Introduction

For tax purposes, an alien is an individual who is not a U.S. citizen. Aliens are classified as nonresident aliens and resident aliens. This publication will help you determine your status and give you information you will need to file your U.S. tax return. Resident aliens generally are taxed on their worldwide income, the same as U.S. citizens. Nonresident aliens are taxed only on their income from sources within the United States and on certain income connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.

Table A, What You Need To Know About U.S. Taxes, provides a list of questions and the chapter or chapters in this publication where you will find the related discussion.

The information in this publication is not as comprehensive for resident aliens as it is for nonresident aliens. Resident aliens are generally treated the same as U.S. citizens and can find more information in other IRS publications.

We respond to many letters by telephone. Therefore, it would be helpful if you would include your daytime phone number, including the area code, in your correspondence.

Important Changes

Foreign earned income exclusion. For 2000, the foreign earned income exclusion is $76,000. The exclusion increases to $78,000 for 2001. For more information, see chapter 3.

Estimated tax safe harbor for higher income individuals. For installment payments for tax years beginning in 2001, the estimated tax safe harbor for higher income individuals (other than farmers and fishermen) has been modified. If your 2000 adjusted gross income is more than $150,000 ($75,000 if married filing a separate return in 2001), you will have to deposit the smaller of 90% of your expected tax for 2001 or 110% of the tax shown on your 2000 return to avoid an estimated tax penalty. For more information, see Estimated Tax Form 1040–ES (NR) in chapter 8.

Documentation requirements. The Internal Revenue Service issued regulations relating to the withholding of income tax on certain U.S. source income paid to foreign persons. These regulations apply to payments made beginning January 1, 2001. You may be asked to give withholding agents new withholding certificates that contain the necessary information and representations required by the regulations.

The following are the withholding certificates that you may be asked to complete and submit:

1) Form W–8BEN, Certificate of Foreign Status of Beneficial Owner for United States Tax Withholding, should be provided to a withholding agent or payer by a beneficial owner of certain types of income to:
   a) Establish foreign status,
   b) Claim that such person is the beneficial owner of the income for which the form is being furnished, and
   c) If applicable, claim a reduced rate of, or exemption from, withholding as a resident of a foreign country with which the United States has an income tax treaty.

2) Form W–8ECI, Certificate of Foreign Person’s Claim for Exemption From Withholding on Income Effectively Connected With the Conduct of a Trade or Business in the United States, should be provided to a withholding agent or payer by a foreign person to:

a) Establish foreign status,

b) Claim that such person is the beneficial owner of the income for which the form is being furnished, and
c) Claim that certain income is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.

The new certificates will replace the following forms and statement, which are no longer valid.

- Form W–8, Certificate of Foreign Status.
- Form 1001, Ownership, Exemption, or Reduced Rate Certificate.
- Form 1078, Certificate of Alien Claiming Residence in the United States.
- Form 4224, Exemption From Withholding of Tax on Income Effectively Connected With the Conduct of a Trade or Business in the United States.
- Statement under regulation section 1.1441–5, relating to an individual’s claim to be a U.S. citizen or resident.

Paid preparer authorization. Beginning with your return for 2000, you can check a box and authorize the IRS to discuss your tax return with the paid preparer who signed it. If you check the “Yes” box in the signature area of your return, the IRS can call your paid preparer to answer any questions that may arise during the processing of your return. Also, you are authorizing your paid preparer to perform certain actions. See your income tax package for details.

Photographs of missing children. The Internal Revenue Service is a proud partner with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Photographs of missing children selected by the Center may appear in this publication on pages that would otherwise be blank. You can help bring these children home by looking at the photographs and calling 1–800–THE–LOST (1–800–843–5678) if you recognize a child.

Important Reminders

Individual taxpayer identification number (ITIN). The IRS will issue an ITIN to a nonresident or resident alien who does not have and is not eligible to get a social security number. To apply for an ITIN, file Form W–7, Application for IRS Individual Taxpayer Identification Number, with the IRS. An ITIN is for tax use only. It does not entitle the holder to social security benefits or change the holder’s employment or immigration status under U.S. law. See Identification Number in chapter 5.

Disclosure of a treaty-based position that reduces your tax. If you take the position that any U.S. tax is overruled or otherwise reduced by a U.S. treaty (a treaty-based position), you generally must disclose that position on your affected return. See Effect of Tax Treaties in chapter 1.

Form 1040NR–EZ. You may be able to use Form 1040NR–EZ, U.S. Income Tax Return for Certain Nonresident Aliens With No Dependents. This form is shorter and easier to prepare than Form 1040NR. To see if you meet the conditions for filing this form, see Form 1040NR–EZ in chapter 7.

Earned income credit for nonresident aliens. If you are a nonresident alien for any part of the year, you cannot claim the earned income credit unless you choose to be treated as a resident alien for the earlier year. See Choosing Resident Alien Status and Nonresident Spouse Treated as a Resident in chapter 1.

Leaving the United States. Generally, aliens must obtain a sailing permit or departure permit before leaving the United States. See chapter 11 for more information.

Change of address. If you change your mailing address, be sure to notify the Internal Revenue Service using Form 8822, Change of Address. Nonresident aliens who filed Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255, should send the form there. Resident aliens should send the form to the Internal Revenue Service Center for their old address (addresses for the Service Centers are on the back of the form).

Expatriation tax. If you are a former U.S. citizen or former long-term U.S. resident, special tax rules may apply to you. See Expatriation Tax in chapter 4.

1. Nonresident Alien or Resident Alien?

Introduction
You should first determine whether, for income tax purposes, you are a nonresident alien or a resident alien. Figure 1–A will help you find out whether you are a nonresident or resident alien.

If you are both a nonresident and resident in the same year, you have a dual status. Dual status is explained later. Also explained later are a choice to treat your nonresident spouse as a resident and some other special situations.

Topics
This chapter discusses:

- How to determine if you are a nonresident, resident, or dual-status alien, and
- How to treat a nonresident spouse as a resident alien.

See chapter 12 for information about getting these forms.

Nonresident Aliens
If you are an alien (not a U.S. citizen), you are considered a nonresident alien unless you meet one of the two tests described next under Resident Aliens.

Resident Aliens
You are a resident alien of the United States for tax purposes if you meet either the green card test or the substantial presence test for the calendar year (January 1–December 31). Even if you do not meet either of these tests, you may be able to choose to be treated as a U.S. resident for part of the year. See First-Year Choice under Dual-Status Aliens, later.

Green Card Test
You are a resident for tax purposes if you are a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time during the calendar year. (However, see Dual-Status Aliens, later.) This is known as the “green card” test. You are a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time if you have been given the privilege, according to the immigration laws, of residing permanently in the United States as an immigrant. You generally have this status if the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has issued you an alien registration card, also known as a “green card.” You continue to have resident status under this test unless the status is taken away from you or is administratively or judicially determined to have been abandoned.

Resident status taken away. Resident status is considered to have been taken away from you if the U.S. government issues you a final administrative or judicial order of exclusion or deportation. A final judicial order is an order that you may no longer appeal to a higher court of competent jurisdiction.

Resident status abandoned. An administrative or judicial determination of abandonment of resident status may be initiated by you, the INS, or a U.S. consular officer.
Days of Presence in the United States

You are treated as present in the United States on any day you are physically present in the country at any time during the day. However, there are exceptions to this rule. Do not count the following as days of presence in the United States for the substantial presence test.

- Days you commute to work in the United States from a residence in Canada or Mexico if you regularly commute from Canada or Mexico.
- Days you are in the United States for less than 24 hours when you are in transit between two places outside the United States.
- Days you are in the United States as a crew member of a foreign vessel.
- Days you are unable to leave the United States because of a medical condition that develops while you are in the United States.
- Days you are an exempt individual.

The specific rules that apply to each of these categories are discussed next.

Regular commuters from Canada or Mexico. Do not count the days on which you commute to work in the United States from your residence in Canada or Mexico if you regularly commute from Canada or Mexico. You are considered to commute regularly if you commute to work in the United States on more than 75% of the workdays during your working period.

For this purpose, “commute” means to travel to work and return to your residence within a 24-hour period. “Workdays” are the days on which you work in the United States or Canada or Mexico. “Working period” means the period beginning with the first day in the current year on which you are physically present in the United States to work and ending on the last day in the current year on which you are physically present in the United States to work. If your work requires you to be present in the United States only on a seasonal or cyclical basis, your working period begins on the first day of the season or cycle on which you are present in the United States to work and ends on the last day of the season or cycle on which you are present in the United States to work. You can have more than one working period in a calendar year, and your working period can begin in one calendar year and end in the following calendar year.

Example. Maria Perez lives in Mexico and works for Compania ABC in its office in Mexico. She was assigned to her firm’s office in the United States from February 1 through June 1. On June 2, she resumed her employment in Mexico. On 69 days, Maria commuted each morning from her home in Mexico to work in Compania ABC’s U.S. office. She returned to her home in Mexico on each of those evenings. On 7 days, she worked in her firm’s Mexico office. For purposes of the substantial presence test, Maria does not count the days she commuted to work in the United States because those days equal more than 75% of the workdays during the working period (69 workdays in the United States divided by 76 workdays in the working period equals 90.8%).

Days in transit. Do not count the days you are in the United States for less than 24 hours and you are in transit between two places outside the United States. You are considered to be in transit if you engage in activities that are substantially related to completing travel to your foreign destination. For example, if you travel between airports in the United States to change planes en route to your foreign destination, you are considered to be in transit. However, you are not considered to be in transit if you attend a business meeting while in the United States. This is true even if the meeting is held at the airport.

Crew members. Do not count the days you are temporarily present in the United States as a regular crew member of a foreign vessel engaged in transportation between the United States and a foreign country or a U.S. possession. However, this exception does not apply if you otherwise engage in any trade or business in the United States on those days.

Medical condition. Do not count the days you intended to leave, but could not leave the United States because of a medical condition or problem that developed while you were in the United States. Whether you intended to leave the United States on a particular day is determined based on all the facts and circumstances. For example, you may be able to establish that you intended to leave if your purpose for visiting the United States could be accomplished during a period that is not long enough to qualify you for the substantial presence test. However, if you need an extended period of time to accomplish the purpose of your visit and that period would qualify you for the substantial presence test, you would not be able to establish an intent to leave the United States before the end of that extended period.

In the case of an individual who is judged mentally incompetent, proof of intent to leave the United States can be determined by analyzing the individual’s pattern of behavior before he or she was judged mentally incompetent.

If you qualify to exclude days of presence because of a medical condition, you must file a fully completed Form 8843 with the IRS. See Form 8843, later.

You cannot exclude any days of presence in the United States under the following circumstances.

1) You were initially prevented from leaving, were then able to leave, but remained in the United States beyond a reasonable period for making arrangements to leave.

2) You returned to the United States for treatment of a medical condition that developed during a prior stay.

3) The condition existed before your arrival in the United States and you were aware of the condition. It does not matter whether you needed treatment for the condition when you entered the United States.

Exempt individual. Do not count days for which you are an exempt individual. The term “exempt individual” does not refer to someone exempt from U.S. tax, but to anyone in the following categories.

Start here to determine your status for 2000

1. Were you a lawful permanent resident of the United States (had a “green card”) at any time during 2000?
   - Yes
   - No

   2. Were you physically present in the United States on at least 31 days during 2000?
      - Yes
      - No

   3. Were you physically present in the United States on at least 183 days during the 3-year period consisting of 1998, 1999, and 2000, counting all days of presence in 2000, \( \frac{1}{3} \) the days of presence in 1999, and \( \frac{1}{6} \) the days of presence in 1998?
      - Yes
      - No

   Yes

   No

4. Can you show that for 2000 you have a tax home in a foreign country and have a closer connection to that country than to the United States?
   - Yes
   - No

   Yes

   No

You are a resident alien for U.S. tax purposes.

1) An individual temporarily present in the United States as a foreign government-related individual.

2) A teacher or trainee temporarily present in the United States under a “J” or “Q” visa, who substantially complies with the requirements of the visa.

3) A student temporarily present in the United States under an “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa, who substantially complies with the requirements of the visa.

4) A professional athlete temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports event.

The specific rules for each of these four categories are discussed next.

Foreign government-related individuals. A foreign government-related individual is an individual (or a member of the individual’s immediate family) who is temporarily present in the United States:

1) As a full-time employee of an international organization,

2) By reason of diplomatic status, or

3) By reason of a visa (other than a visa that grants lawful permanent residence) that the Secretary of the Treasury determines represents full-time diplomatic or consular status.

An international organization is any public international organization that the President of the United States has designated by Executive Order as being entitled to the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided for in the International Organizations Act. An individual is a full-time employee if his or her work schedule meets the organization’s standard full-time work schedule. An individual is considered to have full-time diplomatic or consular status if he or she:

1) Has been accredited by a foreign government that is recognized by the United States,

2) Intends to engage primarily in official activities for that foreign government while in the United States, and

3) Has been recognized by the President, Secretary of State, or a consular officer as being entitled to that status.

Members of the immediate family include the individual’s spouse and unmarried children (whether by birth or adoption) but only if the spouse’s or unmarried children’s visa statuses are derived from and dependent on the exempt individual’s visa classification. Unmarried children are included only if they:

1) Are under 21 years of age,

2) Reside regularly in the exempt individual’s household, and

3) Are not members of another household.

The immediate family of an exempt individual does not include attendants, servants, or personal employees.

Teachers and trainees. A teacher or trainee is an individual, other than a student, who is temporarily in the United States under a “J” or “Q” visa and substantially complies with the requirements of that visa. You are considered to have substantially complied with the visa requirements if you have not engaged in activities that are prohibited by U.S. immigration laws and could result in the loss of your visa status.

1) An individual temporarily present in the United States as a foreign government-related individual.

2) A teacher or trainee temporarily present in the United States under a “J” or “Q” visa, who substantially complies with the requirements of the visa.

3) A student temporarily present in the United States under an “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa, who substantially complies with the requirements of the visa.

4) A professional athlete temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports event.

The specific rules for each of these four categories are discussed next.

Foreign government-related individuals. A foreign government-related individual is an individual (or a member of the individual’s immediate family) who is temporarily present in the United States:

1) As a full-time employee of an international organization,

2) By reason of diplomatic status, or

3) By reason of a visa (other than a visa that grants lawful permanent residence) that the Secretary of the Treasury determines represents full-time diplomatic or consular status.

An international organization is any public international organization that the President of the United States has designated by Executive Order as being entitled to the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided for in the International Organizations Act. An individual is a full-time employee if his or her work schedule meets the organization’s standard full-time work schedule. An individual is considered to have full-time diplomatic or consular status if he or she:

1) Has been accredited by a foreign government that is recognized by the United States,

2) Intends to engage primarily in official activities for that foreign government while in the United States, and

3) Has been recognized by the President, Secretary of State, or a consular officer as being entitled to that status.

Members of the immediate family include the individual’s spouse and unmarried children (whether by birth or adoption) but only if the spouse’s or unmarried children’s visa statuses are derived from and dependent on the exempt individual’s visa classification. Unmarried children are included only if they:

1) Are under 21 years of age,

2) Reside regularly in the exempt individual’s household, and

3) Are not members of another household.

The immediate family of an exempt individual does not include attendants, servants, or personal employees.

Teachers and trainees. A teacher or trainee is an individual, other than a student, who is temporarily in the United States under a “J” or “Q” visa and substantially complies with the requirements of that visa. You are considered to have substantially complied with the visa requirements if you have not engaged in activities that are prohibited by U.S. immigration laws and could result in the loss of your visa status.

Chapter 1 | Nonresident Alien or Resident Alien? | Page 5
Also included are immediate family members of exempt teachers and trainees. See the definition of immediate family, earlier, under Foreign government-related individuals.

You will not be an exempt individual as a teacher or trainee if you were exempt as a teacher, trainee, or student for any part of 2 of the 6 preceding calendar years. However, you will be an exempt individual if you were exempt as a teacher, trainee, or student for any part of 3 (or fewer) of the 6 preceding calendar years and:

1) A foreign employer paid all of your compensation during the current year, and

2) A foreign employer paid all of your compensation during each of the preceding 6 years you were present in the United States as a teacher or trainee.

A foreign employer includes an office or place of business of an American entity in a foreign country or a U.S. possession. If you qualify to exclude days of presence as a teacher or trainee, you must file a fully completed Form 8843 with the IRS. See Form 8843, later.

Example. Carla was temporarily in the United States during the year as a teacher on a “J” visa. Her compensation for the year was paid by a foreign employer. Carla was treated as an exempt teacher for the past 2 years but her compensation was not paid by a foreign employer. She will not be considered an exempt individual for the current year because she was exempt as a teacher for at least 2 of the past 6 years.

If her compensation for the past 2 years had been paid by a foreign employer, she would be an exempt individual for the current year.

Students. A student is any individual who is temporarily in the United States on an “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa and who substantially complies with the requirements of that visa. You are considered to have substantially complied with the visa requirements if you have not engaged in activities that are prohibited by U.S. immigration laws and could result in the loss of your visa status.

Also included are immediate family members of exempt students. See the definition of immediate family, earlier, under Foreign government-related individuals.

You will not be an exempt individual as a student if you have been exempt as a teacher, trainee, or student for any part of more than 5 calendar years unless you establish to the satisfaction of the IRS Field Assistance Area Director that you do not intend to reside permanently in the United States and you have substantially complied with the requirements of your visa. The facts and circumstances to be considered in determining if you have demonstrated an intent to reside permanently in the United States include, but are not limited to:

1) Whether you have maintained a closer connection to a foreign country (discussed later), and

2) Whether you have taken affirmative steps to change your status from non-immigrant to lawful permanent resident as discussed, later, under Closer Connection to a Foreign Country.

If you qualify to exclude days of presence as a student, you must file a fully completed Form 8843 with the IRS. See Form 8843, later.

Professional athletes. A professional athlete who is temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports event is an exempt individual. A charitable sports event is one that meets the following conditions:

1) The main purpose is to benefit a qual-
   lified charitable organization,

2) The entire net proceeds go to charity, and

3) Volunteers perform substantially all the work.

In figuring the days of presence in the United States, you can exclude only the days on which you actually competed in a sports event. You cannot exclude the days on which you were in the United States to practice for the event, to perform promotional or other activities related to the event, or to travel between events.

If you qualify to exclude days of presence as a professional athlete, you must file a fully completed Form 8843 with the IRS. See Form 8843, next.

Form 8843. If you exclude days of presence in the United States because you fall into any of the following categories, you must file a fully completed Form 8843.

1) You were unable to leave the United States as planned because of a medical condition.

2) You were temporarily in the United States as a teacher or trainee on a “J” or “Q” visa.

3) You were temporarily in the United States as a student on an “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa.

4) You were a professional athlete competing in a charitable sports event.

Attach Form 8843 to your 2000 income tax return. If you do not have to file a return, send Form 8843 to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255, by the due date for filing an income tax return. The due date for filing is discussed in Chapter 7.

If you do not timely file Form 8843, you cannot exclude the days you were present in the United States as aprofessional athlete or because of a medical condition that arose while you were in the United States. This does not apply if you can show by clear and convincing evidence that you took reasonable actions to become aware of the filing requirements and significant steps to comply with those requirements.

Closer Connection to two foreign countries. You can demonstrate that you have a closer connection to two foreign countries (but not more than two) if you meet all of the following conditions:

1) You maintained a tax home beginning on the first day of the year in one foreign country,

2) You changed your tax home during the year to a second foreign country,

3) You continued to maintain your tax home in the second foreign country for the rest of the year,

4) You had a closer connection to each foreign country than to the United States for the period during which you maintained a tax home in that foreign country, and

5) You are subject to tax as a resident under the tax laws of either foreign country for the entire year or subject to tax as a resident in both foreign countries for the period during which you maintained a tax home in each foreign country.

Tax home. Your tax home is the general area of your main place of business, employment, or post of duty, regardless of where you maintain your family home. Your tax home is the place where you permanently or indefinitely work as an employee or a self-employed individual. If you do not have a regular or main place of business because of the nature of your work, then your tax home is the place where you regularly live. If you do not fit either of these categories, you are considered an itinerant and your tax home is wherever you work.

For determining whether you have a closer connection to a foreign country, your tax home must also be in existence for the entire current year, and must be located in the same foreign country for which you are claiming to have a closer connection.

Foreign country. In determining whether you have a closer connection to a foreign country, the term “foreign country” means:

1) Any territory under the sovereignty of the United Nations or a government other than that of the United States,

2) The territorial waters of the foreign country (determined under U.S. law),

3) The seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the foreign country and over which the foreign country has exclusive rights under international law to explore and exploit natural resources, and

4) Possessions and territories of the United States.

Establishing a closer connection. You will be considered to have a closer connection to a foreign country than the United States if you or the IRS establishes that you have maintained more significant contacts with the foreign country than with the United States. In determining whether you have maintained more significant contacts with the foreign country than with the United States, the facts and circumstances to be considered include, but are not limited to, the following.
1) The country of residence you designate on forms and documents.
2) The location of: a) Your permanent home, b) Your family, c) Your personal belongings, such as cars, furniture, clothing, and jewelry, d) Your current social, political, cultural, or religious affiliations, e) Your business activities (other than those that constitute your tax home), f) The jurisdiction in which you hold a driver’s license, and g) The jurisdiction in which you vote.

It does not matter whether your permanent home is a house, an apartment, or a furnished room. It also does not matter whether you rent or own it. It is important, however, that your home be available at all times, continuously, and not solely for short stays. You cannot claim you have a closer connection to a foreign country if either of the following applies:

1) You personally applied, or took other steps during the year, to change your status to that of a permanent resident, or
2) You had an application pending for adjustment of status during the current year.

Steps to change your status to that of a permanent resident include, but are not limited to, the filing of the following forms:

Form I–508, Waiver of Rights, Privileges, Exemptions and Immunities
Form I–485, Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status
Form I–130, Petition for Alien Relative, on your behalf
Form I–140, Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker, on your behalf
Form ETA–750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, on your behalf
Form OF–230, Application for Immigrant Visa and Alien Registration

Form 8840. You must attach a fully completed Form 8840 to your income tax return to claim you have a closer connection to a foreign country or countries. If you do not have a visa number (if any), you must sign and date this statement and include a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury. The due date for filing is March 1.

Example. Ivan Ivanovich is a citizen of Russia. He came to the United States for the first time on January 6, 2000, to attend a business meeting and returned to Russia on January 10, 2000. His tax home remained in Russia. On March 1, 2000, he moved to the United States and resided here for the rest of the year. Ivan is able to establish a closer connection to Russia for the period January 6–10. Thus, his residency starting date is March 1.

Statement required to exclude up to 10 days of presence. You must file a statement with the IRS if you are excluding up to 10 days of presence in the United States for purposes of your residency starting date. You must sign and date this statement and include a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury. The statement must contain the following information (as applicable):

1) Your name, address, U.S. taxpayer identification number (if any), and U.S. visa number (if any).
2) Your passport number and the name of the country that issued your passport.
3) The tax year for which the statement applies.
4) The first day that you were present in the United States during the year.
5) The dates of the days you are excluding in figuring your first day of residency.
6) Sufficient facts to establish that you have maintained your tax home in and a closer connection to a foreign country during the period you are excluding.

Attach the required statement to your income tax return. If you are not required to file a return, send the statement to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255, on or before the due date for filing an income tax return. The due date for filing is discussed in chapter 7.

If you do not file the required statement as explained above, you cannot claim that you have a closer connection to a foreign country or countries. Therefore, your first day of residency will be the first day you are present in the United States. This does not apply if you can show by clear and convincing evidence that you took reasonable actions to become aware of the requirements for filing the statement and significant steps to comply with those requirements.

Residency starting date under green card test. If you meet the substantial presence test for a calendar year, your residency starting date is generally the first day you are present in the United States during that calendar year. However, you do not have to count up to 10 days of actual presence in the United States if on those days you establish that:

1) You had a closer connection to a foreign country than to the United States, and
2) Your tax home was in that foreign country.

See Closer Connection to a Foreign Country, earlier.

In determining whether you can exclude up to 10 days, the following rules apply.

1) You can exclude days from more than one period of presence as long as the total days in all periods are not more than 10.
2) You cannot exclude any days in a period of consecutive days of presence if all the days in that period cannot be excluded.
3) Although you can exclude up to 10 days of presence in determining your residency starting date, you must include those days when determining whether you meet the substantial presence test.

Effect of Tax Treaties
The rules given here to determine if you are a U.S. resident do not override tax treaty definitions of residency. If your residency is determined under a treaty and not under the rules discussed here, you must file a fully completed Form 8833 if the payments or income items reportable because of that determination are more than $100,000. If you are a dual resident taxpayer, you can still claim the benefits under an income tax treaty. A dual resident taxpayer is one who is a resident of both the United States and another country under each country’s tax laws. The income tax treaty between the two countries must contain a provision that provides for resolution of conflicting claims of residence. If you are treated as a resident of a foreign country under a tax treaty, you are treated as a nonresident alien in figuring your U.S. income tax. For purposes other than figuring your tax, you will be treated as a U.S. resident. For example, the rules discussed here do not affect your residency time periods as discussed, later, under Dual-Status Aliens.

Information to be reported. If you are a dual resident taxpayer and you claim treaty benefits, you must timely file a return (including extensions) using Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ, and compute your tax as a nonresident alien. You must also attach a fully completed Form 8833. See Reporting Treaty Benefits Claimed in chapter 9 for more information on reporting treaty benefits.

Dual-Status Aliens
You can be both a nonresident alien and a resident alien during the same tax year. This usually occurs in the year you arrive in or depart from the United States. Aliens who have dual status should see chapter 6 for information on filing a return for a dual-status resident taxpayer and you claim treaty benefits, you must timely file a return (including extensions) using Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ, and compute your tax as a nonresident alien. You must also attach a fully completed Form 8833. See Reporting Treaty Benefits Claimed in chapter 9 for more information on reporting treaty benefits.

First Year of Residency
If you are a U.S. resident for the calendar year, but you were not a U.S. resident at any time during the preceding calendar year, you are a U.S. resident only for the part of the calendar year that begins on the residency starting date. You are a nonresident alien for the part of the year before that date.

Residency starting date under substantial presence test. If you meet the substantial presence test for a calendar year, your residency starting date is generally the first day you are present in the United States during that calendar year. However, you do not have to count up to 10 days of actual presence in the United States if on those days you establish that:

1) You had a closer connection to a foreign country than to the United States, and
2) Your tax home was in that foreign country.

See Closer Connection to a Foreign Country, earlier.

In determining whether you can exclude up to 10 days, the following rules apply.

1) You can exclude days from more than one period of presence as long as the
If you meet both the substantial presence test and the green card test, your residency starting date is the earlier of the first day during the year you are present in the United States under the substantial presence test or as a lawful permanent resident.

Residency during the preceding year. If you were a U.S. resident during any part of the preceding calendar year and you are a U.S. resident for any part of the current year, you will be considered a U.S. resident at the beginning of the current year. This applies whether you are a resident under the substantial presence test or green card test.

Example. Robert Bach is a citizen of Switzerland. He came to the United States as a U.S. resident for the first time on May 1, 1999, and remained until November 5, 2000, when he returned to Switzerland. Robert came back to the United States on March 5, 2000, as a lawful permanent resident and still resides here. In calendar year 2000, Robert’s U.S. residency is deemed to begin on January 1, 2000, because he qualified as a resident in calendar year 1999.

First-Year Choice

If you do not meet either the green card test or the substantial presence test for 1999 or 2000 and you did not choose to be treated as a resident for part of 1999, but you meet the substantial presence test for 2001, you can choose to be treated as a U.S. resident for part of 2000. To make this choice, you must:

1) Be present in the United States for at least 31 days in a row in 2000, and
2) Be present in the United States for at least 75% of the number of days beginning with the first day of the 31-day period and ending with the last day of 2000. For purposes of this 75% requirement, you can treat up to 5 days of absence from the United States as days of presence in the United States.

When counting the days of presence in (1) and (2) above, do not count the days you were in the United States under any of the exceptions discussed earlier, Under Days of Presence in the United States.

If you make the first-year choice, your residency starting date for 2000 is the first day of the earliest 31-day period (described in (1) above) that you use to qualify for the choice. You are treated as a U.S. resident for the rest of the year. If you are present for more than one 31-day period and you satisfy condition (2) above for each of those periods, your residency starting date is the first day of the first 31-day period you are present for more than one 31-day period but you satisfy condition (2) above only for a later 31-day period, your residency starting date is the first day of the later 31-day period.

Example 1. Juan DaSilva is a citizen of the Philippines. He came to the United States for the first time on November 1, 2000, and was here on 31 consecutive days (from November 1 through December 1, 2000). Juan returned to the Philippines on December 1 and came back to the United States on December 17, 2000. He stayed in the United States for the rest of the year. During 2001, Juan was a resident of the United States under the substantial presence test. Juan can make the first-year choice for 2000 because he was in the United States in 2000 for a period of 31 days in a row (November 1 through December 1) and for at least 75% of the days following (and including) the first day of his 31-day period (46 total days of presence in the United States divided by 61 days in the period from November 1 through December 31 equals 75.4%). If Juan makes the first-year choice, his residency starting date will be November 1, 2000.

Example 2. The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that Juan was also absent from the United States on December 24, 25, 29, 30, and 31. He can make the first-year choice for 2000 because up to 5 days of absence are considered days of presence for purposes of the 75% requirement.

Statement required to make the first-year choice. You must attach a statement to Form 1040 to make the first-year choice. The statement must contain your name and address and specify the following:

1) That you are making the first-year choice,
2) That you were not a resident in 1999,
3) That you are a resident under the substantial presence test in 2001,
4) The number of days of presence in the United States during 2001,
5) The date or dates of your 31-day period of presence and the period of continuous presence in the United States during 2000, and
6) The date or dates of absence from the United States during 2000 that you are treating as days of presence.

You cannot file Form 1040 or the statement until you meet the substantial presence test for 2001. If you have not met the test for 2001 as of April 16, 2001, you can request an extension of time for filing your 2000 Form 1040 until a reasonable period after you have met that test. To request an extension to file, use Form 4868, Application for Automatic Extension of Time To File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return. You should pay with this form the amount of tax you expect to owe for 2000. Enter the extension of time for filing your 2000 Form 1040 until a reasonable period after you have met that test. To request an extension to file, use Form 4868, Application for Automatic Extension of Time To File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return. You should pay with this form the amount of tax you expect to owe for 2000 figured as if you were a nonresident alien the entire year. You can use Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR-EZ to figure the tax. Enter the tax on Form 4868. If you do not pay the tax due, you will be charged interest on any tax not paid by the regular due date of your return, and you may be charged a penalty on the late payment. If you pay the tax due by credit card, you do not file Form 4868. See the form instructions for information on paying by credit card. If you need more time after filing Form 4868, file Form 2688, Application for Additional Extension of Time To File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return.

Once you make the first-year choice, you may not revoke it without the approval of the Internal Revenue Service.

If you do not follow the procedures discussed here for making the first-year choice, you will be treated as a nonresident alien for all of 2000. However, this does not apply if you can show by clear and convincing evidence that you took reasonable actions to become aware of the filing procedures and significant steps to comply with the procedures.

Choosing Resident Alien Status

If you are a dual-status alien, you can choose to be treated as a U.S. resident for the entire year if:

1) You were a nonresident alien at the beginning of the year,
2) You are a resident alien or U.S. citizen at the end of the year,
3) You are married to a U.S. citizen or resident alien at the end of the year, and
4) Your spouse joins you in making the choice.

This includes situations in which both you and your spouse were nonresident aliens at the beginning of the tax year and both of you are resident aliens at the end of the tax year.

If you make this choice, the following rules apply.

- You and your spouse are treated as U.S. residents for the entire year for income tax purposes.
- You and your spouse are taxed on worldwide income.
- You and your spouse must file a joint return for the year of the choice.
- Neither you nor your spouse can make this choice for any later tax year, even if you are separated, divorced, or remarried.
- The special instructions and restrictions for dual-status taxpayers in chapter 6 do not apply to you.

Note. A similar choice is available if, at the end of the tax year, one spouse is a nonresident alien and the other spouse is a U.S. citizen or resident. See Nonresident Alien Spouse Treated as a Resident, later. If you previously made that choice and it is still in effect, you do not need to make the choice explained here.

Making the choice. You should attach a statement signed by both spouses to your joint return for the year of the choice. The statement must contain the following information:

1) A declaration that you both qualify to make the choice and that you choose to be treated as U.S. residents for the entire tax year.
2) The name, address, and taxpayer identification number (SSN or ITIN) of each spouse. (If one spouse died, include the name and address of the person who makes the choice for the deceased spouse.)

You generally make this choice when you file your joint return. However, you also can make the choice by filing Form 1040X. Attach Form 1040, Form 1040A, or Form 1040EZ and print “Amended” across the top of the corrected return. If you make the choice with an amended return, you and your spouse must also amend any returns that you may have filed after the year for which you made the choice.

You generally must file the amended joint return within 3 years from the date you filed your original U.S. income tax return or 2 years.
from the date you paid your income tax for that year, whichever is later.

Last Year of Residency

If you were a U.S. resident in 2000 but are not a U.S. resident during any part of 2001, you cease to be a U.S. resident on your residency termination date. Your residency termination date is December 31, 2000, unless you qualify for an earlier date as discussed next.

Earlier residency termination date. You may qualify for a residency termination date that is earlier than December 31. This date is:

1) The last day in 2000 that you are physically present in the United States, if you met the substantial presence test,
2) The first day in 2000 that you are no longer a lawful permanent resident of the United States, if you met the green card test, or
3) The later of (1) or (2), if you met both tests.

You can use this date only if, for the remainder of 2000, your tax home was in a foreign country and you had a closer connection to that foreign country. See Closer Connection to a Foreign Country, earlier.

A long-term resident who ceases to be a lawful permanent resident may be subject to special reporting requirements and tax provisions. See Expatriation Tax in chapter 4.

De minimis presence. If you are a U.S. resident because of the substantial presence test and you qualify to use the earlier residency termination date, you can exclude up to 10 days of actual presence in the United States in determining your residency termination date. In determining whether you can exclude up to 10 days, the following rules apply.

1) You can exclude days from more than one period of presence as long as the total days in all periods are not more than 10.
2) You cannot exclude any days in a period of consecutive days of presence if all the days in that period cannot be excluded.
3) Although you can exclude up to 10 days of presence in determining your residency termination date, you must include those days when determining whether you meet the substantial presence test.

Example. Lola Bovary is a citizen of Malta. She came to the United States for the first time on March 1, 2000, and resided here until August 25, 2000. On December 12, 2000, Lola came to the United States for vacation and stayed here until December 16, 2000, when she returned to Malta. She is able to establish a closer connection to Malta for the period December 12–16. Lola is not a U.S. resident for tax purposes during 2001 and can establish a closer connection to Malta for the rest of calendar year 2000. Lola is a U.S. resident under the substantial presence test for 2000 because she was present in the United States for 183 days (178 days for the period March 1 to August 25 plus 5 days in December). Lola’s residency termination date is August 25, 2000.

Residency during the next year. If you are a U.S. resident during any part of 2001 and you are a resident during any part of 2000, you will be taxed as a resident through the end of 2000. This applies whether you have a closer connection to a foreign country than the United States during 2000, and whether you are a resident under the substantial presence test or green card test.

Statement required to establish your residency termination date. You must file a statement with the IRS to establish your residency termination date. You must sign and date this statement and include a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury. The statement must contain the following information (as applicable).

1) Your name, address, U.S. taxpayer identification number (if any), and U.S. visa number (if any).
2) Your passport number and the name of the country that issued your passport.
3) The tax year for which the statement applies.
4) The last day that you were present in the United States during the year.
5) Sufficient facts to establish that you have maintained your tax home in and that you have a closer connection to a foreign country following your last day of presence in the United States during the year or following the abandonment or rescission of your status as a lawful permanent resident during the year.
6) The date that your status as a lawful permanent resident was abandoned or rescinded.
7) Sufficient facts (including copies of relevant documents) to establish that your status as a lawful permanent resident has been abandoned or rescinded.
8) If you can exclude days under the de minimis presence rule, discussed earlier, include the dates of the days you are excluding and sufficient facts to establish that you have maintained your tax home in and that you have a closer connection to a foreign country during the period you are excluding.

Attach the required statement to your income tax return. If you are not required to file a return, send the statement to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255, on or before the due date for filing an income tax return. The due date for filing is discussed in chapter 7.

If you do not file the required statement as explained above, you cannot claim that you have a closer connection to a foreign country or countries. This does not apply if you can show by clear and convincing evidence that you took reasonable actions to become aware of the requirements for filing the statement and significant steps to comply with those requirements.

Nonresident Spouse Treated as a Resident

If, at the end of your tax year, you are married and one spouse is a U.S. citizen or a resident alien and the other spouse is a nonresident alien, you can choose to treat the nonresident spouse as a U.S. resident. This includes situations in which one spouse is a nonresident alien at the beginning of the tax year, but a resident alien at the end of the year, and the other spouse is a nonresident alien at the end of the year.

If you make this choice, you and your spouse are treated for income tax purposes as residents for your entire tax year. Generally, neither you nor your spouse can claim tax treaty benefits as a resident of a foreign country for a tax year for which the choice is in effect and you are both taxed on worldwide income. You must file a joint income tax return for the year you make the choice, but you and your spouse can file joint or separate returns in later years.

Example. Bob and Sharon Williams are married and both are nonresident aliens at the beginning of the year. In June, Bob became a resident alien and remained a resident for the rest of the year. Bob and Sharon both choose to be treated as resident aliens by attaching a statement to their joint return. Bob and Sharon must file a joint return for the year they make the choice, but they can file either joint or separate returns for later years.

How To Make the Choice

Attach a statement, signed by both spouses, to your joint return for the first tax year for which the choice applies. It should contain the following information.

1) A declaration that one spouse was a nonresident alien and the other spouse was a U.S. citizen or resident alien at the end of your tax year, and that you choose to be treated as U.S. residents for the entire tax year.
2) The name, address, and identification number of each spouse. (If one spouse died, include the name and address of the person making the choice for the deceased spouse.)

Amended return. You generally make this choice when you file your joint return. However, you can also make the choice by filing a joint amended return on Form 1040X. Attach Form 1040, Form 1040A, or Form 1040EZ and print “Amended” across the top of the corrected return. If you make the choice with an amended return, you and your spouse must also amend any returns that you may have filed after the year for which you made the choice.

You generally must file the amended joint return within 3 years from the date you filed your original U.S. income tax return or 2 years from the date you paid your income tax for that year, whichever is later.
Suspending the Choice

The choice to be treated as a resident alien does not apply to any tax year (after the tax year you made the choice) if neither spouse is a U.S. citizen or resident alien at any time during the tax year.

Example. Dick Brown was a resident alien on December 31, 1997, and married to Judy, a nonresident alien. They chose to treat Judy as a resident alien and filed joint 1997 and 1998 income tax returns. On January 10, 1999, Dick became a nonresident alien. Judy had remained a nonresident alien throughout the period. Dick and Judy could have filed joint or separate returns for 1999. However, since neither Dick nor Judy is a resident alien at any time during 2000, their choice is suspended for that year. If either has U.S. source income or foreign source income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business in 2000, they must file separate returns as nonresident aliens. If Dick becomes a resident alien again in 2000, their choice is no longer suspended.

Ending the Choice

Once made, the choice to be treated as a resident applies to all later years unless suspended (as explained above) or ended in one of the following ways.

If the choice is ended in one of the following ways, neither spouse can make this choice in any later tax year.

1) Revocation. Either spouse can revoke the choice for any tax year, provided he or she makes the revocation by the due date for filing the tax return for that tax year. The spouse who revokes must attach a signed statement declaring that the choice is being revoked. The statement must include the name, address, and identification number of each spouse. (If one spouse dies, include the name and address of the person who is revoking the choice for the deceased spouse.) The statement also must include a list of any states, foreign countries, and possessions that have community property laws in which either spouse is domiciled or where real property is located from which either spouse receives income. File the statement as follows:

a) If the spouse revoking the choice does not have to file a return, attach the statement to the return for the first year the revocation applies,

b) If the spouse revoking the choice does not have to file a return, but does file a return (for example, to obtain a refund), attach the statement to the return, or

c) If the spouse revoking the choice does not have to file a return and does not file a claim for refund, send the statement to the Internal Revenue Service Center where you filed the last joint return.

2) Death. The death of either spouse ends the choice, beginning with the first tax year following the year the spouse died. However, if the surviving spouse is a U.S. citizen or resident and is entitled to the joint tax rates as a surviving spouse, the choice will not end until the close of the last year for which these joint rates may be used. If both spouses die in the same tax year, the choice ends on the first day after the close of the tax year in which the spouses died.

3) Legal separation. A legal separation under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance ends the choice as of the beginning of the tax year in which the legal separation occurs.

4) Inadequate records. The Internal Revenue Service can end the choice for any tax year that either spouse has failed to keep adequate books, records, and other information necessary to determine the correct income tax liability, or to provide adequate access to those records.

Special Situations

If you are a nonresident alien from American Samoa or Puerto Rico, you may be treated as a resident alien.

If you are a nonresident alien in the United States and a bona fide resident of American Samoa or Puerto Rico during the entire tax year, you are taxed, with certain exceptions, according to the rules for resident aliens of the United States. For more information, see chapter 5.

If you are a nonresident alien from American Samoa or Puerto Rico who does not qualify as a bona fide resident of American Samoa or Puerto Rico for the entire tax year, you are taxed as a nonresident alien.

Resident aliens who formerly were bona fide residents of American Samoa or Puerto Rico are taxed according to the rules for resident aliens.

2. Source of Income

Introduction

After you have determined your alien status, you must determine the source of your income. This chapter will help you determine the source of different types of income you may receive during the tax year. This chapter also discusses special rules for married individuals who are domiciled in a country with community property laws.

Topics

This chapter discusses:

• Income source rules, and • Community income.

Resident Aliens

A resident alien’s income is generally subject to tax in the same manner as a U.S. citizen. If you are a resident alien, you must report all interest, dividends, wages, or other compensation for services, income from rental property or royalties, and other types of income on your U.S. tax return. You must report these amounts whether from sources within or outside the United States.

Nonresident Aliens

A nonresident alien usually is subject to U.S. income tax only on U.S. source income. Under limited circumstances, certain foreign source income is subject to U.S. tax. See Foreign Income in chapter 4.

The general rules for determining U.S. source income that apply to most nonresident aliens are shown in Table 2–1. The following discussions cover the general rules as well as the exceptions to these rules.

TIP Not all items of U.S. source income are taxable. See chapter 3.

Interest

Generally, U.S. source interest income includes the following items.

• Interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of U.S. residents or domestic corporations.

• Interest paid by a domestic or foreign partnership or foreign corporation engaged in a U.S. trade or business at any time during the tax year.

• Original issue discount.

• Interest from a state, the District of Columbia, or the U.S. Government.

The place or manner of payment is immaterial in determining the source of the income.

A substitute interest payment made to the transferees of a security in a securities lending transaction or a sale-repurchase transaction is sourced in the same manner as the interest on the transferred security.

Exceptions. U.S. source interest income does not include the following items.

1) Interest paid by a resident alien or a domestic corporation if for the 3-year period ending with the close of the payer’s tax year preceding the interest payment at least 80% of the payer’s total gross income:

a) Is from sources outside the United States, and
b) Is attributable to the active conduct of a trade or business by the individual or corporation in a foreign country or a U.S. possession.

2) Interest paid by a foreign branch of a domestic corporation or a domestic partnership on deposits or withdrawable accounts with mutual savings banks, cooperative banks, credit unions, domestic building and loan associations, and other savings institutions chartered and supervised as savings and loan or similar associations under federal or state law if the interest paid or credited can be deducted by the association.

3) Interest on deposits with a foreign branch of a domestic corporation or domestic partnership, but only if the branch is in the commercial banking business.

Dividends
In most cases, dividend income received from domestic corporations is U.S. source income. Dividend income from foreign corporations is usually foreign source income. Exceptions to both of these rules are discussed below. A substitute dividend payment made to the transferee of a security in a securities lending transaction or a sale-repurchase transaction is sourced in the same manner as a distribution on the transferred security.

First exception. Dividends received from a domestic corporation are not U.S. source income if the corporation elects to take the Puerto Rico economic activity credit or the possession tax credit.

Second exception. Part of the dividends received from a foreign corporation is U.S. source income if 25% or more of its total gross income for the 3-year period ending with the close of its tax year preceding the declaration of dividends was effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. If the corporation was formed less than 3 years before the declaration, use its total gross income for the time it was formed. Determine the part that is U.S. source income by multiplying the dividend by the following fraction.

\text{Foreign corporation’s gross income connected with a U.S. trade or business for the 3-year period} \\
\text{Foreign corporation’s gross income from all sources for that period}

Transportation Income
Transportation income is income from the use of a vessel or aircraft for or for the performance of services directly related to the use of any vessel or aircraft. This is true whether the vessel or aircraft is owned, hired, or leased. The term “vessel or aircraft” includes any container used in connection with a vessel or aircraft.

All income from transportation that begins and ends in the United States is treated as derived from sources in the United States. The only exception to this rule is dividends from a foreign corporation. If the corporation elects the Puerto Rico economic activity credit or possession tax credit.

Scholarships, Grants, Prizes, and Awards
Generally, the source of scholarships, fellowships, grants, prizes, and awards is the residence of the payer regardless of who actually disburses the funds. However, see Activities to be performed outside the United States, later.

For example, payments for research or study in the United States made by the United States, a noncorporate U.S. resident, or a domestic corporation, are from U.S. sources. Similar payments from a foreign government or foreign corporation are foreign source payments even though the funds may be disbursed through a U.S. agent.

Payments made by an entity designated as a public international organization under the International Organizations Immunities Act are from foreign sources.

Personal Services
All wages and any other compensation for services performed in the United States are considered to be from sources in the United States. The only exception to this rule is discussed in chapter 3, under Employees of foreign persons, organizations, or offices.

If your compensation is for personal services performed both inside and outside the United States, you must figure the amount of income that is for services performed in the United States. You usually do this on a time basis. That is, you must include in gross income as U.S. source income the amount that results from multiplying the total amount of compensation by the following fraction.

\text{Number of days you performed services in the United States} \\
\text{Total number of days of service for which you receive payment}

Example. Jean Blanc, a nonresident alien, is a professional hockey player with a U.S. hockey club. Under Jean’s contract, he received $98,500 for 242 days of play during the year. This includes days spent at pre-season training camp, days during the regular season, and playoff game days. Of the 242 days, Jean spent 194 days performing services in the United States and 48 days playing hockey in Canada. Jean’s U.S. source income is $78,963, figured as follows:

\frac{194}{242} \times 98,500 = 78,963

Reenlistment bonus. A reenlistment bonus received by a nonresident alien for reenlistment in the U.S. Navy while in a foreign country is not U.S. source income.

Crew members. Compensation for services performed by a nonresident alien in connection with the individual’s temporary presence in the United States as a regular crew member of a foreign vessel engaged in transportation between the United States and a foreign country or U.S. possession is not U.S. source income.

* Exceptions include:
  a) Dividends paid by a U.S. corporation are foreign source if the corporation elects the Puerto Rico economic activity credit or possessions tax credit.
  b) Part of a dividend paid by a foreign corporation is U.S. source if at least 25% of the corporation’s gross income is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business for the 3 tax years before the year in which the dividends are declared.
Activities to be performed outside the United States. Scholarships, fellowship grants, targeted grants, and achievement awards received by nonresident aliens for activities performed, or to be performed, outside the United States are not U.S. source income.

Pensions and Annuities

When you receive a pension from a domestic trust for services performed both in and outside the United States, the part of the pension payment that is paid from U.S. sources is the other side the United States are not U.S. source income. Generally, this is where title to the property passes to the buyer. For example, income from the sale of inventory property that you produced in the United States and sold outside the United States (or vice versa) is partly from sources outside the United States and partly from sources outside the United States. For information on making this allocation, see section 1.863–3 of the regulations.

Rents or Royalties

Your U.S. source income includes rent and royalty income received during the tax year from property located in the United States or from any interest in that property. U.S. source income also includes rents or royalties for the use of, or for the privilege of using, in the United States, intangible property such as patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, goodwill, trademarks, franchises, and similar property.

Real Property

Real property is land and buildings and generally anything built on, growing on, or attached to land. Gross income from sources in the United States includes gains, profits, and income from the sale or other disposition of real property located in the United States.

Natural resources. The income from the sale of products of any farm, mine, oil or gas well, other natural deposit, or timber located in the United States and sold in a foreign country, or located in a foreign country and sold in the United States, is partly from sources outside the United States. For information on determining that part, see section 1.863–1(b) of the regulations.

Personal Property

Personal property is property, such as machinery, equipment, or furniture, that is not real property. Gain or loss from the sale or exchange of personal property generally has its source in the United States if you have a tax home in the United States. If you do not have a tax home in the United States, the gain or loss generally is considered to be from sources outside the United States.

Tax home. Your tax home is the general area of your main place of business, employment, or post of duty, regardless of where you maintain your family home. Your tax home is the place where you permanently or indefinitely work as an employee or a self-employed individual. If you do not have a regular or main place of business because of the nature of your work, then your tax home is the place where you regularly live. If you do not fit either of these categories, you are considered an itinerant and your tax home is wherever you work.

Inventory property. Inventory property is personal property that is stock in trade or that is held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of your trade or business. Income from the sale of inventory that you purchased is sourced where the property is stored, or when the property is delivered. When you sell inventory property, you allocate this part of the gain to sources outside the United States.

Gain from the sale of depreciable property to the extent that the property was used predominantly in the United States during a tax year, all depreciation deductions allowable for that year are treated as U.S. depreciation adjustments. The rest of this part of the gain is considered to be from sources outside the United States.

For this purpose, “U.S. depreciation adjustments” are the depreciation adjustments to the basis of the property that are attributable to earnings of the trust or estate. Losses recognized when the loss year is treated as U.S. depreciation adjustments. There are some exceptions for certain transportation, communications, and other property used internationally.

Intangible property. Intangible property includes patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, goodwill, trademarks, trade names, or other like property. Income from the sale of intangible property that is contingent on the productivity, use, or disposition of the property is sourced in the country where the property is used. If the income is not contingent on the productivity, use, or disposition of the property, the income is sourced according to the seller’s tax home as discussed earlier. If payments for goodwill do not depend on its productivity, use, or disposition, their source is the country in which the goodwill was generated.

To the extent gain from the sale of an intangible does not exceed its depreciation adjustments, treat the gain as if the intangible were depreciable personal property, discussed earlier.

Community Income

If you are married and you or your spouse are subject to the community property laws of a foreign country, a U.S. state, or a U.S. possession, you generally must follow those laws to determine the income of yourself and your spouse for U.S. tax purposes. But you must disregard certain community property laws if:

1) Both you and your spouse are nonresident aliens, or...
Nonresident aliens may be able to exclude the following items from their gross income.

Interest

U.S. source interest income that is not connected with a U.S. trade or business is excluded from income if it is from:

1) Deposits (including certificates of deposit) with persons in the banking business.

2) Deposits or withdrawable accounts with mutual savings banks, cooperative banks, credit unions, domestic building and loan associations, and other savings institutions chartered and supervised as savings and loan or similar associations under federal or state law (if the interest paid or credited can be deducted by the association), and

3) Amounts held by an insurance company under an agreement to pay interest on them.

Government obligations. Interest on obligations of a state or political subdivision, the District of Columbia, or a U.S. possession, generally is not included in income. However, interest on certain private activity bonds, arbitrage bonds, and certain bonds not in registered form is included in income.

Portfolio interest. U.S. source interest income that is not connected with a U.S. trade or business and that is portfolio interest on obligations issued after July 18, 1984, is excluded from income. Portfolio interest is interest (including original issue discount) that is paid on obligations:

1) Not in registered form (bearer obligations) that are sold only to foreign investors, and the interest on which is payable only outside the United States and its possessions, and that has on its face a statement that any U.S. person holding the obligation will be subject to limitations under the U.S. income tax laws,

2) In registered form that are targeted to foreign markets and the interest on which is paid through financial institutions outside the United States, or

3) In registered form that are not targeted to foreign markets, if you furnished the payer of the interest (or the withholding agent) a statement that you are a U.S. person. You should have made this statement on a Form W–8 or on a substitute form similar to Form W–8. In either case, the statement should have been signed under penalties of perjury, should have been certified that you are not a U.S. citizen or resident, and should have included your name and address.

Form W–8 is not valid after 2000. After 2000, you must make the statement in (3) above on Form W–BBEN or on a substitute form provided by the withholding agent.

Portfolio interest does not include the following types of interest:

1) Interest you receive on an obligation issued by a corporation of which you own, directly or indirectly, 10% or more of the total voting power of all classes of voting stock.

2) Interest you receive on an obligation issued by a partnership of which you own, directly or indirectly, 10% or more of the capital or profits interests.

3) Contingent interest. Portfolio interest does not include contingent interest. Contingent interest is either of the following:

1) Interest that is determined by reference to:

   a) Any receipts, sales, or other cash flow of the debtor or related person,

   b) Income or profits of the debtor or related person,

   c) Any change in value of any property of the debtor or a related person, or

   d) Any dividend, partnership distributions, or similar payments made by the debtor or a related person.
2) Any other type of contingent interest that is identified by the Secretary of the Treasury in regulations.

For the definition of "related person" in connection with any contingent interest, and for the exceptions that apply to interest described in item (1), see subparagraphs (B) and (C) of Internal Revenue Code section 871(h)(4).

Exception for existing debt. Portfolio interest includes any contingent interest paid or accrued on any debt with a fixed term that was issued:

1) On or before April 7, 1993, or
2) After April 7, 1993, pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on that date and at all times thereafter before that debt was issued.

Services Performed for Foreign Employer

If you were paid by a foreign employer, your U.S. source income may be exempt from U.S. tax, but only if you meet one of the situations discussed next.

Employees of foreign persons, organizations, or offices. If three conditions exist, income for personal services performed in the United States as a nonresident alien is not considered to be from U.S. sources and is tax exempt. If you do not meet all three conditions, your income from personal services performed in the United States is U.S. source income and is taxed according to the rules in chapter 4.

The three conditions are:

1) You perform personal services as an employee of or under a contract with a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in a trade or business in the United States; or you work for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or possession of the United States by a U.S. corporation, a U.S. partnership, or a U.S. citizen or resident.
2) You perform these services while you are a nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods of not more than a total of 90 days during the tax year, and
3) Your pay for these services is not more than $3,000.

If your pay for these services is more than $3,000, the entire amount is income from a trade or business within the United States. To find if your pay is more than $3,000, do not include any amounts you get from your employer for advances or reimbursements of business travel expenses, if you were required to and did account to your employer for those expenses. If the advances or reimbursements are more than your expenses, include the excess in your pay for these services.

A day means a calendar day during any part of which you are physically present in the United States.

Example 1. During 2000, Henry Smythe, a nonresident alien from a non-treaty country, worked for an overseas office of a domestic partnership. Henry, who uses the calendar year as his tax year, was temporarily present in the United States for 60 days during 2000 performing personal services for the overseas office of the partnership. That office paid him a total gross salary of $2,800 for those services. During 2000, he was not engaged in a trade or business in the United States. The salary is not considered U.S. source income and is exempt from U.S. tax.

Example 2. The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that Henry’s total gross salary for the services performed in the United States during 2000 was $4,500. He received $2,875 in 2000, and $1,625 in 2001. During 2000, he was engaged in a trade or business in the United States because the compensation for his personal services in the United States was more than $3,000. Henry’s salary is U.S. source income and is taxed under the rules in chapter 4.

Crew members. Compensation for services performed by a nonresident alien in connection with the individual’s temporary presence in the United States as a regular crew member of a foreign vessel engaged in transportation between the United States and a foreign country or U.S. possession is not U.S. source income and is exempt from U.S. tax.

Students and exchange visitors. Nonresident alien students and exchange visitors present in the United States under “F”, “J”, or “Q” visas can exclude from gross income pay received from a foreign employer. This group includes bona fide students, scholars, trainees, teachers, professors, research assistants, specialists, or leaders in a field of specialized knowledge or skill, or persons of similar description. It also includes the alien’s spouse and minor children if they come with the alien or come later to join the alien.

A nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States under a “J” visa includes an alien individual entering the United States as an exchange visitor under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961.

Foreign employer. A foreign employer is:

1) A nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, or
2) An office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a U.S. possession by a domestic corporation, a domestic partnership, or an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States.

The term “foreign employer” does not include a foreign government. Pay from a foreign government that is exempt from U.S. income tax is discussed in chapter 10.

Income from certain annuities. Do not include in income any annuity received under a qualified annuity plan or from a qualified trust exempt from U.S. income tax if you meet both of the following conditions:

1) You receive the annuity only because:
   a) You performed personal services outside the United States while you were a nonresident alien, or
   b) You performed personal services inside the United States while you were a nonresident alien and you

2) At the time the first amount is paid as an annuity under the plan (or by the trust), 90% or more of the employees for whom contributions or benefits are provided under the annuity plan (or under the plan of which the trust is a part) are citizens or residents of the United States.

If the annuity qualifies under condition (1) but not condition (2) above, you do not have to include the amount in income if:

1) You are a resident of a country that gives a substantially equal exclusion to U.S. citizens and residents, or
2) You are a resident of a beneficiary developing country under the Trade Act of 1974.

If you are not sure whether the annuity is from a qualified annuity plan or qualified trust, ask the person who made the payment.

Income affected by treaties. Income of any kind that is exempt from U.S. tax under a treaty to which the United States is a party is excluded from your gross income. Income on which the tax is only limited by treaty, however, is included in gross income. See chapter 9.

Gain From the Sale of Your Main Home

If you sold your main home, you may be able to exclude up to $250,000 of the gain on the sale of your home. If you are married and file a joint return, you may be able to exclude up to $500,000. For information on the requirements for this exclusion, see Publication 523.

This exclusion does not apply to nonresident aliens who are subject to U.S. income tax. See the expatriation tax rules discussed in chapter 4.

Scholarships and Fellowship Grants

If you are a candidate for a degree, you may be able to exclude from your income part of all of the amounts you receive as a qualified scholarship. The rules discussed here apply to both resident and nonresident aliens.

If a nonresident alien receives a grant that is not from U.S. sources, it is not subject to U.S. tax. See Scholarships, Grants, Prizes, and Awards in chapter 2 to determine whether your grant is from U.S. sources.

Qualified scholarship. A qualified scholarship is any amount you receive as a scholarship or fellowship grant that you use according to the conditions of the grant for:

1) Tuition and fees required to enroll in, or to attend, an educational institution, or
2) Fees, books, supplies, and equipment that the educational institution requires for the courses of instruction.
Amounts you receive from a scholarship or fellowship that you use for other expenses, such as room and board or travel, are not excludable from income.

Terms of grant. Your scholarship or fellowship can still qualify as tax free even if the terms do not provide that it only be used for tuition and course-related expenses. It will qualify if you use the grant proceeds for tuition and course-related expenses. However, if the terms of the grant require its use for other purposes, such as room and board, or specify that the grant cannot be used for tuition or course-related expenses, the amounts received under the grant cannot be excluded from income.

Candidate for a degree. The term candidate for a degree means a student (whether full- or part-time) who:

1) Attends a primary or secondary school or is pursuing a degree at a college or university, or
2) Attends an educational institution that is authorized and accredited to provide:
   a) A program that is acceptable for full credit toward a bachelor’s or higher degree, or
   b) A program of training to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation.

Payment for services. You cannot exclude from income the portion of any scholarship, fellowship, or tuition reduction that represents payment for teaching, research, or other services. This is true even if all candidates for a degree are required to perform the services as a condition for receiving the degree.

Example. On January 7, Maria Gomez is notified of a scholarship of $2,500 for the spring semester. As a condition for receiving the scholarship, Maria must serve as a part-time teaching assistant. Of the $2,500 scholarship, $1,000 represents payment for her services. Assuming that Maria meets all other conditions, she can exclude no more than $1,500 from income as a qualified scholarship.

4. How Income of Aliens Is Taxed

Introduction

Resident and nonresident aliens are taxed in different ways. Resident aliens are generally taxed in the same way as U.S. citizens. Nonresident aliens are taxed based on the source of their income and whether or not their income is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. The following discussions will help you determine if income you receive during the tax year is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business and how it is taxed.

Topics

This chapter discusses:

- Income that is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business, and
- Income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business.

Resident Aliens

Resident aliens are generally taxed in the same way as U.S. citizens. This means that their worldwide income is subject to U.S. tax and must be reported on their U.S. tax return. Income of resident aliens is subject to the graduated tax rates that apply to U.S. citizens. Resident aliens use the Tax Table and Tax Rate Schedules located in the Form 1040 instructions, which apply to U.S. citizens.

Nonresident Aliens

A nonresident alien’s income that is subject to U.S. income tax must be divided into two categories:

1) Income that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States, and
2) Income that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States (discussed under The 30% Tax, later).

The difference between these two categories is that effectively connected income, after allowable deductions, is taxed at graduated rates. These are the same rates that apply to U.S. citizens and residents. Income that is not effectively connected is taxed at a flat 30% (or lower treaty) rate.

If you were formerly a U.S. citizen or resident alien, these rules may not apply. See Expatriation Tax, later, in this chapter.

Trade or Business in the United States

Generally, you must be engaged in a trade or business during the tax year to be able to treat income received in that year as effectively connected with that trade or business. Whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States depends on the nature of your activities. The discussions that follow will help you determine whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

Personal Services

If you perform personal services in the United States at any time during the tax year, you are usually considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

TIP

Certain compensation paid to a nonresident alien by a foreign employer is not included in gross income. For more information, see Services Performed for Foreign Employer in chapter 3.

Other Trade or Business Activities

Other examples of being engaged in a trade or business in the United States follow.

Students and trainees. You are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States if you are temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under a “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa. A nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States under a “J” visa includes a nonresident alien individual admitted to the United States as an exchange visitor under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961. The taxable part of any scholarship or fellowship grant that is U.S. source income is treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States.

Business operations. If you own and operate a business in the United States, you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

Partnerships. If you are a member of a partnership that at any time during the tax year is engaged in a trade or business in the United States, you are considered to be engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

Beneficiary of an estate or trust. If you are the beneficiary of an estate or trust that is engaged in a trade or business in the United States, you are treated as being engaged in the same trade or business.

Trading in stocks, securities, and commodities. If your only U.S. business activity is trading in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a U.S. resident broker or other agent, you are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

For transactions in stocks or securities, this applies to any nonresident alien, including a dealer or broker in stocks and securities.

For transactions in commodities, this applies to commodities that are usually traded on an organized commodity exchange and to transactions that are usually carried out at such an exchange.
This discussion does not apply if you have a U.S. office or other fixed place of business at any time during the tax year through which, or by the direction of which, you carry out your transactions in stocks, securities, or commodities.

Trading for a nonresident alien's own account. You are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States if trading for your own account in stocks, securities, or commodities is your only U.S. business activity. This applies even if the trading takes place while you are present in the United States or is done by your employee or your broker or other agent.

This does not apply to trading for your own account if you are a dealer in stocks, securities, or commodities with a fixed place of business in the United States. Determine that based on the facts and circumstances in each case or under the rules given above in Trading in stocks, securities, and commodities.

Effectively Connected Income

If you are engaged in a U.S. trade or business, all income, gain, or loss for the tax year that you get from sources within the United States (other than certain investment income) is treated as effectively connected income. This applies whether or not there is any connection between the income and the trade or business being carried on in the United States during the tax year.

Two tests, described under Investment Income, determine whether certain items of investment income (such as interest, dividends, and royalties) are treated as effectively connected with that business.

In limited circumstances, some kinds of foreign source income may be treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. For a discussion of these rules, see Foreign Income, later.

Investment Income

Investment income from U.S. sources that may or may not be treated as effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business generally falls into the following three categories.

1) Fixed or determinable income (interest, dividends, rents, royalties, premiums, annuities, etc.).

2) Gains (some of which are considered capital gains) from the sale or exchange of the following types of property.
   a) Timber, coal, or domestic iron ore with a retained economic interest.
   b) Patents, copyrights, and similar property on which you receive contingent payments after October 4, 1966.
   c) Patents transferred before October 5, 1966.
   d) Original issue discount obligations.

3) Capital gains (and losses).

Use the two tests, described next, to determine whether an item of U.S. source income falling in one of the three categories above and received during the tax year is effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business. If the tests indicate that the item of income is effectively connected, you must include it with your other effectively connected income. If the item of income is not effectively connected, include it with all other income discussed under the 30% Tax, later, in this chapter.

Asset-use test. This test usually applies to income that is not directly produced by trade or business activities. Under this test, if an item of income is from assets (property) used in, or held for use in, the trade or business in the United States, it is considered effectively connected.

An asset is used in, or held for use in, the trade or business in the United States if the asset is:

1) Held for the principal purpose of promoting the conduct of a trade or business in the United States,
2) Acquired and held in the ordinary course of the trade or business conducted in the United States (for example, an account receivable or note receivable arising from that trade or business), or
3) Otherwise held to meet the present needs of the trade or business in the United States and not its anticipated future needs.

Generally, stock of a corporation is not treated as an asset used in, or held for use in, a trade or business in the United States.

Business-activities test. This test usually applies when income, gain, or loss comes directly from the active conduct of the trade or business. The business-activities test is most important when:

1) Dividends or interest are received by a dealer in stocks or securities,
2) Royalties are received in the trade or business of licensing patents or similar property, or
3) Service fees are earned by a servicing business.

Under this test, if the conduct of the U.S. trade or business was a material factor in producing the income, the income is considered effectively connected.

Personal Service Income

You usually are engaged in a U.S. trade or business when you perform personal services in the United States. Personal service income you receive in a tax year in which you are engaged in a U.S. trade or business is treated as effectively connected income.

You are engaged in a U.S. trade or business if you are present in the United States during the tax year and you receive personal services in the United States during the tax year, income and gains from assets, and gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets are generally not effectively connected with your trade or business. However, if there is a direct economic relationship between your holding of the asset and your trade or business of performing personal services, the income, gain, or loss is effectively connected.

Pensions. If you were engaged in a U.S. trade or business in a tax year because you performed personal services in the United States, and you later receive a pension or retirement pay as a result of these services, the retirement pay is effectively connected income in each year you receive it. This is true whether or not you are engaged in a U.S. trade or business in the year you receive the retirement pay.

Transportation Income

Transportation income is effectively connected if you meet the following two conditions.

1) You had a fixed place of business in the United States involved in earning the income.
2) At least 90% of your U.S. source transportation income is attributable to regularly scheduled transportation.

“Fixed place of business” generally means a place, site, structure, or other similar facility through which you engage in a trade or business. “Regularly scheduled transportation” means that a ship or aircraft follows a published schedule with repeat sailings or flights at regular intervals between the same points for voyages or flights that begin or end in the United States. This definition applies to both scheduled and chartered air transportation.

If you do not meet the two conditions above, the income is not effectively connected and different rules apply. See Transportation Tax, later, in this chapter.

Business Profits and Losses and Sales Transactions

All profits or losses from U.S. sources that are from the operation of a business in the United States are effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business in the United States. For example, profit from the sale in the United States of inventory property purchased either in this country or in a foreign country is effectively connected trade or business income. A share of U.S. source profits or losses of a partnership that is engaged in a trade or business in the United States is also effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States.

Real Property Gain or Loss

Gains and losses from the sale or exchange of U.S. real property interests (whether or not they are capital assets) are taxed as if you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States. You must treat the gain or loss as effectively connected with that trade or business.

U.S. real property interest. This is any interest in real property located in the United States or the Virgin Islands or any interest in a domestic corporation that is a U.S. real property holding corporation. Real property includes:

1) Land and unsevered natural products of the land, such as growing crops and timber, and mines, wells, and other natural deposits,

2) Improvements on land, including buildings, other permanent structures, and their structural components, and

3) Personal property associated with the use of real property, such as equipment used in farming, mining, forestry, or construction or property used in lodging facilities or rented office space, unless the personal property is:

a) Disposed of more than one year before or after the disposition of the real property, or

b) Separately sold to persons unrelated either to the seller or to the buyer of the real property.

U.S. real property holding corporation.

A corporation is a U.S. real property holding corporation if the fair market value of the corporation’s U.S. real property interests are at least 50% of the total fair market value of:

1) The corporation’s U.S. real property interests, plus

2) The corporation’s interests in real property located outside the United States, plus

3) The corporation’s other assets that are used in, or held for use in, a trade or business.

You generally are subject to tax on the sale of the stock in any domestic corporation unless you establish that the corporation is not a U.S. real property holding corporation. A U.S. real property generally is not a U.S. real property interest unless the corporation chooses to be treated as a domestic corporation.

Alternative minimum tax. There may be a minimum tax on your net gain from the disposition of U.S. real property interests. Figure the amount of this tax, if any, on Form 6251.

Withholding of tax. If you dispose of a U.S. real property interest, the buyer may have to withhold tax. See the discussion of Tax Withheld on Real Property Sales, in chapter 8.

Foreign Income

Under limited circumstances, you must treat three kinds of foreign source income as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. These circumstances are:

1) You have an office or other fixed place of business in the United States to which the income can be attributed,

2) That office or place of business is a material factor in producing the income, and

3) The income is produced in the ordinary course of the trade or business carried on through that office or other fixed place of business.

An officer or other fixed place of business is a material factor if it significantly contributes to, and is an essential economic element in, the earning of the income.

The three kinds of foreign source income are listed below.

1) Rents and royalties for the use of, or for the privilege of using, intangible personal property located outside the United States or from any interest in such property. Included are rents or royalties for the use, or for the privilege of using, outside the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, goodwill, trademarks, trade brands, franchises, and similar properties if the rents or royalties are from the active conduct of a trade or business in the United States.

2) Dividends or interest from the active conduct of a banking, financing, or similar business in the United States. A substitute dividend or interest payment received under a securities lending transaction or a sale-repurchase transaction is treated the same as the amounts received on the transferred security.

3) Income, gain, or loss from the sale outside the United States, through the U.S. office or other fixed place of business, of stock in a foreign corporation that would be included in inventory if on hand at the end of the tax year, or property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business. This will not apply if you sold the property for use, consumption, or disposition outside the United States and an office or other fixed place of business in a foreign country was a material factor in the sale.

Tax on Effectively Connected Income

Income you receive during the tax year that is effectively connected with your trade or business in the United States is, after allowable deductions, taxed at the rates that apply to U.S. citizens and residents.

Generally, you can receive effectively connected income only if you are a nonresident alien engaged in a trade or business in the United States during the tax year. However, income you receive from the sale or exchange of property, the performance of services, or any other transaction in another tax year is treated as effectively connected in that year if it would have been effectively connected in the year the transaction took place or you performed the services.

Example. Ted Richards, a nonresident alien, entered the United States in August 1999, to perform personal services in the U.S. office of his overseas employer. He worked in the U.S. office until December 25, 1999, but did not leave this country until January 11, 2000. On January 7, 2000, he received his final paycheck for services performed in the United States during 1999. All of Ted’s income during his stay here is U.S. source income.

During 1999, Ted was engaged in the trade or business of performing personal services in the United States. Therefore, all amounts paid to him in 1999 for services performed in the United States during 1999 are effectively connected with that trade or business in 1999.

The salary payment Ted received in January 2000 is U.S. source income to him in 2000. It is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States because he was engaged in a trade or business in the United States during 1999 when he performed the services that earned the income.

Real property income. You may be able to choose to treat all income from real property as effectively connected. See Income From Real Property, later, in this chapter.

The 30% Tax

Tax at a 30% (or lower treaty) rate applies to certain items of income or gains from U.S. sources but only if the items are not effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business.

Fixed or Determinable Income

The 30% (or lower treaty) rate applies to the gross amount of U.S. source fixed or determinable annual or periodic gains, profits, or income.

Income is fixed when it is paid in amounts known ahead of time. Income is determinable whenever there is a basis for figuring the amount to be paid. Income can be periodic if it is paid from time to time. It does not have to be paid annually or at regular intervals. Income can be determinable or periodic even if the length of time during which the payments are made is increased or decreased.

Items specifically included as fixed or determinable income include interest (other than original issue discount), dividends, rents, premiums, annuities, salaries, wages, and other compensation. A substitute dividend or interest payment received under a securities lending transaction or a sale-repurchase transaction is treated the same as the amounts received on the transferred security. Other items of income, such as royalties, also may be subject to the 30% tax.

TIP

Some fixed or determinable income may be exempt from U.S. tax. See chapter 3 if you are not sure whether the income is taxable.

Original issue discount. If you sold, exchanged, or received a payment on a bond or other debt instrument that was issued at a discount after March 31, 1972, all or part of the original issue discount (OID) (other than portfolio interest) may be subject to the 30% tax. The amount of OID is the difference between the stated redemption price at maturity and the issue price of the debt instrument. The 30% tax applies in the following circumstances:

1) You received a payment on an obligation. In this case, the amount of OID subject to tax is the OID that accrued while you held the obligation minus the OID previously taken into account. But the tax on the OID cannot be more than the payment minus the tax on the interest payment on the obligation.

2) You sold or exchanged the obligation. The amount of OID subject to tax is the OID that accrued while you held the obligation minus the amount already taxed in (1) above.

Report on your return the amount of OID shown on Form 1042–S, Foreign Person’s U.S. Source Income Subject to Withholding, if you bought the debt instrument at original issue. However, you must recompute your proper share of OID shown on Form 1042–S if any of the following apply.

1) You bought the obligation at a premium or paid an acquisition premium.
2) The obligation is a stripped bond or a stripped coupon (including zero coupon instruments backed by U.S. Treasury securities).
3) You receive a Form 1042–S as a nominee recipient.

For the definition of premium and acquisition premium and instructions on how to recompute OID, get Publication 1212. If you held a bond or other debt instrument that was issued at a discount before April 1, 1972, contact the IRS for further information. See chapter 12.

Social Security Benefits
A nonresident alien must include 85% of any U.S. social security benefit (and the social security equivalent part of a tier 1 railroad retirement benefit) in U.S. source fixed or determinable annual or periodic income. This income is exempt under some tax treaties. See Table 1 in Publication 901, U.S. Tax Treaties, for a list of tax treaties that exempt U.S. social security benefits from U.S. tax.

Sales or Exchanges of Capital Assets
These rules apply only to those capital gains and losses from sources in the United States that are effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. They apply even if you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States. These rules do not apply to the sale or exchange of a U.S. real property interest or to the sale of any property that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. See Real Property Gain or Loss, earlier, under Effectively Connected Income.

A capital asset is everything you own except:

- Inventory.
- Business accounts or notes receivable.
- Depreciable property used in a trade or business.
- Real property used in a trade or business.
- Supplies regularly used in a trade or business.
- Certain copyrights, literary or musical or artistic compositions, letters or memora- nda, or similar property.
- Certain U.S. government publications.
- Certain commodities derivative financial instruments held by a commodities der- ivatives dealer.
- Hedging transactions.

A capital gain is a gain on the sale or exchange of a capital asset. A capital loss is a loss on the sale or exchange of a capital asset.

You may want to read Publication 544. However, use Publication 544 only to determine what is a sale or exchange of a capital asset, or what is treated as such. Specific tax treatment that applies to U.S. citizens or residents generally does not apply to you.

The following gains are subject to the 30% (or lower treaty) rate without regard to the 183-day rule, discussed later.

1) Gains on the disposal of timber, coal, or domestic iron ore with a retained economic interest.
2) Gains on contingent payments received from the sale or exchange of patents, copyrights, and similar property after October 4, 1966.
3) Gains on certain transfers of all substantial rights to, or an undivided interest in, patents if the transfers were made before October 4, 1966.
4) Gains on the sale or exchange of original issue discount obligations.

Gains in (1) are not subject to the 30% (or lower treaty) rate if you choose to treat the gains as effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. See Income From Real Property, later.

183-day rule. If you were in the United States for 183 days or more during the tax year, your net gain from sales or exchanges of capital assets is taxed at a 30% (or lower treaty) rate. For purposes of the 30% (or lower treaty) rate, net gain is the excess of your capital gains from U.S. sources over your capital losses from U.S. sources. This rule applies even if any of the transactions occurred while you were not in the United States.

To determine your net gain, consider the amount of your gains and losses that would be recognized and taken into account only if, and to the extent that, they would be recognized and taken into account if you were in a U.S. trade or business during the year and the gains and losses were effectively connected with that trade or business during the tax year. Also take into account, in arriving at your net gain, all gains and losses treated under U.S. tax law as gains or losses from the sales or exchanges of capital assets.

In arriving at your net gain, do not take the following into consideration:

- The four types of gains listed earlier.
- The deduction for a capital loss carryover.
- Capital losses in excess of capital gains.
- Exclusion for gain from the sale or exchange of qualified small business stock (section 1202 exclusion).
- Losses from the sale or exchange of property held for personal use. However, losses resulting from casualties or thefts may be deductible on Schedule A (Form 1040). See Itemized Deductions in chapter 5.

If you are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States and have not established a tax year for a prior period, your tax year will be the calendar year for purposes of the 183-day rule. Also, you must file your tax return on a calendar-year basis.

If you were in the United States for less than 183 days during the tax year, capital gains (other than gains listed earlier) are tax exempt unless they are effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States during your tax year.

Reporting. Report your gains and losses from the sales or exchanges of capital assets that are not connected with a trade or business in the United States on page 4 of Form 1040NR. Report gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets (including real property) that are connected with a trade or business in the United States on a separate Schedule D (Form 1040) and attach it to Form 1040NR.

Income From Real Property
If you have income from real property located in the United States that you own or have an interest in and hold for the production of income, you may choose to treat all income from that property as income effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. The choice applies to all income from real property located in the United States and held for the production of income and to all income from any interest in such property. This includes income from rents, royalties from mines, oil or gas wells, or other natural resources. It also includes gains from the sale or exchange of real property and from the sale or exchange of timber, coal, or domestic iron ore with a retained economic interest.

You can make this choice only for real property income that is not otherwise connected with your U.S. trade or business.

If you make the choice, you can claim deductions attributable to the real property income and only your net income from real property is taxed. This choice does not treat a nonresident alien, who is not otherwise engaged in a U.S. trade or business, as being engaged in a trade or business in the United States during the year.

Making the choice. Make the initial choice by attaching a Form 8824, Real Property Held for the Production of Income, to your U.S. return, or amended return, for the year of the choice. Include in your statement:

1) A complete list of all your real property, or any interest in real property, located in the United States.
2) The extent of your ownership in the property.
3) The location of the property.
4) A description of any major improvements to the property, and
5) Details of any previous choices and revocations of the real property income choice.

This choice stays in effect for all later tax years unless you revoke it.

Revoking the choice. You can revoke the choice without IRS approval by filing Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, for the year you made the choice and for later tax years. You must file Form 1040X within 3 years from the date your return was filed or 2 years from the time the tax was paid, whichever is later. If this time period has expired for the year of choice, you cannot re-voke the choice for that year. However, you may revoke the choice for later tax years only if you have IRS approval. For information on how to get IRS approval, see Regulation section 1.971–10(d)(2).
Transportation Tax

If you have transportation income that is not effectively connected (see Transportation Income, earlier in this chapter), a 4% tax rate applies. If you receive transportation income subject to the 4% tax, you should figure the tax and show it on line 52 of Form 1040NR. Attach a statement to your return that includes the following information (if applicable):

1) Your name, taxpayer identification number, and tax year,
2) A description of the types of services performed (whether on or off board),
3) Names of vessels or registration numbers of aircraft on which you performed the services,
4) Amount of U.S. source transportation income derived from each type of service for each vessel or aircraft for the calendar year, and
5) Total amount of U.S. source transportation income derived from all types of services for the calendar year.

This 4% tax applies to your U.S. source gross transportation income. This only includes transportation income that is treated as derived from sources in the United States if the transportation begins or ends in the United States. For transportation income from personal services, the transportation must be between the United States and a U.S. possession. For personal services of a nonresident alien, this only applies to income derived from, or in connection with, an aircraft.

Expatriation Tax

The expatriation tax provisions apply to U.S. citizens who have renounced their citizenship and long-term residents who have ended their residency, if one of the principal purposes of the action is the avoidance of U.S. taxes. The expatriation tax applies to the 10-year period following the date of the action.

If you expatriated in 2000, you are presumed to have tax avoidance as a principal purpose if:

1) Your average annual net income tax for the last five tax years ending before the date of the action is more than $112,000, or
2) Your net worth on the date of the action is $562,000 or more.

Ruling request. If you are presumed to have tax avoidance as a principal purpose because you meet either of the previous tests, you may be eligible to request a ruling from the IRS that you did not expatriate to avoid U.S. taxes. You must request this ruling within one year from the date of expatriation. For information that must be included in your ruling request, see section IV of Notice 97–19 in Cumulative Bulletin 1997–1 and Notice 98–34 in Cumulative Bulletin 1998–2.

Former U.S. citizen. If you are a former U.S. citizen, you are eligible to request a ruling if you are in one of the following categories:

1) You became at birth a U.S. citizen and a citizen of another country and continue to be a citizen of that other country.
2) You become (within a reasonable period after loss of U.S. citizenship) a citizen of the country in which you, your spouse, or one of your parents were born.
3) You were present in the United States for no more than 30 days during each year of the 10-year period ending on the date of expatriation.
4) You lost your U.S. citizenship before reaching age 18½.

Former long-term resident. If you are a former long-term resident, you are eligible to request a ruling if you are in one of the following categories:

1) You become (within a reasonable period after your expatriation) a resident fully liable to income tax in one of the following countries.
   a) The country in which you were born.
   b) The country where your spouse was born.
   c) The country where either of your parents was born.
2) You were present in the United States for no more than 30 days during each year of the 10-year period prior to expatriation.
3) You ceased to be a long-term resident before reaching age 18½.

You will not qualify under category (1) if you are not domiciled in that country unless your income is taxed in the same manner as a resident domiciled in that country.

Long-term residents. You are a long-term resident if you were a lawful permanent resident of the United States in at least 8 of the last 15 tax years ending with the year your residency ends. In determining if you meet the 8-year requirement, do not count any year that you are treated as a resident of a foreign country under a tax treaty and do not waive treaty benefits.

Your U.S. residency is considered to have ended when you cease to be a lawful permanent resident or you begin to be treated as a resident of another country under a tax treaty and do not waive treaty benefits.

Tax. If the expatriation tax applies to you, you are generally subject to tax on your U.S. source gross income and gains on a net basis at the graduated rates applicable to individuals (with allowable deductions), unless you would be subject to a higher tax under the 30% tax (discussed earlier) on income not connected with a U.S. trade or business. In making this determination, you may not claim that an income tax treaty in effect on August 21, 1996, reduces your tax liability under the 30% tax on any items of U.S. source income.

For this purpose, U.S. source gross income (defined in chapter 2) includes gains from the sale or exchange of:

- Property (other than stock or debt obligations) located in the United States,
- Stock issued by a U.S. domestic corporation, and
- Debt obligations of U.S. persons or of the United States, a state or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia.

U.S. source income also includes any income or gain derived from stock in certain controlled foreign corporations if you owned, or were considered to own, at any time during the 2-year period ending on the date of expatriation, more than 50% of:

- The total combined voting power of all classes of that corporation’s stock, or
- The total value of the stock.

The income or gain is considered U.S. source income only to the extent of your share of earnings and profits earned or accumulated before the date of expatriation.

Any exchange of property is treated as a sale of the property at its fair market value on the date of the exchange and any gain is treated as U.S. source gross income in the tax year of the exchange unless you enter into a gain recognition agreement under Notice 97–19.

Other information. For more information on the expatriation tax provisions, including exceptions to the tax and special U.S. source rules, see section 877 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Reporting Requirements

If you lost your U.S. citizenship, you must file Form 8854, Expatriation Information Statement, with a consular office or a federal court at the time of loss of citizenship. If you end your long-term residency, you must file Form 8854 with the Internal Revenue Service when you file your tax return for the year your residency ends.

Penalties. If you fail to file Form 8854, you may have to pay a penalty equal to the greater of 5% of the expatriation tax or $1,000. The penalty will be assessed for each year during which your failure to file continues for the 10-year period. The penalty will not be imposed if you can show that the failure is due to reasonable cause and not willful neglect.

Expatriation tax return. If you are subject to the expatriation tax, you must file Form 1040NR for each year of the 10-year period following expatriation. Complete line “P” on page 5 of Form 1040NR. See Special Rules for Former U.S. Citizens and Former U.S. Long-Term Residents in the instructions for Form 1040NR. You must attach Form 8854 and a statement to Form 1040NR listing, by category (dividends, interest, etc.), all items of U.S. and foreign source income, whether or not taxable in the United States.

If you do not attach a complete statement in any year you are liable for any U.S. taxes, you will not be considered to have filed a true and accurate return. You will not be entitled to any tax deductions or credits if your tax liability for that year is later adjusted.

Interrupted Period of Residence

You are subject to tax under a special rule if you interrupt your period of U.S. residence with a period of nonresidence. The special rule applies if you meet all of the following conditions:

1) You were a U.S. resident for a period that includes at least 3 consecutive calendar years.
2) You were a U.S. resident for at least 183 days in each of those years.
3) You ceased to be treated as a U.S. resident.
4) You then again became a U.S. resident before the end of the third calendar year after the period described in (1) above.

Under this special rule, you are subject to tax on your U.S. source gross income and gains on a net basis at the graduated rates applicable to individuals (with allowable deductions) for the period you were a nonresident alien, unless you would be subject to a higher tax under the 30% tax (discussed earlier) on income not connected with a U.S. trade or business.

Example. John Willow, a citizen of New Zealand, entered the United States on April 1, 1995, as a lawful permanent resident. On August 1, 1997, John ceased to be a lawful permanent resident and returned to New Zealand. During his period of residence, he was present in the United States for at least 183 days in each of three consecutive years (1995, 1996, and 1997). He returned to the United States on October 5, 2000, as a lawful permanent resident. He became a resident before the close of the third calendar year (2000) beginning after the end of his first period of residence (August 1, 1997). Therefore, he is subject to tax under the special rule for the period of nonresidence (August 2, 1997, through October 4, 2000) if it is more than the tax that would normally apply to him as a nonresident alien.

Reporting requirements. If you are subject to this tax for any year in the period you were a nonresident alien, you must file Form 1040NR for that year. The return is due by the due date (including extensions) for filing your U.S. income tax return for the year that you again become a U.S. resident. If you already filed returns for that period, you must file amended returns. You must attach a statement to your return that identifies the source of all of your U.S. and foreign gross income and the items of income subject to this special rule.

Figuring Your Tax

Introduction
After you have determined your alien status, the source of your income, and if and how that income is taxed in the United States, your next step is to figure your tax. The information in this chapter is not as comprehensive for resident aliens as it is for nonresident aliens. Resident aliens should get publications, forms, and instructions for U.S. citizens, because the information for filing returns for resident aliens is generally the same as for U.S. citizens.

If you are both a nonresident alien and a resident alien in the same tax year, see chapter 6 for a discussion of dual-status aliens.

Topics
This chapter discusses:
- Identification numbers,
- Filing status,
- Deductions,
- Exemptions,
- Tax credits and payments, and

Tax Year
You must figure your income and file a tax return on the basis of an annual accounting period called a tax year. If you have not previously established a fiscal tax year, your tax year is the calendar year. A calendar year is 12 consecutive months ending on December 31. If you have previously established a regular fiscal year (12 consecutive months ending on the last day of a month other than December or a 52–53 week year) and are considered to be a U.S. resident for any calendar year, you will be treated as a U.S. resident for any part of your fiscal year that falls within that calendar year.

Identification Number
A taxpayer identification number must be furnished on returns, statements, and other tax-related documents. For an individual, this is a social security number (SSN). If you do not have and are not eligible to get an SSN, the IRS will issue you an individual taxpayer identification number (ITIN). An employer identification number (EIN) is required if you are engaged in a trade or business as a sole proprietor and have employees or a qualified retirement plan.

You must furnish a taxpayer identification number if you are:
1) An alien who has income effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business at any time during the year,
2) An alien who has a U.S. office or place of business at any time during the year,
3) A nonresident alien spouse treated as a resident, as discussed in chapter 1, or
4) Any other alien who files a tax return, an amended return, or a refund claim (but not information returns).

Social security number. Generally, you can get an SSN if you have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence or under other immigration categories that authorize U.S. employment. To apply for this number, get Form SS–5, Application for a Social Security Card, from your local Social Security Administration office or call the SSA at 1–800–772–1213. The completed form should be returned to the SSA. It usually takes about 2 weeks to get an SSN.

Individual taxpayer identification number. If you are not eligible to obtain an SSN, you must get an ITIN. Enter your ITIN wherever an SSN is required on your tax return.

You cannot claim the earned income credit, discussed later, using an ITIN. You and your spouse (if filing a joint return) and any qualifying child must have work-related SSNs. If your social security card (or your spouse’s or child’s card) says “NOT VALID FOR EMPLOYMENT,” you cannot claim the earned income credit.

ITINs are for tax use only. They do not affect your immigration status or your right to be legally employed in the United States. To apply for an ITIN, file Form W–7 with the IRS. It usually takes about 30 days to get an ITIN.

In addition to those aliens who are required to furnish a taxpayer identification number and are not eligible for an SSN, a Form W–7 should be filed for:
- Alien individuals who are claimed as dependents and are not eligible for an SSN, and
- Alien individual spouses who are claimed as exemptions and are not eligible for an SSN.

Employer identification number. An individual may use an SSN (or ITIN) for individual taxes and an EIN for business taxes. To apply
Filing Status

The amount of your tax depends on your filing status. Your filing status is important in determining whether you can take certain deductions and credits. The rules for determining your filing status are different for resident aliens and nonresident aliens.

Resident Aliens

Resident aliens can use the same filing statuses as U.S. citizens. See your form instructions or Publication 501 for more information on filing status.

Married filing jointly. Generally, you can file as married filing jointly only if both you and your spouse were resident aliens for the entire tax year, or if you make one of the choices discussed in chapter 1 to treat your spouse as a resident alien for the entire tax year.

Qualifying widow(er). If your spouse died in 1998 or 1999, you have not remarried, and you have a dependent child living with you, you may qualify to file as a qualifying widow(er) and use the joint return tax rates. This applies only if you could have filed a joint return with your spouse for the year your spouse died.

Head of household. You can qualify as head of household if you are unmarried for head of household purposes because you are a nonresident alien, your spouse may still be considered married for purposes of the earned income credit. In that case, your spouse will not be entitled to the credit. See Publication 501 for more information.

Married filing separately. Married nonresident aliens who are not married to U.S. citizens or residents generally must use the Tax Table column or the Tax Rate Schedule for married filing separate returns when determining the tax on income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. They normally cannot use the Tax Table column or the Tax Rate Schedule for single individuals. However, if you are a married resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea, or a married U.S. national, you may be able to file as single if you lived apart from your spouse during the last 6 months of the year. See the instructions for Form 1040NR to see if you qualify. U.S. national was defined earlier in this section under Qualifying widow(er).

Nonresident Aliens

If you are a nonresident alien filing Form 1040NR, you may be able to use one of the filing statuses discussed below. If you are filing Form 1040NR–EZ, you can only claim “Single nonresident alien” or “Married nonresident alien” as your filing status.

Married filing jointly. Generally, you cannot file as married filing jointly if either spouse was a nonresident alien at any time during the tax year.

However, nonresident aliens married to U.S. citizens or residents can choose to be treated as U.S. residents and file joint returns. For more information on these choices, see chapter 1.

Qualifying widow(er). You may be eligible to file as a qualifying widow(er) and use the joint return tax rates if:

1. You were a resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea, or a U.S. national (defined below),
2. Your spouse died in 1998 or 1999 and you have not remarried, and
3. You have a dependent child living with you.

See the instructions for Form 1040NR for the rules for filing as a qualifying widow(er) with a dependent child. A U.S. national is an individual who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes his or her allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals include American Samoans and Northern Mariana Islanders who chose to become U.S. nationals instead of U.S. citizens.

Head of household. You cannot file as head of household if you are a nonresident alien at any time during the tax year. However, if you are married, your spouse can qualify as a head of household if:

1. Your spouse is a resident alien or U.S. citizen for the entire tax year,
2. You do not choose to be treated as a resident alien, and
3. Your spouse meets the other requirements for this filing status, as discussed earlier under Resident Aliens.

Note. Even if your spouse is considered unmarried for head of household purposes because you are a nonresident alien, your spouse may still be considered married for purposes of the earned income credit. In that case, your spouse will not be entitled to the credit. See Publication 501 for more information.

Nonresident Aliens

You can claim the same deductions allowed to U.S. citizens if you are a resident alien for the entire tax year. While the discussion that follows contains some of the same general rules and guidelines that apply to you, it is specifically directed toward nonresident aliens. You should get Form 1040 and instructions for more information on how to claim your allowable deductions.

Reporting Your Income

You must report each item of income that is taxable according to the rules in chapters 2, 3, and 4. For resident aliens, this includes income from sources both within and outside the United States. For nonresident aliens, this includes both income that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States (subject to graduated tax rates) and income from U.S. sources that is not effectively connected (subject to a flat 30% tax rate or lower tax treaty rate).

Deductions

Resident and nonresident aliens can claim similar deductions on their U.S. tax returns. However, nonresident aliens generally can claim only deductions related to income that is effectively connected with their U.S. trade or business.

Resident Aliens

You can claim the same deductions allowed to U.S. citizens if you are a resident alien for the entire tax year. The deduction for travel expenses while in the United States is discussed under Itemized Deductions, later. For information about other business expenses, see Publication 535.

Nonresident Aliens

You can claim deductions to figure your effectively connected taxable income. You generally cannot claim deductions related to income that is not connected with your U.S. business activities. Except for personal exemptions, and certain itemized deductions, discussed later, you can claim deductions only to the extent they are connected with your effectively connected income.

Ordinary and necessary business expenses. You can deduct all ordinary and necessary expenses in the operation of your U.S. trade or business to the extent they relate to income effectively connected with that trade or business. The deduction for travel expenses while in the United States is discussed under Itemized Deductions, later. For information about other business expenses, see Publication 535.

Losses. You can deduct losses resulting from transactions that you entered into for profit and that you were not reimbursed for by insurance, etc., to the extent that they relate to income that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States.

Individual retirement arrangement (IRA). You may qualify to establish a traditional IRA whether or not you are covered by a qualified retirement plan at work. You can contribute the smaller of $2,000 or your taxable compensation effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business to an IRA each year. If you or your spouse are covered by a plan at work, or you are self-employed and had a SEP, SIMPLE, or qualified retirement plan, you can only deduct these contributions subject to certain limits.

For more information, see Publication 590, Individual Retirement Arrangements (IRAs) (Including Roth IRAs and Education IRAs).

Moving expenses. If you are a nonresident alien temporarily in the United States earning taxable income for performing personal services, you can deduct moving expenses to the United States if you meet both of the following tests.

1) You are a full-time employee for at least 39 weeks during the 12 months after you move, or if you are self-employed, you work full time for at least 39 weeks during the first 12 months and 78 weeks during the first 24 months after you move.

2) Your new job location is at least 50 miles farther (by the shortest commonly traveled route) from your former home than your former job location was. If you had no former job location, the new job location must be at least 50 miles from your former home.

You cannot deduct the moving expense you have when returning to your home abroad or moving to a foreign job site. Figure your deductible moving expenses to the United States on Form 3903, and deduct them on line 27 of Form 1040NR.

For more information on the moving expense deduction, see Publication 521.

Reimbursements. If you were reimbursed by your employer for allowable moving expenses, your employer should have excluded these reimbursements from your income. You can only deduct allowable moving expenses that were not reimbursed by your employer or that were reimbursed but the reimbursement was included in your income. For more information, see Publication 521.

Moving expense or travel expense. If you deduct moving expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States, you cannot also deduct travel expenses to the United States.

Example. Mr. Sato, a nonresident alien who is a resident of Japan, lives temporarily in the United States with his wife and two children. During the tax year he receives U.S. compensation of $9,000. He also receives $3,000 of income from sources outside the United States that is not effectively connected with his U.S. trade or business. Thus, his total income for the year is $12,000. Mr. Sato meets all requirements for claiming exemptions for his spouse and two children.

The additional deduction is $6,300 figured as follows:

\text{Additional Deduction} = \frac{\text{U.S. source gross income}}{2} = \frac{12,000}{2} = 6,000

\text{Adjusted Gross Income} = \text{U.S. source gross income} - \text{foreign earned income} = 12,000 - 3,000 = 9,000

\text{Phase-out of exemptions} = \frac{\text{Adjusted Gross Income}}{2} = \frac{9,000}{2} = 4,500

\text{Foreign Earned Income Exclusion} = \text{U.S. source gross income} - \text{foreign earned income} = 12,000 - 3,000 = 9,000

\text{Phase-out Limit} = \frac{\text{Foreign Earned Income Exclusion}}{2} = \frac{9,000}{2} = 4,500

\text{Exemption Phase-out} = \frac{\text{Phase-out Limit}}{2} = \frac{4,500}{2} = 2,250

\text{Phase-out of Exemptions} = \frac{\text{Adjusted Gross Income}}{2} - \text{Exemption Phase-out} = \frac{9,000}{2} - 2,250 = 4,500 - 2,250 = 2,250

\text{Total Deduction} = \text{Phase-out of Exemptions} + \text{Foreign Earned Income Exclusion} = 2,250 + 9,000 = 11,250

\text{Phase-out of Exemptions} = \frac{\text{Adjusted Gross Income}}{2} - \text{Exemption Phase-out} = \frac{9,000}{2} - 2,250 = 4,500 - 2,250 = 2,250

\text{Total Deduction} = \text{Phase-out of Exemptions} + \text{Foreign Earned Income Exclusion} = 2,250 + 9,000 = 11,250 during the year and is not the dependent of another taxpayer.

You can claim exemptions for each of your dependents not admitted to the United States on "F-2," "J-2," or "M-2" visas if they meet the same rules that apply to U.S. citizens. See Publication 501 for these rules.

List your spouse and dependents on line 7c of Form 1040NR. Enter the total on the appropriate line to the right of line 7c.

Phase-out of exemptions. If the adjusted gross income shown on line 33 of Form 1040NR is more than the amount shown below for your filing status, your deduction for exemptions may be reduced or eliminated. Use the worksheet in the Form 1040NR instructions to figure the amount, if any, you can deduct.

- $96,700 if married filing separately
- $128,950 if single
- $193,400 if a qualifying widow(er) with dependent child

Itemized Deductions

Nonresident aliens can claim some of the same itemized deductions that resident aliens can claim. However, nonresident aliens can claim itemized deductions only if they have income effectively connected with their U.S. trade or business.

Resident and nonresident aliens may not be able to claim all of their itemized deductions. If your adjusted gross income is more than $128,950 ($64,475 if married filing separately), use the worksheet in your income tax return instructions to figure the amount you can deduct.

Resident Aliens

You can claim the same itemized deductions as U.S. citizens, using Schedule A of Form 1040. These deductions include certain medical and dental expenses, state and local income taxes, real estate taxes, interest you paid on a home mortgage, charitable contributions, casualty and theft losses, and miscellaneous deductions.

If you do not itemize your deductions, you can claim the standard deduction for your particular filing status. For further information, see Form 1040 and instructions.

Nonresident Aliens

You can deduct certain itemized deductions if you receive income effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business. These deductions include state and local income taxes, charitable contributions to U.S. organizations, casualty and theft losses, and miscellaneous deductions. Use Schedule A of Form 1040NR to claim itemized deductions.

If you are filing Form 1040NR–EZ, you can only claim a deduction for state or local income taxes. If you are claiming any other deduction, you must file Form 1040NR.

Standard deduction. Nonresident aliens cannot claim the standard deduction. However, see Students and business apprentices from India, next.

Students and business apprentices from India. A special rule applies to students and business apprentices who are eligible for the benefits of Article 21(2) of the United States–India Income Tax Treaty. You can claim the standard deduction provided you do not claim itemized deductions.

Use Table 7, 8, or 9 in Publication 501 to figure your standard deduction. If you are a married taxpayer and your spouse files a return and itemizes deductions, you cannot take the standard deduction.

If you are filing Form 1040NR, enter the standard deduction on line 35 of Form 1040NR. In the space to the left of line 35, print, "Standard Deduction Allowed Under U.S.–India Income Tax Treaty." If you are filing Form 1040NR–EZ, enter the amount on line 11.

State and local income taxes. If during the tax year, you receive income that is connected with a trade or business in the United States, you can deduct state and local income taxes you paid on that income.

Charitable contributions. You can deduct your charitable contributions or gifts to qualified organizations subject to certain limits. Qualified organizations include organizations that are religious, charitable, educational, scientific, or literary in nature, or that work to prevent cruelty to children or animals. Certain organizations that promote national or international amateur sports competition are also qualified organizations.

Foreign organizations. Contributions made directly to a foreign organization are not deductible. However, you can deduct contributions to a U.S. organization that transfers funds to a charitable foreign organization if the U.S. organization controls the use of the funds or if the foreign organization is only an administrative arm of the U.S. organization.

For more information about organizations that qualify to receive charitable contributions, see Publication 526, Charitable Contributions.

Contributions from which you benefit.

If you receive a benefit as a result of making a contribution to a qualified organization, you can deduct only the amount of your contribution that is more than the value of the benefit you receive.

If you pay more than the fair market value to a qualified organization for merchandise, goods, or services, the amount you pay that is more than the value of the item can be a charitable contribution. For the excess amount to qualify, you must pay it with the intent to make a charitable contribution.

Contributions of $250 or more. You may deduct a contribution of $250 or more only if you have a written statement from the charitable organization showing:

1) The amount of any money contributed and a description (but not value) of any property donated.

2) Whether the organization did or did not give you any goods or services in return for your contribution, and

3) A description and estimate of the value of any goods or services described in (2).

If you received only intangible religious benefits, the organization must state this, but it does not have to describe or value the benefit.

Contributions of appreciated property.

If you contribute property with a fair market value that is more than your basis in it, you may have to reduce the fair market value by the amount of appreciation (increase in value) when you figure your deduction. Your basis in the property is generally what you paid for it. If you need more information about basis, get Publication 551.

Different rules apply to figuring your deduction, depending on whether the property is:

1) Ordinary income property, or

2) Capital gain property.

Limit. The amount you can deduct in a tax year is limited in the same way it is for a citizen or resident of the United States. For a discussion of limits on charitable contributions and other information, get Publication 556.

Casualty and theft losses. You can deduct your loss from fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, or theft of property even though your property is not connected with a U.S. trade or business. The property can be personal use property or income-producing property not connected with a U.S. trade or business. The property must be located in the United States at the time of the casualty or theft. You can deduct theft losses only in the year in which you discover the loss.

The fair market value of the property immediately before the casualty or theft less its fair market value immediately after the casualty or theft (but not more than its cost or adjusted basis) less any insurance or other compensation is the amount of the loss. The fair market value of property immediately after a theft is considered zero, since you no longer have the property.

If your property is covered by insurance, you should file a timely insurance claim for reimbursement. If you do not, you cannot deduct this loss as a casualty or theft loss.

Losses from personal use property. You cannot deduct the first $100 of each casualty or theft loss to property held for personal use. You can deduct only the total of these losses for the year that is more than 10% of your adjusted gross income (line 33, Form 1040NR) for the year.

Losses from income-producing property. These losses are not subject to the limitations that apply to personal use property. Use Section B of Form 4684 to figure your deduction for these losses.

Job expenses and other miscellaneous deductions. You can deduct job expenses, such as allowable unreimbursed travel expenses (discussed next), and other miscellaneous deductions. Generally, the allowable deductions must be related to effectively connected income. Deductible expenses include:

- Union dues,

- Safety equipment and small tools needed for your job,

- Dues to professional organizations,

- Subscriptions to professional journals, and

- Tax return preparation fees.

Most miscellaneous deductions are deductible only if they are more than 2% of your adjusted gross income (line 33, Form
Travel expenses. You may be able to deduct your ordinary and necessary travel expenses while you are temporarily performing personal services in the United States. Generally, a temporary assignment in a single location is one that is realistically expected to last (and does in fact last) for one year or less. You must be able to show you were present in the United States on an activity that required your temporary absence from your regular place of business. For example, if you have established a "tax home" through regular employment in a foreign country, and intend to return to similar employment in the same country at the end of your temporary stay in the United States, you can deduct reasonable travel expenses you paid. You cannot deduct travel expenses for other members of your family or party.

Deductible travel expenses. If you qualify, you can deduct your expenses for:

1) Transportation—airfare, local transportation, including train, bus, etc.,
2) Lodging—rent paid, utilities (do not include telephone), hotel or motel room expenses, and
3) Meal expenses—actual expenses allowed if you keep records of the amounts, or, if you do not wish to keep detailed records, you are generally allowed a standard meal allowance amount depending on the date and area of your travel. You can deduct only 50% of unreimbursed meal expenses. The standard meal allowance rates are given in Publication 1542, Per Diem Rates (For Travel Within the Continental United States).

Use Form 2106 or 2106–EZ to figure your allowable expenses that you claim on line 9 of Schedule A (Form 1040NR).

Expenses allocable to U.S. tax-exempt income. You cannot deduct an expense, or part of an expense, that is allocable to U.S. tax-exempt income, including income exempt by tax treaty.

Example. Irina Oak, a citizen of Poland, resided in the United States for part of the year to acquire business experience from a U.S. company. During her stay in the United States, she received a salary of $8,000 from her Polish employer. She received no other U.S. source income. She spent $3,000 on travel expenses, of which $1,000 were for meals. None of these expenses were reimbursed. Under the tax treaty with Poland, $5,000 of her salary is exempt from U.S. income tax. In filling out Form 2106–EZ, she must reduce her deductible meal expenses by half ($500). She must reduce the remaining $2,500 of travel expenses by 62.5% ($1,563) because 62.5% ($5,000 ÷ $8,000) of her salary is exempt from tax. She enters the remaining $937 on line 9 of Schedule A (Form 1040NR). She completes the remaining lines according to the instructions for Schedule A.

More information. For more information about deductible expenses, reimbursements, and recordkeeping, get Publication 463.

Tax Credits and Payments

This discussion covers tax credits and payments for resident aliens, followed by a discussion of the credits and payments for nonresident aliens.

Resident Aliens

Resident aliens generally claim tax credits and report tax payments, including withholding, using the same rules that apply to U.S. citizens.

The following items are some of the credits you may be able to claim.

Child and dependent care credit. You may be able to take this credit if you pay someone to care for your dependent who is under age 13, or your disabled dependent or disabled spouse, so that you can work or look for work. Generally, you must be able to claim an exemption for your dependent.

For more information, get Publication 503, Child and Dependent Care Expenses, and Form 2441, Child and Dependent Care Expenses.

Credit for the elderly or the disabled. You may qualify for this credit if you are 65 or over or if you are permanently and totally disabled. For more information on this credit, get Publication 524, Credit for the Elderly or the Disabled, and Schedule R (Form 1040).

Child tax credit. You may be able to take this credit if you have a qualifying child. For this credit, a qualifying child is:

- A U.S. citizen, national, or resident alien,
- Is claimed as a dependent on your tax return,
- Is your son, daughter, adopted child, grandchild, stepchild, or foster child, and
- Was under age 17 at the end of the year.

Use the Child Tax Credit Worksheet in your form instructions to figure the amount of your credit.

Education credits. You may qualify for these credits if you paid qualified tuition and related expenses for yourself, your spouse, or your dependent. There are two education credits: the Hope credit and the lifetime learning credit. You cannot claim these credits if you are married filing separately. Use Form 8863, Education Credits (Hope and Lifetime Learning Credits), to figure the credit. For more information, see Publication 970.

Foreign tax credit. You can claim a credit, subject to certain limits, for income tax you paid or accrued to a foreign country on foreign source income. You cannot claim a credit for taxes paid or accrued on excluded foreign earned income. To claim a credit for income taxes paid or accrued to a foreign country, you generally will file Form 1116, Foreign Tax Credit (Individual, Estate, Trust or Nonresident Alien Individual), with your Form 1040. For more information, get Publication 514, Foreign Tax Credit for Individuals.

Earned income credit. You may qualify for an earned income credit of up to $2,353 if your income lived with you in the United States and your earned income and modified adjusted gross income were each less than $22,413. If two or more children lived with you in the United States and your earned income and modified adjusted gross income were each less than $31,152 your credit could be as much as $3,888. If you do not have a qualifying child and your earned income and modified adjusted gross income were each less than $10,380, your credit could be as much as $353. If you are married, you must file a joint return to qualify unless you lived apart from your spouse during the last 6 months of the year and you are eligible to file as head of household.

You and your spouse (if filing a joint return) and any qualifying child must have work-related SSNs. You cannot claim this credit using an ITIN or a social security card that says "NOT VALID FOR EMPLOYMENT." See Identification Number, earlier.

Advance earned income credit. You may be able to get advance payments of part of the credit for one child in 2001 instead of waiting until you file your 2001 tax return. Fill out the 2001 Form W–5, Earned Income Credit Advance Payment Certificate. If you expect to qualify for the credit in 2001, give the bottom part of the form to your employer. Your employer will include part of the credit regularly in your pay during 2001.

If you received advance payments of the earned income credit in 2000, you must file a 2000 tax return to report the payments. Your Form W–2 will show the amount you received.

Other information. There are other eligibility rules that are not discussed here. For more information, get Publication 956, Earned Income Credit.

Adoption credit. You may qualify to take a tax credit of up to $5,000 for qualifying expenses paid to adopt an eligible child. The credit can be as much as $6,000 if the expenses are for the adoption of a child with special needs. To claim the adoption credit, file Form 8839, Qualified Adoption Expenses, with your Form 1040 or Form 1040A. For more information, get Publication 968, Tax Benefits for Adoption.

Nonresident Aliens

You can claim some of the same credits that resident aliens can claim. You can also report certain taxes you paid, are considered to have paid, or that were withheld from your income.

Credits

Credits are allowed only if you receive effectively connected income. You may be able to claim some of the following credits.

Child and dependent care credit. You may qualify for this credit if you pay someone to care for your dependent who is under age 13, or your disabled dependent or disabled spouse, so that you can work or look for work. Generally, you must be able to claim an exemption for your dependent.

Married nonresident aliens can claim the credit only if they choose to file a joint return with a U.S. citizen or resident spouse as discussed in chapter 1, or if they qualify as certain married individuals living apart (see Married Persons Who Live Apart under Filing Status in the Form 1040NR instructions).

The amount of your child and dependent care expense that qualifies for the credit in any tax year cannot be more than your earned income from the United States for that tax year. Earned income generally means wages, salaries, and professional fees for personal services performed.

For more information, get Publication 503.

Child tax credit. You may be able to take this credit if you have a qualifying child. For this credit, a qualifying child:

- Is a U.S. citizen, national, or resident alien,
- Is claimed as a dependent on your tax return,
- Is your son, daughter, adopted child, grandchild, stepchild, or foster child, and
- Was under age 17 at the end of the year.

Use the Child Tax Credit Worksheet in the Form 1040 instructions to figure the amount of your credit.

Education credits. If you are a nonresident alien for any part of the year, you generally cannot claim the education credits. However, if you are married and choose to file a joint return with a U.S. citizen or resident spouse as discussed in chapter 1, you may be eligible for these credits.

Foreign tax credit. If you receive income from sources outside the United States that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States, you can claim a credit for any income taxes paid or accrued to any foreign country or U.S. possession on that income.

If you do not have foreign source income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business, you cannot claim credits against your U.S. tax for taxes paid or accrued to a foreign country or U.S. possession.

You cannot take any credit for taxes imposed by a foreign country or U.S. possession on your U.S. source income if the taxes were imposed only because you are a citizen or resident of the foreign country or possession.

If you claim a foreign tax credit, you generally will have to attach to your return a Form 1116 which contains additional information about the credit and limits. See Publication 514 for more information.

Credit for prior year minimum tax. If you paid alternative minimum tax in a prior year, get Form 8801, Credit for Prior Year Minimum Tax—Individuals, Estates, and Trusts, to see if you qualify for this credit.

Earned income credit. If you are a nonresident alien for any part of the tax year, you generally cannot claim the earned income credit. However, if you are married and choose to file a joint return with a U.S. citizen or resident spouse as discussed in chapter 1, you may be eligible for the credit.

You and your spouse (if filing a joint return) and any qualifying child must have work-related SSNs. If your social security card says "NOT VALID FOR EMPLOYMENT," you cannot claim the earned income credit. You cannot claim this credit using an ITIN. See Identification Number, earlier.

See Publication 596 for more information on the credit.

Adoption credit. You may qualify to take a tax credit of up to $5,000 for qualifying expenses paid to adopt an eligible child. The credit can be as much as $6,000 if the expenses are for the adoption of a child with special needs. To claim the adoption credit, file Form 8839 with your Form 1040NR. For more information, get Publication 968.

Married nonresident aliens can claim the credit only if they choose to file a joint return with a U.S. citizen or resident spouse as discussed in chapter 1, or if they qualify as certain married individuals living apart (see Married Persons Who Live Apart under Filing Status in the Form 1040NR instructions).
6. Dual-Status Tax Year

Introduction
You have a dual-status tax year when you have been both a resident alien and a nonresident alien in the same year. Dual status does not refer to your citizenship, only to your resident status in the United States. In determining your U.S. income tax liability for a dual-status tax year, different rules apply for the part of the year you are a resident of the United States and the part of the year you are a nonresident.

The most common dual-status tax years are the years of arrival and departure. See Dual-Status Aliens in chapter 1.

If you are married and choose to be treated as a U.S. resident for the entire year, as explained in chapter 1, the rules of this chapter do not apply to you for that year.

Topics
This chapter discusses:

- Income subject to tax,
- Restrictions for dual-status taxpayers,
- Exemptions,
- How to figure the tax,
- Forms to file,
- When and where to file, and
- How to fill out a dual-status return.

Tax Year
You must file your tax return on the basis of an annual accounting period called a tax year. If you have not previously established a fiscal tax year, your tax year is the calendar year. A calendar year is 12 consecutive months ending on December 31. If you have previously established a regular fiscal year (12 consecutive months ending on the last day of a month other than December, or a 52–53 week year) and are considered to be a U.S. resident for any calendar year, you will be treated as a U.S. resident for any part of your fiscal year that falls within that calendar year.

Income Subject to Tax
For the part of the year you are a resident alien, you are taxed on income from all sources. Income from sources outside the United States is taxable if you receive it while you are a resident alien. The income is taxable even if you earned it while you were a nonresident alien or if you became a nonresident alien after receiving it and before the end of the year.

For the part of the year you are a nonresident alien, you are taxed on income from U.S. sources and on certain foreign source income treated as effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. (The rules for treating foreign source income as effectively connected are discussed in chapter 4 under Foreign Income.)

Income from sources outside the United States that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.

Income from U.S. sources is taxable whether you receive it while a nonresident alien or a resident alien unless specifically exempt under the Internal Revenue Code or a tax treaty provision. Generally, tax treaty provisions apply only to the part of the year you were a nonresident.

When determining what income is taxed in the United States, you must consider exemptions under U.S. tax law as well as the reduced tax rates and exemptions provided by tax treaties between the United States and certain foreign countries. For a further discussion of tax treaties, see chapter 9.

Restrictions for Dual-Status Taxpayers
The following restrictions apply if you are filing a tax return for a dual-status tax year.

1) Standard deduction. You cannot use the standard deduction allowed on Form 1040. However, you can itemize any allowable deductions.

2) Exemptions. Your total deduction for the exemptions for your spouse and allowable dependents cannot be more than your taxable income (figured without deducting personal exemptions) for the period you are a resident alien.

3) Head of household. You cannot use the head of household Tax Table column or Tax Rate Schedule.

4) Joint return. You cannot file a joint return. However, see Choosing Resident Alien Status under Dual-Status Aliens in chapter 1.

5) Tax rates. If you are married and a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the tax year and you do not choose to file jointly as discussed in chapter 1, you must use the Tax Table column or Tax Rate Schedule for married filing separately to figure your tax on income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. You cannot use the Tax Table column or Tax Rate Schedules for married filing jointly or single. However, if you are a married resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea, or are a married U.S. national, you may be able to file as single if you lived apart from your spouse during the last 6 months of the year. See the instructions for Form 1040NR to see if you qualify.

A U.S. national is an individual who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes his or her allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals include American Samoans and Northern Mariana Islanders who chose to become U.S. nationals instead of U.S. citizens.

Exemptions
As a dual-status taxpayer, you usually will be able to claim your own personal exemption. Subject to the general rules for qualification, you can claim exemptions for your spouse and dependents when you figure taxable income for the part of the year you are a resident alien. The amount you can claim for these exemptions is limited to your taxable income (figured before subtracting exemptions) for the part of the year you are a resident alien. You cannot use exemptions (other than your own) to reduce taxable income to less than zero for that period.

Special rules apply to exemptions for the part of the tax year you are a nonresident alien if you are a resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or Korea, are a U.S. national, or are a student or business apprentice from India. For more information, see Exemptions in chapter 5.

How To Figure Tax
When you figure your U.S. tax for a dual-status year, you are subject to different rules for the part of the year you are a resident and the part of the year you are a nonresident.

Income
All income for your period of residence and all income that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States for your period of nonresidence, after allowable deductions, is added and taxed at the rates that apply to U.S. citizens and residents. Income that is not connected with a trade or business in the United States for your period of nonresidence is subject to the flat 30% rate or lower treaty rate. You cannot take any deductions against this income.

Social security and railroad retirement benefits. During the part of the year you are a nonresident alien, part of the social security and the equivalent portion of tier 1 railroad retirement benefits will be taxed at graduated rates if your modified adjusted gross income plus half these benefits is more than a certain base amount.

Use the Social Security Benefits Worksheet in the Form 1040 instructions to help you figure the taxable part of your social security and equivalent tier 1 railroad retirement benefits for the part of the year you were a resident alien.

If you received U.S. social security benefits while you were a nonresident alien, the Social Security Administration will send you a copy of Form SSA–1099 showing your combined benefits for the entire year and the amount of tax withheld. You will not receive separate statements for the benefits received during your periods of U.S. residence and nonresidence. Therefore, it is important for you to keep careful records of these amounts. You will need this information to properly complete your return and determine your tax liability.

If you received railroad retirement benefits while you were a nonresident alien, the U.S. Railroad Retirement Board (RRB) will send you Form RRB–1099–R, Statement for Nonresident Alien Recipients of Payments by the Railroad Retirement Board, and/or Form RRB–1099–R, Annuities or Pensions by the Railroad Retirement Board. If your country of legal residence changed or your rate of tax changed during the tax year, you may receive more than one form.

Tax Credits and Payments

This discussion covers tax credits and payments for dual-status aliens.

Credits

As a dual-status alien, you generally can claim tax credits using the same rules that apply to resident aliens. There are certain restrictions that may apply. These restrictions are discussed here, along with a brief explanation of credits often claimed by individuals.

Child and dependent care credit. You may qualify for this credit if you pay someone to care for your dependent who is under age 13, or your dependent or disabled spouse so that you can work or look for work. Generally, you must be able to claim an exemption for your dependent.

Married dual-status aliens can claim the credit only if they choose to file a joint return as discussed in chapter 1, or if they qualify as certain married individuals living apart.

The amount of your child and dependent care expense that qualifies for the credit in any tax year cannot be more than your earned income for that tax year.

For more information, get Publication 503 and Form 2441.

Credit for the elderly or the disabled. You must be a U.S. citizen or resident to claim this credit. You cannot claim the credit if you were a nonresident alien at any time during your tax year. However, the credit can be taken by a dual-status alien who is married to a U.S. citizen or resident and chooses to be treated as a U.S. resident for the entire year. For further information about this credit, get Publication 524.

Child tax credit. You may be able to take this credit if you have a qualifying child. For this credit, a qualifying child:

- Is a U.S. citizen, national, or resident alien,
- Is claimed as a dependent on your tax return,
- Is your son, daughter, adopted child, grandchild, stepchild, or foster child, and
- Was under age 17 at the end of the year.

Use the Child Tax Credit Worksheet in the Form 1040 instructions to figure the amount of your credit.

Education credits. If you are a nonresident alien for any part of the year, you generally cannot claim the education credits. However, if you are married and choose to file a joint return with a U.S. citizen or resident spouse as discussed in chapter 1, you may be eligible for these credits.

Foreign tax credit. If you have paid or are liable for the payment of income tax to a foreign country on income from foreign sources, you may be able to claim a credit for the foreign taxes.

If you claim the foreign tax credit, you generally must file Form 1116 with your income tax return. If you need more information, see the instructions for Form 1116 or get Publication 514.

Adoption credit. You may qualify to take a tax credit of up to $5,000 for qualifying expenses paid to adopt an eligible child. The credit can be as much as $6,000 if the expenses are for the adoption of a child with special needs. To claim the adoption credit, file Form 8839 with the U.S. income tax return that you file. For more information, get Publication 968.

Married dual-status aliens can claim the credit only if they choose to file a joint return with a U.S. citizen or resident spouse as discussed in chapter 1, or if they qualify as certain married individuals living apart.

Payments

You can report as payments against your U.S. income tax liability certain taxes you paid, are considered to have paid, or that were withheld from your income. These include:

1. Tax withheld from wages earned in the United States,
2. Taxes withheld at the source from various items of income from U.S. sources other than wages,
3. Tax paid with Form 1040–ES or Form 1040–ES(NR), and
4. Tax paid with Form 1040–C, at the time of departure from the United States.

Forms To File

The U.S. income tax return you must file as a dual-status alien depends on whether you are a resident alien or a nonresident alien at the end of the tax year.

Resident at end of year. You must file Form 1040 if you are a dual-status taxpayer who becomes a resident alien during the year and who is a U.S. resident on the last day of the tax year. Write “Dual-Status Return” across the top of the return. Attach a statement to your return to show the income for the part of the year you are a nonresident alien.

You can use Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ as the statement, but be sure to mark “Dual-Status Statement” across the top.

Nonresident at end of year. You must file Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ if you are a dual-status taxpayer who gives up residence in the United States during the year and who is not a U.S. resident on the last day of the tax year. Write “Dual-Status Return” across the top of the return. Attach a statement to your return to show the income for the part of the year you are a resident. You can use Form 1040 as the statement, but be sure to mark “Dual-Status Statement” across the top.

Statement. Any statement must have your name, address, and taxpayer identification number on it. You do not need to sign a separate statement or schedule accompanying your return, since your signature on the return also applies to the supporting statements and schedules.

When and Where To File

If you are a resident alien on the last day of your tax year and report your income on a calendar year basis, you must file no later than April 15 of the year following the close of your tax year. If you report your income on other than a calendar year basis, file your return no later than the 15th day of the 4th month following the close of your tax year. In either case, file your return with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255.

If you are a nonresident alien on the last day of your tax year and you report your income on a calendar year basis, you must file no later than April 15 of the year following the close of your tax year if you receive wages subject to withholding. If you report your income on other than a calendar year basis, file your return no later than the 15th day of the 4th month following the close of your tax year. If you did not receive wages subject to withholding and you report your income on a calendar year basis, you must file no later than June 15 of the year following the close of your tax year. If you report your income on other than a calendar year basis, file your return no later than the 15th day of the 6th month following the close of your tax year. In any case, file your return with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255.
Illustration of Dual-Status Return

Sam R. Brown is single and a subject of the United Kingdom (U.K.). He temporarily entered the United States with an H–1 visa to develop a new product line for the Major Product Co. He arrived in the United States March 18, 2000, and left May 25, 2000, returning to his home in England.

The Major Product Co. later offered Sam a permanent job, and he returned to the United States with a permanent visa on September 10, 2000.

During Sam’s temporary assignment in the United States, the Major Product Co. paid him $6,500. He accounted to his employer for his expenses for travel, meals, and lodging while on temporary assignment, and was reimbursed for his expenses. This amount was not included on his wage statement, Form W–2, given to him when he left the United States.

After Sam became permanently employed, his wages for the rest of the year were $21,800, including reimbursement of his moving expenses. He received a separate Form W–2 for this period. His other income received in 2000 was:

- Interest income paid by the U.S. Bank (not effectively connected):
  - March 31 ........................................................ $45
  - June 30 .......................................................... $48
  - September 30 .................................................. $68
  - December 31 .................................................... $89

- Dividend income paid by Major Product Co. (not effectively connected):
  - April 3 ............................................................ $120
  - July 3 ............................................................. $120
  - October 2 ...................................................... $120

- Interest income (in U.S. dollars) paid by the U.K. Bank:
  - March 31 .......................................................... $90
  - June 30 .......................................................... $110
  - September 30 ................................................... $118
  - December 31 ..................................................... $120

Sam paid the following expenses while he was in the United States:

- Moving expenses incurred and paid in September: $8,300
- VA State income tax: $612
- Contributions to U.S. charities: $310

Before Sam left the United States in May, he filed Form 1040–C (see chapter 11). He owed no tax when he left the United States.

Form 1040

Sam completes Form 1040 as follows.

- Sam prints his name, social security number, and address on page 1 of Form 1040.
- He checks “Yes” for the Presidential Election Campaign Fund and “Single” under filing status. He also checks the exemption block for himself and prints “Dual-Status Return” across the top of the form.

Sam reports on Form 1040 all income received during the period he was a resident of the United States and the income received during the period he was a nonresident alien that was effectively connected with his U.S. trade or business. This income is taxed at the graduated rates. For information purposes, he also reports on Form 1040 any interest income received while he was a nonresident alien.

Sam completes the necessary parts of the Form 1040NR that he is attaching as a statement. He then signs and dates the return and enters his occupation.

Sam completes Form 1040NR as follows.

- Sam prints his name, address, and social security number on page 1 of Form 1040NR. He prints “Dual-Status Statement” across the top of the form.

- On line 8, Sam enters his salary while a nonresident. He enters the state income tax withheld from his salary on line 35 (carried from line 17, Schedule A) and the federal income tax withheld from his salary on line 55. He also carries these amounts to Form 1040 (discussed later).

- Sam also reports the not effectively connected U.S. income received while he was a nonresident alien. He reports the April and July dividends from the Major Product Co. in column (c) of line 70a, page 4. He figures the tax on his dividend income on lines 82 and 83 and carries it forward to line 49 on Form 1040NR. The (rate of tax on this income is limited to 15% by Article 10 of the U.S.–U.K. income tax treaty. Treaty rates vary from country to country, so be sure to check the provisions in the treaty you are claiming.)

- Sam also reports $36, the amount of tax withheld at source by the Major Product Co. in column (a) of line 70a, Form 1040NR, and carries it forward to line 62a. Later he will report the amount on Form 1040.

- Sam is not required to report the interest credited to his account by the U.S. Bank during the period he was a nonresident alien. Interest on deposits with U.S. banks that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business generally is treated as income from sources in the United States but is not taxable to a nonresident alien. He checks the “Yes” box on page 5, item L, of Form 1040NR, and explains why this income is not included on his return.

- The interest income received from the U.K. Bank while Sam was a nonresident alien is foreign source income and not taxable on his U.S. return.

- Sam completes all applicable items on page 5 of Form 1040NR. This provides the dates of arrival and departure, types of visas, and information concerning tax treaty benefits that he has claimed.

Sam completes Form 1040 as follows.

- Sam prints his name, social security number, and address on page 1 of Form 1040. He checks “Yes” for the Presidential Election Campaign Fund and “Single” under filing status. He also checks the exemption block for himself and prints “Dual-Status Return” across the top of the form.

Sam reports on Form 1040 all income received during the period he was a resident of the United States and the income received during the period he was a nonresident alien that was effectively connected with his U.S. trade or business. This income is taxed at the graduated rates. For information purposes, he also reports on Form 1040NR any interest income received while he was a nonresident alien.

Sam completes Form 3903 (not illustrated) to figure his moving expense deduction and reports the total on line 26, Form 1040.

Sam cannot claim the standard deduction because he has a dual-status tax year. He reports his itemized deductions on Schedule A (Form 1040). The only itemized deduction he had while he was a nonresident alien was the state income tax withheld from his pay. For information purposes, he lists this amount on line 1, Schedule A, Form 1040NR, in addition to including it on Schedule A, Form 1040.

Sam totals his itemized deductions on line 28, Schedule A (Form 1040). He reports the amount from line 28 of Schedule A (Form 1040) on line 36, Form 1040.

Sam enters $2,800 for one personal exemption on line 36, Form 1040. He subtracts the amount on line 38 from the amount on line 37 to figure his taxable income, line 39.

Sam is now ready to figure the tax on his income taxed at the graduated rates. He uses the column in the Tax Table for single individuals. To this tax ($2,516), he must add the tax on the income not effectively connected ($36), the income taxed at the 30% or lower treaty rate. Since there is no line on Form 1040 for this computation, he reports the two amounts in the margin in the Tax and Credits area of Form 1040.

Sam reports the total amount of tax withheld ($2,700) from his wages on line 58, Form 1040. He includes in this amount the tax withheld at source ($36 from line 62a, Form 1040NR) on dividends paid to him while he was a nonresident alien. He also writes a brief explanation.

For information purposes, Sam also reports on line 55, Form 1040NR, the amount of tax withheld ($536) from wages earned while he was a nonresident alien.

Sam compares the total tax on line 57, Form 1040, to the total payments on line 65, to see if he has overpaid his tax or if he owes an additional amount. Since the amount of tax withheld and the amount of tax paid at source are more than his total tax, he has overpaid his tax. He subtracts the amount on line 57 from the amount on line 65 to figure his refund.

Sam checks to be sure that he has completed all parts of Form 1040 that apply to him. He also checks to see if he has completed the necessary parts of the Form 1040NR that he is attaching as a statement. He then signs and dates the return and enters his occupation.

What, When, and Where To File

Introduction
What return you must file, as well as when and where you file that return, depends on your status at the end of the tax year as a resident or a nonresident alien.

Topics
This chapter discusses:

- Forms aliens must file.
- When and where to file.
- Amended returns and claims for refund, and
- Transportation of currency or monetary instruments.

Useful Items
You may want to see:

Forms (and Instructions)
- 1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
- 1040A U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
- 1040EZ Income Tax Return for Single and Joint Filers With No Dependents
- 1040NR U.S. Nonresident Alien Income Tax Return
- 1040NR–EZ U.S. Income Tax Return for Certain Nonresident Aliens With No Dependents

See chapter 12 for information about getting these forms.

Nonresident Aliens
Nonresident aliens who are required to file an income tax return should use Form 1040NR or, if qualified, Form 1040NR–EZ. If you are any of the following, you must file a return.

1) A nonresident alien individual engaged or considered to be engaged in a trade or business in the United States during 2000. You must file even if:
   a) Your income did not come from a trade or business conducted in the United States,
   b) You have no income from U.S. sources, or
   c) Your income is exempt from income tax.
2) A nonresident alien individual not engaged in a trade or business in the United States with U.S. income on which the tax liability was not satisfied by the withholding of tax at the source.
3) A representative or agent responsible for filing the return of an individual described in (1) or (2).
4) A fiduciary for a nonresident alien estate or trust.

Note. If you were a nonresident alien student or trainee who was temporarily present in the United States under an "F," "J," "M," or "Q" visa, you are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States. You must file: Form 1040NR, if you file Form 1040NR–EZ if you have income that is subject to tax, such as wages, tips, scholarship and fellowship grants, dividends, etc.

You must also file if you want to:
1) Claim a refund of withheld or overpaid tax, or
2) Claim the benefit of any deductions or credits. For example, if you have no U.S. business activities but have income from real property that you choose to treat as effectively connected income (discussed in chapter 4), you must timely file a true and accurate return to take any allowable deductions against that income. For information on what is timely, see When to file for deductions and credits under When and Where To File, later.

Even if you have left the United States and filed a Form 1040–C, U.S. Departing Alien Income Tax Return, on departure, you still must file an annual U.S. income tax return. If you are married and both you and your spouse are required to file, you must each file a separate return.

Form 1040NR–EZ
You can use Form 1040NR–EZ if all of the following conditions are met.

1) You do not claim any dependents.
2) You cannot be claimed as a dependent on someone else’s return.
3) If you were married, you cannot claim an exemption for your spouse.
4) Your taxable income is less than $50,000.
5) You do not claim any itemized deductions (other than for state and local income taxes).
6) You had only wages, salaries, tips, tax-able refunds of state and local income taxes, and scholarship or fellowship grants. (If you had taxable interest or dividend income, you cannot use this form.)
7) You are not claiming any adjustments to income other than the student loan interest deduction or scholarship and fellowship grants excluded.
8) You are not claiming any credits.
9) The only taxes you owe are:
   a) The income tax from the Tax Table.
   b) The social security and Medicare tax on tip income not reported to your employer.
   c) The household employment taxes.

If you do not qualify to file Form 1040NR–EZ, you must file Form 1040NR.

When and Where To File
If you are an employee and you receive wages subject to U.S. income tax withholding, you will generally file by the 15th day of the 4th month after your tax year ends. If you file for the 2000 calendar year, your return is due April 16, 2001, because April 15, 2001, falls on a Sunday.

If you are not an employee who receives wages subject to U.S. income tax withholding, you must file by the 15th day of the 6th month after your tax year ends. For the 2000 calendar year, file your return by June 15, 2001. For information on when and where to make estimated tax payments, see chapter 8.

File Form 1040NR–EZ and Form 1040NR at the following address.

Philadelphia, PA 19255

When to file for deductions and credits.
To get the benefit of any allowable deductions or credits, you must timely file a true and accurate return. For this purpose, a return is timely if it is filed within 16 months of the due date just discussed. However, if you did not file a 1999 tax return and 2000 is not the first year for which you are required to file one, your 2000 return is timely for this purpose if it is filed by the earlier of:

1) The date that is 16 months after the due date for filing your 2000 return, or
2) The date the IRS notifies you that your 2000 return has not been filed and that... you cannot claim certain deductions and credits. The allowance of the following credits is not affected by this time requirement.

1) Credit for withheld taxes.
2) Credit for excise tax on certain uses of gasoline and special fuels.
3) Credit for tax paid by a regulated investment company on undistributed capital gains.

Protective return. If your activities in the United States were limited and you do not believe that you had any gross income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business during the year, you can file a protective return (Form 1040NR) by the deadline explained above. By filing a protective return, you protect your right to receive the benefit of deductions and credits in the event it is later determined that some or all of your income is effectively connected. You are not required to report any effectively connected income or any deductions on the protective return, but you must give the reason the return is being filed.

If you believe some of your activities resulted in effectively connected income, file your return reporting that income and related deductions by the regular due date. To protect your right to claim deductions or credits resulting from other activities, attach a statement to that return explaining that you wish to protect your right to claim deductions and credits if it is later determined that the other activities produced effectively connected income.

You can follow the same procedure if you believe you have no U.S. tax liability because of a U.S. tax treaty. Be sure to also complete items L and M on page 5 of Form 1040NR.

Aliens from the Virgin Islands.

If you are a bona fide resident of the Virgin Islands on the last day of your tax year and work temporarily in the United States, you must pay your income taxes to the Virgin Islands and file your income tax returns at the following address.

Virgin Islands Bureau of Internal Revenue 9601 Estate Thomas Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas U.S. Virgin Islands 00802

Report all income from U.S. sources, as well as income from other sources, on your return. For information on filing Virgin Islands returns, contact the Virgin Islands Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Chapter 8 discusses withholding from U.S. wages of Virgin Islanders.

Aliens from Guam or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands. If you are a resident of Guam or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) on the last day of your tax year, you must file your return and pay any tax due to Guam or the CNMI. If your income, including income from U.S. sources, on your return. It is not necessary to file a separate U.S. income tax return. Guarn residents should file their Guam returns at the following address.

Department of Revenue and Taxation Government of Guam P.O. Box 23607 GMF, GU 96921

Division of Revenue and Taxation Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands P.O. Box 5234 CHRB Saipan, MP 96950

If you are a resident of the United States on the last day of your tax year, you should file your return with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255. Include with your return any balance of your tax due on income derived from all sources.

Penalties. The law imposes penalties for filing your tax return late or for late payment of any tax due. However, a penalty is not charged if you can show that there was reasonable cause for your filing or paying late.

You may be subject to additional penalties for:

1) Not supplying a taxpayer identification number when required,
2) Filing a frivolous income tax return, or
3) Not including a tax shelter identification number on a return when required.

Amended Returns and Claims for Refund

If you find changes in your income, deductions, or credits after you mail your return, file Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return. Attach Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR-EZ showing the changes to your original return and write “Amended” across the top. Ordinarily, an amended return claiming a refund must be filed within 3 years from the date your return was filed or within 2 years from the time the tax was paid, whichever is later. A return filed before the final due date is considered to have been filed on the due date.

Transportation of Currency or Monetary Instruments

Customs Form 4790, Report of International Transportation of Currency or Monetary Instruments, must be filed by each person who physically transports, mails, or ships, or causes or attempts to cause to be physically transported, mailed, or shipped, currency or other monetary instruments in a total amount of more than $10,000 at one time from the United States to any place outside the United States, or into the United States from any place outside the United States. The filing requirement also applies to each person who receives in the United States currency or monetary instruments totaling more than $10,000 at one time from any place outside of the United States.

The term “monetary instruments” means the following:

- Coin and currency of the United States or of any other country,
- Travelers' checks in any form,
- Money orders,
- Investment securities in bearer form or otherwise in such form that title to them passes upon delivery,
- Negotiable instruments in bearer form or otherwise in such form that title to them passes upon delivery, and
- Bank checks, promissory notes, and money orders which are signed but on which the name of the payee has been omitted.

However, the term does not include bank checks, travelers' checks, or money orders made payable to the order of a named person which have not been endorsed or which contain restrictive endorsements, warehouse receipts, or bills of lading.

A transfer of funds through normal banking procedures (wire transfer) that does not involve the physical transportation of currency or bearer monetary instruments is not required to be reported on Customs Form 4790.

Filing requirements. Customs Form 4790 filing requirements follow.

Recipients. Each person who receives currency or other monetary instruments from a place outside the United States must file Customs Form 4790 within 15 days after receipt, with the Customs officer in charge at any port of entry or departure, or by mail to the following address.

Commissioner of Customs Attention: Currency Transportation Reports Washington, DC 20229

Shippers or mailers. If the currency or other monetary instrument does not accompany the person entering or departing the United States, Customs Form 4790 can be filed by mail with the Commissioner of Customs at the above address, on or before the date of entry, departure, mailing, or shipping.

Travelers. Travelers must file Customs Form 4790 with the Customs officer in charge at any Customs port of entry or departure, when entering or departing the United States.

Penalties. Civil and criminal penalties are provided for failing to file a report, filing a report containing material omissions or misstatements, or filing a false or fraudulent report. Also, the entire amount of the currency or monetary instrument may be subject to seizure and forfeiture.

More information regarding the filing of Customs Form 4790 can be found in the instructions on the back of the form.

Paying Tax Through Withholding or Estimated Tax

Important Change

New forms. You may be asked to give withholding agents new withholding certificat-ees that contain the necessary information and representations required by new IRS regulations relating to withholding of income tax on certain U.S. source income paid to foreign persons. For information, see Important Changes at the beginning of this publication.

Introduction

This chapter discusses how to pay your U.S. income tax as you earn or receive income during the year. In general, the federal income tax is a pay as you go tax. There are two ways to pay as you go:

1) Withholding. If you are an employee, your employer probably withholds income tax from your pay. Tax may also be withheld from certain other income—including pensions, bonuses, commissions, and gambling winnings. In each case, the amount withheld is paid to the U.S. Treasury in your name.

2) Estimated tax. If you do not pay your tax through withholding, or do not pay enough tax that way, you might have to pay estimated tax. People who are in business for themselves generally will have to pay their tax this way. You may have to pay estimated tax if you receive income such as dividends, interest, rent, and royalties. Estimated tax is used to pay not only income tax, but self-employment tax and alternative minimum tax as well.

Topics

This chapter discusses:

- How to notify your employer of your alien status,
- Income subject to withholding of income tax,
- Exemptions from withholding,
- Social security and Medicare taxes, and
- Estimated tax rules.

Notification of Alien Status

You must let your employer know whether you are a resident or a nonresident alien so your employer can withhold the correct amount of tax from your wages.

If you are a resident alien under the rules discussed in chapter 1, you may file Form W–9 or a similar statement with your employer. If you are a nonresident alien under those rules, you must furnish to your employer Form 8233 or Form W-8BEN, establishing that your compensation is exempt from withholding, or Form W–4, establishing that your compensation is subject to graduated withholding at the same rates as resident aliens and U.S. citizens.

If you are a resident alien and you receive income other than wages (such as dividends and royalties) from sources within the United States, you may file Form W–9 or similar statement with the withholding agent (generally, the payer of the income) so the agent will not withhold tax on the income at the 30% (or lower treaty) rate. If you receive this type of income as a nonresident alien, it is usually subject to withholding at the 30% (or lower treaty) rate.

Withholding From Compensation

The following discussion generally applies only to nonresident aliens. Tax is withheld from resident aliens and U.S. citizens. Therefore, your compensation, unless it is specifically excluded from the term “wages” by law, is subject to graduated withholding.

Withholding on Wages

If you are an employee and you receive wages subject to graduated withholding, you will be required to fill out a Form W–4. Nonresident aliens should use the following instructions instead of the instructions on the Form W–4.

Because of the restrictions on a nonresident alien’s filing status, the limited number of personal exemptions a nonresident alien is allowed, and because a nonresident alien cannot claim the standard deduction, you should fill out Form W–4 following these instructions.

1) Check only “Single” marital status on line 3 (regardless of your actual marital status).

2) Claim only one allowance on line 5, unless you are a resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea, or a U.S. national.

3) Request that your employer withhold an additional amount of $7.60 per week on line 6. If your wages are paid based on a 2-week pay period, the additional amount will be $15.30. For other payroll periods, ask your employer for the amount to enter.

4) Do not claim “Exempt” withholding status on line 7.

A U.S. national is an individual who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes his or her allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals include American Samoans, and Northern Mariana Islanders who chose to become U.S. nationals instead of U.S. citizens. See Reduced Withholding on Scholarships and Fellowship Grants, later, for how to fill out Form W–4 if you receive a U.S. source scholarship or fellowship grant.

Students and business apprentices from India. If you are eligible for the benefits of Article 21(2) of the United States–India Income Tax Treaty, you may claim additional withholding allowances for the standard deduction and your spousal. You may also claim an additional withholding allowance for each of your dependents not admitted to the United States on “F–2,” “J–2,” or “M–2” visas if they meet the same rules that apply to U.S. citizens. You do not have to request additional withholding on line 6.
Withholding on Pensions

If you receive a pension after 2000 as a result of personal services performed in the United States, the pension income is subject to the 30% (or lower treaty) rate of withholding. You may, however, have tax withheld at graduated rates on the portion of the pension that arises from the performance of services in the United States after December 31, 1986. You must fill out Form W-8ECI and give it to the withholding agent or payer before the income is paid or credited to you.

Withholding on Tip Income

Tips you receive during the year for services performed in the United States are subject to U.S. income tax. Include them in taxable income. In addition, tips received while working for one employer, amounting to $20 or more in a month, are subject to graduated withholding.

Independent Contractors

If there is no employee-employer relationship between you and the person for whom you perform services, your compensation is subject to the 30% (or lower treaty) rate of withholding. However, if you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States during the tax year, your compensation for personal services as an independent contractor (independent personal services) may be entirely or partly exempt from withholding if you reach an agreement with the Internal Revenue Service on the amount of withholding required. Also, the final payment to you during the tax year for independent personal services may be entirely or partly exempt from withholding if you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States during the year and you file the forms and provide the information required by the IRS.

Withholding Agreement

An agreement that you reach with the IRS regarding withholding from your compensation for independent personal services is effective for payments covered by the agreement after it is agreed to by all parties. You must agree to timely file an income tax return for the current tax year.

Central withholding agreements. If you are a nonresident alien entertainer or athlete performing or participating in athletic events in the United States, you may be able to enter into a withholding agreement with the IRS for reduced withholding provided certain requirements are met. Under no circumstances will such an agreement reduce taxes withheld to less than the anticipated amount of income tax liability. Nonresident alien entertainers or athletes requesting a central withholding agreement must submit the following information.

1) A list of the names and addresses of the nonresident aliens to be covered by the agreement.
2) Copies of all contracts that the aliens or their agents and representatives have entered into regarding the time period and performances or events to be covered by the agreement including, but not limited to, contracts with:
   a) Employers, agents, and promoters,
   b) Exhibition halls,
   c) Persons providing lodging, transportation, and advertising, and
   d) Accompanying personnel, such as band members or trainers.
3) An itinerary of dates and locations of all events or performances scheduled during the period to be covered by the agreement.
4) A proposed budget containing itemized estimates of income and expenses for the period covered by the agreement, including any documents to support these estimates.
5) The name, address, and telephone number of the person the IRS should contact if additional information or documentation is needed.
6) The name, address, and employer identification number of the agent or agents who will be the central withholding agents for the aliens and who will enter into a contract with the IRS. A central withholding agent ordinarily receives contract payments, keeps books of account for the aliens covered by the agreement, and calculates and pays withholding taxes (including tax liabilities) for the aliens during the period covered by the agreement.

When the IRS approves the estimated budget and the designated central withholding agents, the Associate Chief Counsel (International) will prepare a withholding agreement. The agreement must be signed by each withholding agent, each nonresident alien covered by the agreement, and the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service.

Generally, each withholding agent must agree to withhold income tax from payments made to the nonresident alien, to pay over the withheld tax to the IRS on the dates and in the amounts specified in the agreement, and to have the IRS apply the payments of withholding tax to the withholding agent’s Form 1042 account. Each withholding agent will be required to file Form 1042 and Form 1042-S for each tax year in which income is paid to a nonresident alien covered by the withholding agreement. The IRS will credit the withheld tax payments, posted to the withholding agent’s Form 1042 account, in accordance with the Form 1042-S. Each nonresident alien covered by the withholding agreement must agree to file Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR-EZ.

A request for a central withholding agreement should be sent to the following address at least 90 days before the agreement is to take effect.

Internal Revenue Service
Compliance Area Director, Area 15
950 L’Enfant Plaza South, S.W. S.C:15
Washington, DC 20024

Final payment exemption. Your final payment of compensation during the tax year for independent personal services may be entirely or partly exempt from withholding. This exemption is available only once during your tax year and applies to a maximum of $5,000 of compensation. To obtain this exemption, you or your agent must give the following statements and information to the Commissioner.

1) A statement by each withholding agent from whom you have received gross income effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States during the tax year, showing the amount of income paid and the tax withheld. Each statement must be signed by the withholding agent and verified by a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury.
2) A statement by the withholding agent from whom you expect to receive the final payment of compensation, showing the amount of the payment and the amount of tax that would be withheld if a final payment exemption were not granted. This statement must also be signed by the withholding agent and verified by a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury.
3) A statement by you that you do not intend to receive any other income effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States during the current tax year.
4) The amount of tax that has been withheld or paid under all other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code or regulations for any income effectively connected with your trade or business in the United States during the current tax year.
5) The amount of your outstanding tax liabilities, if any, including interest and penalties, from the current tax year or prior tax periods.
6) Any provision of an income tax treaty under which a partial or complete exemption from withholding may be claimed, the country of your residence, and a statement of sufficient facts to justify an exemption under the treaty.
7) A statement signed by you, and verified by a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury, that all the information given is true and that to your knowledge no relevant information has been omitted.

If satisfied with the information, the IRS will determine the amount of your tentative income tax for the tax year on gross income effectively connected with your trade or business in the United States. Ordinary and necessary business expenses can be taken into account if proven to the satisfaction of the Commissioner.

The Commissioner will send you a letter, directed to the withholding agent, showing the amount of the final payment of compensation that is exempt from withholding and the amount that can be paid to you because of the exemption. You must give two copies of the letter to the withholding agent and must also attach a copy of the letter to your income tax return for the tax year for which the exemption is effective.

Allowance for Personal Exemption

Withholding on payments for independent personal services is generally based on the amount of your compensation payment minus the value of one exemption ($2,900 for 2001). To determine the income for independent personal services performed in the United States.
States to which the 30% (or lower treaty) rate will apply, you are allowed one personal exemption if you are not a U.S. national and are not a resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea. For purposes of 30% withholding, the exemption is prorated at $7.95 a day in 2001 for the period that labor or personal services are performed in the United States. To claim an exemption from withholding on the personal exemption amount, fill out the applicable parts of Form 8233 and give it to the withholding agent.

Example. Eric Schmidt, who is a resident of Germany, worked under a contract with a U.S. firm (not as an employee) in the United States for 100 days during 2001 before returning to his country. He earned $6,000 for the services performed (not considered wages) in the United States. Eric is married and has three dependent children. His wife is not employed and has no income subject to U.S. tax. The amount of the personal exemption to be allowed against the income for his personal services performed within the United States in 2001 is $795 (100 days \( \times \) $7.95), and withholding at 30% is applied against the balance. Thus, $1,561.50 in tax is withheld from Eric’s earnings (30% of $5,205 ($6,000 – $795)).

U.S. nationals or residents of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea. If you are a nonresident alien who is a resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, or South Korea, or who is a national of the United States, you are subject to the same 30% withholding on your compensation for independent personal services performed in the United States. However, if you are a U.S. national or a resident of Canada or Mexico, you are allowed the same personal exemptions as U.S. citizens. For the 30% (or lower treaty rate) withholding, you can take $7.95 per day for each allowable exemption in 2001. If you are a resident of Japan or Korea, you are allowed personal exemptions for yourself and for your spouse and children who live with you in the United States at any time during the tax year. However, the additional exemptions for your spouse and children must be further prorated as explained in chapter 5 under Exemptions.

Students and business apprentices from India. If you are eligible for the benefits of Article 21(2) of the United States–India Income Tax Treaty, you are allowed an exemption for your spouse only if your spouse has no gross income. You are also allowed an exemption for each dependent not admitted to the United States on “F-2,” “J-2,” or “M-2” visas if they meet the same rules that apply to U.S. citizens. For the 30% (or lower treaty rate) withholding on compensation for independent personal services performed in the United States, you are allowed $7.95 per day for each allowable exemption in 2001.

Residents of Canada or Mexico Engaged in Transportation-Related Employment

Certain residents of Canada or Mexico who enter or leave the United States at frequent intervals are not subject to withholding on their wages. These persons either:

1. Perform duties in transportation service between the United States and Canada or Mexico, or
2. Perform duties connected to the construction, maintenance, or operation of a waterway, viaduct, dam, or bridge crossed by, or crossing, the boundary between the United States and Canada or the boundary between the United States and Mexico.

This employment is subject to withholding of social security and Medicare taxes unless the services are performed for a railroad.

To qualify for the exemption from withholding during a tax year, a Canadian or Mexican resident must give the employer a statement in duplicate with name, address, and identification number, certifying that the resident:

1. Is not a U.S. citizen or resident,
2. Is a resident of Canada or Mexico, whichever applies, and
3. Expect to perform duties previously described during the tax year in question.

The statement can be in any form, but it must be dated and signed by the employee and must include a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

Certain Residents of Puerto Rico

If you are a nonresident alien employee who is a resident of Puerto Rico, wages for services performed in Puerto Rico are generally not subject to withholding unless you are an employee of the United States or any of its agencies in Puerto Rico.

Residents of the U.S. Virgin Islands

Nonresident aliens who are bona fide residents of the Virgin Islands are not subject to withholding of U.S. tax on income earned while temporarily employed in the United States. This is because those persons pay their income tax to the Virgin Islands. To avoid having tax withheld on income earned in the United States, bona fide residents of the Virgin Islands should write a letter, in duplicate, to their employers, stating that they are bona fide residents of the Virgin Islands and expect to pay tax on all income to the Virgin Islands.

Withholding From Other Income

Other income subject to 30% withholding generally includes fixed or determinable income such as interest (other than portfolio interest), dividends, pensions and annuities, and gains from sales and exchanges, discussed in chapter 4. It also includes 85% of social security benefits paid to nonresident aliens.

Income (other than compensation) that is effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business is not subject to withholding at the 30% (or lower treaty) rate. You must file Form W–8ECI with the payer of the income.

Tax Withheld on Partnership Income

If you are a foreign partner in a U.S. or foreign partnership, the partnership will withhold tax on your share of effectively connected taxable income from the partnership. The partnership will give you a statement on Form 8806, Foreign Partner’s Information Statement of Section 1446 Withholding Tax, showing the tax withheld. A partnership that is publicly traded may withhold on your actual distributions of effectively connected income at the 30% (or lower treaty) rate. If your partnership will not give you a statement on Form 1042–S, Foreign Person’s U.S. Source Income Subject to Withholding, in either case, the withholding rate is 39.6%. Claim the tax withheld as a credit on line 62b of Form 1040NR.

If you are a foreign partner responsible for withholding, see Partnership Withholding on Effectively Connected Income in Publication 515.

Reduced Withholding on Scholarships and Fellowship Grants

There is no withholding on a qualified scholarship received by a candidate for a degree. See chapter 3.

If you are a nonresident alien student or grantee with an “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa and you receive a U.S. source grant or scholarship that is not fully exempt, the withholding agent (usually the payer of the scholarship) withholds tax at 14% (or lower treaty rate) of the taxable part of the grant or scholarship. However, if you are not a candidate for a degree and the grant does not meet certain requirements, tax will be withheld at the 30% (or lower treaty) rate.

You may be entitled to reduce withholding on the taxable part of your grant or scholarship if the withholding agent chooses to withhold under an alternative withholding procedure. (This alternative withholding procedure is not mandatory, and the withholding agent does not have to use it.) Your withholding agent chooses this alternative procedure by giving you a statement identifying the Partnership Allowance Worksheet (attached to Form W–4). Use the following instructions instead of the Form W–4 instructions to complete the worksheet.

Line A. Enter the total of the following amounts on line A.

Personal exemption. Include the prorated part of your allowable personal exemption. Figure the amount by multiplying the number of days you expect to be in the United States in 2001 by the daily exemption amount ($7.95).

Expenses. Include expenses that will be deductible on your return. These include away-from-home expenses (meals, lodging, and transportation), certain state and local income taxes, charitable contributions, and casually losses, discussed earlier under Itemized Deductions in chapter 5. They also include business expenses, moving expenses, and the IRA deduction discussed under Deductions in chapter 5.

The amount of your actual expenses should be the anticipated actual amount, if known. If you do not know the amount of actual expenses at the time you complete Form W–4, you can claim the current per diem allowance for participants in the Career Education Program under the Federal Travel Regulations. The current per diem allowance is $18 per day.

Nontaxable grant or scholarship. Include the part of your grant or scholarship that is not taxable under U.S. law or under a tax treaty.

Line B. Enter —0— unless the following paragraph applies to you.

If you are a student who qualifies under Article 21(2) of the United States–India income tax treaty, and you are not claiming deductions for away-from-home expenses or other itemized deductions (discussed earlier), enter the standard deduction on line B. The standard deduction amount for 2001 is $4,550 if you are single or $3,800 if you are married.

Lines C and D. Enter —0— on both lines unless the following paragraphs apply to you.

If you are a resident of Canada, Mexico, Japan, South Korea, or a U.S. national, an additional daily exemption amount may be allowed for your spouse and each of your dependents.

If you are a resident of India who is eligible for the benefits of Article 21(2) of the United States–India income tax treaty, you can claim an additional daily exemption amount for your spouse. You can also claim an additional amount for each of your dependents not admitted to the United States on “F–2,” “J–2,” or “M–2” visas if they meet the same rules that apply to U.S. citizens.

Enter any additional amount for your spouse on line C. Enter any additional amount for your dependents on line D.

Lines E, F, and G. No entries should be made on lines E, F, and G.

Line H. Add the amounts on lines A through D and enter the total on line H.

Form W–4. Complete lines 1 through 4 of Form W–4. Sign and date the form and give it with the Personal Allowances Worksheet to your withholding agent.

If you file a Form W–4 to reduce or eliminate the withholding on your scholarship or grant, you must file an annual U.S. income tax return stating that you expect the exemptions and deductions you claimed on that form. If you are in the United States during more than one tax year, you must attach a statement to your Form W–4 indicating that you have filed a U.S. income tax return for the previous year. If you have not been in the United States long enough to be required to file a return, you must attach a statement to your Form W–4 saying you will file a U.S. income tax return when required.

After the withholding agent has accepted your Form W–4, tax will be withheld on your scholarship or grant at the graduated rates that apply to wages. The gross amount of the income is reduced by the amount on line H of the worksheet and the withholding tax is figured on the remainder.

You will receive a Form 1042–S from the withholding agent (usually the payer of your grant) showing the gross amount of your scholarship or fellowship grant less the withholding allowance amount, the tax rate, and the amount of tax withheld. Use this form to file your annual U.S. income tax return.

Income Entitled to Tax Treaty Benefits

If a tax treaty between the United States and your country provides an exemption from, or a reduced rate of, withholding for certain items of income, you should notify the payor of the income (the withholding agent) of your foreign status to claim the benefits of the treaty. Generally, you do this by filing Form W–BEN with the withholding agent.

Beginning January 1, 2001, the payor of dividends will no longer rely on your address of record as the basis for allowing you the benefit of the treaty. Give Form W–BEN to the withholding agent to claim a reduced rate of withholding.

The rules that apply to compensation for personal services are discussed next.

Independent contractors. If you perform personal services as an independent contractor (rather than an employee) and you can claim an exemption from withholding on that personal service income because of a tax treaty, submit Form 8233 to each withholding agent from whom amounts will be received.

Students, teachers, and researchers. Alien students, teachers, and researchers who perform personal services as an independent contracto... jury, that you are not a foreign person, and containing your name, U.S. taxpayer identification number, and home address.

5) The buyer receives a withholding certificate from the Internal Revenue Service.

6) You give the buyer written notice that you are not required to recognize any gain or loss on the transfer because of a nonrecognition provision in the Internal Revenue Code or a provision in a U.S. tax treaty. The buyer must file a copy of the notice with the Internal Revenue Service Center, P.O. Box 21086, DP 8731 FIRPTA Unit, Philadelphia, PA 19114–0586. You must verify the notice as true and sign it under penalties of perjury. The notice must contain the following information.

a) A statement that the notice is a notice of nonrecognition under regulation section 1.1445–2(d)(2).

b) Your name, taxpayer identification number, and home address.

c) A statement that you are not required to recognize any gain or loss on the transfer.

d) A brief description of the transfer.

e) A brief summary of the law and facts supporting your claim that recognition of gain or loss is not required.

7) The amount you realize on the transfer of a U.S. real property interest is zero.

8) The property is acquired by the United States, a U.S. state or possession, a political subdivision, or the District of Columbia.

The certifications in (3) and (4) must be disregarded by the buyer if the buyer has actual knowledge, or receives notice from a seller’s or buyer’s agent, that they are false.

Withholding certificates. The tax required to be withheld on a disposition can be reduced or eliminated under a withholding certificate issued by the IRS. Either you or the buyer can request a withholding certificate. A voluntary payment certificate can be issued due to any of the following.

1) The IRS determines that reduced withholding is appropriate because either:
   a) The amount required to be withheld would be more than your maximum tax liability, or
   b) Withholding of the reduced amount would not jeopardize collection of the tax.

2) All of your realized gain is exempt from U.S. tax.

3) You or the buyer enter into an agreement for the payment of tax providing security for the tax liability.

Get Publication 515 and Form 8288–B for information on procedures to request a withholding certificate.

Credit for tax withheld. The buyer must report and pay the withheld tax within 20 days after the transfer using Form 8288, U.S. Withholding Tax Return for Dispositions by Foreign Persons of U.S. Real Property Interests. This form is filed with the IRS with two copies of Form 8288–A, Statement of Withholding on Dispositions by Foreign Persons of U.S. Real Property Interests. Copy B of this statement will be stamped received by the IRS and returned to you (the seller). You must file Copy B with your tax return to take credit for the tax withheld.

Social Security and Medicare Taxes

If you work as an employee in the United States, you must pay social security and Medicare taxes in most cases. Your payments of these taxes contribute to your coverage under the U.S. social security system. Social security coverage provides retirement benefits and medical insurance (Medicare) benefits to individuals who meet certain eligibility requirements.

In most cases, the first $76,200 of taxable wages received in 2000 for services performed in the United States is subject to social security tax. All taxable wages are subject to Medicare tax. Your employer deducts these taxes from each wage payment. Your employer must deduct these taxes even if you do not expect to qualify for social security or Medicare benefits. You can claim credit for excess social security tax on your income tax return if you have more than one employer and the amount deducted from your combined wages for 2000 is more than $4,724.40. Use the worksheet in chapter 3 of Publication 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax, to figure your credit.

If any one employer deducted more than $4,724.40, you cannot claim a credit for that amount. Ask your employer to refund the excess.

In general, U.S. social security and Medicare taxes apply to payments of wages for services performed as an employee in the United States, regardless of the citizenship or residence of either the employee or the employer. In limited situations, these taxes apply to wages for services performed outside the United States. Your employer should be able to tell you if social security and Medicare taxes apply to your wages. You cannot make voluntary payments if no taxes are due.

Students and Exchange Visitors

Generally, services performed by you as a nonresident alien temporarily in the United States as a nonimmigrant under subparagraph (F), (J), (M), or (Q) of section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act are not covered under the social security program if the services are performed to carry out the purpose for which you were admitted to the United States. This means that there will be no withholding of social security or Medicare taxes from the pay you receive for these services. These types of services are very limited, and generally include only on-campus work, practical training, and economic hardship employment.

However, you are covered under the social security program for these services if you are considered a resident alien as discussed in chapter 1, even though your nonimmigrant classification ("F," "J," "M," or "Q") remains the same. Social security and Medicare taxes will be withheld from your pay.

Nonresident Alien Students

If you are a nonresident alien admitted to the United States as a student, you generally are not permitted to work for a wage or salary to engage in business while you are in the United States. In some cases, a student admitted to the United States in "F-1," "M-1," or "J-1" status is granted permission to work, and it is so noted on the student's copy of Immigration Form I–94, Arrival–Departure Record. Social security and Medicare taxes are not withheld from pay for the work unless the student is considered a resident alien.

Any student who is enrolled and regularly attending classes at a school may be exempt from social security and Medicare taxes on pay for services performed for that school.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) permits on-campus work for students in "F-1" status if it does not displace a U.S. resident. On-campus work means work performed on the school’s premises. On-campus work includes work performed at an off-campus location that is educationally affiliated with the school. On-campus work under the terms of a scholarship, fellowship, or assistantship is considered part of the academic program of a student taking a full course of study and is permitted by the INS. In this case, the educational institution endorses the Form I–20. Social security and Medicare taxes are not withheld from pay for this work unless the student is considered a resident alien.

Employment due to severe economic necessity and for optional practical training is sometimes permitted for students in "F-1" status. Students granted permission to work due to severe economic necessity or for optional practical training will be issued Form I–688B or Form I–766 by INS. Social security and Medicare taxes are not withheld from pay for this work unless the student is considered a resident alien.

Students in "M-1" status who have completed a course of study can accept employment or practical training for up to six months and must have a Form I–688B or Form I–766 issued by INS. Social security and Medicare taxes are not withheld from pay for "M-1" students who pay for these services unless the student is considered a resident alien.

In all other cases, any services performed by a nonresident alien student are not considered as performed to carry out the purpose for which the student was admitted to the United States. Social security and Medicare taxes will be withheld from pay for the services unless the pay is exempt under the Internal Revenue Code.

Exchange Visitors

Nonresident aliens are admitted to the United States as nonimmigrant exchange visitors under section 101(a)(15)(J) of the Immigration and Nationality Act through the sponsorship of approved organizations and institutions that are responsible for establishing a program for the exchange visitor and for any later modification of that program. Generally, an exchange visitor who has the permission of the sponsor can work for the same reasons as the students discussed above. In these cases, permission is granted by a letter from the exchange visitor’s sponsor or by Self-Employment Tax

Self-employment tax is the social security and Medicare taxes for individuals who are self-employed. Nonresident aliens are not subject to self-employment tax. Residents of the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands, or American Samoa are considered U.S. residents for this purpose and are subject to the self-employment tax.

Examples.

Bill Jones is an author engaged in the business of writing books. Bill had several books published in a foreign country where he was a citizen and resident of that country. During 2000, Bill entered the United States as a resident alien. After becoming a U.S. resident, he continued to receive royalties from his foreign publisher. Bill reports his income and expenses on the cash basis (he reports income on his tax return when received and deducts expenses when paid). Bill's 2000 self-employment income includes the royalties received after he became a U.S. resident even though the books were published while he was a nonresident alien.

Reporting self-employment tax. Use Schedule SE (Form 1040) to report and figure your self-employment tax. Then enter the tax on line 52 of Form 1040 and attach Schedule SE to Form 1040.

Deduction for one-half of self-employment tax. If you must pay self-employment tax, you can deduct one-half of the self-employment tax paid in figuring your adjusted gross income.

International Social Security Agreements

The United States has entered into social security agreements with foreign countries to coordinate social security coverage and taxation of workers employed for part or all of their working careers in one of the countries. These agreements are commonly referred to as totalization agreements. Under these agreements, dual coverage and dual contributions (taxes) for the same work are eliminated. The agreements generally make sure that social security taxes (including self-employment tax) are paid only to one country. Agreements are in effect with the following countries.

- Austria.
- Belgium.
- Canada.
- Finland.
- France.
- Germany.
- Greece.
- Ireland.
- Italy.
- Luxembourg.
- The Netherlands.
- Norway.
- Portugal.
- Spain.
- Sweden.
- Switzerland.
- The United Kingdom.

Other agreements are also expected to enter into force in the future.

Employees. Generally, under these agreements, you are subject to social security taxes only in the country where you are working. However, if you are temporarily sent to work for the same employer in the United States and your pay would normally be subject to social security taxes in both countries, most agreements provide that you remain covered only by the social security system of the country from which you were sent. You can get more information on any agreement by contacting the U.S. Social Security Administration at the address given later. If you have access to the Internet, you can get more information at www.ssa.gov/international.

To establish that your pay is subject only to foreign social security taxes and is exempt from U.S. social security taxes (including the Medicare tax) under an agreement, you or your employer should request a certificate of coverage from the appropriate agency of the foreign country. This will usually be the same agency to which you or your employer pays your foreign social security taxes. The foreign agency will be able to tell you what information is needed for them to issue the certificate. Your employer should keep a copy of the certificate because it may be needed to show why you are exempt from U.S. social security taxes. Only wages paid on or after the effective date of the agreement can be exempt from U.S. social security taxes.

Some of the countries with which the United States has agreements will not issue certificates of coverage. In this case, either you or your employer should request a statement from the following address.

U.S. Social Security Administration
Office of International Programs
P.O. Box 17741
Baltimore, MD 21235–7741

Self-employed individuals. Under most agreements, self-employed individuals are covered by the social security system of the country where they reside. However, under some agreements, you may be exempt from U.S. self-employment tax if you temporarily transfer your business activity to or from the United States.

If you believe that your self-employment income is subject only to U.S. self-employment tax and is exempt from foreign social security taxes, request a certificate of coverage from the U.S. Social Security Administration at the address given earlier. This certificate will establish your exemption from foreign social security taxes.
To establish that your self-employment income is subject only to foreign social security taxes and is exempt from U.S. self-employment tax, request a certificate of coverage from the appropriate agency of the foreign country. If the foreign country will not issue the certificate, you should request a statement that your income is not covered by the U.S. social security system. Request it from the U.S. Social Security Administration at the address given earlier. Attach a photocopy of either statement to Form 1040 each year you are exempt. Also print “Exempt, see attached statement” on the line for self-employment tax.

Estimated Tax
Form 1040–ES (NR)

You may have income from which no U.S. income tax is withheld. Or the amount of tax withheld may not equal the income tax you estimate you will owe at the end of the year. If so, you may have to pay estimated tax.

Generally, you must make estimated tax payments for 2001 if you expect to owe at least $1,000 in tax and you expect your withholding and credits to be less than the smaller of:

1) 90% of the tax to be shown on your 2001 income tax return, or
2) 100% of the tax shown on your 2000 income tax return (if your 2000 return covered all 12 months of the year).

If your adjusted gross income for 2000 was more than $150,000 ($75,000 if your filing status for 2001 is married filing separately), substitute 110% for 100% in (2) above if you are not a farmer or a fisherman.

A nonresident alien should use Form 1040–ES (NR) to figure and pay estimated tax. Checks should be made payable to the “United States Treasury.”

How to estimate your tax for 2001. If you filed a 2000 return on Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ and expect your income, number of exemptions, and total deductions for 2000 to be nearly the same, you should use your 2000 return as a guide to complete the Estimated Tax Worksheet in the Form 1040–ES (NR) instructions. If you did not file a return for 2000, or if your income, exemptions, deductions, or credits will be different for 2001, you must estimate these amounts. Figure your estimated tax liability using the Tax Rate Schedule in the 2001 Form 1040–ES (NR) instructions for your filing status.

Note. If you expect to be a resident of Puerto Rico during the entire year, use Form 1040–ES.

When to pay estimated tax. Make your first estimated tax payment by the due date for filing the previous year’s Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ. If you have wages subject to the same withholding rules that apply to U.S. citizens, you must file Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ and make your first estimated tax payment by April 16, 2001. If you do not have wages subject to withholding, file your income tax return and make your first estimated tax payment by June 15, 2001.

Fiscal year. If your return is not on a calendar year basis, your due dates are the 15th day of the 4th, 6th, and 9th months of your fiscal year, and the 1st month of the following fiscal year. If any date falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, use the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

Changes in income, deductions, or exemptions. Even if you are not required to make an estimated tax payment in April or June, your circumstances may change so that you will have to make estimated tax payments later. This can happen if you receive additional income or if any of your deductions are reduced or eliminated. If so, see the instructions for Form 1040–ES (NR) and Publication 505 for information on figuring your estimated tax.

Amended estimated tax. If, after you have made estimated tax payments, you find your estimated tax is substantially increased or decreased because of a change in your income or exemptions, you should adjust your remaining estimated tax payments. To do this, see the instructions for Form 1040–ES (NR) and Publication 505.

Penalty for failure to pay estimated income tax. You will be subject to a penalty for underpayment of installments of estimated tax except in certain situations. These situations are explained on Form 2210, Underpayment of Estimated Tax by Individuals, Estates, and Trusts.

Treaty Income

A nonresident alien’s treaty income is the gross income on which the tax is limited by a tax treaty. Treaty income includes, for example, dividends from sources in the United States that are subject to tax at a tax treaty rate not to exceed 15%. Nontreaty income is the gross income of a nonresident alien on which the tax is not limited by a tax treaty. Figure the tax on treaty income on each separate item of income at the reduced rate that applies to that item under the treaty.

To determine tax on nontreaty income, figure the tax at either the flat 30% rate or the graduated rate, depending upon whether or not the income is effectively connected with your trade or business in the United States.

Your tax liability is the sum of the tax on treaty income plus the tax on nontreaty income, but cannot be more than the tax liability figured as if the tax treaty had not come into effect.

Example. Arthur Banks is a nonresident alien who is single and a resident of a foreign country that has a tax treaty with the United States. He received gross income of $25,500 during the tax year from sources within the United States, consisting of the following items:

- Dividends on which the tax is limited to a 15% rate by the tax treaty .................. $1,400
- Compensation for personal services on which the tax is not limited by the tax treaty .................................. 24,100

Total gross income $25,500

Arthur was engaged in business in the United States during the tax year. His dividends are not effectively connected with that business. He has no deductions other than his own personal exemption.
His tax liability, figured as though the tax treaty had not come into effect, is $3,619, determined as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Total compensation</td>
<td>$24,100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Less: Personal exemption</td>
<td>2,800</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Taxable income</td>
<td>$21,300</td>
</tr>
<tr>

<tr>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plus: Tax on gross dividends ($1,400 ×</td>

</tr>
<tr>

</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tax determined as though treaty had</td>
<td>$3,409</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>not come into effect</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Arthur's tax liability, figured by taking into account the reduced rate on dividend income as provided by the tax treaty, is $3,409, determined as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tax determined by graduated rate (same</td>
<td>$3,199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as figured above)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plus: Tax on gross dividends ($1,400 ×</td>
<td>$210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15%)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tax on compensation and dividends</td>
<td>$3,409</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

His tax liability, therefore, is limited to $3,409, the tax liability figured using the tax treaty rate on the dividends.

Some Typical Tax Treaty Benefits

The following paragraphs briefly explain the exemptions that are available under tax treaties for personal services income, remittances, scholarships, fellowships, and capital gain income. The conditions for claiming the exemptions vary under each tax treaty. For more information about the conditions under a particular tax treaty, see Publication 901.

Treaty benefits also cover income such as dividends, interest, rentals, royalties, pensions, and annuities. These types of income may be exempt from U.S. tax or may be subject to a reduced rate of tax. For more information, see Publication 901.

Personal Services

Nonresident aliens from treaty countries who are in the United States for a short stay and also meet certain other requirements may be exempt from tax on their compensation received for personal services performed in the United States. Many tax treaties require that the nonresident alien claiming this exemption be present in the United States for a total of not more than 183 days during the tax year. Other tax treaties specify different periods of maximum presence in the United States, such as 180 days or 90 days. Spending part of a day in the United States counts as a day of presence.

Tax treaties may also require that:

1) The compensation cannot be more than a specific amount (frequently $3,000), and
2) The individual have a foreign employer; that is, an individual, corporation, or entity of a foreign country.

Teachers and Professors

Nonresident alien teachers or professors who are residents of certain treaty countries and who temporarily visit the United States for the primary purpose of teaching at a university or other accredited educational institution are not subject to U.S. income tax on compensation received for teaching for the first 2 or 3 years after their arrival in the United States. Many treaties also provide exemption for engaging in research. Generally, the teacher or professor must be in the United States primarily to teach, lecture, instruct, or engage in research. A substantial part of that person's time must be devoted to those duties. The normal duties of a teacher or professor include not only formal classroom work involving regularly scheduled lectures, demonstrations, or other student-participation activities, but also the less formal method of presenting ideas in seminars or other informal groups and in joint efforts in the laboratory.

Employees of Foreign Governments

All treaties have provisions for the exemption of income earned by certain employees of foreign governments. However, a difference exists among treaties as to who qualifies for this benefit. Under many treaties, aliens admitted to the United States for permanent residence do not qualify. Under most treaties, aliens who are not nationals or subjects of the foreign country do not qualify. Employees of foreign governments should read the pertinent treaty carefully to determine whether they qualify for this benefit. Chapter 10 of this publication also has information for employees of foreign governments.

Students, Apprentices, and Trainees

Students, apprentices, and trainees generally are exempt from tax on remittances (including scholarship and fellowship grants) received from abroad for study and maintenance. Also, under certain circumstances, a limited amount of compensation received by students, apprentices, and trainees may be exempt from tax.

Nonresident aliens who become resident aliens. Generally, you must be a nonresident alien student, apprentice, or trainee in order to claim a tax treaty exemption for remittances from abroad (including scholarship and fellowship grants) for study and maintenance in the United States. However, if you entered the United States as a nonresident alien, but are now a resident alien for U.S. tax purposes, the treaty exemption will continue to apply if the tax treaty has an exception to the treaty's saving clause. If you qualify under an exception to the treaty's saving clause and the payor intends to withhold U.S. income tax on the fellowship, scholarship, or other remittance, you can avoid income tax withholding by giving the payor a Form W–9 with an attachment that includes the following information:

- Your name and U.S. identification number.
- A statement that you are a resident alien and whether you are a resident alien under the green card test, the substantial presence test, or a tax treaty provision.
- Tax treaty and article number under which you are claiming a tax treaty exemption, and description of the article.
- A statement that you are relying on an exception to the saving clause of the tax treaty under which you are claiming the tax treaty exemption.

Example. Mr. Yu, a citizen of the People's Republic of China, entered the United States as a nonresident alien student on January 1, 1996. He remained a nonresident alien through 2000 and was able to exclude his scholarship from U.S. tax in those years under Article 20 of the U.S.–China income tax treaty. On January 1, 2001, he became a resident alien under the substantial presence test because his stay in the United States exceeded 5 years. Even though Mr. Yu is now a resident alien, the provisions of Article 20 still apply because of the exception to the saving clause in paragraph 2 of the Protocol to the U.S.–China treaty dated April 30, 1984. If the payor of the scholarship intends to withhold U.S. income tax, Mr. Yu should submit Form W–9 and the required attachment to the payor.

Capital Gains

Most treaties provide for the exemption of gains from the sale or exchange of personal property. Generally, gains from the sale or exchange of real property located in the United States are taxable.

Reporting Treaty Benefits Claimed

If you claim treaty benefits that override or modify any provision of the Internal Revenue Code, and by claiming these benefits your tax is, or might be, reduced, you must attach a fully completed Form 8833 to your tax return. See Exceptions, below, for the situations where you are not required to file Form 8833.

You must file a U.S. tax return and Form 8833 if you claim the following treaty benefits.

1) A reduction or modification in the taxation of gain or loss from the disposition of a U.S. real property interest based on a treaty.
2) A change to the source of an item of income or a deduction based on a treaty.
3) A credit for a specific foreign tax for which foreign tax credit would not be allowed by the Internal Revenue Code.

You must also file Form 8833 if you receive payments or income items totaling more than $100,000 and you determine your country of residence under a treaty and not under the rules for residency discussed earlier in this publication.

These are the more common situations for which Form 8833 is required.

Exceptions. You do not have to file Form 8833 for any of the following situations.

1) You claim a reduced rate of withholding.

4. The general effective date for the area that was the German Democratic Republic is January 1, 1991.
Penalty for failure to provide required information on Form 8833. If you are required to report the treaty benefits but do not, you are subject to a penalty of $1,000 for each failure.

10. Employees of Foreign Governments and International Organizations

Employees of foreign governments (including foreign municipalities) have two ways to get exemption of their governmental wages from U.S. income tax:

1) By a provision in a tax treaty or consular convention between the United States and their country, or
2) By meeting the requirements of U.S. tax law.

Employees of international organizations can only exempt their wages by meeting the requirements of U.S. tax law.

The exemption discussed in this chapter applies only to pay received for services performed for a foreign government or international organization. Other U.S. income received by persons who qualify for this exemption may be fully taxable or given favorable treatment under an applicable tax treaty provision. The proper treatment of this kind of income (interest, dividends, etc.) is discussed, earlier, in this publication.

Exemption Under Tax Treaty

If you are from a country that has a tax treaty with the United States, you should first look at the treaty to see if there is a provision that exempts your income. The income of U.S. citizens and resident aliens working for foreign governments usually is not exempt. However, in a few instances, the income of a U.S. citizen with dual citizenship may qualify. Often the exemption is limited to the income of persons who also are nationals of the foreign country involved.

Resident aliens from France. The United States and France have an agreement to relieve double taxation of U.S. permanent residents who receive wages and pensions for governmental services performed for the government of France. Generally, this income is taxable in the United States and France. However, the United States will allow a credit for taxes paid to France on this income.

Exemption Under U.S. Tax Law

Employees of foreign governments who do not qualify under a tax treaty provision and employees of international organizations may qualify for exemption by meeting the following requirements of U.S. tax law.

The exemption under U.S. tax law applies only to current employees and not to former employees. Pensions received by former employees living in this country do not qualify for exemption.

Employees of foreign governments. If you are not a U.S. citizen, or if you are a U.S. citizen but also a citizen of the Philippines, and you work for a foreign government in the United States, your foreign government salary is exempt from U.S. tax if you perform services similar to those performed by U.S. Government employees in that foreign country and that foreign government grants an equivalent exemption.

Certification. To qualify for the exemption under U.S. tax law, the foreign government for which you work must certify to the Department of State that you are their employee and that you perform services similar to those performed by employees of the United States in your country. However, see Aliens who keep immigrant status, later, for a special rule that may affect your qualifying for this exemption.

Employees of international organizations. If you work for an international organization in the United States and you are not a U.S. citizen (or you are a U.S. citizen but are also a citizen of the Philippines), your salary from that organization is exempt from U.S. tax.

A international organization is an organization designated by the President of the United States through Executive Order to qualify for the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided in the International Organizations Immunities Act.

You should find out if you have been made known to, and have been accepted by, the Secretary of State as an officer or an employee of that organization, or if you have been designated by the Secretary of State, before formal notification and acceptance, as a prospective officer or employee.

If you are claiming exemption, you should know the number of the Executive Order covering the international organization and should have some written evidence of your acceptance or designation by the Secretary of State.

The exemption is denied when, because the Secretary of State determines your presence in the United States is no longer desirable, you leave the United States (or after a reasonable time allowed for leaving the United States). The exemption is also denied when a foreign country does not allow similar exemptions to U.S. citizens. Then the Secretary of State can withdraw the privileges, exemptions, and immunities from the nationals of that foreign country.

Aliens who keep immigrant status. If you file the waiver provided by section 247(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act to keep your immigrant status, you no longer qualify for the exemption from U.S. tax under U.S. tax law from the date of filing the waiver with the Attorney General.

However, you do not lose the exemption if you file the waiver and meet either of the following conditions.

- You are exempt from U.S. tax by an income tax treaty, consular agreement, or international agreement between the United States and your country.
- You work for an international organization if the international agreement creating the international organization provides that alien employees are exempt from U.S. income tax. Two international organizations that have such a provision are the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank).

11. Departing Aliens and the Sailing or Departure Permit

Introduction

Before leaving the United States, all aliens (except those listed under Aliens Not Required To Obtain Sailing or Departure Permits) must obtain a certificate of compliance. This document, also popularly known as the sailing permit or departure permit, is part of the income tax form you must file before leaving. You will receive a sailing or departure permit after filing a Form 1040–C or Form 2063. These forms are discussed in this chapter.
To find out if you need a sailing or departure permit, first read Aliens Not Required To Obtain Sailing or Departure Permits. If you do not fall into one of the categories in that discussion, you must obtain a sailing or departure permit. Read Aliens Required To Obtain Sailing or Departure Permits.

Aliens Not Required To Obtain Sailing or Departure Permits

If you are included in one of the following categories, you do not have to get a sailing or departure permit before leaving the United States.

If you are in one of these categories and do not have to get a sailing or departure permit, you must be able to support your claim for exemption with proper identification or give the authority for the exemption.

Category 1. Representatives of foreign governments with diplomatic passports, whether accredited to the United States or other countries, members of their households, and servants accompanying them. Servants who are leaving, but not with a person with a diplomatic passport, must get a sailing or departure permit. However, they can get a sailing or departure permit on Form 2063 without examination of their income tax liability by presenting a letter from the chief of their diplomatic mission certifying that:

1) Their name appears on the “White List” (a list of employees of diplomatic missions), and
2) They do not owe to the United States any income tax, and will not owe any tax up to and including the intended date of departure.

The statement must be presented to an IRS office.

Category 2. Employees of international organizations and foreign governments (other than diplomatic representatives exempt under category 1) and members of their households:

1) Whose compensation for official services is exempt from U.S. tax under U.S. tax laws (described in chapter 10), and
2) Who receive no other income from U.S. sources.

If you are an alien in category (1) or (2), above, who filed the waiver under section 247(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, you must get a sailing or departure permit. This is true even though you filed the waiver and your income is exempt from U.S. tax because of an income tax treaty, consular agreement, or international agreement.

Category 3. Alien students, industrial trainees, and exchange visitors, including their spouses and children, who enter on an “F–1,” “F–2,” “H–3,” “H–4,” “J–1,” “J–2,” or “Q” visa only and who receive no income from U.S. sources while in the United States under those visas other than:

1) Allowances to cover expenses incident to study or training in the United States, such as expenses for travel, maintenance, and tuition,
2) The value of any services or food and lodging connected with this study or training,
3) Income from employment authorized by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), or
4) Certain interest income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. (See Interest in chapter 3.)

Category 4. Alien students, including their spouses and children, who enter on an “M–1” or “M–2” visa only and who receive no income from U.S. sources while in the United States on those visas, other than:

1) Income from employment authorized by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), or
2) Certain interest income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. (See Interest in chapter 3.)

Category 5. Certain other aliens temporarily in the United States who have received no taxable income during the tax year up to and including the date of departure or during the preceding tax year. If the IRS has reason to believe that an alien has received income subject to tax and that the collection of income tax is jeopardized by departure, it may then require the alien to obtain a sailing or departure permit. Aliens covered by this paragraph are:

1) Alien military trainees who enter the United States for training under the sponsorship of the Department of Defense and who leave the United States on official military travel orders,
2) Alien visitors for business on a “B–1” visa, or on both a “B–1” visa and a “B–2” visa, who do not remain in the United States or a U.S. possession for more than 90 days during the tax year,
3) Alien visitors for pleasure on a “B–2” visa,
4) Aliens in transit through the United States or any of its possessions on a “C–1” visa, or under a contract, such as a bond agreement, between a transportation line and the Attorney General, and
5) Aliens who enter the United States on a border-crossing identification card; or for whom passports, visas, and border-crossing identification cards are not required, if they are visitors for pleasure, or visitors for business who do not remain in the United States or a U.S. possession for more than 90 days during the tax year; or if they are in transit through the United States or any of its possessions.

Category 6. Alien residents of Canada or Mexico who frequently commute between that country and the United States for employment, and whose wages are subject to the withholding of U.S. tax.

Aliens Required To Obtain Sailing or Departure Permits

If you do not fall into one of the categories listed under Aliens Not Required To Obtain Sailing or Departure Permits, you must obtain a sailing or departure permit. To obtain a permit, file Form 1040–C or Form 2063 (whichever applies) with your local IRS office before you leave the United States. See Forms To File, later. You must also pay all the tax shown as due on Form 1040–C and any taxes due for past years. See Paying Taxes and Obtaining Refunds, later.

If you try to leave the United States without a sailing or departure permit, and cannot show that you qualify to leave without it, you may be subject to an income tax examination by an IRS employee at the point of departure. You must then complete the necessary income tax returns and statements and, ordinarily, pay any taxes due.

Getting a Sailing or Departure Permit

Where to get a sailing or departure permit.
It is advisable for aliens who have been working in the United States to get the permit from an IRS office in the area of their employment, but it also can be obtained from an IRS office in the area of their departure.

When to get a sailing or departure permit.
You should get your sailing or departure permit at least 2 weeks before you plan to leave. You cannot apply earlier than 30 days before your planned departure date. Do not wait until the last minute in case there are unexpected problems.

Papers to submit.
Getting your sailing or departure permit will go faster if you bring to the IRS office papers and documents related to your income and your stay in the United States. Bring the following records with you if they apply.

1) Your passport and alien registration card or visa.
2) Copies of your U.S. income tax returns filed for the past 2 years. If you were in the United States for less than 2 years, bring the income tax returns you filed for that period.
3) Receipts for income taxes paid on these returns.
4) Receipts, bank records, canceled checks, and other documents that prove your deductions, business expenses, and dependents claimed on your returns.
5) A statement from each employer showing wages paid and tax withheld from January 1 of the current year to the date of departure if you were an employee. If you were self-employed, you must bring a statement of income and expenses up to the date you plan to leave.
6) Proof of estimated tax payments for the past year and this year.
7) Documents showing any gain or loss from the sale of personal property, including capital assets and merchandise.
8) Documents relating to scholarship or fellowship grants including verification of the grantor, source, and purpose of the grant.
9) Documents indicating you qualify for any special tax treaty benefits claimed.

Forms To File
If you must get a sailing or departure permit, you must file Form 2063 or Form 1040–C. Employees in the IRS office can assist in filing these forms. Both forms have a “certificate of compliance” section. When the certificate of compliance is signed by an agent of the Field Assistance Area Director, it certifies that your U.S. tax obligations have been satisfied according to available information. Your Form 1040–C or copy of the signed certificate, or the one detached from Form 2063, is your sailing or departure permit.

Form 2063
This is a short form that asks for certain information but does not include a tax computation. The following departing aliens can get their sailing or departure permits by filing Form 2063.

1) Aliens, whether resident or nonresident, who have had no taxable income for the tax year up to and including the date of departure and for the preceding year, if the period for filing the income tax return for that year has not expired.
2) Resident aliens who have received taxable income during the tax year or preceding year and whose departure will not hinder the collection of any tax. However, if the IRS has information indicating that the alien is leaving to avoid paying their income tax, they must file a Form 1040–C.

Aliens in either of these categories who have not filed an income tax return or paid income tax for any tax year must file the return and pay the income tax before they can be issued a sailing or departure permit on Form 2063. The sailing or departure permit detached from Form 2063 can be used for all departures during the current year. However, the IRS may cancel the sailing or departure permit for any later departure if it believes the collection of income tax is jeopardized by that later departure.

Form 1040–C
If you must get a sailing or departure permit and you do not have to file Form 2063, you must file Form 1040–C.

Ordinarily, all income received or reasonably expected to be received during the tax year up to and including the date of departure must be reported on Form 1040–C and the tax on it must be paid. You must pay any tax shown as due on the Form 1040–C, and you file all returns and pay all tax due for previous years, you will receive a sailing or departure permit. However, the IRS may permit you to furnish a bond or an employer letter guaranteeing payment instead of paying the taxes for certain years. See Bond or Employer Letter To Ensure Payment, discussed later. The sailing or departure permit issued under the conditions in this paragraph is only for the specific departure for which it is issued.

If you submit an employer letter guaranteeing payment of tax with your Form 1040–C, you do not need to fill out the form in detail. Just fill out the identifying information on the form, check the “Yes” box on line A, sign it, and attach the letter. The IRS office where you submit the form will then issue your sailing or departure permit.

Returning to the United States. If you furnish the IRS with information showing, to the satisfaction of the IRS, that you intend to return to the United States and that your departure does not jeopardize the collection of income tax, you can get a sailing or departure permit by filing Form 1040–C without having to pay the tax shown on it. You must, however, file all income tax returns that have not yet been filed and required, and pay all income tax that is due on these returns.

Your Form 1040–C must include all income received and reasonably expected to be received during the entire year of departure. The sailing or departure permit issued with this Form 1040–C can be used for all departures during the current year. However, the Service may cancel the sailing or departure permit for any later departure if the payment of income tax appears to be in jeopardy.

Joint return on Form 1040–C. Departing husbands and wives who are nonresident aliens cannot file joint returns. However, if both spouses are resident aliens, they can file a joint return on Form 1040–C if:

1) Both spouses can reasonably be expected to qualify to file a joint return at the normal close of their tax year, and
2) The tax years of the spouses end at the same time.

Paying Taxes and Obtaining Refunds
Except when a bond or an employer letter is furnished, or the IRS is satisfied that your departure does not jeopardize the collection of income tax, you must pay all tax shown as due on the Form 1040–C at the time of filing it. You must also pay any taxes due for past years. If the tax computation on Form 1040–C results in an overpayment, there is no tax to pay at the time you file that return. However, the IRS cannot provide a refund at the time of departure. If you are due a refund, you must file either Form 1040NR or Form 1040NR–EZ at the end of the tax year.

Bond or Employer Letter To Ensure Payment
Usually, you must pay the tax shown as due on Form 1040–C when you file it. However, if you pay all taxes due that you owe for prior years, you can furnish a bond or an employer letter guaranteeing payment instead of paying the income taxes shown as due on the Form 1040–C or the tax return for the preceding year if the period for filing that return has not expired.

The bond must equal the tax due plus interest to the date of payment as figured by the IRS. Information about the bond of form and security on it can be obtained from your IRS office.

Filing Annual U.S. Income Tax Returns
Form 1040–C is not an annual U.S. income tax return. If an income tax return is required by law, that return must be filed even though a Form 1040–C has already been filed. Chapters 5 and 7 discuss filing an annual U.S. income tax return. The tax paid with Form 1040–C should be taken as a credit against the tax liability for the entire tax year on your annual U.S. income tax return.
