based on alleged reliance on advice of counsel. Holman v. City of Warrenton, D.Or.2002, 242 F.Supp.2d 791. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Owners of nursing home, which had operating certificate revoked and was terminated from Medicare-Medicaid program, did not proffer particularized evidence of improper intent on part of state and federal officials that would defeat qualified immunity in action alleging § 1983 and Bivens claims, although increase in frequency and severity of home's deficiency findings began after owner began complaining to and about New York State Department of Health (DOH) and its practices; allegations of improper and unconstitutional practices were largely lacking or barred by collateral estoppel under New York law based on findings in administrative proceedings, and owner's complaints were to some extent result, rather than cause, of the deficiency findings. Beechwood Restorative Care Center v. Leeds, W.D.N.Y.2004, 317 F.Supp.2d 248, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 436 F.3d 147. Civil Rights 1376(3); United States 50.10(1)

State liquor authority official who denied restaurant owner's application for permission to make alterations to restaurant, based on fact that charges were pending against owner, was shielded by qualified immunity with respect to owner's § 1983 civil rights action, where application was denied pursuant to a long-standing divisional order that liquor licensing board would disapprove an application where revocation proceedings were pending, where the notice sent by liquor authority to restaurant owner stated that assault charge against owner alleged such improper conduct as to warrant revocation, cancellation, or suspension of his license, and where there was no evidence that official was aware of prior plea agreement between owner and authority under which assault charge would be withdrawn. D'Agostino v. New York State Liquor Authority, W.D.N.Y.1996, 913 F.Supp. 757, affirmed 104 F.3d 351. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State daycare licensing personnel would be entitled to qualified immunity on § 1983 civil rights claims alleging that licensing officers violated established minimum licensing standards, refused to follow orders of administrative hearing officer, and violated state administrative code; officials were not shown to have violated operators' procedural due process rights. Bowman v. Alabama Dept. of Human Resources, M.D.Ala.1994, 857 F.Supp. 1524 . Civil Rights 1376(3)

3700. Medical examiners, qualified immunity generally

Parent accused of manslaughter had no due process claim based on medical examiner's failure to reveal exculpatory information concerning cause of victim's death to her, to grand jury, or to prosecutor, and medical examiner was entitled to qualified immunity from that claim. Kompare v. Stein, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1986, 801 F.2d 883. Civil Rights 1088(1)

3701. Mental health officials, qualified immunity generally

Alleged failure of Associate Commissioner for Mental Health of state Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to make sure that staff at state adolescent hospital were trained in suicide assessment and in recognizing suicidal tendencies did not violate clearly established constitutional rights of patients, and Commissioner was entitled to qualified immunity in federal civil rights action brought after patient at hospital attempted to hang himself. Dolihite v. Maughon By and Through Videon, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1996, 74 F.3d 1027, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 185, 519 U.S. 870, 136 L.Ed.2d 123. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Facts alleged by former patient, if proved, were sufficient to support finding that former superintendent of state psychiatric center was consciously indifferent to risk that psychiatric aide, who had two complaints of patient sexual abuse previously filed against him, posed to safety of female patients at center, and, thus, superintendent was not entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by patient, who alleged that she was sexually abused by aide; reasonable hospital official would not have summarily disregarded substantial evidence that pointed to aide's misconduct with regard to prior complaints, only order given to supervisors that prohibited them from assigning aide to work with female patients was one given orally by director of nursing at brief meeting, and superintendent failed to put that directive in writing. Neely v. Feinstein, C.A.9 (Or.) 1995, 50 F.3d 1502. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Employees of State Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities had qualified immunity from civil rights suit by involuntary patient committed pursuant to court order after adjudication of incompetency to stand trial and insanity, notwithstanding later court order restoring patient to civil competency, since under Illinois law, findings of sanity and competency are separate issues and defendants had never received notice of hearing or copy of order which restored the patient's competency; committing order required defendant to not only be committed until his competency was restored but until he had fully recovered from insanity. Smart v. Simonson, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1989, 867 F.2d 429, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3702. Mental hospital officials, qualified immunity generally

Alleged failure of director of state adolescent hospital to make sure that conditions at hospital were safe by, among other things, removing bars from dormitory closets did not violate clearly established constitutional rights of patients, and director was entitled to qualified immunity in federal civil rights action brought after patient attempted to hang himself from bar in closet; director could reasonably have relied on subordinates to ensure that precautionary measures were taken for patients at risk, and there was no evidence of earlier incidents of injury involving alleged inadequacy. Dolihite v. Maughon By and Through Videon, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1996, 74 F.3d 1027, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 185, 519 U.S. 870, 136 L.Ed.2d 123. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Officials of state medical center were qualifiedly immune from claim of detainee, who had been found not guilty of murder by reason of insanity, that officials violated his due process rights by placing him in segregation after he had been committed for psychological treatment, where reasonable person could have believed detainee was danger to himself and others, detainee had history of violence against women, hospital was then treating mentally ill women, and hospital lacked staff to supervise detainee. Huss v. Rogerson, S.D.Iowa 2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 1118. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Officials at state hospital were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to suit by civilly committed patient arising from forced administration of antipsychotic drugs, given that there was no showing that constitutional rights were violated and, in any event, law was not clearly established concerning scope of due process as applied to person judicially committed to institution under adjudication of incompetence, and it was reasonable for officials to believe that, upon determination of compelling reasons, they could force medication without guardian's consent and override guardian's expressed substituted judgment where consent was refused. Jurasek v. Payne, D.Utah 1997, 959 F.Supp. 1441, affirmed 158 F.3d 506. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Superintendent of state psychiatric hospital was entitled to qualified immunity in context of former patient's Eighth Amendment deliberate-indifference claim based on alleged assault by paramedical assistant; while patient sought to rely on letter from superintendent to governor to prove that superintendent failed to act despite knowledge that hospital condition violated patients' constitutional right to safe confinement, superintendent indicated that he was attempting to comply within budgetary constraints to changes and recommendations in area of patient restraint and time-out, and superintendent's awareness of assistant's employment record and incidents of past violence were insufficient to show that superintendent had knowledge of substantial risk of serious harm to patient. Lopes v. Rogers, D.Hawai'i 1995, 909 F.Supp. 737. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Attending psychiatrist during patient's stay at state mental health institute was entitled to qualified immunity from damages stemming from patient's escape absent any allegation rebutting defense expert testimony that psychiatrist's orders regarding safety precautions satisfied his duty of due care to prevent patient's escape. Lindsay v. Northern Virginia Mental Health Institute, E.D.Va.1990, 736 F.Supp. 1392. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3703. Municipal or city officials, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Genuine issue of material fact, as to whether failure by city officials to correct the problems with drainage ditch on African-American property owner's land, or maintain the ditch, so that the ditch did not cause flooding on the property, resulted from improper racial animus precluded summary judgment in favor of officials, in property owner's §§ 1983 equal protection claim. Wilson v. Northcutt, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 441 F.3d 586, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Attorneys and law firm serving as city's outside counsel in connection with litigation with police pension fund and fund's elected trustees were eligible for protection of qualified immunity in subsequent action by fund's investment managers raising federal civil rights and Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) claims, inasmuch as attorneys and firm were clearly acting as city's agents. Cullinan v. Abramson, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1997, 128 F.3d 301, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1560, 523 U.S. 1094, 140 L.Ed.2d 792. Civil Rights 1375; Municipal Corporations 751(1)

Fire chief and deputy chief were not entitled to qualified immunity on §§ 1983 claims for constitutional violations giving rise to firefighters' injuries and loss of life where claims were based on allegations that fire department, the fire chief and deputy chief were on notice of specific circumstances and problems that, if not addressed, were almost certain to result in injury or death. Estate of Phillips v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.2005, 355 F.Supp.2d 212. Civil Rights 1376(10)

City official acted reasonably in issuing code violations against property owners, as would support official's claim to qualified immunity from owners' action under §§ 1983, where official issued violations for grass maintenance and litter after personally observing that grass had grown too long and that there was no garbage enclosure, and owner offered no evidence to suggest that violations issued to them were unwarranted in light of conditions on their properties. Moran v. City of New Rochelle, S.D.N.Y.2004, 346 F.Supp.2d 507. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Town officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from terminated employee's due process claims, where it was clearly established that employee was entitled to adequate notice of pretermination hearing, that officials could not predetermine result of hearing, and that the town administrator lacked authority to terminate employee's employment. Levesque v. Town of Vernon, D.Conn.2004, 341 F.Supp.2d 126. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Current and former commissioners of a city's department of motor vehicles, and a police officer, were entitled to qualified immunity in a § 1983 suit brought by a motorist claiming that his due process rights were violated in connection with suspension of his driver's license for failure to pay a fine; no reasonable jury could conclude that the defendants were objectively unreasonable in believing that due process was satisfied by mailing to the motorist, following a full hearing adjudicating his guilt on a charge of speeding, a notice that his license would be suspended if he did not pay the resulting fine within 14 days. Evans v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2004, 308 F.Supp.2d 316, affirmed 123 Fed.Appx. 433, 2005 WL 348377. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Municipal officials were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action, where property owner alleged that individual officials acted with intent to harm him. Coletta v. City of North Bay Village, S.D.Fla.1997, 962 F.Supp. 1486. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Whether village officials were violating developer's due process rights or equal protection rights when they drew down letter of credit was not clearly established, even if their conduct was not authorized, and thus officials enjoyed qualified immunity from developer's civil rights claim. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Village of South Barrington, N.D.Ill.1997, 958 F.Supp. 1285. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Town officials were not entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by property management company and its nonminority sole shareholder in which it was alleged that town officials conspired to drive company and shareholder out of business due to fact they provided housing to low income minorities. Pisello v. Town of Brookhaven, E.D.N.Y.1996, 933 F.Supp. 202. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Employee of city's Department of Aging was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to § 1983 claim that she conducted incomplete and biased investigation of plaintiff's dispute with neighbor, and thereafter falsely arrested plaintiff in violation of his Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment rights; defendant employee, in her civilian capacity, had no special power or authority to arrest or charge anyone. Spiegel v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1996, 920 F.Supp. 891, affirmed 196 F.3d 717, as amended, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 2688, 530 U.S. 1243, 147 L.Ed.2d 961. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Fire chief had qualified immunity from personal liability in suit brought by landowner claiming that fire chief had required fire sprinklers to be installed on all floors of building, rather than those in which people resided, and subsequently ordered a round-the-clock fire watch, for purpose of depressing building's property value in violation of owners substantive due process rights; fire chief's alleged motivations could not defeat a qualified immunity claim, which required a showing of improper actions, and it was clear that building did not meet fire code and that fire chief could legally order live fire watch. Wohl v. City of Hollywood, S.D.Fla.1995, 915 F.Supp. 339. Civil Rights 1376(4)

District of Columbia officials were not immune from suit in civil rights action under doctrine of qualified immunity. Best v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.1990, 743 F.Supp. 44. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3704. ---- Mayors, municipal or city officials, qualified immunity generally

City mayor was entitled to qualified immunity, in African-American property owner's §§ 1983 equal protection claim, asserting that city officials failed to properly maintain ditch causing flooding on property, absent evidence that mayor was aware of property owner's complaint of continued flooding after first complaint was addressed, or that he was aware of city's failure to maintain the ditch. Wilson v. Northcutt, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2006, 441 F.3d 586, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Mayor was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action brought by arrestee who claimed to have been beaten by arresting officer; there was no evidence that mayor had actual or constructive knowledge of any training or supervisory deficiencies or that he was indifferent to those deficiencies. Febus-Rodriguez v. Betancourt-Lebron, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1994, 14 F.3d 87. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether mayor and other municipal officials act with knowledge of the law with respect to appointing permanent career employees under nine-step merit selection and recruitment process for acquiring permanent career status under Puerto Rico's Autonomous Municipalities Act of 1991 (AMA), but failed to follow that process when appointing new career employees from mayor's political party, precluded summary judgment to mayor and municipal officials as to their qualified immunity defense to First Amendment political discrimination claims brought in §§ 1983 action by employees affiliated with prior mayor's political party, who were not reinstated to permanent career positions after separation from their trust positions. Roman v. Delgado

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Altieri, D.Puerto Rico 2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 94, reconsideration denied 2005 WL 3358906.

Mayor was not entitled to qualified immunity for his decision to deny and defer municipal employee's request to resign, in employee's action alleging political discrimination in violation of the First Amendment, since there remained a material question of fact as to mayor's motion for the challenged employment action. Rivera Torres v. Ortiz Velez, D.Puerto Rico 2002, 306 F.Supp.2d 76, appeal denied 341 F.3d 86, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1875, 541 U.S. 972, 158 L.Ed.2d 466, rehearing denied 124 S.Ct. 2433, 541 U.S. 1083, 158 L.Ed.2d 1001, miscellaneous rulings 125 S.Ct. 242, 543 U.S. 805, 160 L.Ed.2d 7. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Claim against city mayor under § 1983 by plaintiffs seeking to compel access to intercom system installed in closed community pursuant to Controlled Access Law which alleged that mayor delegated powers improperly under such law was too vague and conclusory to withstand mayor's motion for qualified immunity; Controlled Access Law was silent as to whether mayor had any powers to delegate thereunder, claim failed to specify which powers mayor allegedly delegated improperly, and claim was essentially legal conclusion without any factual explanation or support. Figueroa v. Fernandez, D.Puerto Rico 1996, 921 F.Supp. 889. Civil Rights 1398

3705. ---- Freedom of speech, municipal or city officials, qualified immunity generally

City aldermen did not have immunity from art student's § 1983 action stemming from aldermen's removal of his painting from a private institution's exhibition and refusal to release painting until student agreed not to display it; painting showed male former city mayor wearing women's underwear. Nelson v. Streeter, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1994, 16 F.3d 145. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City attorney was not entitled to qualified immunity from liability in individual's § 1983 suit alleging that enforcement of city ordinance barring him from distributing newspapers on public sidewalks violated his First Amendment rights, even though district court had originally upheld ordinance's constitutionality, where city attorney was aware that effect of ordinance was to preclude individual from exercising his free speech rights. Steele v. City of Bemidji, D.Minn.2003, 242 F.Supp.2d 624. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3706. Parole officers, qualified immunity generally

Corrections department employee's decision to initiate proceeding to revoke defendant's supervised release by preparing allegedly baseless violation report and notice of charges was not entitled to absolute immunity from defendant's subsequent § 1983 action, as decision was not judicial or prosecutorial in nature. Wilson v. Kelkhoff, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1996, 86 F.3d 1438. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Members of Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles have absolute immunity when acting in specific cases under their rules, but only qualified immunity when enacting rules pursuant to their rule-making authority granted by state legislature. Walter v. Torres, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1990, 917 F.2d 1379. Pardon And Parole 56

Parole officer was immune from tort liability to victims of parolee's crimes because officer, who was entitled to qualified immunity, did not violate victims' constitutional rights when officer failed to immediately place parolee in custody upon learning that he had violated parole and had made threats against one of the victims. Nelson v. Balazic, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1986, 802 F.2d 1077. Pardon And Parole 56

State parole officers, who filed a report and recommendation to the state parole board concerning prisoner's eligibility for parole, were entitled to qualified, rather than absolute, immunity from suit for damages, as there were fewer safeguards to protect against unreasonable official action than in the case of probation officers acting as an arm of the court in the sentencing process. LaFrance v. Rampone, D.Vt.1988, 678 F.Supp. 72. Pardon And Parole 56

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3707. Police officers, qualified immunity generally--Generally

County sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action alleging constitutional violations in connection with his protest activities, absent allegation of any specific, unconstitutional policy, custom, or practice on part of sheriff, or allegation that sheriff acted in any capacity other than employer of deputies involved in arrest. Summers v. Leis, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2004, 368 F.3d 881, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

In response to suit alleging illegal stop at vehicle checkpoint, police officials who were responsible for planning and ordering checkpoint would be entitled to qualified immunity either if checkpoint in question did not violate clearly established federal rights, or if it was objectively reasonable for officials to believe their conduct was lawful. Maxwell v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 102 F.3d 664, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 57, 522 U.S. 813, 139 L.Ed.2d 21. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Fact that rape kit procedure performed on victim came back negative did not deprive officer of qualified immunity with respect to civil rights action arising out of his arrest of person identified by the victim as the rapist in the absence of any indication that he knew of the negative rape kit report when he made the arrest. Lallemand v. University of Rhode Island, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1993, 9 F.3d 214. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Reasonable officer in state trooper's position could have believed that, in light of state's Megan's law, carrying out parole board's determination that community notification was warranted as to out-of-state sexual offender who transferred his parole to Pennsylvania did not offend equal protection principles, and therefore trooper was entitled to qualified immunity against liability on offender's § 1983 claim that notification subjected him to disparate treatment, as compared to in-state sexual offenders, in violation of his equal protection rights. Lines v. Wargo, W.D.Pa.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 649. Civil Rights 1376(6)

If verbal removal order came from family court intake referee prior to officers' warrantless entry into children's home, then police officers' mistaken reliance on order was reasonable for qualified immunity purposes, but they were not entitled to qualified immunity for anything they did prior to receiving such order, which, they acknowledged, was necessary to authorize entry. O'Donnell v. Brown, W.D.Mich.2004, 335 F.Supp.2d 787. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 was unavailable to sheriff's deputies who allegedly violated newspaper publisher's First Amendment rights by making mass purchase of newspaper critical of sheriff on night before election, where deputies, though acting under color of law, were not on duty, and were not acting within scope of their employment as law enforcement officers. Rossignol v. Voorhaar, D.Md.2004, 321 F.Supp.2d 642. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Law enforcement officers were not entitled to qualified immunity in their official capacities but could raise the defense in their individual capacities in Section 1983 action based on alleged use of excessive force. Murphy v. Bitsoih, D.N.M.2004, 320 F.Supp.2d 1174. Civil Rights 1376(6)

City councilman, police chief, and police officers who responded to domestic violence call at the councilman's home lacked qualified immunity against the councilman's male cohabitant's equal protection claim that they deprived him of police protection out of an illegitimate animus and improper motive toward him, and for reasons unrelated to any legitimate state objective; at the time of the incident, it was clearly established that action depriving a citizen of police protection at the purely personal request of a government official was unrelated to any legitimate state objective, and denied the citizen the right to equal protection of the law. Lunini v. Grayeb, C.D.Ill.2004, 305 F.Supp.2d 893, reversed in part 395 F.3d 761, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Police captain, whose only nonfeasance was a failure to tell detectives of father's history of violence, was entitled to qualified immunity for police defendants' failure to protect victim from shooting by father who was duped by police into believing that his daughter was facing a prison sentence because of victim; captain did not take any affirmative action that created a danger to victim nor did captain 's nonfeasance amount to anything more than simple negligence. Avalos v. City of Glenwood, S.D.Iowa 2003, 269 F.Supp.2d 1091, reversed 382 F.3d 792, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

To be entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 for false arrest, a private person enlisted by a law enforcement official to assist in making an arrest must show that: (1) he acted at the request of one whom he knew to be, and who in fact was, a law enforcement official; (2) the assistance requested by the law enforcement official and provided by the private citizen was not patently abusive; and (3) his actions did not materially deviate from those that the law enforcement official directed him to take. Mejia v. City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2000, 119 F.Supp.2d 232. Civil Rights 1373

Deputy United States marshal was deemed to be "peace officer" under Kentucky law simply by virtue of his office, and thus, could potentially assert defense of qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by individual, who had been stopped by marshal on suspicion that individual had violated state law, in which individual claimed that marshal had violated his Fourth Amendment rights. McNally v. DeWitt, W.D.Ky.1997, 961 F.Supp. 1041. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Doctrine of qualified immunity extends to law enforcement officers' margin of error when they navigate uncharted areas at margins of constitutional criminal law. Smith v. Tolley, E.D.Va.1997, 960 F.Supp. 977. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Current and former chiefs of police, in their individual capacities, were entitled to qualified immunity from ADA action by police officer and, therefore, officer's § 1983 claim relating to alleged ADA violation was prohibited. Morrow v. City of Jacksonville, Ark., E.D.Ark.1996, 941 F.Supp. 816. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Qualified immunity for individual officers revolves around two part inquiry involving: nature of constitutional or statutory right at issue, and reasonableness of law enforcement official's conduct. Comfort v. Town of Pittsfield, D.Me.1996, 924 F.Supp. 1219. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Law enforcement officials are entitled to qualified immunity from personal civil liability under federal civil rights statute in large measure because of the complex tasks performed by officials, and government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights that a reasonable person would have known. David v. Mosley, E.D.Va.1996, 915 F.Supp. 776, affirmed 103 F.3d 117, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 2457, 520 U.S. 1276, 138 L.Ed.2d 214. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity defense under § 1983 is premised on concern that if government officials faced significant threat of liability for performing discretionary tasks, then many persons would be discouraged from accepting responsibilities inherent in public service, or public servants would be unduly inhibited from performing duties; especially in context of police work, decisions must be made in atmosphere of great uncertainty, and holding police officers liable in hindsight for every injurious consequence of their actions would paralyze functions of law enforcement. Roberts v. City of Forest Acres, D.S.C.1995, 902 F.Supp. 662. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers who set up surveillance of and arrested plaintiff who brought civil rights action were shielded from liability by qualified immunity, since officers' conduct was objectively lawful; plaintiff only offered unsubstantiated inferences that one officer was motivated by political gain, and offered no allegations of improper motive by other officer. Aleotti v. Baars, D.D.C.1995, 896 F.Supp. 1, affirmed 107 F.3d 922, 323 U.S.App.D.C.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

289. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Arrestee's conduct following arrest and prior to his placement in holding cell did not indicate that there was substantial risk that he would commit suicide, and police officers involved in arrestee's confinement were entitled to qualified immunity in subsequent § 1983 action, notwithstanding expert's testimony regarding gross deficiencies in operation of police department; conduct cited by plaintiff involved arrestee's cooperative nature, fact that female friend rejected request for help in raising bail, and arrestee's expression of shame over what he had done when he was arrested, and expert's nonconclusory opinions only supported theories based on negligence, not constitutional theories predicated on deliberate indifference to substantial risk of suicide. Bowen v. City of Manchester, D.N.H.1991, 894 F.Supp. 561, affirmed 966 F.2d 13. Civil Rights 1376(6); Evidence 571(3)

Police officer's knowledge of reasonably trustworthy evidence, including police records and witness interviews, would have been sufficient to warrant prudent person in believing that detainee had committed offense under Texas law of appropriating property with intent to deprive owner of property, and, thus, officer was entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action with respect to detainee's seizure-related claims under Fourth Amendment. Reyes v. Granados, S.D.Tex.1995, 879 F.Supp. 711. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer did not have qualified immunity from § 1983 claim in view of failure to rebut allegation that he wrongfully entered plaintiff's home and shot her. DeFrancis v. Bush, E.D.Tex.1994, 859 F.Supp. 1022. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were protected by qualified immunity from § 1983 action brought against them by administrator of estate of passenger killed in automobile accident after officers had passenger ride in vehicle driven by drunk driver following earlier automobile accident, alleging substantive due process violation, as no reasonable police officer would have known what duty was owed to passenger under facts alleged in instant action. Chipman v. City of Florence, E.D.Ky.1994, 858 F.Supp. 87, reconsideration denied 866 F.Supp. 332, affirmed in part, reversed in part 126 F.3d 856, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1796, 523 U.S. 1118, 140 L.Ed.2d 936, on subsequent appeal 2003 WL 22843929. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity is available to police officers for actions taken within scope of their responsibilities due to risk of deterring vigorous legitimate performance of duty if lawsuit are permitted without adequate support. Indomenico v. Brewster, S.D.N.Y.1994, 848 F.Supp. 1136. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3708. ---- Freedom of speech, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Police officers had qualified immunity from any liability, arising from their arrest of demonstrator at presidential appearance, who allegedly tried to violate their order not to occupy one corner of intersection needed to be left open for traffic control purposes; no reasonable officer could believe what he was doing was violating any of protestor's rights. Burnett v. Bottoms, D.Ariz.2005, 368 F.Supp.2d 1033. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Civil rights activists who brought § 1983 action against police officers, stemming from their arrests while attempting to film traffic stops, adequately alleged that officers' purportedly improper conduct while making arrests discriminated against them based on their viewpoints and content of their speech, and thus officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to activists' First Amendment content discrimination claim; claim was not merely duplicative of another count in the complaint alleging a prior restraint claim. McCormick v. City of Lawrence, D.Kan.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 1292, amended 289 F.Supp.2d 1264, affirmed 130 Fed.Appx. 987, 2005 WL 1221632 . Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1395(6)

Police officer who believed that protestors' demonstration was focused on residence of women's health advocate was entitled to qualified immunity from protestors' civil rights claim, which arose from enforcement of targeted residential picketing ban against them. Copper v. City of Fargo, D.N.D.1994, 905 F.Supp. 680, supplemented 905

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

F.Supp. 703. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3709. ---- Right to bear arms, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Police officer who took gun at time of arrest and police chief who held gun pending trial engaged in normal law enforcement actions and were entitled to qualified immunity from liability for deprivation of right to keep and bear arms. Rhea v. Umfleet, E.D.Mo.1988, 680 F.Supp. 322. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3710. ---- Arrests generally, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Officer who had responded to report of gunshots fired toward a home was entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's §§ 1983 claim that officer used excessive force, in violation of Fourth Amendment, particularly in putting his foot on arrestee's face when arrestee was down on the ground; reasonable officer could have believed that force applied was reasonably necessary after multiple shots had been fired and arrestee was not docile as he lay face down on the pavement, and force applied, while undignified in its placement, was not severe in amount. Crosby v. Monroe County, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2004, 394 F.3d 1328. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Officer who had responded to report of gunshots fired toward a home was entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's §§ 1983 claim that his arrest was unlawful; officer had arguable probable cause to make arrest for reckless endangerment after hearing shot from direction of arrestee's home, seeing arrestee carrying shotgun and hearing sound of him ejecting shell from the weapon. Crosby v. Monroe County, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2004, 394 F.3d 1328. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Alabama state trooper, who observed motorist speeding in large tractor truck in area of hazardous conditions on interstate highway, had probable cause to issue reckless driving citation, and to arrest motorist who refused to sign it, and thus trooper was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability, even though motorist was subsequently acquitted of reckless driving charge. Wood v. Kesler, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2003, 323 F.3d 872, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 298, 540 U.S. 879, 157 L.Ed.2d 143. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Deputy who had arrested one of the parties suing for alleged violation of his Fourth Amendment rights at police checkpoint, and another deputy who had delivered sheriff's message that proposed "rock" concert was not to proceed, before sheriff instituted checkpoints to check licenses of motorists traveling along road leading to concert, were both entitled to qualified immunity on resulting civil rights claims, where summary judgment evidence indicated that first deputy had conducted license checks of each motorist driving on road leading to property owner's farm without regard to motorist's destination, and had made arrests only when there was problem with license or when contraband was discovered in plain view or after consensual search, and where there was no evidence that deputies had abused their discretion to deny use of forum for First-Amendment-protected expression or were involved in arrestees' ability to make bond or in crowded condition of jail where they were held. Collins v. Ainsworth, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2004, 382 F.3d 529, on subsequent appeal 2005 WL 3502174, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1661, 164 L.Ed.2d 397. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Remand for new trial was required in arrestee's § 1983 action, in which jury rendered legally inconsistent special verdicts, finding both that police officer was entitled to qualified immunity for his conduct in shooting arrestee, and officer used excessive force, where jury was not specifically instructed on qualified immunity issue, and both special verdict questions asked jury to decide if officer's conduct was objectively reasonable, so that there was a probability that jury was confused. Stephenson v. Doe, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 332 F.3d 68. Federal Courts 944

On remand for new trial in arrestee's § 1983 action, in which jury previously rendered legally inconsistent special verdicts, finding both that police officer was entitled to qualified immunity for his conduct in shooting arrestee, and that officer used excessive force, the district court should instruct the jury on the excessive force issue, but not on qualified immunity; later, if jury returned a verdict of excessive force against officer, the district court would be required to decide the issue of qualified immunity, based upon special interrogatories submitted to the jury, such as whether officer gave warnings to arrestee and whether arrestee was armed with weapon. Stephenson v. Doe, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 332 F.3d 68. Civil Rights 1429; Civil Rights 1437; Federal Courts 955

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police detective who made arrest on basis of warrant he knew was no longer supported by probable or arguable probable cause was not entitled to qualified immunity against arrestee's § 1983 action under related offense doctrine, when charged offense and alleged uncharged offense occurred outside detective's presence on different dates, and officer not only lacked first-hand knowledge of evidence allegedly connecting defendant to both offenses, but possessed evidence excluding possibility that defendant committed both offenses; offenses lacked requisite relationship. Vance v. Nunnery, C.A.5 (La.) 1998, 137 F.3d 270. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action alleging that officer lacked probable cause to arrest manager of rehabilitative center for troubled boys for having failed to report child abuse; officer knew that incident had been reported to HRS central abuse hotline and that manager had additionally submitted written report, and there was no requirement that abuse also be reported to local law enforcement or to local HRS office. Madiwale v. Savaiko, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1997, 117 F.3d 1321. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer who obtained arrest warrants for possession of marijuana could rely on validity of those warrants, thus entitling him to qualified immunity in arrestees' § 1983 action alleging, inter alia, false arrest, despite arrestees' claim that officer failed to inform issuing magistrate that officer stopped one arrestee prior to finding marijuana only because arrestee was black and from out of town, two impermissible reasons; none of those allegations formed basis of arrestees' complaints, arrestees offered no proof of them at trial, and arrestees did not allege that officer failed to reveal details of how he obtained marijuana or that he conducted illegal search. Simms v. Village of Albion, N.Y., C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 115 F.3d 1098. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers did not act with deliberate indifference to due process rights of arrestee who died of "positional asphyxiation" after he was taken into custody and detained in automobile with his feet on rear seat and his head in space between front and rear seats, in which position he was unable to adequately inhale oxygen, and were entitled to qualified immunity in action brought following arrestee's death; there was no indication officers knew of and consciously disregarded risk of suffocation, and evidence indicated that officers had not received training on how to recognize signs of suffocation in prisoners being transported. Cottrell v. Caldwell, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1996, 85 F.3d 1480. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police chief was entitled to defense of qualified immunity in § 1983 action alleging unlawful arrest by police officer of father for alleged sexual abuse; chief was not personally or directly involved in alleged constitutional violation, he did not investigate claims of abuse, he was not present at arrest, and chief's act of signing and notarizing complaint after arrest was insufficient to establish connection between chief and alleged constitutional violation. Ripson v. Alles, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1994, 21 F.3d 805, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Law enforcement officers who arrested judgment debtor pursuant to facially valid writ of execution were entitled to qualified immunity in judgment debtor's subsequent civil rights suit. Whiting v. Kirk, C.A.1 (R.I.) 1992, 960 F.2d 248, as amended. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Sheriff's deputy and assistant district attorney, who advised deputy regarding probable cause, were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for arresting father for rape, on what later proved to be fabricated complaint of teenaged daughter, where there was arguable probable cause, based on daughter's report and medical report that was consistent with her account, notwithstanding questions as to her veracity arising from her history of drug abuse and a writing suggesting that she might have planned to frame father for abuse. Donovan v. Briggs, W.D.N.Y.2003, 250 F.Supp.2d 242. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(9)

In a §§ 1983 suit for damages based on an arrest allegedly without probable cause, courts must grant an arresting officer qualified immunity if either (1) it was objectively reasonable for the officer to believe that probable cause existed, or (2) officers of reasonable competence could disagree on whether the probable cause test was met. Prowisor v. Bon-Ton, Inc., S.D.N.Y.2006, 426 F.Supp.2d 165. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether arresting officer was acting in her discretionary authority as a county police officer when causing the arrest of a neighbor for simple assault, or was instead acting as a private citizen seeking the arrest of a neighbor, precluded summary judgment for officer on her claim of qualified immunity in neighbor's §§ 1983 action against officer in her individual capacity. Payne v. DeKalb County, N.D.Ga.2004, 414 F.Supp.2d 1158. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Sheriff's deputies were entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 for their arrest of suspect pursuant to bench warrant issued by family court judge in connection with child support proceedings, even if warrant was erroneous, where warrant was facially valid, and deputies had no reason to believe that warrant was not valid. Cogswell v. County of Suffolk Deputy Sheriff's Dept., E.D.N.Y.2005, 375 F.Supp.2d 182. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers had probable cause to arrest civil process server for impersonating law enforcement officer under Hawai'i law, and thus were entitled to qualified immunity against server's §§ 1983 action; server identified himself to officers as deputy sheriff but could not produce verification, sheriff's office told officers that server had no law enforcement authority, and officers were told that server had threatened to arrest citizen. Orso v. Cobb, D.Hawai'i 2004, 348 F.Supp.2d 1165. Arrest 63.4(7.1); Arrest 63.4(13); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Town's police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in §§ 1983 Fourth Amendment suit arising from officer's alleged actions in effecting arrest on misdemeanor warrant, consisting of throwing arrestee on bed while arrestee was half-naked, handcuffing him so tightly that his wrists bled and refusing to remove cuffs, and hurrying him out of house without permitting him to cover himself; arrestee's right to be free from unreasonable seizures involving excessively tight handcuffs, and forcible removal from his home naked from waist down, was clearly established on date of arrest. Armstead v. Township of Upper Dublin, E.D.Pa.2004, 347 F.Supp.2d 188. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's action under §§ 1983, alleging that officer arrested him for drug trafficking based on deficient arrest warrant; it was reasonable for officer to believe statement of arrestee's girlfriend that trafficking quantity of what appeared to be cocaine belonged to arrestee, who was reasonably believed to be a trafficking-level drug dealer. Joseph v. Kimple, S.D.Ga.2004, 343 F.Supp.2d 1196, affirmed 391 F.3d 1276. Civil Rights 1376(6)

To support claim to qualified immunity from §§ 1983 case alleging Fourth Amendment violation, police can claim "arguable" probable cause, i.e., that a reasonable officer in the same circumstance and possessing the same knowledge as the defendant could have believed that probable cause existed to search and/or arrest the plaintiff. Joseph v. Kimple, S.D.Ga.2004, 343 F.Supp.2d 1196, affirmed 391 F.3d 1276. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity applied to shield officer from § 1983 liability for imprisonment of motorist that followed seizure of motorist based on suspicion that he was driving while intoxicated, and for related claim alleging intentional infliction of emotional distress, given that officer merely took motorist into custody and transported him to medical facility after arriving at accident scene and discovering that motorist needed medical attention. Cuvo v. De Bias, E.D.Pa.2004, 339 F.Supp.2d 650, affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded 169 Fed.Appx. 688, 2006 WL 332546. Civil Rights 1376(6); Municipal Corporations 747(3)

Police chief was not entitled to qualified immunity in §§ 1983 action arising out of the unlawful mass arrest of a group of people, including demonstrators, who were gathered in a park; even if he was unaware that no order to disperse had been given to the group, chief did not act in an objectively reasonable manner in approving the arrests

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

inasmuch as he had an opportunity and duty to ascertain whether a dispersal order had been given by his subordinates and to investigate the justification for the mass arrests, but failed to do so. Barham v. Ramsey, D.D.C.2004, 338 F.Supp.2d 48, affirmed in part 434 F.3d 565, 369 U.S.App.D.C. 146. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were not entitled to summary judgment on constitutional claims on basis of qualified immunity where disputed issues of fact concerning the existence of exigent circumstances remained with respect to unlawful entry claim, where genuine issues of fact concerning the reasonableness of force employed by officers with respect to excessive force claim, and where factual issues remained underlying malicious prosecution and First Amendment retaliation claims. Webster v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2004, 333 F.Supp.2d 184. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Civil rights activists who brought § 1983 action against police officers, stemming from their arrests while attempting to film traffic stops, adequately alleged that officers' purportedly improper conduct while making arrests constituted prior restraint upon their rights to criticize and journalistically record traffic stops, and thus officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to activists' claims under First Amendment; activists allegations that they were engaged in constitutionally protected speech were not conclusory, and activists' arrests could have preemptively denied them right to engage in future endeavors. McCormick v. City of Lawrence, D.Kan.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 1292, amended 289 F.Supp.2d 1264, affirmed 130 Fed.Appx. 987, 2005 WL 1221632. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1395(6)

Although Fish and Wildlife Service complied with notice requirements imposed by Endangered Species Act (ESA) and Administrative Procedure Act (APA) with respect to timing and method of giving notice of proposed designation of critical habitat for Alameda whipsnake, which had been listed as threatened pursuant to ESA, notice was deficient to the extent that final rule failed to comport with statutory definition of critical habitat, in that it deprived public of meaningful opportunity to comment and to offer informed criticism and comments. Home Builders Ass'n of Northern California v. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, E.D.Cal.2003, 268 F.Supp.2d 1197. Environmental Law 541

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's unreasonable seizure claim under § 1983, even if warrantless arrest, for an assault not involving severe personal injury, was an arrest for a misdemeanor not committed in an officer's presence which violated Maryland law; arrest was supported by probable cause and thus did not violate Fourth Amendment, inasmuch as officer had spoken with assault victims, saw one of them being treated, and received confirmation from an independent witness. Shultz v. Smith, D.Md.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 278. Civil Rights 214(6)

Police sergeant who was precinct desk officer was entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's § 1983 claims where, when officers appeared before sergeant with arrestee, sergeant asked basis for arrest and officers said arrest was based on a warrant; even though arrestee protested repeatedly to sergeant that he had never been arrested before and that officers had wrong person, sergeant was under no obligation to conduct an investigation into arrestee's claim of innocence. Johnson v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 631. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Chief of police and individual police officers enjoy qualified immunity from father's § 1983 claims that they violated his constitutional rights by refusing to arrest mother of his children, refusing to arrest individuals allegedly hiding his children, refusing to recognize his right to visit his children, and not willingly releasing information to him. Tidik v. Ritsema, E.D.Mich.1996, 938 F.Supp. 416. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Transit authority police had probable cause to arrest bus passenger for assaulting bus driver, and therefore qualified immunity protected police from passenger's claim under federal civil rights statute, where bus driver told police that passenger spat in his face and attempted to flee bus, and passenger refused to provide any identification. Saidi v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, D.D.C.1996, 928 F.Supp. 21. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Deputy sheriff had requisite probable cause to make legal "in presence" arrest for theft, and, therefore, deputy sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's civil rights action, where deputy sheriff confirmed ownership of property in question with landowner, even though landowner was out of state, there were no other eyewitnesses, another deputy sheriff vouched for arrestee's credibility, and deputy sheriff failed to file any court papers commencing prosecution. Barber v. Guay, D.Me.1995, 910 F.Supp. 790. Arrest 63.4(6); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity under § 1983 for alleged wrongful arrest of National Guard member for speeding where officer raised compelling arguments that the treason, felony, or breach of peace exception to military members' constitutional and statutory immunity to arrest encompassed all crimes, and that immunity thus applied only to civil arrests. Roberts v. City of Forest Acres, D.S.C.1995, 902 F.Supp. 662. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Arresting police officer was entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights suit brought by arrestee who was acquitted of charges, even though officer did not provide magistrate judge who issued arrest warrant with exculpatory statements of eyewitness, where magistrate had sufficient reliably trustworthy information from the officer to find that probable cause existed to justify arrest. Rock v. Lowe, S.D.Ga.1995, 893 F.Supp. 1573. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Evidence showed that police officer, who was involved in romantic relationship with arrestee's wife, provided false information to court in seeking arrest warrant and provided false information in subsequent arraignment and bail hearing for arrestee, and, thus, officer was barred from raising defense of qualified immunity to arrestee's civil rights action. Phelan v. Thompson, D.N.H.1994, 889 F.Supp. 517. Civil Rights 1423

Police officer posing as "bum" as part of undercover operation to reduce crimes against persons before, during, and after parades did not have arguable probable cause under Alabama law to arrest for harassment plaintiff who, after "bum" had approached him three times for money, raised his fist and said "Get the hell out of here" and thus, officer was not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to plaintiff's § 1983 claim; plaintiff had cause for concern since there were few people around and "bum" kept one hand in his pocket as though he could have weapon and refused to leave plaintiff alone and plaintiff's statement was attempt to avoid, not provoke, a confrontation. Beech v. City of Mobile, S.D.Ala.1994, 874 F.Supp. 1305. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Plaintiffs failed to establish that police officers who investigated incident leading to their arrest without probable cause had requisite causation under § 1983, where their superior made decision to arrest. Wagner v. County of Cattaraugus, W.D.N.Y.1994, 866 F.Supp. 709. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Police chief was not entitled to qualified immunity for arresting plaintiff for driving under the influence, despite his having observed plaintiff's car run a stop sign and despite strong alcoholic smell emanating from the vehicle, where plaintiff told officer she was not "drunk" and officer did not administer any field sobriety test to plaintiff before arresting her. Hurst v. Finley, M.D.Ala.1994, 857 F.Supp. 1517, affirmed 63 F.3d 1112. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity was not available to sheriff who was alleged policymaker, undercover officer, and deputy sheriffs who participated in civil rights plaintiff's arrest and events leading up to arrest. Cortese v. Black, D.Colo.1993, 838 F.Supp. 485. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Probable cause existed to believe that plaintiff had committed disorderly conduct, under Illinois law, and therefore police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in false arrest claim, even though alleged conduct did not occur in public and was in form of writings; plaintiff posted numerous hate messages to an internet website bulletin board. Haddad v. Higgins, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 66 Fed.Appx. 62, 2003 WL 21153391, Unreported, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 574, 540 U.S. 1021, 157 L.Ed.2d 437, rehearing denied 124 S.Ct. 1193, 540 U.S. 1170, 157 L.Ed.2d 1221. False Imprisonment 13

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3711. ---- Stops, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Deputy sheriff who was on duty was acting within purview of his discretionary authority when he stopped speeding vehicle in which plaintiff was a passenger and detained plaintiff and her companions, for purpose of determining availability of defense of qualified immunity for seizure of plaintiff. Courson v. McMillian, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1991, 939 F.2d 1479. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Officers who responded to a call for back-up during a traffic stop were entitled to qualified immunity on passengers' § 1983 claims of unreasonable detention in violation of their Fourth Amendment rights; responding officers did not personally participate in alleged unlawful stop and detention, officers merely responded to call for back-up, and officers were entitled to rely on statements made by stopping officer and officer who first observed suspicious vehicle. Lewis v. City of Topeka, Kansas, D.Kan.2004, 305 F.Supp.2d 1209. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3712. ---- Investigations, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Deputy sheriff who served as a school resource officer (SRO) at elementary school was acting within scope of his discretionary authority when he detained and handcuffed student who allegedly acted in disrespectful manner and threatened teacher during physical education class, thus supporting deputy's claim of qualified immunity in student's resulting §§ 1983 action alleging violation of her Fourth Amendment rights; deputy was charged with responsibility to investigate criminal activity that might be taking place at school and allegedly believed that student had committed a misdemeanor. Gray ex rel. Alexander v. Bostic, C.A.11 (Ala.) 2006, 458 F.3d 1295. Civil Rights 1376(6)

That state trooper possessed some race-neutral basis for initiating investigation into immigration status of Hispanic motorists was insufficient, standing alone, to entitle trooper to qualified immunity from liability on motorists' equal protection claims if motorists could demonstrate that trooper was partly motivated by discriminatory purpose. Farm Labor Organizing Committee v. Ohio State Highway Patrol, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2002, 308 F.3d 523. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police had qualified immunity in § 1983 action alleging violation of constitutional rights arising from claim of false arrest, malicious prosecution and abuse of process made by apartment resident; police acted with required objective reasonableness when they arrested resident for assault, based on claim by son that resident had punched father in face, corroborated by presence of blood in father's apartment. Fernandez v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21756140, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Even if campus security officers lacked probable cause to detain student accused of sexually assaulting classmate, their reliance on victim complaint was objectively reasonable, and thus they were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability. Obilo v. City University of City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1809471, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(5); Civil Rights 1376(6)

3713. ---- Excessive use of force, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Where an excessive force claim is predicated solely on allegations the arresting officer lacked the power to make an arrest, the excessive force claim is entirely derivative of, and is subsumed within, the unlawful arrest claim. Bashir v. Rockdale County, Ga., C.A.11 (Ga.) 2006, 445 F.3d 1323. Civil Rights 1088(4)

Force used to detain babysitter's husband for violent felony of molesting child was excessive if husband was subject to a lawful investigative detention, and, thus, law enforcement officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from §§ 1983 liability; after grabbing husband by the arm and pulling him from the doorway of his home, the officers handcuffed him and placed him in the back seat of a locked squad car in the middle of the night even though he had voluntarily opened door of home to police, did not attempt to flee, and was cooperating, and nothing indicated that he posed an immediate threat to any person's safety. Cortez v. McCauley, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2006, 438 F.3d 980. Arrest 68(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether sheriff and his deputies acted reasonably when they attempted to place disabled arrestee in their cruiser after arrestee informed them that his legs would not bend precluded summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds in arrestee's §§ 1983 excessive force action. St. John v. Hickey, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 411 F.3d 762, on remand 2006 WL 293790. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Police officer did not recklessly and deliberately create the need to use force by cornering plaintiff, who was armed with a knife, in a bedroom, ordering her to come out, and attempting to open the door, and therefore officer was entitled to qualified immunity in §§ 1983 action alleging that officer used excessive force in shooting plaintiff; officer was aware that plaintiff was attempting to escape through a window. Jiron v. City of Lakewood, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2004, 392 F.3d 410. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Reasonable officer in police officer's situation could have believed that he had probable cause to search for suspected explosives in parade protester's backpack, and therefore officer was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for unlawful arrest and search of backpack, when officer was confronted with incendiary situation in which violent hate group was about to march down city streets through crowd of impassioned and potentially violent protesters and supporters, officer knew that stolen explosives were at large and could be present at parade, and officer, after observing protester's heavy backpack, with cylindrical bulges at its base, was left with unpleasant choice between arresting protester and searching backpack or allowing protester to proceed into crowd despite officer's suspicion that he was carrying explosives. Graves v. City of Coeur D'Alene, C.A.9 (Idaho) 2003, 339 F.3d 828. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Substantive due process rights of suspect who was shot at but not hit were not violated, and police officers were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for claimed use of excessive force against him; suspect incurred no physical injury as result of shooting incident, and force was used in self-defense and defense of fellow officer, not maliciously and sadistically to cause harm. Carr v. Tatangelo, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 338 F.3d 1259, as amended. Civil Rights 1376(6); Constitutional Law 253(1); Municipal Corporations 747(3)

Genuine issues of material fact as to whether police officer used excessive force in arresting arrestee for obstructing officer in performance of his duties and disorderly conduct, under totality of circumstances, precluded summary judgment for officer on basis of qualified immunity in arrestee's action under § 1983 alleging violation of Fourth Amendment. Payne v. Pauley, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2003, 337 F.3d 767. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Arrestee did not waive his objection to qualified immunity defense raised by officer on appeal, in § 1983 excessive force action, even though arrestee did not seek judgment as a matter of law on the qualified immunity issue or a new trial following special jury verdict in favor of officer on qualified immunity issue, where jury made arguably inconsistent determination in special verdict that officer used excessive force, so that enforcing the qualified immunity verdict could unjustly deprive arrestee of right to recover for violation of constitutional rights. Stephenson v. Doe, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 332 F.3d 68. Federal Courts 633

Special jury verdict finding that police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 excessive force claim for his conduct in shooting arrestee was legally inconsistent with the verdict in favor of arrestee in his excessive force claim, and was required to be set aside, where jury was not presented with any evidence, instructions or argument about possible ambiguities in the law with respect to the circumstances of the case or about officer's state of knowledge about excessive force law under the circumstances. Stephenson v. Doe, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 332 F.3d 68. Civil Rights 1424

Deputy sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by parents of individual shot and killed by deputy, which alleged use of excessive force in violation of Fourth Amendment, as deputy acted in self-defense

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

when he shot individual after individual punched deputy, ran knife across deputy's stomach, and continued toward deputy even after being fired upon once. Romero v. Board of County Com'rs of County of Lake, State of Colo., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1995, 60 F.3d 702, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 776, 516 U.S. 1073, 133 L.Ed.2d 728. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to arrestee's excessive force claim absent anything other than general assertion by arrestee that officers used excessive force in placing him on ground while effecting arrest; arrestee conceded that officers were entitled to place him on ground physically in course of completing arrest, and arrestee did not present sufficient evidence to show that officers' actions were objectively unreasonable in circumstances, but only pointed to fact that he cut his abdomen when he struck ground. Edwards v. Giles, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1995, 51 F.3d 155. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Defense of qualified immunity is available to law enforcement officer in claims alleging excessive use of force in violation of Fourth Amendment. Slattery v. Rizzo, C.A.4 (Va.) 1991, 939 F.2d 213. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Allegations that police officer punched arrestee in the face, without first identifying himself as police officer and without preceding physical force on arrestee's part, and caused arrestee physical injury necessitating medical treatment supported arrestee's §§ 1983 claim for use of excessive force, and therefore officer was not entitled to dismissal for failure to state claim based on qualified immunity, notwithstanding officer's different version of incident. Williams v. City of Mount Vernon, S.D.N.Y.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 146. Civil Rights 1395(6)

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity on claim of excessive force for allegedly striking driver twice in the forehead with can of made, with sufficient force to cause contusion, when driver objected to his car being searched during stop that allegedly had been based on mere hunch that driver might have drugs, and then throwing driver to ground, pushing his face down, and twisting his arms behind his back, causing or aggravating shoulder injury, when driver allegedly fled in fear of additional harm in response to being struck; force was unreasonable under facts alleged, and reasonable officer could have believed otherwise. Cowles v. Peterson, E.D.Va.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 472. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Jury could find that police officer had qualified immunity from motorist's claim that officer used excessive force in arresting him for driving while under influence (DWI), in light of testimony of officer and expert that officer followed standard police procedures in handling unruly suspect when he applied rear wrist lock. Kent v. Katz, D.Vt.2004, 327 F.Supp.2d 302, affirmed 398 F.3d 644, rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 238, 163 L.Ed.2d 220. Civil Rights 1432

Police officers involved in victim's shooting death were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to section 1983 claim based on their alleged intentional manipulation of the scene by planting of firearm next to victim's body; since issue was not completely settled, it was at least questionable that victim's survivors could maintain a section 1983 cause of action for depravation of federally protected rights under the premise of cover-up, and jury question existed as to whether police officers planted rifle. Gonzalez Perez v. Gomez Aguila, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 312 F.Supp.2d 161. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers involved in victim's shooting death were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to section 1983 excessive force claims where there was conflicting evidence as to whether victim was carrying a firearm, and thus committing a crime under Puerto Rico law, and therefore factual dispute existed regarding the reasonableness of the officers' actions. Gonzalez Perez v. Gomez Aguila, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 312 F.Supp.2d 161. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Three police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from motorist's claim, under § 1983, that they used excessive force during warrantless arrest for driving under the influence; motorist offered no resistance to officers' efforts to place him under arrest, precluding finding that any reasonably well-trained officers confronted with similar circumstances could reasonably have believed that their actions were lawful under clearly established law. Blackstone v. Quirino, D.Me.2004, 309 F.Supp.2d 117. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police officer who allegedly shot fleeing pedestrian in the back after the pedestrian, whom the officer detained at gunpoint from his patrol car, allegedly dropped his handgun in the passenger side of the front seat of the patrol car, could not reasonably have believed that he was entitled to use deadly force without warning against the fleeing pedestrian to apprehend him and prevent his escape, and thus, the officer was not entitled to qualified immunity on pedestrian's § 1983 claim for use of excessive force under the Fourth Amendment. Pablo Hernandez v. City of Miami, S.D.Fla.2004, 302 F.Supp.2d 1373, affirmed 124 Fed.Appx. 642, 2004 WL 3106626. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers' actions of using deadly force to apprehend mentally ill driver, if proven, violated driver's constitutional rights, for purposes of qualified immunity analysis in § 1983 action brought by survivors of driver against the police officers, where the driver was allegedly traveling in a vehicle, not steered toward any officer, at a slow rate of speed and accelerated only slightly by less than 4 miles per hour. Waterman v. Batton, D.Md.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 709, reversed 393 F.3d 471. Automobiles 349(14.1)

A qualified immunity defense is of less value when raised in defense of an excessive force claim. Eberle v. City of Newton, D.Kan.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 1269, motion to amend denied 296 F.Supp.2d 1276. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Civil rights activist who brought § 1983 action against police officers, stemming from his arrest while attempting to film traffic stops, adequately alleged that officer maliciously and deliberately inflicted excruciating pain upon him as other officer failed to intervene, and thus officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to activist's excessive force claim under Fourth Amendment; activist alleged that officer drove his knee into his back repeatedly while activist was face-down, handcuffed and helpless on ground, and wrenched down on inward-facing portion of handcuffs on activist's wrists in manner that was rude, aggressive and violent. McCormick v. City of Lawrence, D.Kan.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 1292, amended 289 F.Supp.2d 1264, affirmed 130 Fed.Appx. 987, 2005 WL 1221632. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1395(6)

Arresting officer was entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 for her alleged use of excessive force in arresting and detaining suspect, even if fact issues remained as to whether there was probable cause for arrest and whether excessive force was used, where officer had reasonable suspicion sufficient to support Terry stop of suspect, and allegedly excessive force was employed by another officer when he kicked suspect's legs out from under her while she was still being held in "escort position" by first officer. Hale v. Vance, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 725. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's unreasonable seizure claim under § 1983, even if warrantless arrest, for an assault not involving severe personal injury, was an arrest for a misdemeanor not committed in an officer's presence which violated Maryland law; arrest was supported by probable cause and thus did not violate Fourth Amendment, inasmuch as officer had spoken with assault victims, saw one of them being treated, and received confirmation from an independent witness. Shultz v. Smith, D.Md.2003, 264 F.Supp.2d 278. Civil Rights 214(6)

Under the first prong of the qualified immunity analysis for § 1983 claim, court was required to decide whether, viewed in the light most favorable to arrestee, the facts alleged show that police officer violated arrestee's right to be free from the use of excessive force during arrest. Fultz v. Whittaker, W.D.Ky.2003, 261 F.Supp.2d 767, appeal dismissed 88 Fed.Appx. 896, 2004 WL 360389. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether police officer applied handcuffs to citizen's wrists in excessively forceful fashion, precluding summary judgment on officer's claim to qualified immunity in § 1983 lawsuit brought by citizen alleging violation of her Fourth Amendment right to be free from unreasonable seizure; citizen stated that officer pulled handcuffs "as tight as he could get them," so that they were "very, very, very tight," and citizen submitted photographic evidence of bruise on one of her wrists allegedly resulting from tightly applied handcuffs. Lyons v. City of Xenia, OH, S.D.Ohio 2003, 258 F.Supp.2d 761, affirmed in part, reversed in part 90 Fed.Appx. 835, 2004 WL 187555, vacated 125 S.Ct. 808, 543 U.S. 1033, 160 L.Ed.2d 596, on remand 417 F.3d 565. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Issue of whether police officers, who allegedly intentionally burned house while conducting search, owed any duty to house's occupant under Michigan's "public duty" doctrine was irrelevant to determination of whether such officers were entitled to qualified immunity in occupant's § 1983 action against officers for use of excessive force in violation of Fourth Amendment. Johnson v. City of Detroit, E.D.Mich.1996, 944 F.Supp. 586. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity on § 1983 claim of excessive force based on handcuffing while in cell where arrestee was handcuffed in front, rather than in rear, where his movement was not restricted, and where he could shake the bars of his cell and move his hands; at a minimum, reasonably competent officers could disagree over whether placing arrestee in handcuffs throughout his detention violated his Fourth Amendment rights. Johnson v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1996, 940 F.Supp. 631. Civil Rights 1376(6)

All police officers present at scene of arrest, including officer who actually handcuffed arrestee, were entitled to qualified immunity in connection with arrestee's § 1983 claim premised on excessive force; officers were executing arrest warrant based on arrestee's alleged phone harassment of his former girlfriend, officers were aware that arrestee had threatened his girlfriend, and although arrestee told officers that he had previously fractured wrist, he exhibited no physical manifestation of fracture, was lifting weights in gym at time of arrest, and was six inches taller and almost 100 pounds heavier than officer who applied handcuffs. Trout v. Frega, N.D.Ill.1996, 926 F.Supp. 117. Civil Rights 1376(6)

For purposes of excessive force claim, uncontroverted evidence established that plaintiffs' injuries were de minimus, nonactionable, and direct result of their resistance to exiting vehicle pursuant to police officers' request and resistance to being placed under arrest, and officers were entitled to qualified immunity. Swenson v. Culberson County, W.D.Tex.1996, 925 F.Supp. 478. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Under doctrine of qualified immunity or Illinois' Local Governmental and Governmental Employees Tort Immunity Act, police officer was not liable for shooting 12-year-old boy who ran from police and pointed gun at officer when officer ordered him to drop the weapon. Estate of Chlopek by Fahrforth v. Jarmusz, N.D.Ill.1995, 877 F.Supp. 1189. Civil Rights 1376(6); Municipal Corporations 747(3)

Police officers did not unreasonably create situation in which need for deadly force arose, such as would support denial of qualified immunity defense to civil rights claim of arrestee whom officers shot, even though arrestee never heard officers identify themselves or warn him that they were police in time to give him opportunity to put down rifle with which he had armed himself against what he believed was unlawful intrusion into his home; officers were wearing badges and patches to identify themselves as police, knocked on the front door for response before entry, and announced their office and intentions loudly and repeatedly. Sledd v. Lindsay, N.D.Ill.1994, 864 F.Supp. 819, reversed 102 F.3d 282. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Deputy sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to shooting of decedent who was armed with knife and in position to inflict grave bodily harm on deputy at time deputy fired his gun. Reynolds v. County of San Diego, S.D.Cal.1994, 858 F.Supp. 1064, affirmed in part, remanded in part 84 F.3d 1162. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Officer was entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 suit in connection with officer's striking with flashlight shins of arrestee, who was repeatedly kicking door of police vehicle in effort to free himself; officer was justified in using some force to restrain arrestee, who was under considerable stress, to prevent him from seriously injuring himself, and blows resulted only in "nickel" size bruises, which healed within ten days. Hodges v. Waters, S.D.Ga.1994, 843 F.Supp. 1470. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Jury's finding of excessive force in arrestee's §§1983 false arrest/excessive force action against arresting police officer did not preclude grant of qualified immunity to officer, on theory of legal inconsistency; officer could have acted unreasonably in using excessive force, yet reasonably believed his conduct to be lawful. Kent v. Katz, C.A.2 (Vt.) 2005, 125 Fed.Appx. 334, 2005 WL 387943, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1424

Kansas Department of Revenue (KDOR) agents' use of weapons and handcuffs in executing search warrant for family members' residence did not constitute excessive force under Fourth Amendment, and thus agents were entitled to qualified immunity, in family members' §§ 1983 action against Kansas KDOR agents, city, city police chief, and city police officers, alleging that their Fourth Amendment rights had been violated due to KDOR agents and police acting without probable cause to search, detain, or arrest them, and by applying excessive force; at time search was undertaken, agents had legitimate concerns about their safety, given police chief's statements that family members had history of violence and that there were firearms in residence. Wright v. City of St. Francis, KS, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2004, 95 Fed.Appx. 915, 2004 WL 838181, Unreported. Arrest 68(2); Searches And Seizures 143.1

Safety officer was entitled to qualified immunity on motorist's claims of excessive force related to car chase that resulted in motorist's collision with a fire hydrant, where motorist only alleged that the chase caused him fear. Timmins v. Toto, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 91 Fed.Appx. 165, 2004 WL 233144, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Officers were entitled to qualified immunity from claim that they used excessive force in arresting 79-year-old woman who suffered temporary shoulder pain and bruises on her forearm and thumb when officers carried her to squad car after she refused to walk. Grauerholz v. Adcock, C.A.10 (Kan.) 2002, 51 Fed.Appx. 298, 2002 WL 31579878, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3714. ---- Related offenses, police officers, qualified immunity generally

When arresting officer has made warrantless arrest and charged arrestee with offense not supported by arguable probable cause, based on officer's "first-hand knowledge" of evidence gained as result of personal investigation, officer is entitled to qualified immunity under related offense doctrine so long as evidence providing arguable probable cause to make arrest for uncharged offense also suggested that charged offense had been committed. Vance v. Nunnery, C.A.5 (La.) 1998, 137 F.3d 270. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3715. ---- Evidence, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Under Connecticut law, probation officer who prepared prisoner's presentence report was entitled to absolute immunity from prisoner's §§ 1983 claims, even though prisoner alleged that officer deliberately presented false information in the report. Peay v. Ajello, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2006, 470 F.3d 65. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Police officials and officers knew or should have known, at the time of their alleged actions, that it was unlawful and outside their discretion to manufacture evidence and use questionable procedures in an attempt to use innocent officer as scapegoat for acts of police brutality against developmentally disabled citizen, possibly based on officer's race, and no reasonable official would have thought that such actions were permissible, and therefore officials and officers were not protected from §§ 1983 liability for alleged violation of police officer's substantive due process rights based on qualified immunity. Moran v. Clark, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2004, 359 F.3d 1058. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Police officers were entitled, in § 1983 action brought by prisoner who had been imprisoned for murder he did not commit, to absolute immunity for their testimony in pretrial proceedings and at trial; however, officers were not entitled to immunity for their alleged participation in scheme to fabricate testimony of eyewitnesses or other alleged misconduct. Newsome v. James, N.D.Ill.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1318. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity, rather than absolute immunity, from civil rights action for allegedly giving false testimony before grand jury that issued indictment, in light of lack of procedural safeguards at grand jury stage. White v. Frank, S.D.N.Y.1988, 680 F.Supp. 629, appeal dismissed 855 F.2d 956. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(6)

3716. ---- False arrests and imprisonment, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Police officers who were involved in private investigators' arrests for carrying concealed weapons knew that investigators were carrying firearms for protection in course of their occupations and so knew, or should have known, that investigators were not violating Ohio law or subject to arrest; therefore, officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 on investigators' false arrest claims. Estate of Dietrich v. Burrows, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1999, 167 F.3d 1007, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from a § 1983 false arrest claim for investigating and photographing suspect for allegedly using stolen credit cards in light of discrepancies in descriptions and lack of exigent circumstances; witness described suspect as woman in her 20s, about 57-inches tall and weighing approximately 150 pounds, but the woman confronted at her home was in her 40s, 5 feet 1 inch tall, weighed no more than 100 pounds and had just undergone dialysis. Taylor v. Farmer, C.A.4 (Va.) 1993, 13 F.3d 117. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as matter of law as to false arrest claim under § 1983 by tow truck driver who allegedly violated South Carolina regulations governing solicitation of towing business; driver drove to scene of accident in wrecker in his capacity as volunteer fireman, officers admitted that they knew at time of arrest that driver had not solicited any wrecker business, and violation of regulations was not strict liability offense. Pritchett v. Alford, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1992, 973 F.2d 307. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Whether qualified immunity applied to preclude arresting officer's §§ 1983 liability for false arrest could not be decided on motion to dismiss, given factual questions as to whether arrestee's ambiguous response when officer addressed him by using narcotics suspect's name, in attempt to determine whether arrestee was suspect, provided probable cause to arrest in light of information possessed by officers about suspect, and as to reasonableness of officers' actions in immediately attempting to take arrestee into custody. Williams v. City of Mount Vernon, S.D.N.Y.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 146. Federal Civil Procedure 1831

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether detective subverted the judicial process by providing falsified information to the prosecution, precluding summary judgment in favor of detective on qualified immunity grounds on acquittee's §§ 1983 malicious prosecution claim. Ramirez v. County of Los Angeles, C.D.Cal.2005, 397 F.Supp.2d 1208. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Probable cause existed to arrest newspaper reporter for trespassing at meeting room on Indian land, and thus tribal police officer was protected by qualified immunity from reporter's §§ 1983 false arrest and related claims; although reporter was invited to meeting, prior to start of meeting ultimate authority at meeting requested non-Indians leave so a discussion of tribe legal issues could occur, non-Indian reporter refused to comply with request, tribal officer approached reporter and told reporter he would be arrested if he did not leave, and reporter continued to remain. Armstrong v. Mille Lacs County Sheriffs Dept., D.Minn.2002, 228 F.Supp.2d 972, affirmed 63 Fed.Appx. 970, 2003 WL 21212166. Arrest 63.4(17); Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Transit authority police had probable cause to arrest bus passenger for assaulting bus driver, and therefore police were protected by qualified immunity from any claim passenger had for false arrest and false imprisonment, where bus driver told police that passenger spat in his face and attempted to flee bus, and passenger refused to provide any identification. Saidi v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, D.D.C.1996, 928 F.Supp. 21. Arrest 63.4(7.1); False Imprisonment 13; False Imprisonment 15(1)

Because arrestee sufficiently alleged that defendant police officers failed to conduct adequate investigation before causing plaintiff's arrest, pursuant to officers' qualified immunity defense, plaintiff's wrongful detention claim would not be dismissed, for failure to state claim. Spiegel v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1996, 920 F.Supp. 891, affirmed 196 F.3d 717, as amended, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 2688, 530 U.S. 1243, 147 L.Ed.2d 961. Civil Rights 1395(6)

New York sheriff was qualifiedly immune from civil rights suit on malicious prosecution and false arrest causes of action by department employee who was arrested but not indicted on charge of criminal possession of stolen property in the fourth degree; at time employee was arrested, sheriff knew that employee had admitted to having had possession of gun which had been reported stolen by its owner, that employee said he did not have the gun, that gun had been left at scene of fire after employee's investigation, and that employee had admitted placing gun outside sheriff's department office. Greiner v. County of Greene, N.D.N.Y.1993, 811 F.Supp. 796. Civil Rights 1376(10)

City, county, and police department were not permitted to assert a defense of qualified immunity, and, therefore, were not entitled to a stay of discovery on false arrest or excessive force claims against them pending resolution of qualified immunity issue as to individual defendants. Rome v. Romero, D.Colo.2004, 225 F.R.D. 640. Civil Rights 1376(6); Federal Civil Procedure 1271

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether city police officers had probable cause to arrest and reasonable suspicion to detain arrestee, based on officer's alleged personal observations of him shouting obscenities in his presence and female's statement that arrestee had sexually assaulted her and another woman in past, precluded summary judgment as to officers' alleged entitlement to qualified immunity under §§ 1983 from arrestee's false imprisonment claim. Aczel v. Labonia, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2004, 92 Fed.Appx. 17, 2004 WL 287164, Unreported. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Safety officer was entitled to qualified immunity on motorist's claims of false arrest and malicious prosecution arising out of a car chase that resulted in motorist's collision with a fire hydrant; motorist pled guilty to disorderly conduct in exchange for dismissal of other charges brought against him, motorist could not establish that officer did not have probable cause for arrest, and prosecution did not terminate in motorist's favor. Timmins v. Toto, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2004, 91 Fed.Appx. 165, 2004 WL 233144, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3717. ---- Application for arrest warrants, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Physician sued for allegedly conspiring to violate defendant's civil rights in connection with murder prosecution was not entitled to absolute immunity for expert report which was offered, not as evidence at trial, but at hearing to obtain warrant for defendant's arrest, in which physician concluded that bite marks found in victim's body undoubtedly came from defendant. Keko v. Hingle, C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 318 F.3d 639, rehearing en banc denied 61 Fed.Appx. 123, 2003 WL 342359. Civil Rights 1375; Conspiracy 13

Deliberate falsity or reckless disregard that court should consider in determining existence of qualified immunity in civil rights action in connection with issuance of arrest warrant is only that of affiant, not of any nongovernmental informant. Duca v. Martins, D.Mass.1996, 941 F.Supp. 1281. Civil Rights 1376(6)

There were no extraordinary circumstances entitling a county deputy to qualified immunity in connection with omissions from an arrest warrant affidavit, despite the deputy's claim that an attorney drafted the affidavit; attorney simply prepared the affidavit based on the deputy's own investigative report, and the deputy did not allege that the attorney advised her as to what information to include in the report or allege any facts from which the court could construe the attorney's actions as constituting legal advice. Melessa v. Randall, C.A.10 (Utah) 2005, 121 Fed.Appx. 803, 2005 WL 226240, Unreported. Civil Rights 1375

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3718. ---- Warrantless arrests, police officers, qualified immunity generally

City police officer did not violate arrestees' Fourth Amendment right by arresting them upon probable cause for violation of city ordinance prohibiting being in a park after closing time, and thus officer had qualified immunity in arrestees' §§1983 claim for false arrest. Tanberg v. Sholtis, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2005, 401 F.3d 1151. Arrest 63.4(5); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from arrestees civil rights claim based on malicious abuse of criminal process where officers lacked probable cause to arraign arrestee on charges of illegal possession of car without a Vehicle Identification Number (VIN) and arrestee alleged that arrest was based on arrestee's having advised other occupants of vehicle of their right to a lawyer. Cook v. Sheldon, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 41 F.3d 73. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Arresting officer was not entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's claim that officer's warrantless arrest of her in her home for misdemeanor offenses violated Fourth Amendment; arrest was for careless driving and leaving scene of accident, and offenses were misdemeanors carrying maximum fine of $300 or imprisonment for at most 90 days or both, and thus did not merit extraordinary recourse of warrantless home arrest. Howard v. Dickerson, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1994, 34 F.3d 978. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Sheriff was performing "discretionary function," for qualified immunity purposes in § 1983 action, when arresting citizens without warrant. Herren v. Bowyer, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1988, 850 F.2d 1543. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Three police officers were entitled to qualified immunity from motorist's claim, under §§ 1983, that warrantless arrest for driving under the influence was not supported by probable cause; weaving of motorist's pickup truck, redness of his eyes, his failure to follow instructions, and his ever-so-slight side step during walk-and-turn field sobriety test precluded finding that there was clearly no probable cause, or that no reasonably competent officer would have found probable cause. Blackstone v. Quirino, D.Me.2004, 309 F.Supp.2d 117. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer's actions were undertaken in performance of duties and were well within scope of discretionary authority, for purposes of qualified immunity from plaintiff's § 1983 claim that officer deprived plaintiff of liberty without due process, where officer was called to plaintiff's home to handle domestic dispute in manner consistent with officer's training and education, officer arrived in uniform and found plaintiff locked out of house and in process of leaving, officer requested that plaintiff leave premises, and officer arrested plaintiff for disorderly conduct when plaintiff became argumentative and began to curse. Rose v. Town of Jackson's Gap, M.D.Ala.1996, 952 F.Supp. 757. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer had qualified immunity from § 1983 claim arising from valid warrantless arrest. Schilling v. Swick, W.D.Mich.1994, 868 F.Supp. 904. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Long professional and personal relationship between chief of state university police department and state narcotics officer, who also was an adjunct professor at university, justified chief's reliance upon truth and veracity of corroborating information that narcotics officer supplied, and thus, chief was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in arrestees' §§ 1983 action alleging unlawful arrest, unlawful detention, unlawful search and search, defamation, and infliction of emotional distress. New v. Fleming, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2006, 170 Fed.Appx. 298, 2006

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

WL 295418, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3719. ---- Searches generally, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Deputies were not entitled to qualified immunity on §§ 1983 claim arising from warrantless entry and arrest of plaintiff; under the law existing at the time, a reasonable law enforcement officer faced with identical circumstances would have known he could not enter the home and arrest plaintiff without a warrant, exigent circumstances, or consent. Bashir v. Rockdale County, Ga., C.A.11 (Ga.) 2006, 445 F.3d 1323. Civil Rights 1376(6)

In executing search warrant, failure of police officers to leave either copy of warrant or receipt for property taken, in violation of criminal procedure rule and state law, did not render the search unreasonable under Fourth Amendment, and thus police officers and members of city's board of police commissioners were entitled to qualified immunity on plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment claim; at time of search, violation of procedure rule and state law did not constitute violation of clearly established constitutional right. DeArmon v. Burgess, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2004, 388 F.3d 609. Civil Rights 1376(6); Searches And Seizures 141

Deputies who conducted the police checkpoints ordered by sheriff, when property owners failed to accede to sheriff's demands that they not hold "rock" concert on their land, were entitled to qualified immunity on resulting civil rights claims, where summary judgment evidence indicated that they had conducted license checks of each motorist driving on road leading to property owner's farm without regard to motorist's destination, and had made arrests only when there was problem with license or when contraband was discovered in plain view or after consensual search, and where there was no evidence that deputies had any contact with civil rights plaintiffs or that they had abused their discretion to deny use of forum for First-Amendment-protected expression or were involved in arrestees' ability to make bond or in crowded condition of jail in which they were held. Collins v. Ainsworth, C.A.5 (Miss.) 2004, 382 F.3d 529, on subsequent appeal 2005 WL 3502174, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1661, 164 L.Ed.2d 397. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity to T1983 claim of citizen, that officers' alleged forced entry into her Connecticut residence without a warrant was in violation of her Fourth Amendment rights, since entry into home was authorized by conservator of estate of her father, who owned home and recently had been living there as cohabitant. Ehrlich v. Town of Glastonbury, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2003, 348 F.3d 48. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Even if police officers violated the Fourth Amendment rights of a woman with Down Syndrome when they seized her and transported her to a hospital, the officers were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by the woman against the officers in their individual capacities; the officers were responding to a 911 call from within the woman's residence from a caller who claimed to be under attack, and the officers were responding to an order of a superior officer to seize the woman and remove her to the hospital. Anthony v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 339 F.3d 129. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Fact that search was illegal would not preclude finding that law enforcement officers who searched and then effected seizure of truck were entitled to qualified immunity in resulting § 1983 action brought by purported truck owners. Wren v. Towe, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 130 F.3d 1154, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 51, 525 U.S. 815, 142 L.Ed.2d 40. Civil Rights 1376(6)

State trooper was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 case with respect to claim that strip search of plaintiff after her arrest for driving while under influence of drugs violated Fourth Amendment; plaintiff was not placed in general inmate population, plaintiff had no opportunity to hide anything beneath her clothing after her vehicle was stopped, and thorough pat-down search at jail revealed no drugs. Foote v. Spiegel, C.A.10 (Utah) 1997, 118 F.3d 1416, on remand 995 F.Supp. 1347. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim alleging that he violated Fourth Amendment rights of detainee who was unintentionally run over by police car after being seized by officer and forced to lie on ground; being run over by vehicle was not part of seizure, but rather was accidental effect of otherwise lawful government conduct. Evans v. Hightower, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1997, 117 F.3d 1318. Civil Rights 1376(6)

In determining whether defendants in § 1983 action are entitled to qualified immunity, Court of Appeals asks first whether constitutional right in question was clearly established at time of alleged violation, which is question of law for court, and, second, whether reasonable, similarly situated official would understand that challenged conduct violated that established right. Swain v. Spinney, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1997, 117 F.3d 1. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity applied to shield detective from §§ 1983 liability on claim that he caused arrestee to be subjected to unlawful strip search at detention facility, given arrestee's failure to show that it was clearly established, at the time of his arrest, that police officer in detective's position had constitutional duty to prevent jail officials from conducting strip search of arrestee charged with felony offense. George v. City of Wichita, Kan., D.Kan.2004, 348 F.Supp.2d 1232. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability for conducting strip searches of minors located outside apartment at time of execution of search warrant for apartment, in minors' §§ 1983 action, alleging violation of their Fourth Amendment rights; the warrant only permitted searches of all persons in the apartment, there was no evidence that minors outside the apartment were involved in illegal activities, and probable cause did not exist to search minors located outside apartment. Quiles v. Kilson, D.Mass.2004, 337 F.Supp.2d 224. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Deputy sheriffs, in their individual capacities, were entitled to qualified immunity, in § 1983 action alleging that county violated farmer's federal and Iowa constitutional rights by seizing her horses; deputies were given a facially valid search warrant to execute, which provided for, inter alia, rescue of horses, and it was objectively reasonable, in view of the unsanitary conditions and the opinions of a licensed veterinarian and two animal control officers, that all the horses were in danger, for deputies to believe all the horses should be seized. McClendon v. Story County Sheriff's Dept., S.D.Iowa 2004, 312 F.Supp.2d 1146, affirmed in part, reversed in part 403 F.3d 510. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity from claim they violated the Fourth Amendment when they partially strip searched suspect after his arrest for involvement in murder; although suspect did not confess to actually stabbing victim, such confession was not necessary to justify requiring suspect to strip down to his underwear for a visual examination, where suspect told police that he was present in the house at the time of the murder, a knife fitting the description of murder weapon was found under his bed, and the murder was of the type that one could reasonably believe would leave the murderer with cuts, bruises, scratches, or other signs of a physical altercation. Crowe v. County of San Diego, S.D.Cal.2004, 303 F.Supp.2d 1050. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Conduct of citizen, of walking to kitchen in her home and yelling and pointing finger at police officer, did not constitute affirmative acts from which reasonable officer could have found probable cause to believe that citizen had obstructed official business under Ohio law, in order to arrest citizen, in context of officer's claim to qualified immunity in § 1983 lawsuit brought by citizen alleging violation of her Fourth Amendment rights, even though officer had right to investigate involvement of juvenile, who lived in citizen's home, in prior, unrelated juvenile assault. Lyons v. City of Xenia, OH, S.D.Ohio 2003, 258 F.Supp.2d 761, affirmed in part, reversed in part 90 Fed.Appx. 835, 2004 WL 187555, vacated 125 S.Ct. 808, 543 U.S. 1033, 160 L.Ed.2d 596, on remand 417 F.3d 565. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Deputy United States marshal was not acting as federal official when he stopped and attempted to frisk individual based on suspicion that individual had committed state crime, and thus, could not assert defense of qualified immunity based on discharge of federal duties in § 1983 action in which individual alleged that marshal had violated his Fourth Amendment rights; marshal's duties bore no relation, incidental or otherwise, to his official responsibilities as marshal as set out by statute. McNally v. DeWitt, W.D.Ky.1997, 961 F.Supp. 1041. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police officers who lawfully stopped vehicle based on suspicion that it had been involved in armed robbery were entitled to qualified immunity with regard to Fourth Amendment claim asserted in subsequent § 1983 action based on protective search of vehicle's occupants; radio report indicated that robbery was armed robbery, and there was no evidence suggesting that search of occupants was unreasonable. Warren v. Coffee County Com'n, M.D.Ala.1995, 942 F.Supp. 1412. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer who obtained search warrant, made decision to execute it, and brought television station personnel to house in his patrol car to film inside house during execution of search warrant without occupants' permission was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action for violating occupant's Fourth Amendment right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures. Parker v. Clarke, E.D.Mo.1995, 905 F.Supp. 638, clarified 910 F.Supp. 460, affirmed in part, reversed in part 93 F.3d 445, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 1081, 519 U.S. 1148, 137 L.Ed.2d 216. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Trooper who merely assisted in lawful search of motorist's vehicle after her arrest was entitled to qualified immunity from any § 1983 liability; trooper arrived at scene after traffic stop, after administration of field sobriety tests of motorist, and after her arrest. Foote v. Spiegel, D.Utah 1995, 903 F.Supp. 1463, affirmed in part, reversed in part, dismissed in part 118 F.3d 1416, on remand 995 F.Supp. 1347. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers who searched wrong apartment, pursuant to a warrant, looking for drugs were entitled to qualified immunity; officers honestly believed that they were searching correct apartment and they did not use excessive force. Samuels v. Smith, D.Conn.1993, 839 F.Supp. 959. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3720. ---- Applications for search warrant, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Police officer was entitled only to qualified immunity, not absolute immunity, from liability for damages under section 1983 based on allegation that officer caused plaintiffs to be unconstitutionally arrested by presenting judge with a complaint and supporting affidavit which failed to establish probable cause, notwithstanding claim that officer's function in seeking arrest warrant is similar to that of complaining witness or prosecutor who asks grand jury to indict a suspect. Malley v. Briggs, U.S.R.I.1986, 106 S.Ct. 1092, 475 U.S. 335, 89 L.Ed.2d 271. Civil Rights 1376(6)

New Orleans police officer and Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agent were entitled to qualified immunity from §§ 1983 liability, for claims based on procurement of warrant, to occupants of home where warrant allegedly based on stale narcotics information was executed; neither of them signed warrant application or was responsible for its preparation or presentation to judge. Michalik v. Hermann, C.A.5 (La.) 2005, 422 F.3d 252. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Qualified immunity is available in relation to warrant application if affidavit accompanying application is sufficient, after correction for material misstatements or omissions, to support reasonable officer's belief that probable cause existed. Martinez v. City of Schenectady, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1997, 115 F.3d 111. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Probable cause existed to search civil rights complainant's residence, affording police qualified immunity in § 1983 action, despite acknowledged misrepresentations and omissions in affidavit underlying search warrant conveying impression that officer and confidential informant had participated in controlled drug buy while in fact third person accompanied them and made actual purchase; affidavit provided probable cause to search after being edited to correct for misrepresentations and omissions, as it still alleged that police received tip from previously reliable informant that claimant was conducting drug transactions from his residence and tip was corroborated by controlled drug purchase. Sherwood v. Mulvihill, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1997, 113 F.3d 396. Civil Rights 1376(6); Controlled Substances 147

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Absent false information in search warrant affidavit that deputy sheriff was "certified" in narcotics training and that he smelled "acetone" or "P2P" on plaintiff's property, neutral magistrate would not have issued warrant, since there was no probable cause to believe that crime had occurred, so that affiant was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action against her for making materially false statements in search warrant affidavit, where deputy's observations of white powder and operation of generator were not tied in any way to manufacture of methamphetamine, and his statement that he smelled cat urine and later recognized odors that were consistent with manufacturing methamphetamine were too vague to support probable cause. Hervey v. Estes, C.A.9 (Wash.) 1995, 65 F.3d 784, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police detective who obtained arrest warrant on strength of her sworn statement that arrestee had committed offense of cocaine possession was not protected by qualified immunity from arrestee's § 1983 malicious protection claim; when detective swore out affidavit, she knew that the substance arrestee had possessed was not cocaine, and her affidavit articulated neither a basis for her belief that arrestee violated the law nor any affirmative allegation that she had personal knowledge of the circumstances of alleged crime. Kelly v. Curtis, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1994, 21 F.3d 1544. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Deputy sheriff did not intentionally or recklessly mislead magistrate who issued search warrant for farm on probable cause of animal mistreatment, so as to lose his qualified immunity from civil rights action, by not including prior incident reports indicating that investigation of past complaints by another deputy had not resulted in charges; information in the three- and 17-month-old reports was stale and not entirely exculpatory, neighbors' complaints underlying warrant concerned that point in time, not ongoing enterprise of bad acts, and reports would not have negated finding of probable cause that was supported by five complainants' sworn statements and results of deputy's investigation. Spafford v. Romanowsky, S.D.N.Y.2004, 348 F.Supp.2d 40. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity from claim they engaged in illegal search of murder suspect's residence because search warrant affidavit contained material misrepresentations and omissions concerning location of murder victim's body, possible involvement of third party in murder, and state of the windows and doors in victim's residence, as alleged misrepresentations and omissions did not cast doubt on existence of probable cause. Crowe v. County of San Diego, S.D.Cal.2004, 303 F.Supp.2d 1050. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police detective's statements that he saw money placed in locker from which other police detective took money were sufficient to give police officers probable cause to seek warrant to search other detective's residence, such that police officers were protected by qualified immunity, where police detective's story was corroborated when he turned in portion of money and he implicated himself voluntarily at time he implicated other detective. Rodriguez v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.1996, 931 F.Supp. 209, affirmed 112 F.3d 505. Civil Rights 1376(6); Searches And Seizures 114

Arresting police officer had qualified immunity from civil rights action brought by arrestee who was subsequently acquitted and who alleged that officer's statements made to obtain arrest warrant failed to apprise magistrate judge of eyewitness's exculpatory statements where officer and prosecutor decided that eyewitness's statements were not of great import because she could not remember to within 50 yards of where she was standing at time of robbery. Rock v. Lowe, S.D.Ga.1995, 893 F.Supp. 1573. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3721. ---- Confiscation of property, police officers, qualified immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Question whether interrogator regarded police officer as target of possible perjury prosecution, rather than mere Garrity witness, when he questioned officer for second time in departmental investigation into misconduct involving use of police scanners precluded grant of qualified immunity on claim that interrogator violated police officer's Fifth Amendment rights when, during course of second interview, he accused officer of falsification and obstruction during first interview and threatened him with termination if he did not admit his role in misconduct, which led officer to materially contradict his earlier statements and led to his prosecution, on basis of statements in second interview, for falsification and obstruction. McKinley v. City of Mansfield, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 404 F.3d 418, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1026, 163 L.Ed.2d 854. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1376(10)

Plaintiffs failed to establish that execution of search warrant was unreasonable, and, thus, police officers and members of city's board of police commissioners were entitled to qualified immunity on plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment claim, even if items such as jewelry, photographs, and personal papers were seized; search warrant authorized seizure of drugs, weapons, money, drug records, and "other instruments" of drug transactions and objectively reasonable law enforcement officials could have believed that items seized were of such incriminating nature as to constitute contraband or evidence of criminal activity. DeArmon v. Burgess, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2004, 388 F.3d 609. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

Fact that law enforcement officer has executed form certifying that reconditioned vehicle is legitimate does not create presumption that vehicle was legitimate, for purpose of other officers' claim of qualified immunity in action alleging that their search and seizure of vehicle was unreasonable. Wren v. Towe, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 130 F.3d 1154, certiorari denied 119 S.Ct. 51, 525 U.S. 815, 142 L.Ed.2d 40. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action alleging that officer seized his car and had it towed without probable cause under Illinois statute authorizing seizure of vehicles believed to have been used in drug offense; arrestee's possession of a small amount of cocaine was discovered 20 to 25 minutes after he left his car and entered his residence, and there was no evidence linking his cocaine possession to car. Scott v. Glumac, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1993, 3 F.3d 163. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Deputy sheriff, in his individual capacity, was entitled to qualified immunity, in § 1983 action alleging that county violated farmer's federal and Iowa constitutional rights by seizing her horses; deputy's only involvement in execution of search warrant was in being asked to remove two dead horses and transport them to a veterinary lab. McClendon v. Story County Sheriff's Dept., S.D.Iowa 2004, 312 F.Supp.2d 1146, affirmed in part, reversed in part 403 F.3d 510. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Civil rights activists who brought § 1983 action against police officers, stemming from their arrests while attempting to film traffic stops, adequately alleged that they had sufficient ownership interest in recording equipment seized by officers for standing to bring claim based upon officers' purported lack of probable cause to seize equipment, and thus officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to activists' claim under Fourth Amendment. McCormick v. City of Lawrence, D.Kan.2003, 271 F.Supp.2d 1292, amended 289 F.Supp.2d 1264, affirmed 130 Fed.Appx. 987, 2005 WL 1221632. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1395(6)

Highway patrol officer who seized and immobilized vehicle pursuant to Ohio statute requiring police to seize and immobilize vehicles of persons who have been arrested for second offense of operating a motor vehicle while under influence of alcohol (OMVI) was entitled to qualified immunity from liability for damages resulting from due process violation to which he subjected vehicle's owner, who successfully invoked statute's "innocent owner" provision; although officer was performing discretionary duty when he seized vehicle, he was acting in accordance with statute that had never been held unconstitutional. Putnam v. Davies, S.D.Ohio 1996, 169 F.R.D. 89. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3722. ---- Reliance, police officers, qualified immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Officer would not be deprived of qualified immunity on civil rights claim for his action in arresting plaintiffs because he relied on victim's statement without interviewing plaintiffs prior to seeking their arrest, even though victim had given differing statements as to the attack; officer did not ignore readily available exculpatory evidence of which he had been made aware. Torchinsky v. Siwinski, C.A.4 (N.C.) 1991, 942 F.2d 257. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers who transported suspect to police station at direction of superior officer were entitled to qualified immunity in suspect's § 1983 action based on unlawful arrest, absent evidence that officers were aware of any lack of probable cause to arrest suspect. Rose v. Town of Concord, D.Mass.1997, 971 F.Supp. 47. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers who arrested plaintiff and who were involved in his processing were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to his wrongful arrest claim under § 1983, alleging that police lacked probable cause to arrest him because they failed to conduct sufficient investigation into facts supporting his arrest; defendant officers were entitled to rely on information obtained from other law enforcement officials regarding arrest warrant. Spiegel v. City of Chicago, N.D.Ill.1996, 920 F.Supp. 891, affirmed 196 F.3d 717, as amended, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 2688, 530 U.S. 1243, 147 L.Ed.2d 961. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3723. ---- Training and supervision, police officers, qualified immunity generally

Police chiefs were immune from § 1983 suit claiming that their failure to provide proper supervision and training of officer who shot and killed plaintiffs' decedent led to deprivation of decedent's constitutional rights despite claim by purported criminal justice expert that chief's failure to assume command and control on day of shooting was proximate cause of officer's reaction where there was no proof that chief knew of gravity of situation developing at park where shooting took place or that he could have responded in time, there was no evidence of any deliberate indifference overcoming qualified immunity, and expert's statement was more aspersion than evidence. Baker v. Putnal, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1996, 75 F.3d 190. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Five complaints levied against arresting officer did not provide police superintendent with requisite notice of behavior likely to result in violation of constitutional rights of citizens and, thus, police superintendent was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action brought by arrestee who claimed he had been beaten by arresting officer; the five previous complaints against officer stemmed from incidents completely unrelated to present one, and arrestee also failed to show how superintendent's alleged failure to discipline officer was affirmatively linked to alleged assault. Febus-Rodriguez v. Betancourt-Lebron, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1994, 14 F.3d 87. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Chief of police was entitled to qualified immunity on arrestee's §§ 1983 claim against him in his individual capacity based solely on his supervisory authority over arresting county police officers, absent any evidence indicating that chief participated in any way or was even aware of arrestee's arrest and prosecution. Payne v. DeKalb County, N.D.Ga.2004, 414 F.Supp.2d 1158. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Jury's finding that police officer violated off-duty officer's Fourth Amendment right to be free of unreasonable seizure was sufficient to establish that conduct of supervisory police officials violated constitutional right, for purposes of determining whether supervisory officials were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in §§ 1983 suit, despite officials' contention that relevant inquiry was whether training provided to officer was constitutionally inadequate or constitutionally deficient. Young v. City of Providence, D.R.I.2005, 396 F.Supp.2d 125. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Alleged supervisor of officers who surrounded and entered common areas of duplex in search for potentially armed suspect had no supervisory liability for acts of subordinate officers, where officers did not commit any constitutional violations in attempting to control residents of building. Reeves v. Churchich, D.Utah 2004, 331

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

F.Supp.2d 1347. Civil Rights 1358

Supervisors were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to section 1983 supervisory liability and failure to train claims based on their conduct or inaction in permitting police sergeant to supervise a high impact unit of officers involved in victim's shooting death despite sergeant's disciplinary record; jury questions were presented as to whether the officers involved in victim's death acted upon instructions by sergeant, and thus whether an "affirmative link" existed between the failure of supervisors to take measures regarding sergeant's complaint history and the depravation, if any, of victim's constitutional rights. Gonzalez Perez v. Gomez Aguila, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 312 F.Supp.2d 161. Civil Rights 1376(6); Civil Rights 1429

Absent evidence that police chief committed a constitutional violation on his own, or that he was responsible for police officer's use of force, chief was entitled to qualified immunity in arrestee's § 1983 action alleging excessive force by officer in connection with her arrest. Eberle v. City of Newton, D.Kan.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 1269, motion to amend denied 296 F.Supp.2d 1276. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Provisions of Endangered Species Act (ESA) creating duty on part of federal agencies to ensure that actions do not jeopardize continued existence of endangered or threatened species or result in destruction or adverse modification of such species' habitat, and authorizing issuance of permits to engage in acts otherwise proscribed by ESA provision prohibiting takings of protected species and violations of regulations related to such species, impose their burdens based on either the listing of a species or the designation of species' critical habitat. Home Builders Ass'n of Northern California v. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, E.D.Cal.2003, 268 F.Supp.2d 1197. Environmental Law 531; Environmental Law 536

Police chief was entitled to qualified immunity on claim of failure to supervise arresting officer who beat arrestee where there was only bare assertion by expert witness that chief took inappropriate action with regard to supervision. Sweatt v. Bailey, M.D.Ala.1995, 876 F.Supp. 1571. Civil Rights 1376(6)

At the time residents' home was searched, it was not clearly established that police officers' treatment of the residents would violate their Fourth Amendment rights, and thus, the supervising officers were entitled to qualified immunity on in the residents' §§ 1983 suit; the officers allegedly stayed on the premises for seven and one quarter hours, during which time they kept the residents in handcuffs for several hours, in their underwear in plain sight of each other and of numerous law enforcement officers in spite of pleas to allow them to be covered. Kerusenko v. New Jersey, C.A.3 (N.J.) 2004, 115 Fed.Appx. 583, 2004 WL 2616483, Unreported, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 94, 163 L.Ed.2d 110. Civil Rights 1376(6)

City could not be held liable to arrestee under § 1983, based on officer's alleged false arrest and malicious prosecution, absent allegation that any failure of city to train or supervise officer amounted to municipal policy or custom. Obilo v. City University of City of New York, E.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1809471, Unreported. Civil Rights 1352(4)

3724. Prison officials, qualified immunity generally--Generally

Privately employed prison physician was ineligible to advance the defense of qualified immunity in inmate's civil rights action; no "firmly rooted" tradition of immunity applicable to privately employed prison physicians existed under similar circumstances, and public policy reasons for qualified immunity, including fears of "unwarranted timidity" in performance of duties, possible deterrence of qualified candidates, and concern that lawsuits might distract employees from their duties, did not justify extension of qualified immunity. Hinson v. Edmond, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1999, 192 F.3d 1342, amended 205 F.3d 1264. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Failure of prison officials to immediately confiscate alcoholic beverages possessed by inmates was not deliberate indifference toward inmate who was later attacked by another inmate, as required to overcome qualified immunity defense in § 1983 civil rights suit based on alleged Eighth Amendment violation. Winfield v. Bass, C.A.4 (Va.) 1997, 106 F.3d 525. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Deputy sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity from inmate's § 1983 claim that deputy was deliberately indifferent to inmate's personal safety when deputy failed to communicate to oncoming guard that he had placed inmate in a holding cell because of a threat to his life; deputy was acting within scope of his discretionary authority, and he could reasonably believe that his failure to communicate situation to oncoming guard did not violate constitutional law. McCoy v. Webster, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1995, 47 F.3d 404. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Prison official inflicting sufficiently grave conditions of confinement acts with a sufficiently culpable state of mind and is not entitled to qualified immunity from liability on an Eighth Amendment claim if he does so with deliberate indifference. Rodgers v. Jabe, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 43 F.3d 1082. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Former Louisiana prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 civil rights claims by black prisoners alleging that general policies for segregating two-person cells violated equal protection in light of officials' knowing and intentional participation in general policy of racial segregation despite outstanding court order mandating full integration of prison facility. Sockwell v. Phelps, C.A.5 (La.) 1994, 20 F.3d 187. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity for violating prisoners' civil rights, where district court found that officials did not act out of legitimate penological concerns. Quinn v. Nix, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1993, 983 F.2d 115. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Mayor and two top corrections officials were protected by qualified immunity in performance of their discretionary functions related to prison administration in § 1983 action arising out of prison fire and riots. Brogsdale v. Barry, C.A.D.C.1991, 926 F.2d 1184, 288 U.S.App.D.C. 311. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity from damages suit brought under §§ 1983 by inmate claiming he was convicted for spreading rumors unfavorable to prison staff, in violation of prison rule that was vague and overbroad, and as form of retaliation, when his mother responded to inmate's complaint regarding disposition of earlier complaint by advertising on Internet for legal counsel to assist inmate on further prosecution of earlier grievance; as disciplinary board had determined that allegations of earlier grievance were without merit, officials could have reasonably believed that inmate was spreading rumors. Cassels v. Stalder, M.D.La.2004, 342 F.Supp.2d 555. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Correctional officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from damages under §§ 1983 for alleged violation of inmate's Eighth Amendment rights resulting from miscalculation of his prison sentence and resulting confinement for 65 days beyond his mandatory release date; applicable Wisconsin law clearly required that officials release inmate on his mandatory release date, and Seventh Circuit had previously recognized a prisoner's right to be released at lawful conclusion of a prison sentence. Russell v. Lazar, E.D.Wis.2004, 300 F.Supp.2d 716. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State prison inmates' § 1983 complaint alleging that Governor and State Parole Board members conspired to deprive the inmates of their constitutional and civil rights when inmates' parole hearings included members who were appointed by the Governor without Senate confirmation, in alleged violation of state statute requiring appointment of Parole Board members by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate, did not make the necessary allegations of bad faith or malice to sustain the claim against the defense of qualified immunity, in light of the defendants' reliance upon opinion issued by state Attorney General's office stating that such temporary appointments of Parole Board members were valid under state law. Sonntag v. Papparozzi, D.N.J.2003, 256 F.Supp.2d 320, affirmed as modified 94 Fed.Appx. 970, 2004 WL 737021. Conspiracy 18

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

For prison official to be held liable under Eighth or Fourteenth Amendment for denying inmate humane conditions of confinement, official must both be aware of facts from which inference could be drawn that substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also draw the inference. Jolly v. Klein, S.D.Tex.1996, 923 F.Supp. 931. Constitutional Law 272(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1533

Inmate failed to show that officer knowingly presented false information in support of criminal complaint against inmate, as would warrant denial of qualified immunity from § 1983 claim stemming from that complaint; discrepancy between statement made at time of incident underlying complaint and statement made under oath some seven years later could have been caused by inadvertence, failure of recollection or some other innocent explanation. Atkins v. Latanzio, W.D.N.Y.1995, 918 F.Supp. 668. Civil Rights 1376(7)

By raising defense of qualified immunity in § 1983 action by prisoner, prison official invoked all standards that governed qualified immunity, including rule that plaintiff must produce direct evidence of government defendant's state of mind to clear heightened pleading standard; thus, direct evidence standard was not waived even if official failed to raise distinction between direct and circumstantial tests. Crawford-El v. Britton, D.D.C.1994, 863 F.Supp. 6. Civil Rights 1395(7)

3725. ---- Sexual harassment, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Prison official's alleged sexual harassment of inmate and unauthorized appearance in her cell did not constitute the deliberate indifference required for an Eighth Amendment violation and therefore, prison official was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to inmate's § 1983 Eighth Amendment claim. Adkins v. Rodriguez, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1995, 59 F.3d 1034. Civil Rights 1376(7); Sentencing And Punishment 1554

3726. ---- State-employed correctional officers, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

State employed correctional officers enjoy protections of qualified immunity in carrying out their duties. McKnight v. Rees, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1996, 88 F.3d 417, certiorari granted 117 S.Ct. 504, 519 U.S. 1002, 136 L.Ed.2d 395, affirmed 117 S.Ct. 2100, 521 U.S. 399, 138 L.Ed.2d 540. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3727. ---- Freedom of religion, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Former officials of state prison system were immune from liability in state inmate's civil rights action alleging that he was denied furlough because his sponsors were Jewish; inmate presented no evidence that statements allegedly made about religious background of sponsors influenced furlough decision. Rogers v. Fair, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1990, 902 F.2d 140. Civil Rights 1376(7)

On motion to dismiss, prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity on claims that they violated prisoner's Free Exercise rights by failing to provide him with religious diet, prohibiting his use of certain "incendiary" religious materials such as prayer oil, as development of fuller record was appropriate and prisoner was seeking injunctive and well as monetary damage, such that immunity would not have terminated suit in any event. Kilaab Al Ghashiyah v. Department of Corrections of State of Wisconsin, E.D.Wis.2003, 250 F.Supp.2d 1016, vacated. Federal Civil Procedure 1752.1

Former county sheriff was not entitled to qualified immunity from suit under §§ 1983, based upon his promulgation of detainee rules for county jail based upon the Ten Commandments, where sheriff knew or reasonably should have known that his actions were in violation of detainee's Establishment Clause rights; extant case law, of which sheriff was aware as result of prior lawsuit with respect to detainee rules, clearly provided notice that posting Ten Commandments, verbatim or in analogous form, in government facility, and requiring citizens detained there to read and obey them, would violate Establishment Clause. Byar v. Lee, W.D.Ark.2004, 336 F.Supp.2d 896. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Officers of the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections were not entitled to qualified immunity on inmate's suit under § 1983 related to inmate's termination from position as cook in prison kitchen for refusing to serve pork, an act that violated inmate's Islamic religious faith; prison had previously accommodated inmate's aversion to pork showing that officers could meet inmate's needs without prohibitive cost, and courts had previously required prisons to accommodate Muslim inmates by preparing alternative meals when pork was served, which was a greater burden that rearranging a kitchen schedule. Williams v. Bitner, M.D.Pa.2003, 285 F.Supp.2d 593. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Corrections officials were not entitled to qualified immunity in prison inmate's § 1983 complaint alleging infringement of his free exercise rights, in violation of First Amendment; inmate's right to freely exercise his religion by attending services, absent legitimate penological concerns, was clearly established. Gill v. Hoadley, N.D.N.Y.2003, 261 F.Supp.2d 113. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Officials of the New York State Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) were entitled to rely on the undisputed advice of religious experts, Muslim clerics, in determining that a family day event meal was not religiously mandated for a Muslim inmate, and thus, the officials were entitled to qualified immunity from inmate's § 1983 claim alleging that their decision not to provide the inmate with the meal violated the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment; the clerics advised that the meal lost religious significance, as it was moved past the three-day closing of the month of Ramadan. Ford v. McGinnis, S.D.N.Y.2002, 230 F.Supp.2d 338, vacated and remanded 352 F.3d 582. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Islamic Affairs Coordinator for New York State Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) was not entitled to qualified immunity on Shi'ite Muslim prisoner's claims that Coordinator purposely only hired Sunni Muslims as chaplains, and engaged in a hostile campaign against Shi'ites. Cancel v. Mazzuca, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1702011, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3728. ---- Pretrial detainees, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Even if arresting officer erred in concluding that he had probable cause to detain arrestee for psychiatric evaluation, officer was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in subsequent civil rights action where he complied with facially valid Indiana statutes and where arrestee had made multiple threats against others. Sherman v. Four County Counseling Center, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1993, 987 F.2d 397. Civil Rights 1376(6)

County sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity in connection with § 1983 action brought by estate of arrestee who had died accidentally while swallowing soap in cell after displaying unusual behavior; sheriff had no knowledge of arrestee's behavior. Hardin v. Hayes, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1992, 957 F.2d 845. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action to recover for death of prisoner from asphyxia after being searched and subdued, even though no evidence indicated that each officer's actions caused severe injuries; captain admitted placing prisoner in neck hold and exerted sufficient pressure to subdue him, another officer sat on prisoner, tape recording allegedly indicated prisoner's screams and repeated cries for mercy and contained statements from which trier-of-fact could infer malice, and officers discussed beforehand how to handle situation and functioned as unit once inside cell. Simpson v. Hines, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1990, 903 F.2d 400. Civil Rights 1376(6)

City chief of police was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in civil rights action brought by warrantless arrestee who claimed that he was detained at city jail for public intoxication after it became known that he was not drunk, but, rather, was suffering from insulin shock; no evidence indicated that police chief had any personal involvement with events respecting arrestee or that he had any knowledge of her connection with policy of detaining all those arrested for public intoxication for at least four hours. McConney v. City of Houston, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1989, 863 F.2d 1180. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Sheriff, undersheriff, and county attorney had qualified immunity from pretrial detainee's §§ 1983 action alleging various due process violations, where defendants provided detainee with medical attention when requested, gave him all legal materials he asked for, and provided a regularly-cleaned cell with working windows, detainee had virtually unlimited telephone access and was allowed visits, defendants screened mail to prevent transfer of contraband and to promote public safety, and detainee suffered no physical injury at jail, engaged in heavy correspondence, and ultimately concluded that counsel adequately represented him. Murray v. Edwards County Sheriff's Dept., D.Kan.2006, 453 F.Supp.2d 1280. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Jail administrator who was sued by arrestee, stemming from arrestee's lengthy detention prior to initial court appearance, failed to establish that his actions complied with requirements of Arkansas criminal procedural rule governing pretrial detentions, and thus was not entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's § 1983 claim; arrestee's 38-day incarceration constituted "unnecessary delay" under applicable rule, and administrator made conscious decision to do nothing upon receipt of arrestee's grievance forms. Hayes v. Faulkner County, Ark., E.D.Ark.2003, 285 F.Supp.2d 1132, affirmed 388 F.3d 669. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Police officer who shot pretrial detainee who objected to being handcuffed, but allegedly posed no other danger to safety of officer, was not entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim that he had violated detainee's substantive due process rights. Jordan v. Cobb County, Georgia, N.D.Ga.2001, 227 F.Supp.2d 1322. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Actions taken by police officers prior to inmate's suicide, which included video and audio surveillance, removal of various articles of inmate's clothing and jewelry, denial of bed linens, placement of inmate in cell with another inmate, and multiple searches of inmate, did not constitute "deliberate indifference" to inmate's safety, even though inmate was not constantly observed after being placed in cell, and thus, officers were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action arising out of inmate's suicide. Gay v. City of Daleville, M.D.Ala.1996, 953 F.Supp. 1315. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Members of prison inmate discipline board were not qualifiedly immune from liability for imposing punishment on pretrial detainees without granting detainees any right to be heard in violation of their due process rights, thus warranting award of $300 to each detainee; although board members testified that jail's door problems caused security concerns, security could have been readily accommodated by other measures during relatively brief time necessary for proper hearing satisfying constitutional due process concepts, and board members' lack of knowledge that their actions violated law did not preclude liability. Dean v. Thomas, S.D.Miss.1996, 933 F.Supp. 600. Civil Rights 1376(7); Civil Rights 1464

Allegations by pretrial detainee's estate after detainee hanged himself with shackles left chained to bars of cell failed to establish that police officer deliberately interfered with detainee's safety resulting in due process violation and, therefore, officer was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 action; although officer was in charge of maintaining handcuffs and shackles, officer had no knowledge of detainee's suicide threat and, therefore, could not have acted knowingly or recklessly with respect to detainee's right to be protected from self-inflicted harm. Estate of Olivas By and Through Miranda v. City and County of Denver, D.Colo.1996, 929 F.Supp. 1329. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Personal representative of estate of pretrial detainee who committed suicide in jail failed to demonstrate that officer acted with deliberate indifference to detainee's suicidal tendencies, as would preclude officer from enjoying qualified immunity; although she was told that detainee had exhibited mood swings while on his way to jail, officer's only contact with detainee was escorting him to his cell and observing that he was quiet and did not respond to question she asked him. Estate of Frank v. City of Beaver Dam, E.D.Wis.1996, 921 F.Supp. 590. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Police chief and mayor were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by estate of detainee who committed suicide while in police custody based on failure to train officers regarding suicide prevention; chief and mayor did not directly participate in alleged violations of detainee's rights. Marshall v. Borough of Ambridge, W.D.Pa.1992, 798 F.Supp. 1187. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights claim based on the overnight detention of an arrestee before probable cause hearing, primarily so that police could arrange lineup; although arrestee remained in custody for more than two days, only the first 24 hours were attributable to the officer, since he relinquished custody of arrestee at lineup, and there was no evidence of improper motivation on the part of officer. Gonzalez v. Tilmer, N.D.Ill.1991, 775 F.Supp. 256. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3729. ---- Access to courts, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Prison librarian was not entitled to qualified immunity from prisoner's §§ 1983 claim, alleging that librarian's refusal to timely allow him to comb bind his petition for writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme Court violated his clearly established right to access courts; librarian took an atypically long time to answer prisoner's request to bind, prisoner's petition missed the filing deadline and was denied as untimely, and a reasonable person in librarian's position should have known, under existing precedent, that refusal of prisoner's request could result in him missing a filing deadline. Phillips v. Hust, D.Or.2004, 338 F.Supp.2d 1148. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Even if provision by county jail of letter access to legal assistance organizations and weekly request access to law library violated detainees' right to access to courts, reasonable jail official would not have known that this level of access violated establish law on right of access to courts, and thus, officials who provided this level of access were entitled to qualified immunity on detainees' § 1983 claim. Casteel v. Pieschek, E.D.Wis.1996, 944 F.Supp. 748. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to inmate's claim that he was deprived of his right of meaningful access to courts as result of his officials denying him physical access to law library, where record indicated that prison officials assisted in maintaining law books and legal information and they investigated his grievances regarding his lack of legal information in manner that protected his right of access to courts. Gawloski v. Dallman, S.D.Ohio 1992, 803 F.Supp. 103. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3730. ---- Access to mail, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Warden was entitled to qualified immunity in inmate's § 1983 action alleging that his incoming legal mail was improperly opened, where warden upheld inmate's grievance concerning first alleged incident of improper opening, and there was no evidence that warden was aware of second alleged incident. Gardner v. Howard, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1997, 109 F.3d 427. Civil Rights 1376(7)

County prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity when they barred detainee from obtaining hardcover books which he had ordered directly from publisher; officer's interest in preventing smuggling of contraband in hardcovered books and use of such books as weapons could have been accommodated by removing hard covers before turning over books to detainee. Jackson v. Elrod, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1989, 881 F.2d 441. Prisons 10

State prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity in inmate's action against officials asserting that their enforcement of state regulation barring inmates' receipt of free or gift publications deprived him of due process, absent showing that regulation violated due process. Zimmerman v. Simmons, D.Kan.2003, 260 F.Supp.2d 1077, reversed 392 F.3d 420, on remand 401 F.Supp.2d 1181. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3731. ---- Assaults, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Prison warden's argument that he could not be liable for civil rights violations stemming from rape of inmate who was transferred to another facility because warden had no personal knowledge of inmate's particular vulnerabilities to sexual assault was unavailing; correct inquiry was whether warden had knowledge about substantial risk of serious harm to particular class of persons, not whether he knew who the particular victim turned out to be. Taylor v. Michigan Dept. of Corrections, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 69 F.3d 76. Civil Rights 1093

Prison officials did not act with deliberate indifference to safety of inmate who was assaulted by his cellmate in allegedly failing to properly train and supervise activity of prison personnel, entitling officials to qualified immunity in civil rights action arising from assault, where prison had second lowest assault rate in state prison system. Knight v. Gill, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1993, 999 F.2d 1020. Civil Rights 1376(7); Prisons 12; Prisons 17(4)

Unarmed corrections officers were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to their failure to physically intervene to break up assault with a pipe by one inmate on another where they did order the assaulting inmate to stop the assault. Arnold v. Jones, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1989, 891 F.2d 1370, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Corrections officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to an inmate's §§ 1983 claim of an Eighth Amendment violation in connection with a search in which one officer allegedly held the inmate and laughed while a second officer grabbed the inmate's buttocks and fondled his penis; at the time of the search, it was clearly established that an otherwise legal search that was conducted in a harassing manner intended to humiliate and inflict psychological pain was unconstitutional. Turner v. Huibregtse, W.D.Wis.2006, 421 F.Supp.2d 1149. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Qualified immunity did not protect corrections officer, in lawsuit under §§ 1983, from prisoner's claim that officer sexually assaulted him in violation of his Eighth Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment, since sexual assault of prisoner was not within scope of corrections officer's official duties. Rodriguez v. McClenning, S.D.N.Y.2005, 399 F.Supp.2d 228. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prisoner who brought §§ 1983 action against prison officials, alleging failure to prevent assault, properly stated deprivation of Eighth Amendment rights that were clearly established at time of purported violations, and thus officials were not entitled to qualified immunity; complaint averred that officials had actual knowledge of threat to prisoner prior to assault, but that they intentionally or with deliberate indifference did not protect prisoner, thus proximately causing injury. Gibson v. Brooks, D.Conn.2004, 335 F.Supp.2d 325. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Director and chief of security for juvenile detention center were entitled to qualified immunity from juvenile inmate's Eighth Amendment claims arising out of assault by fellow inmates; officials acted within their discretionary authority and Eighth Amendment did not clearly proscribe conditions of confinement allegedly endured by inmate. D.R. by Robinson v. Phyfer, M.D.Ala.1995, 906 F.Supp. 637. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State inmate failed to establish, as required under his qualified immunity burden, that affirmative link existed between correctional facility's warden and excessive force allegedly used against inmate when he was removed from his cell by special operations response team, and therefore warden was protected from § 1983 liability by qualified immunity; inmate did not show that warden acted with culpable mind, deliberate indifference, or knowledge of any substantial risk of bodily harm to inmate when she activated command center in responding to weapon threat and ordered lockdown, did not show that warden ordered response team to act or knew of or acquiesced in any unconstitutional conduct by team, and did not show that warden personally participated with, exercised control or direction over, or supervised response team. Serna v. Colorado Department of Corrections, C.A.10 (Colo.) 2004, 108 Fed.Appx. 570, 2004 WL 1842991, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were not deliberately indifferent for failing to prevent attack on white inmate by African-American inmates, and thus were entitled to qualified immunity from inmate's § 1983 claims based on their failure to prevent attack, even if other white inmates had also been assaulted during same night, absent evidence that officials were aware of attacks or that racially-motivated attacks had previously occurred in barracks. Cohrs v. Norris, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 210 F.3d 378, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3732. ---- Disciplinary proceedings, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Members of federal prison's Institution Discipline Committee, who hear cases in which inmates are charged with rules infractions, are entitled to qualified, but not absolute, immunity from personal damages liability for actions violative of Federal Constitution. Cleavinger v. Saxner, U.S.Ind.1985, 106 S.Ct. 496, 474 U.S. 193, 88 L.Ed.2d 507. Civil Rights 1376(7); United States 50.5(5)

Court of Appeals would affirm district court's order denying Louisiana prison officials' motion to dismiss inmates' § 1983 claim on grounds of qualified immunity, where complaint did not allege whether inmates' confinement in extended lockdown resulted from their initial classification, which would not be protected under Fourteenth Amendment procedural due process, or from violations of prison disciplinary rules, which would trigger Sandin test; court could not determine whether inmates had asserted facts that would give rise to denial of liberty interest. Wilkerson v. Stalder, C.A.5 (La.) 2003, 329 F.3d 431, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 432, 540 U.S. 966, 157 L.Ed.2d 310. Constitutional Law 272(2); Federal Courts 927

State prison officials had qualified immunity from inmate's § 1983 claims arising from officials' discretionary determinations to house inmate in more restrictive "awaiting action" unit prior to disciplinary hearing, to permit inmate to use affidavits of inmates housed in other correctional institutions rather than live testimony at hearing, and to use evidence from unidentified informants at hearing, given that state correctional regulations generally permitted rather than forbade actions complained of. Abrazinski v. DuBois, D.Mass.1996, 940 F.Supp. 361. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Inmate's due process right to call witnesses at prison disciplinary hearing did not include right to gallery listing to identify potential witnesses, and, thus, qualified immunity doctrine applied to § 1983 civil rights claims against hearing officer based on denial of inmate's request for listing. Zamakshari v. Dvoskin, S.D.N.Y.1995, 899 F.Supp. 1097. Constitutional Law 272(2); Prisons 13(9)

Normally, prison officials serving as hearing officers are not absolutely immune but are protected by qualified immunity only, and fact that hearing officer was not an employee of the prison at which hearing took place but was employed by the Department of Correctional Services (DOCS) central office did not mean that he was sufficiently independent of prison authorities to merit absolute immunity. Payne v. Axelrod, N.D.N.Y.1995, 871 F.Supp. 1551 . Prisons 10

Prison discipline hearing officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 civil rights claims arising from violation of inmate's due process rights when nothing more than conclusory reasons were given for refusing to allow inmate to call witnesses; no assessment was conducted as to reliability of confidential informant, and officer relied solely on third-party assessment as to informant's credibility. Gaston v. Coughlin, W.D.N.Y.1994, 861 F.Supp. 199, affirmed in part, vacated in part 249 F.3d 156. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Qualified immunity applied to shield prison officials from § 1983 liability on state inmate's claim that he was deprived of opportunity to present witnesses in his defense at prison disciplinary proceeding in violation of his federal constitutional rights, inasmuch as officials' alleged conduct in disregarding inmate's letters did not violate clearly established rights, and officials could not be charged with knowledge that such inaction would have violated clearly established right. Johnson v. Coombe, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 1883352, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3733. ---- Medical care, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State-contracted physician who treated prison inmate did not act with deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs, as would violate Eighth Amendment; physician was responsive and timely when addressing inmate's medical concerns. Jones v. Consuegra's Estate, M.D.Fla.2004, 338 F.Supp.2d 1282. Prisons 17(2); Sentencing And Punishment 1546

Failure of corrections officer, who first discovered inmate hanging in cell, to attempt to resuscitate inmate did not violate any clearly established constitutional right of inmate, for qualified immunity purposes in § 1983 claim brought by survivors of inmate alleging deliberate medical indifference in violation of the Eighth Amendment, given that officer believed that inmate was dead and reasonably expected that emergency help was on its way. DiPace v. Goord, S.D.N.Y.2004, 308 F.Supp.2d 274. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Sheriff in his individual capacity was entitled to qualified immunity to claim of deliberate indifference brought by guardian of head-injured arrestee, in § 1983 lawsuit under Fourteenth Amendment, where guardian only made conclusory allegation that sheriff failed to adequately supervise his subordinates, and guardian pointed only to single incident suggesting need for further training; there were no allegations of previous incidents during which jail officials failed to provide necessary medical care to detainees or which should have alerted jail officials of need to train jailers as to appropriate manner of responding to head-injured or unconscious inmates. Layman v. Alexander, W.D.N.C.2003, 294 F.Supp.2d 784. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Representative of inmate who died in custody of Alabama Department of Corrections failed to establish that warden at correctional facility had any particular knowledge that medical treatment afforded at facility to inmate was inadequate, and thus, warden had qualified immunity from representative's civil rights action, based on warden's alleged deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical need in violation of inmate's Eighth Amendment rights. Pinkney v. Davis, M.D.Ala.1997, 952 F.Supp. 1561. Civil Rights 1376(7)

To prove deliberate indifference to a pretrial detainee's medical needs in violation of due process provisions of Fourteenth Amendment, pretrial detainee must show actual knowledge of specific risk of harm or risks so substantial that knowledge could be inferred; failure to take reasonable measures to prevent harm; and that failure to take such measures in light of knowledge or risk of harm justified liability for consequences of the failure. Houck v. City of Prairie Village, D.Kan.1996, 942 F.Supp. 493, reconsideration denied 950 F.Supp. 312, affirmed 166 F.3d 347. Constitutional Law 262

Prison medical staff was immune from liability for deliberate indifference to medical needs claim based on temporary failure to provide wheelchair to inmate. Brown v. Thompson, S.D.Ga.1994, 868 F.Supp. 326. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Individual defendants in § 1983 action, health administration of state Department of Criminal Justice and prison staff physician, were employed by state as individual officers with health care matters committed to their control and supervision, and could assert qualified immunity defense in action brought against them for inadequate medical care; thus inmate had to assert facts that show that no reasonable officer could have believed care received was permissible under laws as it existed at time of incident. Sappington v. Ulrich, E.D.Tex.1994, 868 F.Supp. 194. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Officers of sheriff's department did not act with "deliberate indifference" to pretrial detainee's medical needs, so as to defeat qualified immunity defense in § 1983 suit, even if they failed to treat him with ice and aspirin as instructed by doctor or delayed over two months in having injuries viewed again, as reasonable person would not have viewed detainee's injuries as being life threatening or serious; detainee was transported to hospital prior to booking, hospital doctor did not treat injuries as serious or life threatening, and inmate did not complain of injuries to booking officer upon arrival. Tucker v. Randall, N.D.Ill.1993, 840 F.Supp. 1237. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability in state prisoner's §§ 1983 action for deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, in connection with prisoner's alleged failure to receive medical treatment for his hepatitis C, where prisoner's allegations as pled demonstrated that prisoner's knew or reasonably should have known that they were violating plaintiff's clearly established Eighth Amendment rights. McKenna v. Wright, S.D.N.Y.2004, 2004 WL 102752, Unreported, appeal dismissed 386 F.3d 432. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualified immunity would not shield prison defendants from § 1983 liability for deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical condition. Williams v. Fisher, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 22170610, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State prison administrators could not be held liable under § 1983 absent allegation that they were personally involved in any allegedly retaliatory actions taken against prisoner. Soto v. Iacavino, S.D.N.Y.2003, 2003 WL 21281762, Unreported. Civil Rights 1358

3734. ---- Searches, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights liability for inmate's claim that his constitutional rights were violated when body cavity searches were allegedly conducted in full view of clerical workers, other inmates, and other bystanders, even if such viewings were inadvertent; there was evidence that screening was not always in place. Canell v. Beyers, D.Or.1993, 840 F.Supp. 1378. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3735. ---- Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

For purposes of determining whether state prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity in former prisoner's § 1983 action, which alleged violation of his procedural due process rights during a prison disciplinary proceeding at which he was sentenced to confinement in a special housing unit, proper focus of inquiry into whether prisoner had a clearly established right to due process protection was length of disciplinary sentence imposed at time of disciplinary proceeding, rather than time prisoner actually served in the special housing unit. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Director of satellite mental unit, of Department of Corrections facility, was not liable under § 1983 to prisoner who had been left in isolated cell while suffering from a fracture of fibula, on grounds that director did not have proper supervisory procedure in place; there was requirement that corrections officers make rounds every 15 minutes, and that medical complaints be reported to medical staff immediately, and corrections officer alleged to have not reported prisoner's complaint had reported complaint of another patient at approximately the same time. Brown v. Sheridan, N.D.N.Y.1995, 894 F.Supp. 66. Civil Rights 1358

Correctional facility officer could be held personally liable for failing to afford inmate opportunity to make statement prior to being confined in 24-hour keeplock imposed for administrative reasons, even though defect arose from lack of provision for such right in jail's rules, where officer had not asserted official immunity. McCann v. Phillips, S.D.N.Y.1994, 864 F.Supp. 330. Civil Rights 1358

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity from money damages in § 1983 action brought by inmate alleging constitutional violations in his placement in investigatory segregation for 41 days, during which time personal property restrictions were imposed, and failure to provide inmate with full back pay or full credit for time served against any future penalties; general policy of restricting personal property was made after review of security concerns and conference with assistant Attorney General of state, and inmate received appropriate notices for due process requirements and informal, nonadversarial hearing during term spent in segregation. Losee v. Nix, S.D.Iowa 1994, 842 F.Supp. 1178. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3736. ---- Smoking in prison, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Secretary of Department of Corrections and wardens were not entitled to qualified immunity against state prisoner's § 1983 claim that he was forced to live and work in environments filled with tobacco smoke and that prison smoking policies amounted to unreasonable risk and deliberate indifference to his health, in that it was not beyond doubt that prisoner could prove no set of facts showing that this situation was not within contemporary standards of decency. Rochon v. City of Angola, La., C.A.5 (La.) 1997, 122 F.3d 319, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1518, 523 U.S. 1075, 140 L.Ed.2d 671. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials' alleged consistent unwillingness to enforce smoking ban in inmate's room and repeated unresponsiveness to inmate's requests was "deliberate indifference" to inmate's medical problems caused by exposure to tobacco smoke, needed to state § 1983 civil rights claim despite qualified immunity defense. Weaver v. Clarke, C.A.8 (Neb.) 1995, 45 F.3d 1253. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from prisoner's claim that they violated his Eighth Amendment rights by exposing him to environmental tobacco smoke that posed unreasonable risk of future harm; right of prisoner not to be subjected to such risk was clearly established, and there was evidence that prisoner was left in small enclosed cell for 19 hours a day with habitual cigar smoker. Johnson v. Pearson, E.D.Va.2004, 316 F.Supp.2d 307. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from prisoner's claim that they violated his Eighth Amendment rights by exposing him to environmental tobacco smoke that exacerbated his respiratory problems, and caused him mild headaches, difficulty breathing, eye irritation, runny nose, dizziness, and occasional stomach cramping; right of prisoner not to be subjected to such risk was clearly established, and there was evidence that prisoner was left in small enclosed cell for 19 hours a day with habitual cigar smoker. Johnson v. Pearson, E.D.Va.2004, 316 F.Supp.2d 307. Civil Rights 1376(7)

State prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity in inmate's civil rights action stemming from complaint concerning smoking in prison. Mott v. State of Ind., N.D.Ind.1991, 793 F.Supp. 178, affirmed 966 F.2d 1456. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3737. ---- Training and supervision, prison officials, qualified immunity generally

Village police chief's failure to train police officers as to need to refer pretrial detainee for psychiatric treatment and failure to refer a pretrial detainee for such timely and adequate medical care was not deliberate indifference to detainee's medical needs so as to render police chief liable in § 1983 action for violation of due process; police chief did not have medical or psychiatric training, he did not have direct contact with detainee, there was no reason to find that he had actual knowledge or substantial reason to know that failure to immediately hospitalize detainee would cause detainee harm, and risk of not hospitalizing persons exhibiting detainee's behavior was not obvious. Houck v. City of Prairie Village, D.Kan.1996, 942 F.Supp. 493, reconsideration denied 950 F.Supp. 312, affirmed 166 F.3d 347. Civil Rights 1358

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner of Massachusetts Department of Corrections were entitled to qualified immunity from liability for failure to train and supervise prison officials in civil rights action brought by inmate for being denied due process at disciplinary hearing. McGuinness v. DuBois, D.Mass.1995, 891 F.Supp. 25, affirmed 86 F.3d 1146. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Former state prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights action under § 1983, alleging that inmate's Eighth Amendment rights were violated on ground that officials exhibited deliberate indifference to inmate's constitutional rights by authorizing unconstitutional policies and practices related to use of lethal force, where Court of Appeals had previously affirmed that identical use of force policy was constitutionally sound. Estate of Torres v. Terhune, E.D.Cal.2002, 2002 WL 32107950, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3738. Private defendants, qualified immunity generally

Prison guards who are employees of a private prison management firm are not entitled to qualified immunity from suit by prisoners charging a violation of § 1983, considering that history does not reveal a firmly rooted tradition of immunity applicable to privately employed prison guards, and that immunity doctrine's purposes do not warrant immunity for private prison guards. Richardson v. McKnight, U.S.Tenn.1997, 117 S.Ct. 2100, 521 U.S. 399, 138 L.Ed.2d 540. Civil Rights 1373; Civil Rights 1376(7)

Qualified immunity was not available to private litigant and his attorney in § 1983 action against them for securing relief under Mississippi replevin statute, later determined to be unconstitutional. Wyatt v. Cole, U.S.Miss.1992, 112 S.Ct. 1827, 504 U.S. 158, 118 L.Ed.2d 504, on remand 994 F.2d 1113. Civil Rights 1374; Civil Rights 1375

For purposes of §§ 1983 claim, fact that private firm is non-profit entity is insufficient to shield it from market pressures, such that qualified immunity is necessary to protect against unwarranted timidity by firm and its employees. Rosewood Services, Inc. v. Sunflower Diversified Services, Inc., C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 413 F.3d 1163. Civil Rights 1373

Private individual who performs government function pursuant to state order or request is entitled to qualified immunity if state official would have been entitled to such immunity had he performed function himself. Eagon Through Eagon v. City of Elk City, Okl., C.A.10 (Okla.) 1996, 72 F.3d 1480. Civil Rights 1373

Qualified immunity is not available in § 1983 actions to private persons who act under color of law. Jordan v. Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1994, 20 F.3d 1250, on remand 1995 WL 141465. Civil Rights 1373

Private psychiatric facility that had been involved in emergency involuntary detention and treatment of arrestee pursuant to Indiana statutes was entitled to assert qualified immunity defense in civil rights action in which arrestee claimed that facility violated his right to due process where facility acted pursuant to court order, where there was no allegation of bad faith, and where there was no claim that administration of antipsychotic drugs had been medically inappropriate. Sherman v. Four County Counseling Center, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1993, 987 F.2d 397. Civil Rights 1373

Private defendants who allegedly conspired with public official to deprive another of that person's constitutional rights are not entitled to qualified immunity under § 1983 of civil rights laws. Burrell v. Board of Trustees of Ga. Military College, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1992, 970 F.2d 785, rehearing denied 978 F.2d 718, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1814, 507 U.S. 1018, 123 L.Ed.2d 445. Conspiracy 13

Court of Appeals lacked jurisdiction over private defendants' interlocutory appeal in federal civil rights action in which they claimed defense of qualified immunity; public policy reasons for qualified immunity did not extend to private defendants who were alleged to have voluntarily engaged in illegal activities in the advancement of their own self-interest. Felix de Santana v. Velez, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1992, 956 F.2d 16, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 59, 506 U.S. 817, 121 L.Ed.2d 28. Federal Courts 579

Defense of qualified immunity was not available to hospital paramedics who detained allegedly mentally ill person pursuant to Wyoming's Emergency Detention statute, as policies underlying qualified immunity did not apply with full force; hospital did not act pursuant to government contract, it was not better to have hospital personnel make mistaken decisions based on good-faith interpretation of law than not to make any decisions, and detainee may have been deprived of her constitutional rights even if paramedics did not act for sole purpose of depriving her thereof. Moore v. Wyoming Medical Center, D.Wyo.1993, 825 F.Supp. 1531. Civil Rights 1373

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Subcontractor that had been awarded contract with New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) to help remediate hazardous waste environmental conditions acted pursuant to a lawful and constitutional warrant when it searched property for hazardous waste materials and, therefore, was entitled to qualified immunity in property owner's §§ 1983 action. Eden v. Voss, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2004, 105 Fed.Appx. 234, 2004 WL 1535829, Unreported. Civil Rights 1373

3739. Probation officers, qualified immunity generally

Juvenile probation officer was acting outside scope of her authority in approving detention of juvenile without approval of juvenile judge, and thus, officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by juvenile who alleged that such detention violated his federally protected rights under Fourth Amendment; to extent that county juvenile detention center guide permitted officer to make referrals to detention center, manual exceeded authority granted by juvenile probation officers by Alabama law. A.M. By and Through Law v. Grant, M.D.Ala.1995, 889 F.Supp. 1495, affirmed 68 F.3d 486. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Probation officers enjoyed only qualified immunity from civil rights liability predicated on their gathering of information in order to prepare presentence report. Bieros v. Nicola, E.D.Pa.1993, 839 F.Supp. 332. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3740. Prosecutors, qualified immunity generally

Mere fact that successful candidate for office of district attorney had not yet assumed duties of his office, and thus did not have administration with which assistant district attorney, based on his open support of opposing candidate, could interfere did not affect qualified immunity to which district attorney was entitled for dismissing assistant district attorney based on his political affiliation; one who knows he is about to become district attorney must begin to assemble his staff before he actually assumes position. Aucoin v. Haney, C.A.5 (La.) 2002, 306 F.3d 268, on subsequent appeal 93 Fed.Appx. 638, 2004 WL 628886. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Government officials were qualifiedly immune from liability in § 1983 action for bringing criminal prosecution for criminal harassment, supported by probable cause, allegedly in attempt to deter or silence plaintiff's right to free speech, where prosecution did not actually deter or silence plaintiff. Mozzochi v. Borden, C.A.2 (Conn.) 1992, 959 F.2d 1174. Civil Rights 1376(1)

Even if search warrant affidavit contained misrepresentation about date on which professor delivered material to special prosecutor who was investigating allegations of embezzlement from university, substance of affidavit nevertheless established probable cause to search and, thus, special prosecutor, detective, and auditor were entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights liability. Rozek v. Topolnicki, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1989, 865 F.2d 1154. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(9)

District attorneys' alleged participation with police in conducting search exceeded attorney's necessary role in marshaling facts of case and, therefore, did not justify absolute immunity under Georgia law from liability for claims brought under statute that prohibits deprivation of federal or statutory or constitutional rights under color of state law, but attorneys were entitled to qualified immunity for involvement in raid on jail cell. Mullinax v. McElhenney, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1987, 817 F.2d 711. Civil Rights 1376(9)

State prosecutor enjoys absolute immunity from §§ 1983 actions for preparing and filing an information and for moving for an arrest warrant, but only qualified immunity for acting as a complaining witness in averring a complaint for arrest and its supporting affidavit. Mink v. Salazar, D.Colo.2004, 344 F.Supp.2d 1231. Civil Rights 1375; Civil Rights 1376(9)

Qualified immunity shields prosecutors and other government officials from liability for money damages when performing discretionary functions if their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Groom v. Fickes, S.D.Tex.1997, 966 F.Supp. 1466, affirmed 129 F.3d 606. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Because Pennsylvania law allowed hypnotized testimony to be used in certain circumstances, Pennsylvania county district attorney did not act in clear violation of state law in securing hypnotically enhanced testimony from alleged assault victim and therefore, he was entitled to qualified immunity for purposes of § 1983 action. Boykin v. Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania, M.D.Pa.1995, 893 F.Supp. 400, affirmed 91 F.3d 122, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 739, 519 U.S. 1078, 136 L.Ed.2d 678. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutor was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for investigating and preparing state's case against landowner for chasing meter reader off property. Lutz v. Lavelle, M.D.Pa.1991, 809 F.Supp. 323. Civil Rights 1376(9)

When acting in investigative or administrative capacity, as in dissemination of information to press, prosecutor is protected only by qualified "good faith" immunity from liability under § 1983. Schiavone Const. Co. v. Merola, S.D.N.Y.1988, 678 F.Supp. 64, affirmed 848 F.2d 43, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 144, 488 U.S. 855, 102 L.Ed.2d 116. Civil Rights 1376(9)

If state officials used private citizen, who was bringing civil actions against physician, to obtain physician's medicaid records in illegal manner, doctrine of qualified immunity would not protect officials from section 1983 liability. Hooper v. Sachs, D.C.Md.1985, 618 F.Supp. 963, affirmed 823 F.2d 547, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 347, 484 U.S. 954, 98 L.Ed.2d 373. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Special prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity from liability under § 1983 for alleged violation of police officer's Fourth Amendment right against unreasonable seizure in connection with court order, based on information filed by special prosecutor, prohibiting officer from leaving state, even if special prosecutor failed to state in motion and affidavit in support of information that suspect, as police officer effecting arrest, and legal right to arrest and use reasonable force. Stinnett v. Fallon County, Montana, C.A.9 (Mont.) 2003, 72 Fed.Appx. 642, 2003 WL 21801546, Unreported. District And Prosecuting Attorneys 10

3741. Utilities officials, qualified immunity generally

Public policy considerations did not warrant extending qualified immunity to community developmental disability organization (CDDO) sued by developmental disability service provider under §§ 1983, alleging conflicts of interest and retaliation in connection with distribution of state funds; although replacement procedures under Kansas law created significant barriers to entry into CDDO industry, extension of immunity was not necessary to avoid unwarranted timidity in CDDO's performance of its duties. Rosewood Services, Inc. v. Sunflower Diversified Services, Inc., C.A.10 (Kan.) 2005, 413 F.3d 1163. Civil Rights 1373

Town superintendent of highways was not entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by homeowners for violation of substantive due process in denial of street excavation permit for connection to public water system, as a means of extorting a deed of land from them for widening street; superintendent was not exercising discretionary function but simply refusing to perform ministerial act and could not have believed, as a matter of equal protection or town law, that he had discretion to deny permit as a means of extorting land from homeowners. Walz v. Town of Smithtown, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 46 F.3d 162, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 2557, 515 U.S. 1131, 132 L.Ed.2d 810. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Sewer district officials were entitled to qualified immunity for § 1983 claim against them in their individual capacities by employee alleging violation of right to privacy due to officials' covert surveillance at work place which resulted in employee's arrest on drug charges and discharge, where officials' conduct did not infringe on any established privacy rights. Henry v. Metropolitan Sewer Dist., C.A.6 (Ky.) 1990, 922 F.2d 332, rehearing overruled 41 F.Supp.2d 1123. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Town officers did not have qualified immunity in suit by landowners for failure to extend town sewer lines to annexed parcels, notwithstanding cost considerations, where prior state annexation court orders required sewer lines to be connected to the parcels within five years and that time period had passed; extension of sewer lines was not a discretionary act. Front Royal and Warren County Indus. Park Corp. v. Town of Front Royal, Va., W.D.Va.1989, 708 F.Supp. 1477. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3742. Zoning officials, qualified immunity generally

On claim that operator of adult entertainment business was maliciously prosecuted for exercise of constitutional rights, there was no substantial evidence that zoning administrator acted with malice and intentionally attempted to deprive operator of his rights, though he was acquitted on two counts of operating an adult entertainment establishment within one thousand feet of a residential zone, because of incorrect measurement of distance to nearest residence, and covictiuons for operating an adult entertainment establishment in an improper zone were overturned by federal habeas court for failure of administrator to notify the city attorney of her department's mistaken approval of location, leaving standing only convictions for building code violations; mistake did not preclude prosecution under state law, administrator was acting not on her own motion but on a citizen's complaint, and it was the prosecutor's independent decision to prosecute, despite then knowing of the mistake. Poppell v. City of San Diego, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1998, 149 F.3d 951. Malicious Prosecution 33

While establishing goals for statewide master zoning plan is clearly legislative act entitling officials to absolute immunity, suit against Oregon Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) for singling out property and demanding that local legislature amend its plans so as to change property's value was executive action subject only to qualified immunity. Zamsky v. Hansell, C.A.9 (Or.) 1991, 933 F.2d 677. Zoning And Planning 353.1

Processing site plan application was not mere exercise of a ministerial duty, but, rather, involved exercise of discretion, and thus, affirmative defense of qualified immunity would not be stricken from town, town planning board, and board members' answer in action brought by developer of proposed subdivision, alleging that board's alleged refusal to receive and begin processing its application violated its constitutional rights. Ridgeview Partners, LLC v. Entwistle, S.D.N.Y.2005, 354 F.Supp.2d 395. Federal Civil Procedure 1108.1

Members of city's board of aldermen were not entitled to qualified immunity with regard to developer's due process and Fair Housing Act (FHA) claims which stemmed from board's decisions to revoke building permit previously issued to developer, to enact moratorium on issuance of building permits for multi-unit residential housing and to refuse to accept further permit applications, as such claims involved clearly established statutory and constitutional rights. Summerchase Ltd. Partnership I v. City of Gonzales, M.D.La.1997, 970 F.Supp. 522. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3742A. Practice and procedure, qualified immunity generally

Ruling on qualified immunity should be made early in proceedings in § 1983 case so that cost and expenses of trial are avoided where defense is dispositive. Leisure v. City of Cincinnati, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 848. Civil Rights 1376(1)

3743. Particular claims, qualified immunity generally

Allegations in civil rights complaint, that prior decisions of Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors to indemnify county sheriffs from punitive damage awards were made in bad faith and proximately caused a violation of plaintiff's constitutional rights, were sufficient to overcome Board's claims of qualified immunity and to state claim for relief under § 1983. Navarro v. Block, C.A.9 (Cal.) 2001, 250 F.3d 729, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied.

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

City officials who suspended massage therapist's practitioner and massage establishment licenses due to alleged misconduct involving patient were not entitled to qualified immunity as to therapist's equal protection claim; there was evidence that officials first specifically informed therapist that his license was void after he requested hearing, marked his license void, and ensured that therapist would not practice massage until he filed new application, but that therapist was treated differently than others similarly situated. Jones v. City of Modesto, E.D.Cal.2005, 408 F.Supp.2d 935. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Qualified immunity did not apply to preclude §§ 1983 liability of Puerto Rico Health Insurance Administration and its executives for alleged termination of services contract of independent contractor in retaliation for exercise of First Amendments rights by one of contractor's major shareholders. Behavioral Healthcare Partners, Inc. v. Gonzalez-Rivera, D.Puerto Rico 2005, 392 F.Supp.2d 191. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Genuine issue of material fact regarding state prison officials' motive in transferring inmate to Administrative Segregation after Behavior Modification Unit (BMU) program was discontinued precluded summary judgment for officials on issue of qualified immunity, in inmate's § 1983 action alleging that officials retaliated against inmate in violation of the First Amendment, due to inmate's filing of complaint. Lodato v. Ortiz, D.N.J.2004, 314 F.Supp.2d 379. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Government officials who calculated food stamp participant's benefits were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim that officials improperly failed to consider participant to be homeless under statute defining homeless individual as person who had primary nighttime residence that was not designed for or used as regular sleeping accommodation; participant rented room in building which was designed for regular sleeping conditions. Sanders v. Jefferson County Dept. of Human Resources, N.D.Ala.1999, 117 F.Supp.2d 1199, affirmed in part, reversed in part 235 F.3d 1345. Civil Rights 1376(1)

XXXIII. CLEARLY ESTABLISHED RIGHT

<Subdivision Index>

Access to courts, police activities 3859
Access to courts, prisons and prisoners 3904
Access to internet materials, prisons and prisoners 3905a
Access to libraries, prisons and prisoners 3905
Access to mails, prisons and prisoners 3906
Administrative detention, prisons and prisoners 3897a

Agriculture 3789
Applications for arrest warrants, police activities 3871
Applications for search warrants, police activities 3886
Arrestees, prisons and prisoners 3902
Arrests, environment and conservation 3845
Arrests generally, police activities 3870
Assault, prisons and prisoners 3923
Assaults on students, education or schools 3816
Attachments, attorneys 3794
Attorneys 3790-3794
    Attorneys - Generally 3790

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Attorneys - Attachments 3794
Attorneys - Private attorneys compared 3791
Attorneys - Prosecutors 3792
Attorneys - State attorneys general 3793
Cell searches, prisons and prisoners 3930
Chase, police activities 3890
Child abuse and neglect investigations, child welfare 3798
Child support, child welfare 3799
Child welfare 3795-3801
Child welfare - Generally 3795

Child welfare - Child abuse and neglect investigations 3798
Child welfare - Child support 3799
Child welfare - Family rights 3796
Child welfare - Foster care placements 3800
Child welfare - Malicious prosecutions 3797
Child welfare - Medical treatment 3801
Circuit court decisions 3779
City officials 3802
Classification of inmates, prisons and prisoners 3916
Clearly established right generally 3771
Clinical privileges 3803
Confessions, prosecutor activities 3940
Confiscation of property, police activities 3889
Constitutional deprivations 3777
Contractors 3804
Contracts and assignments 3805
Corporal punishment, education or schools 3814
Court decisions generally 3778
Court officials 3806
Court orders 3788
Crime victims privacy right, clearly established right 3952

Death of prisoner, prisons and prisoners 3924
Developers 3807
Discharges or dismissals, employment 3835
Disciplinary hearings, prisons and prisoners 3909
Discipline, employment 3833
Discipline generally, education or schools 3813
Discipline generally, prisons and prisoners 3908
Drug testing, employment 3834
Education or schools 3808-3819
Education or schools - Generally 3808
Education or schools - Assaults on students 3816
Education or schools - Corporal punishment 3814
Education or schools - Discipline generally 3813
Education or schools - Equal protection 3809
Education or schools - Freedom of speech 3810
Education or schools - Handicapped children 3818
Education or schools - Harassment 3817
Education or schools - Miscellaneous rights 3819

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Education or schools - Religion 3811
Education or schools - Searches 3812
Education or schools - Social services 3811a

Education or schools - Suspensions 3815
Elections 3820
Employment 3821-3843
Employment - Generally 3821
Employment - Discharges or dismissals 3835
Employment - Discipline 3833
Employment - Drug testing 3834
Employment - Equal protection 3828
Employment - First Amendment generally 3822
Employment - Freedom of association 3824
Employment - Freedom of religion 3826
Employment - Freedom of speech 3823
Employment - Hirings 3836
Employment - Medical benefits 3837
Employment - Political affiliation 3825
Employment - Privacy right 3827
Employment - Promotions or demotions 3838
Employment - Racial discrimination 3829
Employment - Referral lists 3839
Employment - Reinstatements 3840
Employment - Rehiring 3836a

Employment - Resignations 3841
Employment - Retirement benefits 3842
Employment - Searches generally 3832
Employment - Sex discrimination 3830
Employment - Sexual harassment 3831
Employment - Suspensions 3843
Enforcement of court orders 3788
Environment and conservation 3844-3846
Environment and conservation - Generally 3844
Environment and conservation - Arrests 3845
Environment and conservation - Searches 3846
Equal protection, education or schools 3809
Equal protection, employment 3828
Equal protection, police activities 3860
Evictions, housing 3851
Evidence, police activities 3881
Excessive use of force, police activities 3879
Execution of search warrants, police activities 3887
Executive officials 3785
Exercise and recreation, prisons and prisoners 3919
Extraditions, police activities 3867

Failure to act, police activities 3883
False arrests and imprisonments, police activities 3874
False reports, police activities 3882

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Family rights, child welfare 3796
Federal statutes, statutes or regulations 3782
First Amendment generally, employment 3822
Foster care placements, child welfare 3800
Freedom of association, employment 3824
Freedom of association, police activities 3861
Freedom of association, prisons and prisoners 3898
Freedom of religion, employment 3826
Freedom of religion, prisons and prisoners 3899
Freedom of speech, education or schools 3810
Freedom of speech, employment 3823
Freedom of speech, police activities 3862
Freedom of speech, prisons and prisoners 3900
Grooming standards, prisons and prisoners 3920
Handicapped children, education or schools 3818
Harassment, education or schools 3817
Harassment, police activities 3891
Harassment, prisons and prisoners 3912

High speed chase, police activities 3890
Hirings, employment 3836
Horse racing 3847
Hospitals 3848, 3849
- Hospitals - Generally 3848
- Hospitals - Mental hospitals or institutions 3849

Housing 3850-3852
- Housing - Generally 3850
- Housing - Evictions 3851
- Housing - Inspections 3852

Housing codes 3853
Identity of facts 3774
Informants, prisons and prisoners 3921
Inspections, housing 3852
Intimidation, prisons and prisoners 3922
Investigations, police activities 3863
Involuntary administration of medication, prisons and prisoners 3915
Knowledge 3775
Legal participants, police activities 3894
Legal question 3776
Licenses and permits 3854

Lotteries 3855
Malicious prosecutions, child welfare 3797
Malicious prosecutions, police activities 3868
Medicaid payments 3857
Medical attention, police activities 3880
Medical benefits, employment 3837
Medical care, prisons and prisoners 3914
Medical status 3856
Medical treatment, child welfare 3801
Mental hospitals or institutions 3849

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Minimum housing standards, prisons and prisoners 3916a
Miscellaneous activities, police activities 3896
Miscellaneous rights, education or schools 3819
Miscellaneous rights, prisons and prisoners 3937
Notice 3772
Number of inmates in cell, prisons and prisoners 3917
Parole revocation hearings, prisons and prisoners 3927
Parolee status, prisons and prisoners 3926
Patronage, employment 3825
Permits 3854
Police activities 3858-3896

Police activities - Generally 3858
Police activities - Access to courts 3859
Police activities - Applications for arrest warrants 3871
Police activities - Applications for search warrants 3886
Police activities - Arrests generally 3870
Police activities - Confiscation of property 3889
Police activities - Equal protection 3860
Police activities - Evidence 3881
Police activities - Excessive use of force 3879
Police activities - Execution of search warrants 3887
Police activities - Extraditions 3867
Police activities - Failure to act 3883
Police activities - False arrests and imprisonments 3874
Police activities - False reports 3882
Police activities - Freedom of association 3861
Police activities - Freedom of speech 3862
Police activities - Harassment 3891
Police activities - High speed chase 3890
Police activities - Investigations 3863
Police activities - Legal participants 3894
Police activities - Malicious prosecutions 3868

Police activities - Medical attention 3880
Police activities - Miscellaneous activities 3896
Police activities - Probable cause determinations 3873
Police activities - Protective custody 3875
Police activities - Reliance 3895
Police activities - Restraints 3876
Police activities - Roadblocks 3878
Police activities - Searches generally 3884
Police activities - Seizures 3885
Police activities - Special relationship 3892
Police activities - State created danger 3893
Police activities - Stops 3877
Police activities - Taking without compensation 3864
Police activities - Third parties injured by police actions 3869
Police activities - Training and supervision 3865
Police activities - Travel rights 3866
Police activities - Warrantless arrests 3872

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Police activities - Warrantless searches 3888
Political affiliation, employment 3825
Pretrial detainee status, prisons and prisoners 3903
Prisons and prisoners 3897-3937

Prisons and prisoners - Generally 3897
Prisons and prisoners - Access to courts 3904
Prisons and prisoners - Access to internet materials 3905a
Prisons and prisoners - Access to libraries 3905
Prisons and prisoners - Access to mails 3906
Prisons and prisoners - Administrative detention 3897a
Prisons and prisoners - Arrestees 3902
Prisons and prisoners - Assault 3923
Prisons and prisoners - Cell searches 3930
Prisons and prisoners - Classification of inmates 3916
Prisons and prisoners - Death of prisoner 3924
Prisons and prisoners - Disciplinary hearings 3909
Prisons and prisoners - Discipline generally 3908
Prisons and prisoners - Exercise and recreation 3919
Prisons and prisoners - Freedom of association 3898
Prisons and prisoners - Freedom of religion 3899
Prisons and prisoners - Freedom of speech 3900
Prisons and prisoners - Grooming standards 3920
Prisons and prisoners - Harassment 3912
Prisons and prisoners - Informants 3921
Prisons and prisoners - Intimidation 3922

Prisons and prisoners - Involuntary administration of medication 3915
Prisons and prisoners - Medical care 3914
Prisons and prisoners - Minimum housing standards 3916a
Prisons and prisoners - Miscellaneous rights 3937
Prisons and prisoners - Number of inmates in cell 3917
Prisons and prisoners - Parole revocation hearings 3927
Prisons and prisoners - Parolee status 3926
Prisons and prisoners - Pretrial detainee status 3903
Prisons and prisoners - Privacy right 3901
Prisons and prisoners - Release of prisoner 3925
Prisons and prisoners - Restraints 3910
Prisons and prisoners - Retaliation 3913
Prisons and prisoners - Searches generally 3929
Prisons and prisoners - Sentence 3932
Prisons and prisoners - Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners 3933
Prisons and prisoners - Telephone access 3907
Prisons and prisoners - Temperature in cells 3918
Prisons and prisoners - Training and supervision 3911
Prisons and prisoners - Transfer of prisoners 3934
Prisons and prisoners - Visitor privileges 3936

Prisons and prisoners - Visitor searches 3931
Prisons and prisoners - Work conditions 3935
Prisons and prisoners - Work release programs 3928

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Privacy right, employment 3827
Privacy right, prisons and prisoners 3901
Private attorneys compared 3791
Private defendants 3786
Privacy right of crime victims, clearly established right 3952
Probable cause determinations, police activities 3873
Probation, prosecutor activities 3941
Promotions or demotions, employment 3838
Property owners 3938
Prosecutor activities 3939-3941
Prosecutor activities - Generally 3939
Prosecutor activities - Confessions 3940
Prosecutor activities - Probation 3941
Prosecutors, attorneys 3792
Protective custody, police activities 3875
Pursuit, police activities 3890
Question of law 3776
Racial discrimination, employment 3829

Recreation, prisons and prisoners 3919
Referral lists, employment 3839
Refunds, taxation 3947a
Reinstatements, employment 3840
Rehiring, employment 3836a
Release of prisoner, prisons and prisoners 3925
Reliance, police activities 3895
Religion, education or schools 3811
Religious freedom, employment 3826
Religious freedom, prisons and prisoners 3899
Resignations, employment 3841
Restraints, police activities 3876
Restraints, prisons and prisoners 3910
Retaliation, prisons and prisoners 3913
Retaliatory condemnation 3943
Retaliatory prosecution 3942
Retirement benefits, employment 3842
Roadblocks, police activities 3878
Searches, education or schools 3812
Searches, environment and conservation 3846
Searches generally, employment 3832

Searches generally, police activities 3884
Searches generally, prisons and prisoners 3929
Searches, taxation 3947
Securities 3944
Seizures, police activities 3885
Seizures, taxation 3948
Sentence, prisons and prisoners 3932
Sex discrimination, employment 3830
Sexual harassment, employment 3831
Social services, education or schools 3811a

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Social workers 3945
Solitary confinement or segregation of prisoners, prisons and prisoners 3933
Special relationship, police activities 3892
State and local laws contrary to claimed right 3787
State and local laws giving rise to clearly established right, statutes or regulations 3783
State attorneys general 3793
State created danger, police activities 3893
State officials generally 3784
Statutes or regulations 3781-3783
Statutes or regulations - Generally 3781
Statutes or regulations - Federal statutes 3782
Statutes or regulations - State and local laws giving rise to clearly established right 3783
Stops, police activities 3877
Supervision, police activities 3865
Supervision, prisons and prisoners 3911
Supreme Court decisions 3780
Suspensions, education or schools 3815
Suspensions, employment 3843
Taking without compensation, police activities 3864
Taxation 3946-3948
Taxation - Generally 3946
Taxation - Refunds 3947a
Taxation - Searches 3947
Taxation - Seizures 3948
Telephone access, prisons and prisoners 3907
Temperature in cells, prisons and prisoners 3918
Third parties injured by police actions, police activities 3869
Time of establishment 3773
Training and supervision, police activities 3865
Training and supervision, prisons and prisoners 3911
Transfer of prisoners, prisons and prisoners 3934
Travel rights, police activities 3866
Trusts 3949
Visitor privileges, prisons and prisoners 3936
Visitor searches, prisons and prisoners 3931
Warrantless arrests, police activities 3872
Warrantless searches, police activities 3888
Witness testimony 3950
Work conditions, prisons and prisoners 3935
Work release programs, prisons and prisoners 3928
Zoning issues 3951

3771. Clearly established right generally

If a court determines, in ruling on a qualified immunity issue in a civil rights action against a government official, that a favorable view of plaintiff's alleged facts show that official's conduct violated a constitutional right, court's next step is to ask whether such right was clearly established; this inquiry must be undertaken in light of the specific context of the case, not as a broad general proposition. Saucier v. Katz, U.S.2001, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 533

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

U.S. 194, 150 L.Ed.2d 272, on remand 262 F.3d 897. Civil Rights 1376(2)

A court evaluating a claim of qualified immunity must first determine whether the plaintiff has alleged the deprivation of an actual constitutional right at all, and if so, proceed to determine whether that right was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation. Wilson v. Layne, U.S.Md.1999, 119 S.Ct. 1692, 526 U.S. 603, 143 L.Ed.2d 818. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

In order to overcome the defense of qualified immunity in a § 1983 action for civil damages from a government official performing discretionary functions, the plaintiff is required to show that the official violated clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Conn v. Gabbert, U.S.Cal.1999, 119 S.Ct. 1292, 526 U.S. 286, 143 L.Ed.2d 399. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Unlawfulness must be apparent in light of pre-existing law for official to be denied qualified immunity; however, that is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful. McKinley v. City of Mansfield, C.A.6 (Ohio) 2005, 404 F.3d 418, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1026, 163 L.Ed.2d 854. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Plaintiff contesting a defendant's qualified immunity on the ground that defendant's conduct violated a clearly established constitutional or statutory right bears the burden of establishing that a given right is clearly established, and to do so the plaintiff must demonstrate either that a court has upheld the purported right in a case factually similar to the one under review, or that the alleged misconduct constituted an obvious violation of a constitutional right; however, liability is not predicated upon the existence of a prior case that is directly on point. Lunini v. Grayeb, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 395 F.3d 761, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1407

In determining whether a constitutional right has been clearly established for qualified immunity purposes, it is not necessary for the particular violation in question to have been previously held unlawful; instead, a clearly established constitutional right exists in the absence of precedent, where the contours of the right are sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. Board v. Farnham, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2005, 394 F.3d 469. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public officials are entitled to qualified immunity from liability under §§ 1983 if their actions violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights then known to reasonable officer; under two-step analysis, court must first assess whether state actor's conduct violated a constitutional right when viewed in light most favorable to party asserting injury and, if so, must determine whether right violated was clearly established. Baird v. Board of Educ. for Warren Community Unit School Dist. No. 205, C.A.7 (Ill.) 2004, 389 F.3d 685, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 332, 163 L.Ed.2d 45. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity is not appropriate merely because no cases directly address the use of a new weapon or a novel method is used to inflict injury; rather, when an officer's conduct is so patently violative of the constitutional right that reasonable officials would know without guidance from the courts that the action was unconstitutional, closely analogous pre-existing case law is not required to show that the law is clearly established. Boyd v. Benton County, C.A.9 (Or.) 2004, 374 F.3d 773. Civil Rights 1376(6)

For purposes of a qualified immunity claim, the standard for determining which legal rules are clearly established is an objective one, and thus, an inquiry into the reasonableness of a government officer's conduct must focus on the discernible contours of the law at the time of the alleged act or omission. (Per Selya, Circuit Judge, by an equally divided court, with three judges concurring.) Savard v. Rhode Island, C.A.1 (R.I.) 2003, 338 F.3d 23, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1074, 540 U.S. 1109, 157 L.Ed.2d 895. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Egregiousness and outrageousness of certain conduct by government officials may suffice to obviously locate such conduct within area proscribed by general constitutional rule, for purpose of determining that law was clearly established and that officials were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action. Pierce v. Smith, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1997, 117 F.3d 866. Civil Rights 1376(2)

For qualified immunity to be surrendered, preexisting law must dictate, that is, truly compel and not just suggest or allow or raise question about, conclusion for every like-situated, reasonable government agent that what defendant is doing violates federal law in circumstances. Jenkins by Hall v. Talladega City Bd. of Educ., C.A.11 (Ala.) 1997, 115 F.3d 821, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 412, 522 U.S. 966, 139 L.Ed.2d 315. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials are shielded by qualified immunity if federal law allegedly violated was not clearly established at time of alleged violation, or if, at summary judgment, there is no genuine dispute of material fact that would prevent a finding that officials' actions, with regard to applying or following such clearly established law, were objectively reasonable. Vargas-Badillo v. Diaz-Torres, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1997, 114 F.3d 3. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Doctrine of qualified immunity provides that government officials performing discretionary functions are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Vargas-Badillo v. Diaz-Torres, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1997, 114 F.3d 3. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under "qualified immunity," government officials are not subject to liability for the performance of their discretionary actions unless their conduct violates clearly established statutory or constitutional rights which a reasonable person would have known. O'Neal v. Mississippi Bd. of Nursing, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1997, 113 F.3d 62. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public official accused of civil rights violations is shielded from claims for damages under § 1983 as long as his conduct did not violate rights that were "clearly established" under Constitution or under federal law; right is "clearly established" if contours of the right are sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. Diaz v. Martinez, C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1997, 112 F.3d 1. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public official is not entitled to qualified immunity when contours of allegedly violated right were sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he was doing violated that right. P.B. v. Koch, C.A.9 (Idaho) 1996, 96 F.3d 1298. Civil Rights 1376(2)

For purposes of § 1983 action, for constitutional right to be clearly established, it is not necessary that the very action in question have previously been held unlawful. Jackson v. McIntosh, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 90 F.3d 330, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 584, 519 U.S. 1029, 136 L.Ed.2d 514. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity insulates public officials from claims for damages where their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Defore v. Premore, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1996, 86 F.3d 48. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Federal immunity law shields state officials from personal liability under federal law for civil damages under doctrine of qualified immunity as long as conduct could reasonably have been thought consistent with rights officials are alleged to have violated; for liability to be imposed, right official is alleged to have violated must have been clearly established at time conduct in issue occurred, and contours of right must be sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that conduct in issue constitutes violation. Cantu v. Rocha, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1996, 77 F.3d 795. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Right is "clearly established," for purposes of qualified immunity defense to § 1983 action, if, at time right was allegedly violated, its contours were sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he was doing violated that right. Brown v. Hot, Sexy and Safer Productions, Inc., C.A.1 (Mass.) 1995, 68 F.3d 525, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 1044, 516 U.S. 1159, 134 L.Ed.2d 191. Civil Rights 1376(2)

When public official asserts qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action, court must determine whether law governing official's conduct was clearly established and whether, under that law, official could have reasonably believed conduct was lawful; official's action need not have been previously declared to be unlawful, if in light of preexisting law, unlawfulness was apparent. Kruse v. State of Hawai'i, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 1995, 68 F.3d 331. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether civil rights plaintiff's right that was allegedly violated was clearly established at time defendants acted, as required for defendants to have had qualified immunity, Court of Appeals examines whether right was defined with reasonable specificity, whether decisional law of Supreme Court and applicable circuit court supports its existence, and whether, under preexisting law, defendant official would have reasonably understood that his acts were unlawful. Rodriguez v. Phillips, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1995, 66 F.3d 470. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Even officials who violate the Constitution are to be accorded qualified immunity and so escape liability for money damages if, in performance of discretionary duties, their conduct does not violate clearly established constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Buonocore v. Harris, C.A.4 (Va.) 1995, 65 F.3d 347. Civil Rights 1376(2)

"Qualified immunity" protects government official who performs discretionary functions from liability for civil damages if official can show that official's actions did not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Moore v. Valder, C.A.D.C.1995, 65 F.3d 189, 314 U.S.App.D.C. 209, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 75, 519 U.S. 820, 136 L.Ed.2d 35. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government officials who perform discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Ward v. Dyke, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 58 F.3d 271, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 524, 516 U.S. 991, 133 L.Ed.2d 431. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In action under § 1983, allegedly violated constitutional right must have been clearly established in a particularized sense at time of alleged violation; otherwise, public official is entitled to qualified immunity. Foy v. City of Berea, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1995, 58 F.3d 227. Civil Rights 1376(2)

For purposes of determining if official is protected from civil rights liability by qualified immunity, constitutional right is clearly established if, in light of preexisting law, the unlawfulness of alleged conduct is apparent, even if the very action in question had not then been held to be constitutional violation. Hale v. Townley, C.A.5 (La.) 1995, 45 F.3d 914, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied 51 F.3d 1047. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Whether a right which government official is alleged to have violated was "clearly established" at time of violation, for purposes of determining whether government official is entitled to qualified immunity, turns on federal constitutional, statutory, and case law existing at time of challenged action, and law of highest court in state may also be considered. Rodgers v. Jabe, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1995, 43 F.3d 1082. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Right is "clearly established" for purposes of qualified immunity, if it is denied with reasonable clarity, if the Supreme Court or Circuit in which offense has occurred has affirmed right's existence, or if reasonable defendant would understand from existing law that his acts were unlawful. Cook v. Sheldon, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1994, 41 F.3d 73. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

For purposes of rule that state officials enjoy qualified immunity from § 1983 liability if their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known, a right is "clearly established" if its contours are sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. Bator v. State of Hawaii, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 1994, 39 F.3d 1021, on remand 910 F.Supp. 479. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Governmental officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Bakalis v. Golembeski, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1994, 35 F.3d 318, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(2)

First task in resolving claim of qualified immunity is to review specific parts of complaint to determine whether plaintiff charges conduct violating "clearly established federal rights;" and such a right is clearly established only when its contours are sufficiently clear that reasonable official would have realized that his conduct violated that right, not simply that conduct was otherwise improper. Foster v. City of Lake Jackson, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1994, 28 F.3d 425, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under doctrine of qualified immunity, public officer will only be held liable for his conduct if it can be shown that he trenched upon plaintiff's clearly established constitutional or statutory right and if reasonable person in defendant officer's position would have known his conduct violated that right. Beard v. City of Northglenn, Colo., C.A.10 (Colo.) 1994, 24 F.3d 110. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In order for right to be clearly established right for purposes of qualified immunity analysis, contours of right must be sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. Mahers v. Harper, C.A.8 (Iowa) 1993, 12 F.3d 783, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To demonstrate that the law is clearly established, for purposes of determining whether conduct of officials is entitled to qualified immunity, there must be showing that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates plaintiff's rights; government official is not required to guess, at his peril, future development of constitutional doctrine nor is he liable for violation of extremely abstract rights. Hall v. Lombardi, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1993, 996 F.2d 954, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 698, 510 U.S. 1047, 126 L.Ed.2d 665. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Law of qualified immunity requires that in order to hold public official civilly liable for discretionary actions taken during course of official's duties, official must have violated "clearly established" legal right. Wright v. Whiddon, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1992, 951 F.2d 297. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Public officers are entitled to qualified immunity from liability unless their actions violated clearly established law. E-Z Mart Stores, Inc. v. Kirksey, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1989, 885 F.2d 476. Officers And Public Employees 114

An official loses qualified immunity if the law he violated was clearly established at the time of the violation, and the applicability of the law to his particular action was evident. Vukelic v. Bartz, D.N.D.2003, 245 F.Supp.2d 1068 . Civil Rights 1376(2)

Superintendent, assistant superintendent and sergeant, in their individual capacities, were qualifiedly immune from §§ 1983 liability to terminated correctional officer, absent showing their conduct violated any constitutional right, let alone one that was clearly established. Ferguson v. Georgia Dept. of Corrections, M.D.Ga.2006, 428 F.Supp.2d 1339. Civil Rights 1376(10)

For purpose of qualified immunity defense, which shields public officials from damages if their conduct did not violate clearly established rights, phrase "clearly established" denotes that at the time the challenged conduct occurred the contours of the right were sufficiently plain that a reasonably prudent state actor would have realized not merely that his conduct might be wrong, but that it violated a particular constitutional right. Rivera Torres v. Ortiz Velez, D.Puerto Rico 2002, 306 F.Supp.2d 76, appeal denied 341 F.3d 86, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1875, 541 U.S. 972, 158 L.Ed.2d 466, rehearing denied 124 S.Ct. 2433, 541 U.S. 1083, 158 L.Ed.2d 1001, miscellaneous rulings 125 S.Ct. 242, 543 U.S. 805, 160 L.Ed.2d 7. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

For constitutional right to be "clearly established," so as to overcome public official's qualified immunity defense to § 1983 claim, its contours must be sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right; this is not to say that official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in light of pre-existing law unlawfulness must be apparent. Mladek v. Day, M.D.Ga.2003, 293 F.Supp.2d 1297. Civil Rights 1376(2)

The plaintiff opposing a motion for summary judgment on the basis of qualified immunity in an excessive force case under § 1983 bears the burden of establishing the existence of a clearly established constitutional right. Buchanan v. City of Milwaukee, E.D.Wis.2003, 290 F.Supp.2d 954. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

In deciding whether right was "clearly established" when analyzing whether government official is entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim, district court considers the following: (1) was law defined with reasonable clarity, (2) had the Supreme Court or the Second Circuit affirmed the rule, and (3) would reasonable defendant have understood from existing law that conduct was unlawful. Thomas v. Zaharek, D.Conn.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 167. Civil Rights 1376(2)

When assessing claim of qualified immunity, Court employs three part test; threshold question is whether Plaintiffs have established constitutional violation, second question asks whether law was clearly established at time of violation, and final question is whether reasonable official, situated similarly to defendants, would have understood that conduct at issue contravened clearly established law. Orraca Figueroa v. Torres Torres, D.Puerto Rico 2003, 288 F.Supp.2d 176. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

Whether government official is entitled to qualified immunity from §§ 1981 and 1983 claims generally turns on objective reasonableness of action assessed in light of legal rules that were "clearly established" at time it was taken, i.e., defendant is entitled to qualified immunity unless he violated constitutional right that was clearly established at time of his conduct. Bluitt v. Houston Independent School Dist., S.D.Tex.2002, 236 F.Supp.2d 703. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Single case holding that dating is a type of association protected by the First Amendment did not create the clearly established law needed to defeat city officials' qualified immunity defense against a § 1983 action brought by a city police officer after he was fired for engaging in a sexual relationship with a minor. Blanco v. City of Clearwater, Fla., M.D.Fla.1998, 9 F.Supp.2d 1316. Civil Rights 1376(4)

In deciding whether a right was clearly established for purposes of qualified immunity, court should consider: whether right in question was defined with "reasonable specificity"; whether decisional law of the Supreme Court and applicable circuit court support existence of the right in question; and whether under preexisting law a reasonable official would understand that his or her acts were unlawful. Davidson v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1997, 968 F.Supp. 121. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To avoid protection of qualified immunity on basis that right which government official allegedly violated is clearly established, contours of right must be sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right; this is not to say that official action is protected by qualified immunity unless that action has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that, in light of preexisting law, unlawfulness must be apparent. Smith v. Tolley, E.D.Va.1997, 960 F.Supp. 977. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Under qualified immunity doctrine, government officials are not liable for bad guesses in gray areas; they are liable only for transgressing bright lines. Smith v. Tolley, E.D.Va.1997, 960 F.Supp. 977. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether right is clearly established for purposes of qualified immunity, court should consider whether right defined with reasonable specificity, whether decisional law of Supreme Court and applicable appellate court supports existence of right in question, and whether under preexisting law a reasonable defendant official would have understood that his acts were unlawful. Bordeaux v. Lynch, N.D.N.Y.1997, 958 F.Supp. 77. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether specific right allegedly violated by government official was clearly established, for purposes of determining whether official is entitled to qualified immunity, proper focus is not upon right at its most general or abstract level, but at level of its application to specific conduct being challenged. Reeves Bros., Inc. v. U.S. E.P.A., W.D.Va.1995, 956 F.Supp. 665. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In order for law to be "clearly established," for purposes of claim of qualified immunity from § 1983 liability, preexisting law must dictate, i.e., truly compel, not just suggest or allow or raise question about, conclusion for every like-situated, reasonable government agent that what defendant did violated federal law in circumstances; i.e., if case law, in factual terms, has not staked out bright line, qualified immunity almost always protects defendant, and plaintiff cannot rely on general conclusory allegations or broad legal truisms. Dowdell v. Chapman, M.D.Ala.1996, 930 F.Supp. 533. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Generally, "qualified immunity" shields public officers and agencies from liability, even though their actions may have violated plaintiff's constitutional rights, if those unconstitutional acts did not violate clearly established constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Ramirez v. City of Reno, D.Nev.1996, 925 F.Supp. 681. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To overcome qualified immunity, § 1983 plaintiff must first allege violation of clearly established constitutional or statutory right. Comfort v. Town of Pittsfield, D.Me.1996, 924 F.Supp. 1219. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In determining whether government officials are entitled to qualified immunity, court examines whether the plaintiff has alleged a deprivation of constitutional magnitude, and, if so, whether that right was so clearly established that officials would have known their conduct violated Federal Constitution at the time of their acts. Howard v. Everett, C.A.8 (Ark.) 2000, 208 F.3d 218, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(1); Civil Rights 1376(2)

3772. Notice, clearly established right

For purposes of qualified immunity analysis in Fourth Amendment cases, factually similar cases are not always necessary to establish that a government actor was on notice that certain conduct is unlawful; if the plaintiff in a § 1983 action can show that the official's conduct lies so obviously at the very core of what the Fourth Amendment prohibits that the unlawfulness of the conduct was readily apparent to the official, notwithstanding the lack of caselaw, then the official is not entitled to qualified immunity. Thomas ex rel. Thomas v. Roberts, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 323 F.3d 950, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 73 Fed.Appx. 389, 2003 WL 21788455. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Because officials can still be on notice that their conduct violates established law even in novel factual circumstances, overcoming a qualified immunity defense does not require a plaintiff to show that either the particular conduct complained of or some materially indistinguishable conduct has previously been found unlawful; still, the relevant legal rights and obligations must be particularized enough that a reasonable official can be expected to extrapolate from them and conclude that a certain course of conduct will violate the law. (Per Selya, Circuit Judge, by an equally divided court, with three judges concurring.) Savard v. Rhode Island, C.A.1 (R.I.)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

2003, 338 F.3d 23, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1074, 540 U.S. 1109, 157 L.Ed.2d 895. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether teacher should have known that she was violating third-grade female student's privacy rights, in requiring student to hold open her pants so that teacher could look inside for evidence of money missing from desk, precluded entry of summary judgment for teacher on her qualified immunity defense to student's § 1983 claims. Watkins v. Millennium School, S.D.Ohio 2003, 290 F.Supp.2d 890. Federal Civil Procedure 2491.5

Officials can still be on notice that their conduct violates established law, so as to defeat the officials' qualified immunity claims in a civil rights action, even in novel factual circumstances. Danielle v. Adriazola, S.D.Fla.2003, 284 F.Supp.2d 1368. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To overcome qualified immunity from § 1983 claims, right allegedly violated must be so clear that any reasonable public official in defendant's position would understand that his conduct violated the right, and if officers of reasonable competence could disagree on this issue, immunity should be recognized. M.W. ex rel. T.W. v. Madison County Bd. of Educ., E.D.Ky.2003, 262 F.Supp.2d 737. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3773. Time of establishment, clearly established right

Plaintiff who seeks damages for violation of constitutional or statutory rights may overcome defendant official's qualified immunity only by showing that those rights were clearly established at time of conduct at issue. Davis v. Scherer, U.S.Fla.1984, 104 S.Ct. 3012, 468 U.S. 183, 82 L.Ed.2d 139, rehearing denied 105 S.Ct. 26, 468 U.S. 1226, 82 L.Ed.2d 919. Civil Rights 1376(2)

When addressing the issue of qualified immunity in a civil rights case, a court does not have to determine if the alleged constitutional violation was clearly established at the time of the incident in question, when the existence of a constitutional violation depends on the resolution of uncertain state law or upon dicta in a prior case. Ehrlich v. Town of Glastonbury, C.A.2 (Conn.) 2003, 348 F.3d 48. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To determine whether federal right was clearly established at time of defendants' alleged conduct, for purposes of qualified immunity defense to § 1983 action, Court of Appeals focuses not upon right at its most general or abstract level, but at level of its application to specific conduct being challenged. Zepp v. Rehrmann, C.A.4 (Md.) 1996, 79 F.3d 381. Civil Rights 1376(2)

If law was not clearly established at time public official violated citizen's civil rights, official could not reasonably be expected to anticipate subsequent legal developments, nor could he fairly be said to know that law forbade conduct not previously identified as unlawful, so as to be held liable for civil damages. Eagon Through Eagon v. City of Elk City, Okl., C.A.10 (Okla.) 1996, 72 F.3d 1480. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Under § 1983, whether constitutional violation occurred is analyzed under constitutional standards in effect at time of litigation, rather than under those in effect at time alleged misconduct occurred; however, reasonableness of official's conduct, for purposes of qualified immunity inquiry, is analyzed in light of law in effect at time of alleged misconduct. Rankin v. Klevenhagen, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1993, 5 F.3d 103. Civil Rights 1031; Civil Rights 1376(2)

Court must determine whether allegedly violated constitutional right was clearly established at time action occurred for qualified immunity purposes. Smith v. Tolley, E.D.Va.1997, 960 F.Supp. 977. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Case which was decided after incident giving rise to inmate's claim of violation of Eighth and Fourteenth Amendment rights could not be used to negate prison officials' claim of qualified immunity. Carrigan v. State of Del., D.Del.1997, 957 F.Supp. 1376. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Conclusion after the fact that conduct is unlawful is insufficient to deprive law enforcement officer of qualified immunity, since officers should not be expected to anticipate subsequent legal developments. Showers v. Spangler, M.D.Pa.1997, 957 F.Supp. 584, affirmed in part, reversed in part 182 F.3d 165. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Three factors determine whether particular right was clearly established at time defendants allegedly violated it: (1) whether right in question was defined with reasonable specificity; (2) whether decisional law of Supreme Court and applicable circuit court support existence of right in question; and (3) whether, under preexisting law, reasonable official would have understood that his or her acts were unlawful. Maguire v. Coughlin, N.D.N.Y.1995, 901 F.Supp. 101. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Because relevant inquiry in determining whether § 1983 defendant is entitled to qualified immunity focuses on defendant's knowledge at time he acted, right allegedly violated must have been clearly established when alleged infringement occurred. Strauch v. Demskie, S.D.N.Y.1995, 892 F.Supp. 503. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Key to inquiry as to whether defendant's actions were clearly prohibited under existing law for purposes of qualified immunity in § 1983 action is objective reasonableness of official's conduct in light of legal rules that were clearly established at time action was taken. Allen v. Board of Com'rs of County of Wyandotte, D.Kan.1991, 773 F.Supp. 1442. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3774. Identity of facts, clearly established right

In determining which legal rules are clearly established, for purposes of a qualified immunity claim, if the operative legal principles are clearly established only at a level of generality so high that officials cannot fairly anticipate the legal consequences of specific actions, then the requisite notice is lacking. (Per Selya, Circuit Judge, by an equally divided court, with three judges concurring.) Savard v. Rhode Island, C.A.1 (R.I.) 2003, 338 F.3d 23, certiorari denied 124 S.Ct. 1074, 540 U.S. 1109, 157 L.Ed.2d 895. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Absence of legal precedent addressing identical factual scenario does not necessarily yield conclusion that law is not clearly established, for purposes of claim of qualified immunity. Johnson v. Newburgh Enlarged School Dist., C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2001, 239 F.3d 246. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity can be found for public employee even absent prior case precisely upon all fours on facts and law involved in current case as long as law is clear in relation to specific facts confronting public official when he acted. McDonald by McDonald v. Haskins, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 966 F.2d 292. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Contours of asserted right must have been sufficiently clear that reasonable officials in defendant's positions would understand that their actions would violate that right for defendants not to be entitled to qualified immunity; but precise action or omission in question need not previously have been held unlawful, and facts need not precisely mirror facts of precedent setting case. Yvonne L., By and Through Lewis v. New Mexico Dept. of Human Services, C.A.10 (N.M.) 1992, 959 F.2d 883. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Although prior cases involving exact fact pattern as case at bar are not required in order to find that constitutional right allegedly violated by government official was clearly established, and thus that official was not entitled to qualified immunity, case law in closely analogous area is essential in order for court to conclude that constitutional right was clearly established at time of alleged violation. Conner v. Reinhard, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1988, 847 F.2d 384, certiorari denied 109 S.Ct. 147, 488 U.S. 856, 102 L.Ed.2d 118. Officers And Public Employees 114

For the illegality of conduct to be clearly established, so as to defeat a state official's qualified immunity claim, the case is not required to be fundamentally similar to previous cases, nor must it present materially similar facts. Danielle v. Adriazola, S.D.Fla.2003, 284 F.Supp.2d 1368. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

To meet burden of proving that right allegedly violated is clearly established for purposes of defeating qualified immunity, § 1983 plaintiff need not point to case finding same exact action to be unlawful or case that is on all fours with present set of facts and circumstances; clearly analogous case decided before officer's action or inaction in present case is sufficient to confirm that right is clearly established. Spiegel v. Cortese, N.D.Ill.1997, 966 F.Supp. 684. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To prevail despite qualified immunity defense, civil rights plaintiff demonstrating that right is "clearly established" need not show that the very act in question was previously held unlawful or that prior case is "on all fours" with facts and law in plaintiff's own case; instead, closely analogous cases, those decided before defendants acted or failed to act, are required to find that constitutional right is clearly established. Hodgson v. Mississippi Dept. of Corrections, E.D.Wis.1997, 963 F.Supp. 776. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3775. Knowledge, clearly established right

For purposes of qualified immunity, officials can still be on notice that their conduct violates established law even in novel factual circumstances, as notice does not require that facts of previous cases be materially or fundamentally similar to situation in question; rather, salient question is whether the state of the law at the time gives officials fair warning that their conduct is unconstitutional. Hope v. Pelzer, U.S.2002, 122 S.Ct. 2508, 536 U.S. 730, 153 L.Ed.2d 666, on remand 304 F.3d 1331. Civil Rights 1376(2)

A public official is not entitled to qualified immunity in a § 1983 action if his conduct violates clearly established constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Doe ex rel. Doe v. Hawaii Dept. of Educ., C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 334 F.3d 906, on remand 351 F.Supp.2d 998. Civil Rights 1376(2)

In ascertaining whether right was clearly established with respect to a given situation, for purposes of claim of qualified immunity, court must consider not what lawyer would learn or intuit from researching case law, but what reasonable person in government actor's position should know about appropriateness of his conduct under federal law. Johnson v. Newburgh Enlarged School Dist., C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2001, 239 F.3d 246. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Where plaintiff elected to sue in federal court under civil rights statute, he was required to prove more than merely wrongful acts or constitutional violation on part of defendants; in order to surmount defendants' qualified immunity shield, he was required to prove that they violated clearly established constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Powell v. Georgia Dept. of Human Resources, C.A.11 (Ga.) 1997, 114 F.3d 1074. Civil Rights 1376(2)

If law is not clearly established when official acts, he or she is entitled to qualified immunity because he or she could not reasonably be expected to anticipate subsequent legal developments, nor could he or she fairly be said to know that law forbade conduct not previously identified as lawful; on the other hand, if law was established clearly, official still may obtain qualified immunity if he or she claims extraordinary circumstances and can prove that he or she neither knew nor should have known of relevant legal standard. In re City of Philadelphia Litigation, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1995, 49 F.3d 945, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing in banc denied, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 176, 516 U.S. 863, 133 L.Ed.2d 116, on remand 910 F.Supp. 212, on remand 938 F.Supp. 1264. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Once court determines that plaintiff seeking to hold official personally liable under § 1983 has alleged violation of clearly established right, it proceeds to determine whether reasonable person in official's position would have known that his actions violated that right, qualified immunity defense ordinarily should fail as reasonably competent public official should know law governing his conduct; however, official may still be able to show extraordinary circumstances and prove that he neither knew nor should have known of relevant legal standard. DiMeglio v. Haines, C.A.4 (Md.) 1995, 45 F.3d 790. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

In order for public officer to be held accountable under § 1983, right she is charged with violating must be clearly established, and be one of which reasonable officer in her position would have known. Hale v. Vance, S.D.Ohio 2003, 267 F.Supp.2d 725. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3776. Legal question, clearly established right

In evaluating whether a right is clearly established for purposes of a qualified immunity inquiry under § 1983, the court looks to the clarity of the law establishing the right allegedly violated, as well as whether a reasonable person, acting under the circumstances then confronting a defendant, would have understood that his actions were unlawful. Hanrahan v. Doling, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 2003, 331 F.3d 93. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Determination that law allegedly violated by defendant was clearly established at time of challenged actions is abstract issue of law that is immediately appealable, as is determination that under either party's version of facts, defendant violated clearly established law. Foote v. Spiegel, C.A.10 (Utah) 1997, 118 F.3d 1416, on remand 995 F.Supp. 1347. Federal Courts 554.1

In context of § 1983 suit, whether conduct of police officers in effecting arrest violated clearly established law with regard to use of force was essentially legal question. Swenson v. Culberson County, W.D.Tex.1996, 925 F.Supp. 478. Civil Rights 1432

3777. Constitutional deprivations, clearly established right

Right to be free of conscience-shocking executive action was firmly established at time of events giving rise to substantive due process claims by injured firefighters and estates of deceased firefighters against District of Columbia fire department officials in their personal capacities, and thus officials were not shielded by qualified immunity from claims asserted through § 1983; officials allegedly either committed or allowed to continue violations of the fire department's standard operating procedures, even after scathing reviews in a number of safety reports. Estate of Phillips v. District of Columbia, D.D.C.2003, 257 F.Supp.2d 69, motion to vacate denied 355 F.Supp.2d 212. Civil Rights 1376(10)

It was clearly established at the time county hospital filed libel claim against husband of patient that the hospital was a governmental entity that was not entitled to bring a claim for libel, and, thus, chief executive officer (CEO) and chief operating officer (COO) were not entitled to qualified immunity in §§ 1983 action brought by husband against them in their individual capacities for alleged injuries caused by the malicious libel suit. Beedle v. Wilson, C.A.10 (Okla.) 2005, 422 F.3d 1059. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Veterinarian did not have clearly established First Amendment right to attend horse races, and therefore executive secretary of state racing commission and commission members were entitled to qualified immunity from §§ 1983 liability based on their actions in excluding veterinarian from state racetracks. VanHorn v. Nebraska State Racing Com'n, D.Neb.2004, 304 F.Supp.2d 1151. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Municipal employee who allegedly drove fire truck through red light and collided with motorist, causing his death, was not entitled to qualified immunity from liability, upon motion to dismiss, in motorist's heir's § 1983 substantive due process claim; heir's allegations stated claim for violation of substantive due process rights, and motorist's constitutional rights were sufficiently clear for employee to have understood that his alleged conduct violated them. Becerra v. Unified Government of Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Kansas, D.Kan.2003, 272 F.Supp.2d 1223. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Allegations that county attorney refused to issue a release for return of arrestee's weapons after assault charges were dismissed did not establish a Second Amendment constitutional violation, and thus attorney was entitled to qualified immunity in §1983 claim brought by arrestee against attorney in his individual capacity, as the Second Amendment only protects weapon possession reasonably related to preservation of militia and the arrestee made no showing of a reasonable relationship between the weapons and the preservation of a militia. Blackburn v. Jansen, D.Neb.2003, 241 F.Supp.2d 1047. Civil Rights 1376(9); Weapons 1

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

If there is any legitimate question as to whether government official's conduct transgresses a constitutional right, official is entitled to qualified immunity from liability. Price v. Dixon, E.D.N.C.1997, 961 F.Supp. 894. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Government official is entitled to qualified immunity if there is legitimate question as to whether government official's conduct constitutes constitutional violation. Reeves Bros., Inc. v. U.S. E.P.A., W.D.Va.1995, 956 F.Supp. 665. Civil Rights 1376(2)

First step of analysis in determining whether state official is entitled to defense of qualified immunity in federal civil rights action is whether plaintiffs have asserted violation of constitutional right at all. Hilliard v. Walker's Party Store, Inc., E.D.Mich.1995, 903 F.Supp. 1162. Civil Rights 1376(1)

By allegedly destroying relevant documents during the pendency of an investigation by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), former employer and several of its employees obstructed former employee's access to the courts in violation of her constitutional rights to substantive due process, so that former employee alleged sufficient constitutional rights violation to deny defendants qualified immunity regarding former employee's claims. Bremiller v. Cleveland Psychiatric Institute, N.D.Ohio 1995, 898 F.Supp. 572. Civil Rights 1376(10); Constitutional Law 305(2)

Alleged racial and derogatory remarks by public official are not considered constitutional violations and so do not rebut public official's assertion of qualified immunity defense. Crenshaw v. City of Defuniak Springs, N.D.Fla.1995, 891 F.Supp. 1548. Civil Rights 1376(1)

State officials were entitled to qualified immunity in former employee's § 1983 action alleging that his pretermination hearing violated state statute; hearing complied with state applicable regulations, state law claims are cognizable under § 1983 only if federal constitutional right is expansive enough to encompass state rights, and hearing met federal constitutional requirements. Ringer v. Fallis, D.Del.1994, 848 F.Supp. 519, affirmed 77 F.3d 463. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Even where constitutional right is found to have been violated, officials responsible therefor may still be entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action. Pesek v. City of Brunswick, N.D.Ohio 1992, 794 F.Supp. 768. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

3778. Court decisions generally, clearly established right

Only Supreme Court cases, Eleventh Circuit caselaw, and Georgia Supreme Court caselaw can "clearly establish" law in Eleventh Circuit for purposes of qualified immunity analysis by Georgia district court. Thomas ex rel. Thomas v. Roberts, C.A.11 (Ga.) 2003, 323 F.3d 950, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied 73 Fed.Appx. 389, 2003 WL 21788455. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Consent decree resolving class action suit brought by state inmates to rectify prison conditions in South Carolina did not create protected "liberty interest" in prison inmates with respect to security and custody classifications, where decree was not self-executing in matter of inmates' security and custody classifications but imposed enforceable legal and contractual obligations on state to devise, submit, and implement systematic classification procedures having certain defined features and did not itself provide operational details of classification system dictating particular classification divisions necessary to create protected liberty interests. Slezak v. Evatt, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1994, 21 F.3d 590, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 235, 513 U.S. 889, 130 L.Ed.2d 158. Constitutional Law 272(2); Federal Civil Procedure 2397.1

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

For purposes of finding clearly established constitutional rights, although decisions of other courts can clearly establish law, those decisions must both point unmistakably to unconstitutionality of conduct and be so clearly foreshadowed by applicable direct authority as to leave no doubt in mind of reasonable officer that his conduct was unconstitutional. Mumford v. Zieba, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1993, 4 F.3d 429, on remand 915 F.Supp. 917. Civil Rights 1376(2)

A plaintiff attempting to defeat an assertion of qualified immunity to a substantive due process § 1983 claim need not show that the specific action at issue has previously been held unlawful, he need only show that the alleged unlawfulness was apparent in light of preexisting law; ordinarily, in order for the law to be "clearly established," there must be a Supreme Court or a applicable circuit court decision on point, or the clearly established weight of authority from other circuit courts must have found the law to be as the plaintiff maintains. Sanders v. Board of County Com'rs of County of Jefferson, Colorado, D.Colo.2001, 192 F.Supp.2d 1094. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Single case does not establish the law in a sufficiently concrete context so as to defeat a qualified immunity defense to a § 1983 action. Blanco v. City of Clearwater, Fla., M.D.Fla.1998, 9 F.Supp.2d 1316. Civil Rights 1376(2)

To defeat qualified immunity, plaintiff must point to controlling case, decided before events at issue, that establishes constitutional violation on materially similar facts. Ferguson v. City of Montgomery, M.D.Ala.1997, 969 F.Supp. 674, affirmed 141 F.3d 1189. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Federal district court must find binding precedent from United States Supreme Court, Circuit Court, or itself in order to find clearly established constitutional right for purposes of qualified immunity analysis in § 1983 action; however, this is not to say that official action is protected by qualified immunity unless specific action in question has previously been held unlawful by Supreme Court, Circuit Court, or district court. McCrea v. Zieba, N.D.Ohio 1996, 955 F.Supp. 801. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Binding precedent is not a sine qua non of a finding that a particular constitutional right was clearly established for purposes of qualified immunity; where there is no controlling precedent, court should examine all relevant case law to determine whether at time of alleged acts a sufficient consensus had been reached indicating that official's conduct was unlawful; relevant case law should indicate that recognition of right by controlling precedent was merely a question of time. Abbott v. Village of Winthrop Harbor, N.D.Ill.1996, 953 F.Supp. 931. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3779. Circuit court decisions, clearly established right

Prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to inmate's claim alleging that officials violated his constitutional rights by repeatedly opening his properly marked incoming legal mail outside of his presence; although Court of Appeals had not previously ruled on this precise issue, contours of officials' legal obligations under the regulations and Constitution were sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that repeatedly opening inmate's properly marked incoming legal mail outside his presence violated the Constitution. Bieregu v. Reno, C.A.3 (N.J.) 1995, 59 F.3d 1445, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(7)

It became clearly established on May 22, 1989, with a Tenth Circuit's opinion in Starrett, that sexual harassment can constitute violation of equal protection and give rise to action under federal civil rights statute, even in the absence of any discharge, so that defense of qualified immunity could not apply to those types of actions thereafter. Lankford v. City of Hobart, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1994, 27 F.3d 477. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Prison official was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action brought by inmate claiming he was subjected to cruel and unusual punishment through exposure to tobacco smoke; there was a split of authority among circuits as to whether tobacco smoke exposure was cruel and unusual punishment, and under those circumstances official could not be deemed to know he was violating prisoner's rights by exposing him to smoke. Murphy v. Dowd, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1992, 975 F.2d 435, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1310, 507 U.S. 930, 122 L.Ed.2d 698. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Parole officials were qualifiedly immune from parolee's request for damages for conditioning his parole on taking of antipsychotic drugs, as procedural due process rights were not clearly established in November of 1990. Felce v. Fiedler, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1992, 974 F.2d 1484. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Although university's antisolicitation policy as applied to newspapers with commercials violated students' First Amendment right to free speech, university officials were protected by qualified immunity as to students' claims for monetary damages and attorney fees in officials' individual capacities; shortly before university's policy became effective, similar university regulations had been upheld by district court in same circuit, and thus, officials did not violate clearly established law at time they enforced antisolicitation policy in immediate case . Hays County Guardian v. Supple, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1992, 969 F.2d 111, rehearing denied 974 F.2d 169, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1067, 506 U.S. 1087, 122 L.Ed.2d 371. Civil Rights 1376(5)

Single recent case from Court of Appeals of another circuit is insufficient to make law "clearly established" in Sixth Circuit for purposes of determining whether official protected by qualified immunity may be held personally liable for alleged unlawful official action. Eugene D. By and Through Olivia D. v. Karman, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1989, 889 F.2d 701, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 2631, 496 U.S. 931, 110 L.Ed.2d 651. Officers And Public Employees 114

Patient at state mental hospital did not have clearly established right during 1978 and 1979 to exercise of care by hospital personnel to prevent volitional self-injury, and, thus, administrators and supervisors of hospital enjoyed qualified immunity from § 1983 liability; single, idiosyncratic opinion from Court of Appeals for another circuit was hardly sufficient to put administrators and supervisors on notice of how Sixth Circuit or Supreme Court would decide issue. Davis v. Holly, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1987, 835 F.2d 1175. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Social worker and supervisors did not violate parents' clearly established rights when opening protective services case, placing parents' names on central register of child abuse cases, and attempting contacts with parents and, therefore, were entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability; another circuit court's generalized remark regarding family's rights and similarly broad statements in department policy manuals failed to suggest contours of any rights that workers reasonably should have known they were violating. Achterhof v. Selvaggio, W.D.Mich.1991, 757 F.Supp. 837. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3780. Supreme Court decisions, clearly established right

Fact that uncertainty existed in courts as to application of functional approach developed in Branti v. Finkel for determining whether party affiliation was appropriate requirement for a given office did not compel finding that county sheriff was qualifiedly immune from § 1983 action challenging dismissal of employees occupying extremely low rung on the bureaucratic ladder. Flenner v. Sheahan, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1997, 107 F.3d 459. Civil Rights 1376(10)

To determine whether particular right was clearly established at time defendants acted for purposes of qualified immunity, court should consider: whether right in question was defined with reasonable specificity; whether decisional law of Supreme Court and applicable circuit court support existence of right in question; and whether under preexisting law reasonable defendant official would have understood that his or her acts were unlawful. Benitez v. Wolff, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 985 F.2d 662. Officers And Public Employees 116

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Ordinarily, to find clearly established constitutional right for purposes of qualified immunity analysis, district court within Sixth Circuit must find binding precedent from the Supreme Court, the Sixth Circuit, or from itself; although decisions of other courts can clearly establish the law, such decisions must both point unmistakenly to unconstitutionality of conduct and be so clearly foreshadowed by applicable direct authority as to leave no doubt in mind of reasonable officer that his conduct was unconstitutional. Cagle v. Gilley, C.A.6 (Tenn.) 1992, 957 F.2d 1347, as amended, rehearing dismissed. Officers And Public Employees 114

Where arrestees pled and pursued their claim of excessive force during arrest under Fourth Amendment, district court properly applied Fourth Amendment's "objective reasonableness" standard, rather than Fourteenth Amendment substantive due process analysis, to officers' alleged conduct, even though that conduct occurred prior to United States Supreme Court's Graham decision which directed lower courts to apply Fourth Amendment analysis to § 1983 claims of excessive force during arrest. Dixon v. Richer, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1991, 922 F.2d 1456, rehearing denied. Courts 100(1)

Deputy sheriff could not reasonably have known that he was prohibited from arresting Indian in Indian country in Oklahoma and, therefore, was entitled to qualified immunity from liability for extrajurisdictional arrest; broad language in United States Supreme Court opinions gave appearance of allowing state intervention when it was determined that intervention would not compromise tribal or federal interests. Ross v. Neff, C.A.10 (Okla.) 1990, 905 F.2d 1349, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

County prothonotary was not entitled to qualified immunity, in suit brought by state litigant seeking to recover interest on amounts paid into court; action of prothonotary was not reasonable under ascertainable constitutional standards, as was taken after United States Supreme Court case clearly holding that retention of interest was a constitutional taking. Rivkin v. County of Montgomery, E.D.Pa.1993, 838 F.Supp. 1009. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Hearing officer's failure to independently assess reliability of confidential informants' statements, in prison disciplinary hearing, did not violate clearly established constitutional right, and thus officer was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability; there had been no specific ruling on issue by circuit court or Supreme Court, and other circuits were divided over issue. Moye v. Selsky, S.D.N.Y.1993, 826 F.Supp. 712. Civil Rights 1376(7)

Wisconsin State Bar and its executive director violated no clearly established First Amendment rights with respect to mandatory bar dues, and therefore they were entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by attorneys, prior to United States Supreme Court's determination that principles developed for permissible use of compulsory union dues are equally applicable for use of mandatory bar dues; even basic question of applicability of First Amendment to lawyers in integrated bar was open to question before Supreme Court's decision. Crosetto v. Heffernan, N.D.Ill.1992, 810 F.Supp. 966, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds 12 F.3d 1396, rehearing and suggestion for rehearing en banc denied, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 2138, 511 U.S. 1129, 128 L.Ed.2d 867. Attorney And Client 31; Civil Rights 1376(3); Constitutional Law 91

Supervisors of fire fighter claiming that he was placed on undesirable shift in retaliation for his political activities in opposition to elected head of fire department were entitled to qualified immunity for activities occurring prior to United States Supreme Court decision holding that forms of retaliation other than dismissal, taken in retaliation to an employees political rights, could be actionable under § 1983. Walsh v. Ward, C.D.Ill.1991, 757 F.Supp. 959, affirmed 991 F.2d 1344. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Chief of police had no way of knowing that terminated police officer's due process rights were implicated when officer was allegedly discharged without notice of charges upon which discharge was based and thus police chief had qualified immunity as to officer's property interest claim; at time of discharge, prior to Utah Supreme Court's decision and Berube, acknowledging possibility of implied employment contract which could otherwise modify at-will employment, police chief could not have known of officers' property interest in continued employment. Palmer v. City of Monticello, D.Utah 1990, 731 F.Supp. 1503, affirmed 31 F.3d 1499. Civil Rights 1376(10)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3781. Statutes or regulations, clearly established right--Generally

Officials sued for constitutional violations do not lose their qualified immunity merely because their conduct violates some statutory or administrative provision, and officials become liable for damages only to extent that there is clear violation of statutory rights that give rise to the cause of action for damages, and if statute or regulation does give rise to cause of action for damages, clear violation of the statute or regulation forfeits immunity only with respect to damages caused by that violation. Davis v. Scherer, U.S.Fla.1984, 104 S.Ct. 3012, 468 U.S. 183, 82 L.Ed.2d 139, rehearing denied 105 S.Ct. 26, 468 U.S. 1226, 82 L.Ed.2d 919. Civil Rights 1376(2)

3782. ---- Federal statutes, statutes or regulations, clearly established right

Prior to 1986 amendment to Veteran's Reemployment Rights Act, degree to which employer could condition hiring on nonparticipation in the military reserves or National Guard was not clearly established, and therefore town officials enjoyed qualified immunity from suit in their personal capacities based on their actions pursuant to police department policy prior to the amendment. Boyle v. Burke, C.A.1 (N.H.) 1991, 925 F.2d 497. Armed Services 122(3)

Director of the Missouri Division of Child Support Enforcement was not entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim arising from decision of Director not to use federally mandated formula in setting amount of child support arrearages owed by noncustodial parent as reimbursement for Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC) paid to custodial parent; right to have child support arrearages calculated in accordance with federally mandated formula was a clearly established statutory right of which Director should have known, particularly in light of prior litigation. Jackson v. Rapps, W.D.Mo.1990, 746 F.Supp. 934, affirmed and remanded on other grounds 947 F.2d 332, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 1561, 503 U.S. 960, 118 L.Ed.2d 208. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3783. ---- State and local laws giving rise to clearly established right, statutes or regulations

Police officer who swore out warrant for landlord's arrest for felony theft was not entitled to qualified immunity in landlord's subsequent action under § 1983 because officer knew that landlord claimed entitlement to snowblower in question as abandoned property under Minnesota landlord/tenant law and statute which officer accused landlord of violating required that property be taken "intentionally and without claim of right." Peterson v. City of Plymouth, Minn., C.A.8 (Minn.) 1991, 945 F.2d 1416, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Even if constitutional right in personal security was created by Colorado emergency commitment statute, right was not clearly established in law at time of actions of Colorado police officers who impounded car in which plaintiff had been riding and left plaintiff in high crime area resulting in her subsequent robbery and rape, and thus, police officers were entitled to qualified immunity in plaintiff's § 1983 claim. Hilliard v. City and County of Denver, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1991, 930 F.2d 1516, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 656, 502 U.S. 1013, 116 L.Ed.2d 748. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Despite contention that former city personnel plan, which allegedly created property interest in city clerk position was inadvertently excluded from code revisions, code, which directed city council to elect city clerk at first regular meeting of the year, was clearly established, for purposes of qualified immunity in civil rights action, when council members voted not to reelect former clerk, where city council had approximately three years to amend code to include plan. Hudgins v. City of Ashburn, Ga., C.A.11 (Ga.) 1989, 890 F.2d 396. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Police chief and police officer in § 1983 action were entitled to qualified immunity from liability for actions leading to prosecution of owners of videotape rental store for aiding and abetting distribution of allegedly pornographic tapes to minors; no case law in Utah would have given county attorney or officers any guidance whether aiding and abetting statute could be used where police were unsure whether owners had rented tapes to minors. England v. Hendricks, C.A.10 (Utah) 1989, 880 F.2d 281, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1130, 493 U.S. 1078, 107 L.Ed.2d 1036. Civil Rights 1376(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Employee of Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission did not violate alleged state constitutional right of seaplane operator to work by issuing citation and threatening arrest for operation of seaplane in violation of Florida Manatee Sanctuary Act (FMSA), for purpose of employee's assertion of qualified immunity in civil rights lawsuit; operator's alleged right was asserted under provision that guaranteed rights of persons to work regardless of their "membership or non-membership in any labor union or labor organization," but operation of seaplane did not involve membership in labor organization. Tague v. Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Com'n, M.D.Fla.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 1195, affirmed 154 Fed.Appx. 129, 2005 WL 2981921. Environmental Law 530

Developer's allegations that he had entitlement or right to obtain approval of his subdivision by county board of commissioners or county planning commission, as originally proposed and without restriction, did not allege violation of clearly established constitutional or statutory rights as required to survive qualified immunity doctrine in § 1983 action; developer had no entitlement or protectable property interest which might abrogate qualified immunity until such time as his application for subdivision was finally approved and was in compliance with state law, and board could act in manner consistent with governing statutes, and rules and regulations concerning approval of subdivisions. Marshall v. Board of County Com'rs for Johnson County, Wyo., D.Wyo.1996, 912 F.Supp. 1456. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3784. State officials generally, clearly established right

Director of the Missouri Department of Mental Health was entitled to qualified immunity for his conduct in refusing to provide patient advocacy group with a copy of the medical peer review committee report following a patient's death at a Missouri state mental hospital, for purpose of advocacy group's §§ 1983 action, alleging violation of the Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act (PAMII); director followed Missouri statute, which prohibited disclosure of the report, and although the PAMII preempted the Missouri statute, and disclosure was required, the group's right to receive the report was not clearly established at the time, in light of conflicting appellate court decisions on preemption issue. Missouri Protection & Advocacy Services v. Missouri Dept. of Mental Health, C.A.8 (Mo.) 2006, 447 F.3d 1021. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Right asserted by Commissioners of Puerto Rico's Industrial Commission, in their §§ 1983 political discrimination claim that they could continue to hold office after enactment of statute reducing number of Commissioners to five from 25, was not clearly established, given uncertainty as to Governor's power of removal, and Governor and other officials thus were qualifiedly immune from such claim. Torres-Rivera v. Calderon-Serra, D.Puerto Rico 2004, 328 F.Supp.2d 237, affirmed 412 F.3d 205. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State officials or employees who are sued in their individual capacity are immune from damages as long as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Kalasho v. Kapture, E.D.Mich.1994, 868 F.Supp. 882. Civil Rights 1376(2)

State officials cannot be held liable for damages under federal civil rights statute unless their conduct violates a clearly established constitutional right; this immunity is granted since government officials must act promptly and decisively when they perceive an emergency. Sinaloa Lake Owners Ass'n, Inc. v. Stephenson, C.D.Cal.1992, 805 F.Supp. 824, affirmed 70 F.3d 1095. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State officials are immune from suits for damages alleging constitutional violation if it was not clearly established at time of official's acts that interest asserted by plaintiff was protected one or if it was objectively reasonable for officials to believe that their acts did not violate any clearly established statutory or constitutional rights. McMillan v. Healey, S.D.N.Y.1990, 739 F.Supp. 153. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3785. Executive officials, clearly established right

Mayor's alleged conduct of taking a number of actions designed to prevent and break up protests, and to bring about the arrests of First Amendment protestors without probable cause to believe that any illegal conduct was occurring or about to occur, violated clearly established law, for purpose of determining whether mayor was entitled to qualified immunity. Collins v. Jordan, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 110 F.3d 1363. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Village and its mayor were entitled to qualified immunity from First Amendment free expression claim asserted by operator of restaurant-lounge; complaint stated that defendants engaged in harassment of establishment to suppress music played during "disc jockey nights," in order to reduce number of black patrons visiting restaurant-lounge, but operator did not allege deprivation of a clearly established constitutional right, as First Amendment right asserted by operator was too generalized and abstract. R & V Pine Tree, Inc. v. Village of Forest Park, N.D.Ill.1996, 947 F.Supp. 342. Civil Rights 1376(4)

In actions brought under § 1983, qualified immunity from liability for damages is available to state executive officers performing discretionary functions, insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Chiriboga v. Saldana, D.Puerto Rico 1987, 660 F.Supp. 618. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Mayor of borough was not entitled to qualified immunity in regard to allegations that his actions in regulating use of sound equipment during political campaign violated First and Fourteenth Amendment rights, and that mayor used his official authority to prevent effective campaigning for candidate he opposed, considering that law protecting citizens from an official's use of his position to "launch a private vendetta" or to penalize exercise of constitutional rights is clearly established. Lacey v. Borough of Darby, Pa., E.D.Pa.1985, 618 F.Supp. 331. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3786. Private defendants, clearly established right

In § 1983 action against private defendant for utilizing existing state attachment process later found to be constitutionally deficient, defendant could assert same type of qualified immunity afforded to public officials; in May of 1989, which was when defendant confessed judgment and obtained writ of execution, defendant reasonably could have believed that postconfessed judgment attachment procedure invoked, while criticized and in some legal jeopardy, was not clearly constitutionally deficient. Jordan v. Berman, E.D.Pa.1992, 792 F.Supp. 380, affirmed in part, vacated in part on other grounds 20 F.3d 1250, on remand. Civil Rights 1374

3787. State and local laws contrary to claimed right, clearly established right

Police officers had probable cause to take patient into custody for medical evaluation, entitling them to qualified immunity in subsequent civil rights action based on alleged unreasonable seizure; state law permitted officers to take persons who appear to be a danger to themselves or others into custody, and officers acted at request of patient's family and friends and on recommendation of physician after observing patient's irrational behavior, even though officers could not cite specifically the statute authorizing detention in emergency situation. Maag v. Wessler, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1991, 960 F.2d 773, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(6); Mental Health 40

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Even if snow removal ordinance were invalid, officers could not have reasonably been expected to know that ordinance exceeded authority granted city by state, and thus were protected by qualified immunity from civil rights liability to property owner arrested for violating ordinance. Murray v. City of Sioux Falls, C.A.8 (S.D.) 1989, 867 F.2d 472. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Police sergeant's arrest of off-duty police officer for failing to identify himself as required by police department regulation did not violate clearly established law, and, thus, officer enjoyed qualified immunity; constitutionality of ordinance requiring officer to identify himself on demand was not settled at time of arrest; sergeant knew that off-duty officer belonged to police force. Richardson v. Bonds, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1988, 860 F.2d 1427, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Even if city ordinance forbidding lodging and sleeping in motor vehicles in public areas was unconstitutionally vague and overbroad, police officer's conduct in arresting motorist for violation of that ordinance did not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional right which reasonable person would have known, so that officer was entitled to immunity in subsequent civil rights action brought by motorist. Hershey v. City of Clearwater, C.A.11 (Fla.) 1987, 834 F.2d 937. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Seaplane operator did not have clearly established right to operate seaplane in manner that violated Florida Manatee Sanctuary Act (FMSA), for purpose of agency employee's assertion of qualified immunity in civil rights lawsuit under Fourth Amendment, since seaplane was not exempt from definition of vessel as found in Florida's administrative rules and statutes; even if general counsel for agency determined that seaplanes were exempt from regulation under FMSA after employee issued citation to operator, Florida Administrative Code did not exclude seaplane from definition of vessel and plain language definition of vessel seemed to include seaplane. Tague v. Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Com'n, M.D.Fla.2005, 390 F.Supp.2d 1195, affirmed 154 Fed.Appx. 129, 2005 WL 2981921. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Individual city and police officials defendants were entitled to qualified immunity on police sergeant's First Amendment retaliation claim; in disciplining sergeant, who made charges of corruption and discrimination within police department, defendants were acting pursuant to departmental regulations, and could have objectively believed, albeit mistakenly, that their conduct did not violate the First Amendment. Wagner v. City of Holyoke, D.Mass.2003, 241 F.Supp.2d 78, affirmed 404 F.3d 504, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 552, 163 L.Ed.2d 461. Civil Rights 1376(10)

It was not clearly established at time of accident at railroad crossing as to whether order or timing of grade crossing improvements within city violated equal protection or substantive due process, and thus state official responsible for timing of improvements was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action arising from accident. Powers v. CSX Transp., Inc., S.D.Ala.2000, 105 F.Supp.2d 1295. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Commerce clause's proscription of discrimination against interstate commerce was clearly established at time Commonwealth agriculture secretary detained sugar imports under regulation prohibiting importation of refined sugar not prepackaged in consumer-size units, precluding official's reliance on qualified immunity in importer's § 1983 action against official in his individual capacity. Starlight Sugar Inc. v. Soto, D.Puerto Rico 2000, 86 F.Supp.2d 23, reversed 253 F.3d 137, certiorari denied 122 S.Ct. 548, 534 U.S. 1021, 151 L.Ed.2d 424. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Park employee was shielded from liability for First Amendment violation by fact that he acted in good faith reliance on park policy; policy was adopted by park and was not patently unconstitutional, and thus employee was entitled to assume that policy was constitutional. Nemo v. City of Portland, D.Or.1995, 910 F.Supp. 491. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Qualified immunity extends to prison official who relies on facially valid regulation unless official knows or should know that regulation violates well established constitutional right consisting of particular act official punishes or prohibits. Kurtz v. Denniston, N.D.Iowa 1994, 872 F.Supp. 631. Civil Rights 1376(7)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

3788. Enforcement of court orders, clearly established right

Police officers had qualified immunity in civil rights action alleging that service and execution of civil protection order (CPO) constituted breach of peace and wrongful arrest that deprived plaintiff of liberty and property without due process of law, where CPO was executed pursuant to presumably constitutional Ohio statute. Kelm v. Hyatt, C.A.6 (Ohio) 1995, 44 F.3d 415. Civil Rights 1376(6)

Even if police officers' presence during illegal execution of court order issued to private citizen violated citizen's Fourth Amendment rights, law was not so clear at time of incident so as to deprive officers of qualified immunity from civil rights liability; court order was valid on its face, officers were not acquainted with any other persons involved, and officers had no reason to doubt claim that person upon whom order was being served might become violent. Apostol v. Landau, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1992, 957 F.2d 339, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(6)

County deputy sheriff who executed writ of possession and evicted plaintiff from her former premises was entitled to qualified immunity with respect to § 1983 Fourth Amendment excessive force claim brought by plaintiff; the law was clearly established allowing deputy sheriff to execute state court writ of possession by forcibly evicting a person not authorized to be on the premises, deputy sheriff did not use excessive force and his conduct complied with California law and was reasonable. Busch v. Torres, C.D.Cal.1995, 905 F.Supp. 766. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3789. Agriculture, clearly established right

State officials had qualified immunity for civil liability in stockyard owner's § 1983 civil rights claim arising from one-day checkpoint outside stockyards where all vehicles carrying live stock were stopped and inspected for brucellosis papers and vehicle safety, even though no immunity may have existed at common law, since government actions were objectively reasonable, statute under which checkpoints occurred had not been clearly established to be violative of stockyard owner's constitutional rights, and government actions fell within apparent authorization of enforcement of laws designed to rid state of brucellosis. Moore v. Webster, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1991, 932 F.2d 1229. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Even if social workers and police officers violated parents' procedural due process rights by removing their children without prior notice and a hearing, social workers and police officers were entitled to qualified immunity because the law concerning the constitutionality of removal of children on an emergency basis was not clearly established; rather, existing case law set forth the general and long-standing constitutional principle that if an emergency existed, then a warrant was not required before removing children, and weight of authority from other courts showed that the facts of the case fell squarely within the "emergency" end of the spectrum. Arredondo v. Locklear, D.N.M.2005, 371 F.Supp.2d 1281. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(6)

3790. Attorneys, clearly established right--Generally

State election board attorney did not violate clearly established law in advising town officials of proper method for determining whether Job Corps students were residents of the town and eligible to vote, and attorney thus enjoyed qualified immunity precluding him from being held liable under either the federal civil rights statute or the Voting Rights Act to town officials who were sued by persons whom they did not allow to vote. Justice v. Town of Blackwell, C.A.7 (Wis.) 1987, 820 F.2d 238.

3791. ---- Private attorneys compared, clearly established right

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Qualified immunity is not available in § 1983 actions to private persons who act under color of law. Jordan v. Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel, C.A.3 (Pa.) 1994, 20 F.3d 1250, on remand 1995 WL 141465. Civil Rights 1373

3792. ---- Prosecutors, attorneys, clearly established right

Prosecuting Attorney of judicial circuit, city, and county, had at least qualified immunity from § 1983 civil rights action brought by property owner arising from Prosecuting Attorney's actions in instructing city police to seize and padlock property owner's building, even though such action was arguably administrative in nature, and Prosecuting Attorney waited to release property to owner two months after federal Supreme Court decision holding that pretrial seizure of expressive material under state's Civil Remedies for Racketeering Act/Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act scheme was unconstitutional prior restraint in violation of First Amendment, where at the time of the complained-of conduct, it had not been established that any aspect of state's Civil Remedies for Racketeering Act statute was unconstitutional, thus Prosecuting Attorney did not violate any clearly established constitutional right in advising police to seize and padlock building, and Federal Supreme Court opinion did not reach issues of pre-trial seizure of nonexpressive property, nor did it reach due process question. Mendenhall v. Goldsmith, C.A.7 (Ind.) 1995, 59 F.3d 685, certiorari denied 116 S.Ct. 568, 516 U.S. 1011, 133 L.Ed.2d 492. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant district attorney for county had qualified immunity in connection with claim that he had failed to provide adequate protection for witness in robbery case who was subsequently killed, presumably by same gang that had perpetrated robbery; there was no decisional law imposing upon prosecutor special duty to protect witnesses from attack and consequently no right of witness that attorney should have known he was violating by withholding protection. Ying Jing Gan v. City of New York, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 996 F.2d 522. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Assistant United States attorney's preparation of list of persons, including plaintiff, to be investigated for possible criminal conduct did not violate plaintiff's constitutional rights, and thus attorney had qualified immunity from liability for that conduct in plaintiff's § 1983 action alleging malicious prosecution. Groom v. Fickes, S.D.Tex.1997, 966 F.Supp. 1466, affirmed 129 F.3d 606. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Prosecutors were entitled to qualified immunity, in § 1983 action by police officer against whom charges were later dropped, when holding press conference; allegation that news of officer's arrest, which was transmitted by prosecutors to the media, caused officer to be held up to ridicule and scorn, failed to state any constitutional violation. Joseph v. Yocum, C.A.10 (Utah) 2002, 53 Fed.Appx. 1, 2002 WL 31656696, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(9)

3793. ---- State attorneys general, clearly established right

Kansas Attorney General was entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim for alleged unconstitutional search of store on Indian reservation, during investigation of store proprietor for failing to collect and remit state sales taxes and cigarette and tobacco taxes, in that law was not clearly established at that time that proprietor, who was member of tribe different from one that occupied reservation, was exempt from such taxes, notwithstanding Kansas Department of Revenue's unwritten policy against taxing sales on reservations and its denial of proprietor's request for sales tax certificate pursuant to that policy. Kaul v. Stephan, D.Kan.1994, 868 F.Supp. 1253, affirmed 83 F.3d 1208. Civil Rights 1376(9)

Oregon Assistant Attorneys General were not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to inmate's claim that lawsuit Department of Corrections filed against inmate to attach funds inmate received in settlement of prior § 1983 litigation against Department was commenced in retaliation for inmate's prior § 1983 actions; alleged unlawfulness of state attorneys' actions was apparent in light of preexisting law. Canell v. Oregon Dept. of Justice, D.Or.1993, 811 F.Supp. 546. Civil Rights 1376(9)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

3794. ---- Attachments, attorneys, clearly established right

Bank, its vice-president and their attorney were not qualifiedly immune under § 1983 from liability to lender for their prejudgment attachment of lender's collateral under South Dakota attachment statute, as law at time clearly established unconstitutionality of statute. Watertown Equipment Co. v. Norwest Bank Watertown, N.A., C.A.8 (S.D.) 1987, 830 F.2d 1487, appeal dismissed, certiorari denied 108 S.Ct. 1723, 486 U.S. 1001, 100 L.Ed.2d 188.

3795. Child welfare, clearly established right--Generally

Social workers violated parents' clearly established Fourteenth Amendment liberty interest in familial association and privacy when they removed 12-year-old child they suspected was a victim of Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy (MSBP) from parents' home, for purposes of qualified immunity; workers did use any pre-deprivation procedural safeguards, such as attempting to obtain an ex parte order, even though child's health and safety were not in immediate danger. Roska ex rel. Roska v. Peterson, C.A.10 (Utah) 2003, 328 F.3d 1230, on remand 311 F.Supp.2d 1307. Civil Rights 1376(3); Constitutional Law 274(5); Infants 17; Infants 192

Contours of due process right of access to courts were sufficiently clear in 1980 so that reasonable official would understand unconstitutionality of intentionally or recklessly withholding potentially exculpatory information from juvenile or court; thus, caseworker and caseworker's supervisor with Massachusetts Department of Youth Services did not enjoy qualified immunity. Germany v. Vance, C.A.1 (Mass.) 1989, 868 F.2d 9, rehearing denied. Civil Rights 1376(3)

From time that child was taken into protective custody until time that circuit court entered its order terminating custody and jurisdiction, juvenile officer had authority under Missouri law to supervise welfare of child, and parents had no clearly established federal constitutional right to avoid his decision not to allow them to take child on trip, so that he was entitled to qualified immunity from liability. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Child welfare worker was entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action for his actions in instigating child abuse proceedings, where, at that time, there were no clearly established legal norms that child welfare worker must possess before initiating custody proceedings. Miller v. City of Philadelphia, E.D.Pa.1997, 954 F.Supp. 1056, affirmed 174 F.3d 368. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3796. ---- Family rights, child welfare, clearly established right

County bureau of child welfare caseworkers who, during investigation of child abuse relating to corporal punishment at private Christian elementary school, conducted custodial interrogation of student without notifying or obtaining consent of his parents, and threatened to remove student and his sister from parents' custody, in violation of student's and parents' rights to familial relations, were entitled to qualified immunity from parents' action under § 1983, since caseworkers relied on Wisconsin statute granting them authority to conduct interrogation, even though statute violated Fourth Amendment as applied, and parents' right to physically discipline their children, or to delegate that right to private school officials, was not clearly established so as to have placed caseworkers on notice that treating corporal punishment as per se child abuse violated parents' rights. Doe v. Heck, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2003, 327 F.3d 492, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(4)

County and county's social services department could not be held liable under § 1983 for failure to train, based employees' failure to comply with New York law in denying mother's visitation with sons voluntarily placed in foster care, inasmuch as mother did not have clearly established due process right to visitation at time of denial. Young v. County of Fulton, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1998, 160 F.3d 899. Civil Rights 1352(6)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

State caseworker and others did not violate any clearly established rights of grandfather by referring to him as "untreated sex offender" in affidavit filed in support of child protection order, and thus they enjoyed qualified immunity from grandfather's civil rights claim, where child twice repeated charge that grandfather engaged in abusive sexual conduct, mother reported that grandfather endangered other child by his drunkenness, but mother continued to entrust children to grandfather. Brown v. Ives, C.A.1 (Me.) 1997, 129 F.3d 209, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 1307, 523 U.S. 1023, 140 L.Ed.2d 471. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Father who sued police officer and social worker under § 1983, claiming that they removed his children from his custody without prior notice or hearing, sufficiently alleged violation of clearly established right; in 1993, when deprivation occurred, it was clear that parent had constitutionally protected right to care and custody of his children and that he could not be summarily deprived of that custody without notice and hearing, except when children were in imminent danger. Ram v. Rubin, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 1997, 118 F.3d 1306, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 686, 522 U.S. 1045, 139 L.Ed.2d 633. Civil Rights 1398

Sexual abuse investigators did not clearly violate father's constitutional familial rights by suggesting that mother seek temporary judicial relief from father in response to allegations that father had sexually abused child, and so investigators had qualified immunity from father's civil rights action; there was no evidence that investigators had improper motive. Manzano v. South Dakota Dept. of Social Services, C.A.8 (S.D.) 1995, 60 F.3d 505. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Case worker and her supervisor who investigated child sexual abuse allegation against father were entitled to qualified immunity from father's claim that they attempted to manipulate children to give false evidence, coerced mother, created false evidence, withheld and ignored exculpatory evidence, and made misrepresentations, thereby interfering with right to family integrity under the Fourteenth Amendment; preexisting law did not establish that case workers should have known that their conduct violated nebulous right of family integrity. Doe v. State of La., C.A.5 (La.) 1993, 2 F.3d 1412, rehearing denied 9 F.3d 105, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1189, 510 U.S. 1164, 127 L.Ed.2d 539. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Conduct of Texas child protective service workers in temporarily removing children from parents' home was objectively reasonable and did not violate any clearly established constitutional right, so that workers' qualified immunity protected them from liability in civil rights suit arising from removal of children, despite allegation that workers violated clearly established right of "family integrity"; workers knew of report previous evening that father had chased children in yard with chain, observed children's bruises, and were told by children that other more serious bruises were concealed under their clothing. Hodorowski v. Ray, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1988, 844 F.2d 1210. Civil Rights 1376(3)

County officials and social workers were entitled to qualified immunity on parents' substantive due process claim to familial privacy based on county's conducting child abuse investigations centered on certain practices of parents' religion; familial privacy right, although clearly established, was not well-defined, and state had interest in protecting children. Words of Faith Fellowship, Inc. v. Rutherford County Dept. of Social Services, W.D.N.C.2004, 329 F.Supp.2d 675. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Assuming aunt had due process right to be free from interference with her custodial relationship with minor nephews placed in her care, reasonable county social worker would not have understood that removing nephews from their placement with aunt before aunt was afforded notice or hearing on removal would violate aunt's constitutionally protected rights, and therefore aunt's due process interest in pre-removal procedures was not clearly established at the time social workers removed nephews from her care, entitling social workers to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability to aunt. Santos v. County of Los Angeles Department of Children and Family Services, C.D.Cal.2004, 299 F.Supp.2d 1070. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Mother whose children were in foster care had no clearly established liberty interest in visitation, and thus county officials were entitled to qualified immunity from mother's claim that officials had denied her visitation with her children, in violation of § 1983. Young v. County of Fulton, N.D.N.Y.1998, 999 F.Supp. 282, affirmed 160 F.3d 899. Civil Rights 1376(4)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Limits of parents' alleged liberty interest in "living together as family" with their child were not clearly established, for purposes of qualified immunity defense to claim that Child Welfare Administration violated parents' right to due process by summarily removing child from their custody after child was diagnosed with Whiplash Shaken Infant Syndrome. Dietz v. Damas, E.D.N.Y.1996, 948 F.Supp. 198. Civil Rights 1376(3)

It was clearly established in 1989 that family had protected interest in familial privacy by time department of social services became aware that suspicions of child abuse had been ruled out and, therefore, social services officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from family's action under § 1983, even though officials argued that they made every effort in good faith to comply with state law. Hodge v. Carroll County Dept. of Social Services, D.Md.1992, 812 F.Supp. 593, reversed in part, vacated in part 31 F.3d 157, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 581, 513 U.S. 1018, 130 L.Ed.2d 496. Civil Rights 1376(2)

State official who authorized removal of child from home after physician reported suspected child abuse was entitled to qualified immunity in civil rights action brought by child's family; temporarily removing child did not violate any clearly established right of family, and official acted reasonably, based on physician's report and statements of family members indicating that child had been struck by his father. Charron v. Picano, D.R.I.1993, 811 F.Supp. 768. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State law did not provide mother with clear and mandatory procedural protections after emergency removal proceedings sufficient to create clearly established liberty interest to state initiated hearing following her children's removal and placement, and thus social worker who handled removal and placement was entitled to qualified immunity from liability under § 1983 for alleged violation of mother's procedural due process rights, where state law was not clear as to whether signatures of both parents were necessary, and children were placed in custody of their father before expiration of period specified under state law for filing petition after voluntary removal. Shiraki v. Cannella, C.A.9 (Hawai'i) 2003, 83 Fed.Appx. 896, 2003 WL 22928726, Unreported. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3797. ---- Malicious prosecutions, child welfare, clearly established right

Case worker and her supervisor who investigated child sexual abuse allegation against father were entitled to qualified immunity from father's claim that they pursued investigation despite lack of evidence of sexual abuse, in violation of his Fourteenth Amendment right to be free from malicious prosecution; although cases indicated that civil malicious prosecution claim might give rise to constitutional claim where egregious conduct was present, case law gave no indication as to what constituted such egregious conduct. Doe v. State of La., C.A.5 (La.) 1993, 2 F.3d 1412, rehearing denied 9 F.3d 105, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 1189, 510 U.S. 1164, 127 L.Ed.2d 539. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Caseworker employed by city agency was qualifiedly immune from mother's §§ 1983 claim that her prosecution for neglect and removal of her children violated her due process rights, where agency's policy toward battered mothers was not found unconstitutional until 2002, and legality of prosecuting mothers for neglect based on domestic violence remained unsettled. Velez v. Reynolds, S.D.N.Y.2004, 325 F.Supp.2d 293. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3798. ---- Child abuse and neglect investigations, child welfare, clearly established right

State social workers' conduct of removing infant child from mother's home for approximately seven months after discovering that child had seventeen broken bones did not clearly violate mother's substantive due process right to care and custody of child, and thus social workers were entitled to qualified immunity from mother's civil rights action; mother conceded that it was initially proper for child to be removed from home, social workers' uncertainty about cause of injuries caused them to question mother's ability to care for and protect child, mother attempted to deceive social workers regarding father's living arrangements and appeared reluctant to believe that father may have abused child, and mother continued to live with father until shortly before hearing. Abdouch v. Burger, C.A.8 (S.D.) 2005, 426 F.3d 982, rehearing and rehearing en banc denied. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

County bureau of child welfare caseworkers who, during investigation of child abuse relating to corporal punishment at private Christian elementary school, violated school's, student's, and student's parents' rights to procedural due process by failing to obtain warrant or court order before searching school premises and seizing student, interrogating student without first notifying his parents and obtaining their consent, and threatening to remove student and his sister from parents' custody, were entitled to qualified immunity from suit under § 1983, since caseworkers relied on Wisconsin statute granting them authority to conduct interrogation, even though statute violated Fourth Amendment as applied, and to extent caseworkers investigated parents solely due to their use of or support for corporal punishment, the law was not clearly established so as to place caseworkers on notice that their actions were clearly unconstitutional. Doe v. Heck, C.A.7 (Wis.) 2003, 327 F.3d 492, amended on denial of rehearing. Civil Rights 1376(4)

At time when state social worker allegedly instructed child's mother to stop making allegations of child abuse against child's father, there were no cases "clearly establishing" that a government official, by her statements discouraging citizens from seeking protection from government officials for harm inflicted by other private citizens, is held to have created danger of private abuse; therefore, social worker was entitled to qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action brought after father killed child. Currier v. Doran, C.A.10 (N.M.) 2001, 242 F.3d 905, certiorari denied 122 S.Ct. 543, 534 U.S. 1019, 151 L.Ed.2d 421. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Child welfare workers were qualifiedly immune from parents' and child's § 1983 claim that child's removal from school in 1990 for purpose of medical examination for signs of sexual abuse, without court order, violated their procedural due process rights, inasmuch as it was not clearly established until instant appeal in 1999 that emergency removal is unwarranted where there is reasonable time consistent with child's safety to obtain judicial order. Tenenbaum v. Williams, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1999, 193 F.3d 581, certiorari denied 120 S.Ct. 1832, 529 U.S. 1098, 146 L.Ed.2d 776. Civil Rights 1376(4)

A period of four months after Court of Appeals decision in Meador, holding that due process extends right to be free from infliction of unnecessary harm to children in state-regulated foster homes, was an adequate period of time for social workers to adapt to the decision, for purposes of determining whether it was clear that children had right to due process protection and whether social workers are entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action arising out of abuse of children in foster care. Lintz v. Skipski, C.A.6 (Mich.) 1994, 25 F.3d 304, certiorari denied 115 S.Ct. 485, 513 U.S. 988, 130 L.Ed.2d 397. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Complaint failed to state civil rights claim against social workers and sheriff's deputy, for their conduct in relation to child abuse investigation and dependency and neglect action, because it failed to show that conduct of social workers and deputy violated clearly established constitutional or statutory rights of which reasonable person would, or should, have known, as would be necessary to overcome qualified immunity defense; no case law cited in complaint supported assertions that charged conduct violated clearly established rights. Hidahl v. Gilpin County Dept. of Social Services, C.A.10 (Colo.) 1991, 938 F.2d 1150. Civil Rights 1398

Social workers who, on basis of perceived emergency, removed father's minor children from his home without notice or hearing and arranged for them to be transported to another state to stay with their mother, with whom father shared joint custody, were protected by qualified immunity in father's civil rights action because social workers did not violate any clearly established constitutional or statutory right; father's children were not placed with person who lacked legal custody rights and policy action taken by social workers had at least some support in Montana statute. Caldwell v. LeFaver, C.A.9 (Mont.) 1991, 928 F.2d 331. Civil Rights 1376(2)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Allegation that district attorney and welfare department employees failed to report or investigate allegations of child abuse was sufficient to charge violation of child's clearly established right of access to courts, thus depriving defendants of qualified immunity defense. Chrissy F. by Medley v. Mississippi Dept. of Public Welfare, C.A.5 (Miss.) 1991, 925 F.2d 844. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(9); Civil Rights 1395(1)

Child protective services workers were entitled to qualified immunity in action against them in their personal capacities by father who was target of child molestation investigation; father failed to show that workers breached clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known. Stem v. Ahearn, C.A.5 (Tex.) 1990, 908 F.2d 1, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 788, 498 U.S. 1069, 112 L.Ed.2d 850, rehearing denied 111 S.Ct. 1341, 499 U.S. 932, 113 L.Ed.2d 272. Civil Rights 1376(2)

School personnel and social worker who removed student from classroom and subjected her to questioning and physical examination to determine if she was abused, and who subsequently questioned her sister about possible abuse even after father objected, were entitled to qualified immunity from civil rights claims asserted by the children and their parents; minor school children suspected of being victims of child abuse did not have at the relevant time a clearly established right to be free from questioning and visual examination of unexposed parts of their bodies of which state and local school employees reasonably should have known. Landstrom v. Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1990, 892 F.2d 670. Civil Rights 1376(2); Civil Rights 1376(5)

Individual defendants in their official capacity as employees of Illinois Department of Children and Family Services were protected from damage liability by doctrine of qualified immunity arising out of alleged deprivation of parents' constitutional rights by visual inspection of unclothed bodies of their children to determine whether children had been abused in view of the fact that at the time Department conducted physical examinations, the law was not clear whether such physical examinations were unconstitutional. Darryl H. v. Coler, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1986, 801 F.2d 893. Civil Rights 1376(3)

State and county employees were entitled to good-faith immunity from civil rights claims, brought on behalf of children who died after suffering brutal beatings at the hands of their guardians, alleging that the defendants violated the children's Fourteenth Amendment rights by failing to intervene and provide protection where, at time of alleged violation, constitutional right of affirmative protection was not clearly established. Jensen v. Conrad, C.A.4 (S.C.) 1984, 747 F.2d 185, certiorari denied 105 S.Ct. 1754, 470 U.S. 1052, 84 L.Ed.2d 818. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

Social worker and police officer were entitled to qualified immunity for removing children from home without court order on basis of one child's tooth decay and bottle rot and both children's possible malnourishment, where law governing emergency removal of children on basis of medical neglect was not clearly established at time. Rogers v. County of San Joaquin Human Services Agency, E.D.Cal.2004, 363 F.Supp.2d 1227. Civil Rights 1376(4); Civil Rights 1376(6)

County officials and social workers were entitled to qualified immunity from claim that they conducted unconstitutional warrantless searches by holding abuse interviews with children at private school without parents' knowledge; right was not clearly established at time of conduct, and searches conducted by social workers were subject to less scrutiny than searches in criminal context. Words of Faith Fellowship, Inc. v. Rutherford County Dept. of Social Services, W.D.N.C.2004, 329 F.Supp.2d 675. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Officials and employees of city's child services agency did not violate clearly established law when they initiated child protective proceedings against mother based on alleged neglect in allowing her children to witness domestic violence, given questions as to whether, under state law, definition of "neglected child" included instances in which sole allegation of neglect was allowing child to witness domestic violence, and therefore officials and employees were shielded by qualified immunity from § 1983 liability for alleged malicious prosecution. Garcia v. Scoppetta,

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

E.D.N.Y.2003, 289 F.Supp.2d 343. Civil Rights 1376(4)

It was clearly established in 2000, for purposes of qualified immunity analysis in a substantive due process action, that a social worker could not constitutionally sever parental contact with a child without a reasonable basis to suspect parental abuse. Gedrich v. Fairfax County Dept. of Family Services, E.D.Va.2003, 282 F.Supp.2d 439. Civil Rights 1376(3); Civil Rights 1376(4)

Employees of State of Oregon Services to Children and Families (SOSCF) were entitled to qualified immunity from father's claim that employees deprived him of due process because he was not able to see his daughter during investigation of possible child abuse; employees' alleged actions did not amount to deprivation of clearly established right. Nielson v. Legacy Health Systems, D.Or.2001, 230 F.Supp.2d 1206. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Where there was reasonable cause to believe that child was subject of neglect or abuse, juvenile officer could take child into temporary protective custody to avoid perceived danger of personal harm by child remaining in his parents' residence, and doing so did not violate any clearly established civil rights of parents, so that officer was entitled to qualified immunity. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(2)

At time county employees temporarily removed developmentally disabled child from her parents' home based on alleged sexual abuse by father and filed child neglect petition against child's parents, it was not clearly established that child's allegations of sexual abuse as reported through experimental communication technique, together with other circumstances, would be insufficient to warrant immediate removal of child from her home or that bringing subsequent neglect petition based on such information would violate parents' constitutional rights, as would entitle county employees to qualified immunity in § 1983 action for alleged violation of parents' right to custody of child. Zappala v. Albicelli, N.D.N.Y.1997, 954 F.Supp. 538, affirmed 173 F.3d 848. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Parents' constitutional liberty interest in right to care and custody of their child was not "clearly established" when state officials removed child from their home based on unfounded allegations of sexual abuse, and, therefore, officials were entitled to qualified immunity from parents' civil rights claims; although it was well established that constitution offered some protection against state interference with parental rights, contours of right to family integrity were not defined with specificity. Defore v. Premore, N.D.N.Y.1994, 863 F.Supp. 91, affirmed 86 F.3d 48. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Inaction of State Department of Family Services employees respecting their failure to remove child from household of child's legal guardians, despite their alleged knowledge of physical and sexual abuse of child, did not violate any clearly established rights of child and, thus, employees were immune from liability under doctrine of qualified immunity for government employees in child's § 1983 action against employees in their individual capacities. Sapp v. Cunningham, D.Wyo.1994, 847 F.Supp. 893. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Employee of children's advocacy center who interviewed child who had allegedly been sexually abused and who insisted on plaintiff's arrest was entitled to qualified immunity in plaintiff's civil rights suit after criminal charges against plaintiff were dismissed; there was no clearly established law that would have put employee on notice that her actions were unlawful. Fittanto v. Klein, N.D.Ill.1992, 788 F.Supp. 1451. Civil Rights 1376(2)

State police investigator who informed state human resources official of inmate's alleged assault on daughter during prison family visit enjoyed qualified immunity from inmate's claim of constitutional deprivation arising from placement of his daughters into foster care, since investigator's action was clearly reasonable and did not violate any clearly established constitutional rights. Smith v. Coughlin, S.D.N.Y.1989, 727 F.Supp. 834. Civil Rights 1376(6)

3799. ---- Child support, child welfare, clearly established right

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

42 U.S.C.A. § 1983

Former and current directors of Missouri Division of Child Support Enforcement were not entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim arising from decision of directors not to use federally mandated formula in setting amount of child support arrearages owed by noncustodial parent as reimbursement for Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC) paid to custodial parent; right to have child support arrearages calculated in accordance with federally mandated formula was clearly established statutory right of which director should have known. Jackson v. Rapps, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1991, 947 F.2d 332, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 112 S.Ct. 1561, 503 U.S. 960, 118 L.Ed.2d 208. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3800. ---- Foster care placements, child welfare, clearly established right

Director of the Arkansas Department of Human Services, Department caseworker, and certified foster parent were not entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 claim arising out of death of asthmatic child placed in care of foster parent, as it was clearly established at time of incident that state has an obligation to provide adequate medical care, protection and supervision in case of children placed in foster care. Norfleet By and Through Norfleet v. Arkansas Dept. of Human Services, C.A.8 (Ark.) 1993, 989 F.2d 289. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Social workers employed by state human services agency were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in civil rights action in which it was alleged that minor came to harm while placed in state-licensed foster home as result of social workers' deliberate indifference to serious medical and developmental needs; when child was placed in foster home, it was not clearly established that due process imposed upon social workers a duty to assume responsibility for his care. Eugene D. By and Through Olivia D. v. Karman, C.A.6 (Ky.) 1989, 889 F.2d 701, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 2631, 496 U.S. 931, 110 L.Ed.2d 651. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Official did not violate clearly established constitutional right in 1984 by placing a child in an environment despite information that individuals in that environment might present a threat to child's safety, so that public officials were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to civil rights action on behalf of child who had been placed in foster home despite warnings that members of the household had used drugs and sexually abused children in the past. Doe v. Bobbitt, C.A.7 (Ill.) 1989, 881 F.2d 510, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 2560, 495 U.S. 956, 109 L.Ed.2d 742. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Constitutional standards for consideration of racial, ethnic, or cultural needs of child in foster placement were not clearly established in 1984, when officials of Missouri Division of Family Services made decision not to return two black foster children to white foster parents' home; thus, officials, who were entitled to qualified immunity, were not required to defend their decision in damage suits by white foster parents. J.H.H. v. O'Hara, C.A.8 (Mo.) 1989, 878 F.2d 240, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 110 S.Ct. 1117, 493 U.S. 1072, 107 L.Ed.2d 1024. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Rights of foster children or potential foster children under Adoptive Assistance and Child Welfare Act to development of case plan, to review of plan, to timely hearing, to development of information system, and to other matters were clearly established, and, thus, state officials were not entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 action. Del A. v. Edwards, C.A.5 (La.) 1988, 855 F.2d 1148, rehearing granted 862 F.2d 1107.

Foster child had "clearly established" right to be free from abuse by foster mother who allegedly whipped him, starved him, left him chronically dehydrated, gassed him with mace, tied him up, and forced him to live in animal filth, such that employees of Florida Department of Children and Families (DCAF) were on notice that it was constitutionally wrongful for them not to intervene and could be denied qualified immunity in § 1983 action. Omar ex rel. Cannon v. Lindsey, M.D.Fla.2003, 243 F.Supp.2d 1339, affirmed 334 F.3d 1246. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Requirement that state not ignore expressed religious preferences of parents and children interacting with the foster care system was clearly established when Jewish mother's child entered the foster care system, and thus child welfare caseworker was not entitled to qualified immunity in action brought by mother alleging her First

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Amendment free exercise rights were violated by caseworker's placement of child with Catholic foster parent. Bruker v. City of New York, S.D.N.Y.2004, 337 F.Supp.2d 539. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Foster child's due process right to protection and care while in the foster care system was clearly established at the time she was abused in emergency shelter, and thus Department of Children and Families (DCF) employees were not entitled to qualified immunity against foster child's § 1983 action arising out of the abuse. Danielle v. Adriazola, S.D.Fla.2003, 284 F.Supp.2d 1368. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Foster child's due process right to protection and care while in the foster care system was clearly established at the time she was abused in emergency shelter, and thus Department of Children and Families (DCF) employees were not entitled to qualified immunity against foster child's §§ 1983 action arising out of the abuse. Danielle v. Adriazola, S.D.Fla.2003, 284 F.Supp.2d 1368. Civil Rights 1376(3)

Even if foster parents were public officials and could therefore invoke qualified immunity defense, their behavior could indicate a deliberate indifference to risk of suffocation for an immobilized infant and duty they assumed to care for him, and thus minor's constitutional right to freedom from harm was clearly established for purposes of minor's parents' § 1983 claim against foster parents, where a reasonable foster parent would realize that creating a grave risk of death to a child in their care would violate that child's right to safety; foster parents placed minor immobilized by waist and leg cast face-down on a pillow for several hours, which resulted in his positional asphyxia. Hernandez v. Hines, N.D.Tex.2001, 159 F.Supp.2d 378. Civil Rights 1376(2)

Where division of family services employee entered parents' home, not to search for evidence of crime or juvenile neglect or abuse but, rather, to obtain child's possessions for transfer of his custody to foster parents, and where parents did not allege that entry violated their rights, any federal constitutional right in them to prevent employee from gathering child's clothes after she was in the residence was not clearly established, if it existed at all, and she was protected from liability by qualified immunity. Hawley v. Nelson, E.D.Mo.1997, 968 F.Supp. 1372, affirmed 141 F.3d 1168. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Although children in foster care had right to have protective action taken when accusations of sexual abuse in foster home were made, children did not have clearly established right to specific actions such as immediate removal from home and, therefore, county social worker was entitled to qualified immunity from children's claims that they had been deprived of their constitutional rights by being physically, emotionally, and sexually abused in foster home. Lintz v. Skipski, W.D.Mich.1993, 815 F.Supp. 1066. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Child's due process right to reasonable care and protection, especially in case of serious medical need, was clearly established in August of 1991 when child was taken into custody and placed in foster home after babysitter was arrested during trip by parent, and, thus, Director of Children and Family Services of Arkansas Department of Human Services (DHS), caseworker, and foster parent were not entitled to qualified immunity from § 1983 liability. Norfleet By and Through Norfleet v. State of Ark. Dept. of Human Services, E.D.Ark.1992, 796 F.Supp. 1194, affirmed 989 F.2d 289. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3801. ---- Medical treatment, child welfare, clearly established right

Failure of staff psychologist at state adolescent home who was on treatment team for patient to take action after patient unsuccessfully tried to hang himself did not violate patient's clearly established due process rights, and psychologist was entitled to qualified immunity in federal civil rights action brought after patient suffered severe injuries during second attempt to hang himself two days later after he was taken off close observation, where psychologist was not aware of initial hanging attempt or that patient was taken off close observation. Dolihite v. Maughon By and Through Videon, C.A.11 (Ala.) 1996, 74 F.3d 1027, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 185, 519 U.S. 870, 136 L.Ed.2d 123. Civil Rights 1376(3)

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Officials of county department of family and children services would be entitled to qualified immunity from liability in civil rights action, if law had been unclear when they obtained custody of minor patient after patient's father had refused to consent to insertion of catheter for administration of prescribed medication; although father's liberty interest in custody of patient was a right of which he could not be legally deprived without due process of law, officials could have acted without prior notice or opportunity for hearing if patient's life, safety or welfare had been threatened and if threat was of sufficient proportions and immediacy to warrant ex parte treatment. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, N.D.Ga.1989, 707 F.Supp. 1318, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 909 F.2d 463, certiorari denied 111 S.Ct. 2053, 500 U.S. 932, 114 L.Ed.2d 459. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3802. City officials, clearly established right

City officials were not entitled to qualified immunity for their enforcement of billboard ordinance; for over fifty years, it had been clearly established that licensing scheme is impermissible if it allows officials unfettered discretion to impose prior restraints on speech and it was clear that city could not impose greater restrictions on commercial speech than on noncommercial speech, and could not regulate noncommercial speech on the basis of content. Desert Outdoor Advertising, Inc. v. City of Moreno Valley, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 103 F.3d 814, certiorari denied 118 S.Ct. 294, 522 U.S. 912, 139 L.Ed.2d 227. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City council members were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in § 1983 excess force action brought by daughter of robbery suspect who was killed by police claiming that council members deprived her of her civil rights by indemnifying officers against punitive damage liability since law was not sufficiently clear that reasonable council member would have understood that payment of punitive damages violated any constitutional right either before or after fatal shooting. Trevino v. Gates, C.A.9 (Cal.) 1996, 99 F.3d 911, certiorari denied 117 S.Ct. 1249, 520 U.S. 1117, 137 L.Ed.2d 330. Civil Rights 1376(4)

City administrators were not entitled to qualified immunity against independent contractor's claim that city's termination of its contracts was in retaliation for contractor's speech, through its flier and demonstration, expressing need for appropriate housing for persons with HIV/AIDS, and danger of homelessness faced by clients served by one of its programs due to city's failure to reimburse it for expenses and execute contract; issues contractor addressed squarely implicated matters of social and community concern, and were clearly protected by First Amendment. Housing Works, Inc. v. Turner, S.D.N.Y.2005, 362 F.Supp.2d 434. Civil Rights 1376(4)

Municipal employees who were involved in decision to inspect dangerous structure on private land and subsequently to demolish it were acting under clearly established law, and thus were entitled to qualified immunity as to landowner's civil rights claims stemming from demolition; employees were acting pursuant to Town Board resolution, adopted after full hearing. Davis v. Town of Hempstead, E.D.N.Y.2003, 296 F.Supp.2d 376, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded 167 Fed.Appx. 235, 2006 WL 172216, on remand 2006 WL 656995. Civil Rights 1376(4)

3803. Clinical privileges, clearly established right

Staff psychiatrist working for state psychiatric center did not have clearly established property right in his clinical privileges on date that center's director denied psychiatrist's appeal of revocation of his clinical privileges, and thus employees of center and of state office of mental health were entitled to qualified immunity. Greenwood v. State of N.Y., S.D.N.Y.1996, 939 F.Supp. 1060, affirmed in part, vacated in part 163 F.3d 119, on remand 2000 WL 1336281. Civil Rights 1376(3)

3804. Contractors, clearly established right

Volunteer fire company, a government contractor, would be qualifiedly immune from employees' due process

© 2007 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

liberty interest claims based on any public statements by company regarding employees' alleged ineptitude, since, at relevant time period, law was insufficiently established with respect to whether allegations of ineptitude against public employee necessitated name-clearing hearing. Mitchell v. Lealman Volunteer Fire Co., M.D.Fla.1996, 985 F.Supp. 1436. Civil Rights 1376(10)

Health care provider serving state correctional institutions asserted violation of clearly established and particularized interest protected by substantive due process which could not be defeated by qualified immunity in alleging that correctional officials conspired to debar provider from contracting with Commonwealth and to destroy its business reputation by falsely blaming provider for inmate's death. Hoffman v. Lehman, M.D.Pa.1996, 926 F.Supp. 510. Civil Rights 1376(7)

3805. Contracts and assignments, clearly established right

New York state police officers were entitled to qualified immunity against towing company's due process claims with respect to termination of its towing assignments, where exclusive assignment as towing operator for section of highway was nontraditional relationship and was terminable at will, so that it could not have been clear whether assignment provided company with status sufficient to give it liberty interest protected by due process in avoiding termination without name-clearing hearing, and where no court had ever answered question whether communication by one police officer to another of charge of dishonesty or ties to organized crime would constitute publication sufficient to violate subject's liberty interest. White Plains Towing Corp. v. Patterson, C.A.2 (N.Y.) 1993, 991 F.2d 1049, certiorari denied 114 S.Ct. 185, 510 U.S. 865, 126 L.Ed.2d 144. Civil Rights 1376(6)

